No time now for indolent dreaming,
Get thee ready!
The King in his beauty to see.

With chariots celestial I behold him descend,
With glory no fable becoming;
And all the blest angels around him attend,
In heaven's bright canopy gleaming.
The trumpet of God sounds, Arise!
The dead now awake from their slumber,
And straight way mount up to the skies,—
A multitude no man can number,
Shouts of glory!
And Victory! now fill the air.

Earth's captives, now rescued, will sorrow no more,
Nor hunger nor thirst shall annoy them;
No pain shall afflict them, their sufferings are o'er.
No sickness nor death can destroy them;
But freed from mortality's woes,
Eternity opens before them;
Its pleasures are never to close,
God's glory forever beams o'er them.
Glory! glory!
Hasten O King, in thy beauty descend!

PINE WOODS BIBLE CLASS.

"Casting down imaginations and every high thing that exalteth itself against the knowledge of God, and bringing into captivity every thought to the obedience of Christ." 2 Cor. x. 5.

Teacher. In our last lesson, on the present topic, we considered that the first step in doing just as Jesus would do, were he in our place, would be to believe the one true gospel preached by Jesus, and then obey it, and afterward cast down vain imaginations which "exalted itself against the knowledge of God." Having accomplish this much, our next step, would be that of "bringing into captivity EVERY THOUGHT to the obedience of Christ." Now, Arlon, how does this work strike you?

Arlon. The magnitude of the work almost frightens me. It will certainly require considerable personal discipline to subject "EVERY THOUGHT" to Christ.

Teacher. True, but suppose that if before each act of life, we acquire the habit of asking ourselves the question: "Would Jesus do it?" and then act on the decision it would go a long ways toward the captivity of every thought would it not?

Arlon. It certainly would, and I, for one, mean to try it, and hope the whole class will join me in doing so.

Teacher. Why do you suppose the Scripture emphasizes the captivity of the thought in place of the act?

Arlon. There is wisdom in first controlling the thought. Let a person's thoughts be right, there will be no trouble about the acts. Every good or evil act, is first preceded by either a good or evil thought. We read in Prov. xxiii. 7: "As he thinketh in the heart so IS HE." The thoughts control the character of the person, he is in fact just as he thinks. If a person's thoughts are centered upon business, he will care for nothing but business, but if one's thoughts are continually sinful, his acts in life will also be continually sinful, and likewise if God is the burden of his thoughts, his acts will be as surely Godlike.

Teacher. Now, Carrie, suppose an unrighteous man, desires to lead a righteous life, what should he do?

Carrie. He must correct his manner of thinking, he must forsake evil thoughts. There can be no correct life, unless there is first of all right thinking, both doctrinally and practically. See Isa. lv. 6-9.—"Seek ye the Lord while he may be found, call ye upon him while he is near:

Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts: and let him return unto the Lord, and he will have mercy upon him; and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon.

For my thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways, saith the Lord.

For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways, and my thoughts than your thoughts."

Teacher. Please read the text we started with, in 2 Cor. x. 5.

Carrie. I will: "Casting down imaginations, and every high thing that exalteth itself against the knowledge of God, and bringing into captivity every thought to the obedience of Christ."

Teacher. The text speaks of "CASTING DOWN imaginations" "that exalteth against the knowledge of God." What are imaginations? and does God deal with them?

Carrie. Imaginations proceed from thought, and God searches them out, and knows them. We are responsible for our imaginations. See 1 Chron. xxviii. 9: "And thou, Solomon my son, know thou the God of thy father, and serve him with a perfect heart and with a willing mind: for the LORD searcheth all hearts and understandeth all the imaginations of the thoughts: if thou seek him, he will be found of thee; but if thou forsake him, he will cast thee off forever."

Teacher. What are the six things which the Lord especially hates, which have their origin in wrong thinking?

Carrie. See Prov. vi. 16-19: "These six things doth the LORD hate: yea, seven are an abomination unto him:

A proud look, a lying tongue, and hands that shed innocent blood,

An heart that deviseth wicked imaginations, feet that be swift in running to mischief,

A false witness that speaketh lies, and him that soweth discord among brethren."

Pride in the mind, or thoughts, precedes a "proud look," and God will certainly cut off a person whose tongue "speaketh proud things." He could not speak proud things, unless the mind first thought proud thoughts. See Psa. xii. 2-4: "They speak vanity every one with his neighbor: with flattering lips and with a double heart do they speak.

The LORD shall cut off all flattering lips, and the tongue that speaketh proud things:

Who have said, With our tongue will we prevail; our lips are our own: who is lord over us?"

The second thing the Lord hates, is a "lying tongue." The mind will first have to think lies, before the tongue speaks lies. Murder is thought out, before blood is shed; "feet that are swift in running to mischief," is first impelled by mischievous thoughts, etc.

Teacher. How about those who seek to produce discord among brethren?

Ind. The last item of the things the Lord hates, is: "him that soweth discord among brethren." The sower of discord first thinks of those unpleasant things which make discord before he sows such noxious seed. This might be corrected, if we would first think; "Would Jesus do it?" There would be no offensive words spoken, If every thought was brought into obedience to Christ; then every simple act would be right, and the whole body brought under control. See James iii. 2: "For in many things we offend all. If any man offend not in word, the same is a perfect man, and able also to bridle the whole body." Such a person would surely be pure, gentle and peaceable. Such a life would be full of good fruits. See Jas. iii. 17, 18: "The wisdom that is from above is first pure, then peaceable, gentle, and easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good fruits, without partiality, and without hypocrisy.

And the fruit of righteousness is sown in peace of them that make peace."

This is just as Jesus lived, and all who act like Jesus, live the same kind of life. Let all who would be like Jesus endeavor before every act of life to first enquire. "Would Jesus do it?" How many are there who will try the experiment?"

Teacher. I wish to ask Albert a question, it is this: who will be made like Jesus, when he come in glory, clothed with resurrection power?

Albert. That is truly a searching question, and much is involved in it? I would answer, those who ACT LIKE JESUS NOW, and if we act like Jesus we will also think like Jesus. If we are not like Jesus in our every day life now, we will never be like him physically hereafter.

Teacher. How can we be like him now?

Albert. Study him as an example. Place your feet in his footprints. 1 Pet. ii. 21-23, illustrates this: "For even hereunto were ye called: because Christ also suffered for us, leaving us an example, that ye should follow his steps:

Who did no sin, neither was guile found in his mouth:

Who, when he was reviled, reviled not again; when he suffered, he threatened not, but committed himself to him that judgeth righteously:"

Teacher. In doing as Jesus would do, that would be copying Jesus as an example, would it not?

Albert. Yes, sir. The last Scripture quoted, says: "Christ also suffered for us, leaving us an EXAMPLE that ye should FOLLOW in his STEPS."

Teacher. Have you noticed the phrase: "Follow in his steps?"

Albert. Yes, I have; it reminded me of the time when I was a boy, when my father and myself went out one winter's day, after a heavy snow fall; my father went on ahead, and said, "Albert, you follow in my steps, and you will find it easier walking." Jesus has gone on before, and we are told to "follow in his steps."

Teacher. In following your father's footsteps, didn't you find it easier walking?

Albert. It was certainly easier, but nevertheless laborious.

Teacher. In following Jesus' footsteps, will we be relieved from suffering?

Albert. By no means. In the texts under consideration we read: "Christ also SUFFERED for us, leaving us an example, that ye should follow in his steps."

Teacher. What was the principal cause of his suffering? What do you find it to be George?

George. The principal cause of his suffering was on account of his confession before Pilate. Pilate asked him the question: "Art thou the King of the Jews?" He confessed that was the object of his birth. The Jews clamored for his death, because, he claimed to be the Son of God, the Christ—the King of Israel.

Teacher. What will we have to do if we "follow in his footsteps?"

George. We shall have to proclaim him as the Son of God, the Christ—the King of Israel, together with other kindred truths which naturally cluster about such a central truth. These are the first steps in the trail. Omit these and the trail will be lost. We must place our feet in the first footprint, and follow on step by step, or we will surely loose the trail.

Teacher. Will it cause suffering to follow that trail?

George. It will never fail to do so. Those who have tried it, confess it is true. Suffering both of a physical and mental nature, frequently result.

Teacher. Does it make trouble, and agitate the people, to preach Jesus as King, in the same sense as he preached it, himself?

George. It does. We have a sample given us in Acts xvii. 5-8: "But the Jews which believed not, moved with envy, took unto them certain lewd fellow of a baser sort, and gathered a company, and set all the city on an uproar, and assaulted the house of Jason, and sought to bring them out to the people. And when they found them not, they drew Jason and certain brethren unto the rulers of the city, crying, These that have TURNED THE WORLD UPSIDE DOWN are come hither also; Whom Jason hath received; and these all do contrary to the decrees of Cesar, saying that there is ANOTHER KING ONE JESUS. And they troubled the people, and the rulers of the city, when they heard these things."

Teacher. What have you to say, Lucy? Does it trouble most of the religious people of our day to preach Jesus as King in a true Bible sense?

Lucy. Indeed it does. Nothing will turn the religious "world upside down" quicker than to preach Jesus as the literal King of Israel. Preach him as a king reigning in the hearts of people and no objection will be raised; but also specially distasteful to [illegible] to affirm that "the Lord God shall give unto him (Jesus) the THRONE of his FATHER DAVID and he shall reign over the house of JACOB forever: and of his kingdom there shall be no end."

It brings no end of trouble to faithfully preach the same truths which brought Jesus to the cross, and we may rest assured that if we "follow in his steps," we will most surely have to carry a daily cross.

Teacher. If we do "follow in his steps," how will it all end?

Lucy. The Bible says: "If we suffer with him we shall reign with him?" With regard to the redeemed, who shall appear on Mt. Zion, we read: "These are they which follow the lamb whithersoever he goeth." It is to be perceived that not a foot-print was missed "Whithersoever he goeth," indicated close following.

In Rom. iv. 11, 12, we are exhorted to "Walk in the faith of our Father Abraham, which he had, being yet uncircumcised." To walk in the steps of any other faith will be of no avail. That of Abraham and that of Jesus, are identical there being not even a difference amounting to a shade.

Teacher. Yes, Lucy, you are correct. We will continue this lesson next time.

W. H. WILSON.

Covenants of Promise.

I have been somewhat pained lately by writers in THE RESTITUTION intimating as though I did not believe the "Covenants of promise." A covenant of promise, I understand is something promised in such covenant. God made a covenant with Abraham, and there were somethings promised in that covenant to Abraham and to his Seed. What did God promise in this covenant? "And I will give unto thee, and to thy seed after thee, the land wherein thou art a stranger, all the land of Canaan, for an everlasting possession; and I will be their God." Gen. xvii. 7, 8. The same covenant spoken of in Psa. cv., saying, "Unto thee will I give the land of Canaan, the lot of your inheritance." Ver. 7-11. The Spirit in Acts vii. 1-5; Heb. xi. 8, 9, 12, 13, tells us positively, "Abraham and these all died in faith, not having received the promises," but God will fulfil his promises in the future. See Matt. v. 5; Psa. xxxvii. 9, 11, 22, 29, 34. "But the meek shall inherit the earth; and shall delight themselves in the abundance of peace. God promised the land to Abraham and his SEED." Paul in Gal. iii. 16, testifies that Christ is the "Seed." And that we became an heir of this land, God promised to Abraham through the Seed, (Christ). Gal. iii. 27-29. "And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise." This land promised in the covenant has not been fulfilled yet, but will be when the Seed comes in his glory. Matt. xxv. 31-34, the earth prepared from the foundation of the world.

There is no remission of sins promised in the Abrahamic covenant, while in the new covenant there is. Matt. xxvi. 28; Heb. viii. 12, 13; ix. 12-15; x. 19, 20; 1 John i. 1. There is no one that believes stronger in this covenant of promise than I do. Yes, the land which God covenanted to Abraham and his Seed, which we will inherit in the future. But is this the covenant that Christ said, "For this is my blood of the New Testament, which is shed for many for the remission of sins?" Matt. xxvi. 29. And to Jesus the Mediator of the New Covenant. Heb. xii. 24. The blood of the everlasting covenant, Heb. xiii. 20. Christ is Mediator of this New Covenant, while God is the Mediator of the covenant made with Abraham. The Spirit's Word for it.

Now, this I affirm, that a covenant engagement previously ratified by God, the law, issued 430 years afterwards does not annul, so as to invalidate the promise. Gal. iii 17. Diaglott. The Revised Version is in harmony with the Diaglott. Showing the covenant God made with Abraham was ratified 430 years before the law was given at Sinai, and ver. 20 shows that God was the Mediator. If you will read Gen. xv., you will discover where God ratified the covenant of promise to Abraham. "For when God made promise to Abraham, because he could sware by no greater, he sware by himself, wherein God, willing more abundantly to show unto the heirs of promise the immutability of his counsel, confirmed it by an oath." Heb. vi. 13, 17. So the Abrahamic covenant was ratified—confirmed before Christ came into the world. So Christ did not ratify, or confirm, and was not Mediator of the covenant of which he was recipient. The promise was not to "Seeds as of many; but as of One, and to thy Seed, which is Christ." Gal. iii. 16. Would Christ be Mediator of what was promised himself by his Father? I trow not. But if we have been baptized into Christ (the Seed) put on Christ; and if we be Christ's, then are we heirs according to the promise. Gal. iii. 27, 29. Here comes in the "blessing of all nations through the Seed," (Christ). "And in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed." Gen. xxii. 18; see also Gen. xxvi. 3, 4. There is neither Jew nor Gentile, but all one in Christ, (the Seed). Gal. iii. 29. If it is not a blessing to have the privilege extended to all nations of becoming heir through Christ to the blessed promises, then I do not know what would be a blessing. These blessings God promised through the Seed to all "nations." Christ is the Mediator, we get the inheritance through him, no difference of what nationality, or color, even a Jew can be grafted in again. The Apostle forever settles this by saying, "That the blessing of Abraham might come on the Gentiles through Jesus Christ." Gal. iii. 14. "And the Scripture, foreseeing that God would justify the heathen (Gentile) through faith preached before the gospel unto Abraham, saying, In thee shall all nations be blessed." v. 8. Christ took on him the Seed of Abraham. Heb. ii. 16.

What is a covenant? 1st, In theology, the covenant of works, is that implied in the commands, prohibitions, and promises of God; the promise of God to man, that man's perfect obedience should entitle him to happiness, this do, and live; that do and die.

2nd, "The covenant of grace, is that by which God engages to bestow salvation on man, upon the condition that man shall believe in Christ, and yield obedience to the terms of the gospel." Webster.

In the first quotation from Webster, see John iii. 16, 17, 36; also Matt. vii. 24-27; John vi. 51, 53; John xv. 1-6. Life and death set before the people. 2nd, The covenant of grace, for by grace are ye saved, (Eph. ii. 5 8; Rom. i. 16;) to the Jew first, (Matt. xxviii. 19, 20; Mark xvi. 15, 16.

This is just a little bit of the teachings of the New Covenant, which was ratified with the blood of the Lamb of God; (Matt. xxvi. 28,) which cleanseth us from all sin. 1 John i. 7. This covenant promises blessings and life to the obedient of all nations. Acts x. 34-36; Acts x. 11-16; Acts xvii. 26; Rom. xi. 18, 14.

Paul says, "I am the apostle of the Gentiles." Also, "That the blessing of Abraham might come on the Gentiles through Jesus Christ. (the Seed). Gal. iii. 14. Blessed with faithful Abraham. Ver. 9. "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who hath blessed us with all spiritual blessings in heavenly places in Christ, (the Seed). Eph. i. 3. "And in thy Seed (Christ) shall the nations of the earth be blessed; (Gen. xxii. 18; xxvi. 4.) In the mouth of two or three witnesses every word should be established."

Now, I wish to modify my statement in THE RESTITUTION of Dec. 28, that Christ ratified the Abrahamic Covenant, and Matt. xxvi. had reference to the same. I only had reference to the promised "blessing of all nations through the Seed." Those promises extended to the people through Christ (the Seed) the law was added on account of transgressions, till the Seed should come to whom the promise was made; Gal. iii. 19. "The Spirit's Word for it." Zacharias testimony we now take in regard to this "And his father Zacharias was filled with the Holy Ghost, and prophesied saying, Blessed be the Lord God of Israel; for he hath visited and redeemed his people. And hath raised up an horn of salvation for us in the house of his servant David; as he spake by the mouth of his holy prophets, which have been since the world began: that we should be saved from our enemies, and from the hand of all that hate us; to, perform the mercy promised to our fathers, and to remember his holy covenant; the oath which he sware to our father Abraham, That he would grant unto us, that we being delivered out of the hand of our enemies might serve him without fear, in holiness and righteousness before him, all the days of our life." Luke i. 67-75. Thank the Lord for the teachings of the Spirit.

It has been said in THE RESTITUTION of Dec. 28, "They have not been delivered out of the hands of their enemies by Christ's teachings. They do not serve him in holiness and righteousness all the days of their life." Which will we believe? The Spirit's teachings, or man that commences in the middle and never ends? The Spirit through Jeremiah says. "I will put my law in their inward parts; and will be their God, and they shall be my people." Jer. xxxi. 33. We will now see what the teachings of the "able Minister of the New Covenant" says, "Forasmuch as ye are manifestly declared to be the epistle of Christ ministered by us, written not with ink, but with the Spirit of the living God; not in tables of stone, but in fleshly tables of the heart." 2 Cor. iii. 3, 6. So you see the New Covenant Paul was an able minister of, and the Jer. xxxi. 31 covenant correspond for the final consummation. See Rev. vii. 9-14; or Gen. xxii. 18.

I must close this article as it is already getting too long. Long articles are not much liked by editors, and are not read by one-half the readers. Boil them down, brethren.

World to Come to an End.

The world is to come to an end on Nov. 14, 1899. So says the Austrian astronomer, Rudolph Falb. Mr. Falb says that the world will be destroyed by contact with Biela's comet. Biela's comet is the one which was to have destroyed the world in 1832.

Then there was something like a public panic. It was told in the press of the day how the astronomer Olbers, as the result of a careful study in advance of the comet's movements, had found that the comet's center would, shortly before midnight on October 29 of that year, cross the earth's orbit.

Not until next Nov. 13 will the earth return to the critical point in its orbit where it passes the meteoric current, and by that time the whole of the great shoal will generally have swept past and onward along its own orbit.

Sometimes, however, it happens that even in a year the entire shoal has not passed the critical point. Then the earth, passing through the laggards, will be treated to another display of celestial fireworks.—Tribune.

Faithful Warnings.

We were gladdened recently to see earnest exhortations to "preach the Word which liveth and abideth for forever," and to let other matters alone. We think the Spirit has cut out for us all the work we can well do before the Master appears to reckon with us. If that be so, some of it will go altogether undone, and other parts of it imperfectly done, if we allow our minds to be distracted and our time absorbed by matters in no way connected with God's power for saving,—the gospel. Hardly a week passes without a temptation to draw us aside with some human device or other. Some of them may be true, but there is no bread of life in them, if they are one. And, inasmuch as the great Head of the Church bids us occupy till he comes, and has told us with what to occupy ourselves, until he comes, and how to go about, and continue at the task he set us, the lawful conclusion is, that he will not bestow rewards for self-imposed tasks. In the very nature of things the Master's work will be slighted if what little time, talent and means we have, be divided.

From our correspondence with the brotherhood we are convinced that the rank and file generally, have an appetite for the truth as it is in Jesus, doctrinal and practical, and do not want to be distracted with theories based only upon human deductions. The old paths are good enough for them.

Once more, in view of the Spirit's injunction "To preach the Word seasonably and unseasonably,—and in view of the reward by and by we urge all to ride no hobbies.

Important Eastern Matters.

The Old Eastern question has come to the front again; and press reports from London indicate that something to accelerate the evaporation of Turkey may take place in the near future. The Balkins are said to be in a state of siege, and large bodies of Turkish troops are being poured into the disturbed districts; while on the other hand the people all over the province are drilling for the struggle believed to be impending.

It is evident from remarks now and again made in reference to the present condition of things in that region, that it is the settled conviction of the leading editors in England that Russian influence and backing is at the bottom of this trouble, although the Czar is taking steps with the ostensible object of disarming the nation and preventing war. We who heed the sure Word of prophecy know how impossible a thing that is. And when we know that an agent of the Russian government is now in Philadelphia, superintending the building of powerful warships for that country, it seems hard to reconcile that fact with the Peace Proposals, so as to accept them in good faith. Indeed, we believe the Czar will need his warships. We do not think they will be allowed to rust out after they are completed. It is our conviction that they are being constructed in readiness for the last and decisive struggle for the world's dominion, and we can name the victors. Some of our readers may have noticed references to Mr. Bookwalter's trip over the Trans-Caspian railway, and the Trans-Siberian railway, now under construction by Russia, in the daily papers, but no doubt many of them have not. Mr. Bookwalter is a well known Ohio business man, who views things from a commercial and political standpoint, but the statements he makes go far to assure us that we correctly read the prophets when we decide that Russia has a most important part to play in the closing drama of this age. Mr. Bookwalter says:—

"I could not go into the condition of affairs deeply without compromising some of the men I have met. But I have no hesitancy in saying that I believe the center of interest is in Afghanistan and through Central Asia today, and before long the eyes of the world will be turned in that direction. It is my belief, too, that the Trans-Caspian railway which is almost completed, with its branches to important points, is going to be of more strategic importance than the Trans-Siberian railway, about which so much has been said. The Trans-Caspian railway is furnishing Russia an outlet to the Black Sea and the Persian Gulf, and it will furnish her with a means of throwing an enormous force into India, or along the borders of India, if it was ever necessary to menace England in her tenderest spot.

"Russia now has a railway running by way of Tiflis from Baku to Batoum. At Tiflis a branch has been extended to Erivan, the capital of Armenia, and eventually it will reach Ispahan, in Central Persia, giving Persia, which is virtually under Russian control, an outlet to the Black Sea. The Russian government is building another railway from Samarkand to Karshi. Still another road has been built from Merv, to Kushk, on to Afghan border, and since I was there it is being extended to Herat, which is the key to the whole northwestern part of Persia. They also propose to extend a road from Samarkand to Kashgar, which lies well in the Russian Pamirs, and almost in sight of the northern border of India.

"At Karshi, which is the termus of the road from Samarkand, Russia is establishing one of the greatest military stations of modern times. I was on the train with the Ameer Bokhara when he was on the way up the Amu Darin river with his ministers, accompanying a Russian Commission. They were on the way to establish this great military station at Karshi. It stands on the border of Afghanistan, and the Russian guns will menace the English possessions....

"England's great strength has always been in her navy. It made her the greatest nation in the world in some respects. But the value of Russia's strategic points in Asia is in the fact that with an army greater than that of any other nation in the world she can attack England at a point where the ironclads cannot come within a thousand miles of her troops.....Russia could encourage sedition among the Hindus, and especially the Mohammedans, of whom there are about 80,000,000, if she wanted to do so for her own end. She could promise independent sovereignty to the Gackwar of Zaroda, the King of Oudi, and the Holkar of Indore—the three native princes who now bear England's yoke with a very poor grace. She could afford to do this, because I believe Russia has no desire to acquire India, she is simply planning to use her position on the borders of India to compel England to give her an outlet to the commerce of the world. When England shut her off at the Dardanelles, she determined to find an outlet elsewhere, and she has done so. She has gone to the Pacific through Manchuria, and she is going to build a railroad to the Persian Gulf through Persia. England's excitement over Muscat is due do the fact that it controls the mouth of the Persian Gulf, and there she hopes to cut off Russia from the Indian Ocean. But England has made a mistake when she thought to crush a great nation by shutting it off from foreign commerce, forgetting that the strength of a nation lies in agriculture, in which Russia excels. Russia has been perfecting her plans against the day when it will be necessary to force England to give what she wants. That day is approaching, and the point of attack will be India. England sees what is coming and is trying to form alliances with other powers, (Italy, France, and America) to help her resist the aggression of Russia. All the time the English in Russia, and there are many who have interests there,—are unanimous in the opinion that England has made the greatest mistake in her history in not working with Russia instead of against her."

The Englishmen in Russia look at the situation from a human and selfish standpoint of view, ignorant of the fact that God has decreed that these two powers shall come into conflict in the last days. If the English have made a mistake as men estimate things, we believe it is a step toward the development of the situation described long ages ago by the prophets of Israel, when the last grand struggle for the world's dominion shall take place. We stand in awe as we see Jehovah's purposes further by moves of the governments of men.

Without earnestness no man is ever great, or does really great things. He may be the cleverest of men; he may be brilliant, entertaining, popular; but he will want weight. No soul-moving picture was ever painted that had not in it a depth of shadow.—Peter Bayne.

Truth and Love the Most Powerful Things.

Dearly beloved and longed for:

We want to speak as the oracles of God. "It is by every word of God by which man lives." We should pray for God's blessing on all our endeavors in our contention for "Truth," and its companion,—"Love." Our faith should work by love. Love is a proof that we have passed from death unto life. John iii. 14, "A new commandment I give unto you that ye love one another as I have loved you." "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples if ye have love one to another." Love is the first fruit of the Spirit, and is to be added to faith. "Love is the bond of perfectness." Col. iii. 14. "Love is the fulfilling of the law." Rom. xiii. 10, and "Worketh no ill to his neighbor." Love is the debt we owe to one another. Love is the path the followers of God are called to walk. "Be ye therefore followers of God as dear children, and walk in love," etc. Love to all the saints is the true companion of faith in the Lord Jesus Christ "Wherefore also, after I heard of your faith in the Lord Jesus Christ and love to all the saints," etc. Those taught of God to love one another are exhorted to increase more and more.

We are to put on the breastplate of faith and love. Love will cover a multitude of sins among ourselves. We are to provoke one another unto love and to good works." "Love never faileth," and is the greatest of graces. Then as to the degree and character of our love: Love is to be fervent, "See that ye love one another with pure hearts, fervently." "Love is to be without dissimilation." "Love is to be in the Spirit." Col. i. 8. Love is to be "in deed and in Truth." Love should "Abound more and more in knowledge and in all judgment." Phil. i. 10. Love is to even make us willing to lay down our lives for the brethren.

Brethren, let us love one another, for love is of God, and every one that loveth is begotten of God, for God is love." "Continue ye in my love."

J. O. WOODRUFF.

Philosophy vs. the Bible.

Bro. O. R. L. Crozier writing in the Ann Arbor Register of Mar. 23 has the following relative to the Methodist minister whose speech in New York caused such a sensation lately:—

"The Dr. Cadman crevasse through the great Methodist dike against ingersollism will cause some surprise and much sorrow. 'The pastor of the Metropolitan temple, speaking before the regular weekly meeting Monday morning, March 6, to four hundred leading Methodist ministers of New York and vicinity, including Bishop Edward G. Andrews,' urged (as reported) the proposition 'that inerrancy and the infallibility of the Bible are no longer possible of belief among reasoning men.  The speaker was applauded when he rose to read his address and again when he got through  He said that the trend of thought in the Methodist church during the last fifty years had been toward a better knowledge and a newer view of Christ himself rather than of the Bible.' A few days later The Record interviewed leading Chicago preachers on Dr. Cadman's address. Some made light of it; a few condemned it severely; the majority seemed practically with Dr. Cadman.

Four hundred of 'the most representative body of Methodist clergy in America and a bishop' clapping their hands in derision of the Bible. Nothing inerrant and infallible but Human Reason! How do you do, Frenchmen! Progress inverted. Your Baal has indeed been asleep. It has taken fifty years to begin to get awake. Are you sure he is awake now, or only dreaming?

They have not been fair with the Bible. They have carried to the Bible a theology of human invention, and because the Bible will not read in its support they denounce the Bible. How and whence do they get their 'better knowledge and newer view of Christ himself?' They must not go to the Bible for it. They must not call a witness and make him incriminate himself. They must call their only witness, their supreme deity—"Human Reason"—and from outside Christendom, else we will impeach him as biased and particeps criminis. We are aware that it will trouble them to find a specimen of pure human reason absolutely untainted by any Bible influences. That article—unfortunately for our elevated 'Rev. D. D.' friends—has been extremely rare since the first half century of the Christian era. As we would not lose their respect by even seeming to be unreasonable we consent to adjournment till they consult their B. C. cognate philosopher; provided they in the mean time earn respects intelligent men by reading the old Book as candidly as they read other books which they claim are of equal dignity on a few fundamental topics whereon our critical friends are the most sensitive, and see if the Bible does not offer a reasonable theodocy. Of course we must let the Bible explain itself and be consistent with itself, just as we do other books. We ask no special privileges for the Bible. Give it a fair chance and it will vindicate its right to be regarded as THE BOOK. I beg pardon for being plain: the situation demands it.

They charge that the Bible is self-contradictory. But, the contradicting is on their side. They contradict the Bible on nearly every cardinal point of the Christian faith. When the Bible says 'one' they say three; when it says 'down' they say up; when it says 'death' they say life' (or 'passing away' ad nausiam); when it says 'asleep' they say more wide awake than ever; when it says 'earth' they say heaven; when it says 'know not anything' they say know everything; when it says 'the saints can't go to heaven' they say they will go to heaven; when it says 'mortality' they say immortality; when it says 'church' they say kingdom; when it says 'resurrection' they say continued life without a resurrection; when it says 'of the wicked destruction' they dare not say anything; when it says 'inhabit the land' they say the skies; when it says 'worse and worse' they say growing better. They are aware that after Paul's time Christianity met Greece, Rome, Judaism and the East at Alexandria in friendly embrace and evolved the Christianity of the middle ages and of 'the last days.' They may also be aware that the 'first lie' (Gen. iii. 4, 5), that death is a better kind of life was the door to sin and the initial of 6,000 years of human misery, and that instead of 'opening' it closed our eyes to the wonderful beauties and fitness of nature (Gen. i. 26-28; ii. 7, 17), also that the declared object of expulsion from Eden was a merciful interposition to prevent everlasting life in sin which is the very seed of Anti-Bible theology.'

The 144,000.

Dear Restitution:

I thought I would pen a few thoughts that have presented themselves to my mind of late in reference to the 144,000 spoken of in Rev. vii. 4, as having been sealed in their foreheads. These thoughts presented themselves to my mind by some questions I had asked a friend of mine, a Seventh Day Adventist, and the answers he gave.

I asked my friend if the Seventh Day people understood that the 144,000 spoken of in Rev. vii. to cover all of the saved. His answer was no, for the 9th verse speaks of a great multitude come up after that of all nations. This multitude embraced the saved of all ages. Then he explained that the 144,000 were the living that would be translated at the coming of Christ. As proof of this he cited Rev. xiv. 3-4. They were redeemed from the earth and from among men.

Another question asked him was, Do you people believe that Sabbath-keeping is the seal? He said, No, but said they believed none would be sealed that did not keep the Sabbath. These answers bring us according to their theory to this conclusion, all the living saints who will be translated at the coming of Christ must have the seal, and none but Sabbath-keepers will be sealed. This view of the subject struck me as a little strange, as neither Jesus nor his Apostles commanded the disciples to keep the Sabbath. My friend explained, referring to the four winds of the earth, verse 1, said, winds denote strife. The kings of earth striving with each other. The four angels that hold the four winds are called upon to hold the winds that they blow no more till the servants of God are sealed in their foreheads. This idea seemed to bring out the thought that it was necessary that the strife should cease in order that the servants of God might be sealed. So I asked myself the question, do the facts in the case show the necessity for such a stay in the strifes going on at the time of translation? Referring to 1 Thes. iv. 16-17, we find that the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel and the trump of God, and the dead in Christ shall rise first; then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them to meet the Lord in the air, and so shall we ever be with the Lord. No necessity to stay the winds in order to seal the living saints.

Now let us see what Paul says on this subject in 1 Cor. xv. 51-52, "Behold I show you a mystery, we shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump, for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead, shall be raised, and we shall be changed." This seems to settle the question about waiting for the living saints to be sealed before translation.

Now, let us go a little farther in our investigation. As the Scriptures referred to seem to show that there will be a cessation of the winds to blow in order that the servants of God may be sealed, and as there is no chance for any stay of the winds when the living saints are translated, for this change comes instaneous, as Paul says, in the twinkling of an eye. We ask the question then, if the 144,000 are not the living saints that will be translated at the coming of Christ, who are they? That is the question we will try and answer.

We will adopt our friend's view that the 144,000 are redeemed from among the living at that time. Verse 3 of chapter 14 says they were redeemed from the earth. Verse 4 says they were redeemed from among men. What men? Chap. vii. 4 says, "And I heard the number of them that were sealed, and there were sealed 144,000 of all the tribes of the children of Israel," and then goes on to name each tribe separately, so there could be no mistake about where they came from. I am aware that the Seventh Day people claim that all true believers constitute the twelve tribes of Israel. If this is so, why is the distinction made by John in verse 9, he sees a great multitude out of all nations and kindreds and tongues stood before the throne. Two distinct classes of people mentioned, one class from out of the twelve tribes of Israel, the other out of all nations. If they were all Israel, why this distinction? We will now carry our investigation a little farther and see if we can ascertain when this sealing takes place. In 1 Thes. iv. 16-17, we learn that the sleeping saints are raised, the living changed and go out to meet the Lord in the air, and Paul in 1 Cor. xv. 51-52, says this change is instantaneous. Also in 1 Thes. iv., leaves the resurrected and living changed ones in the air. Zechariah sees this grand company descend to the Mount of Olives. Zech. xiv. 4-5. Now we ask where is Jesus when John saw him with the 144,000 sealed ones. Chap. xiv. 1, "I looked and lo, a lamb stood on the Mount Zion, and with him 144,000, having his Father's name written in their foreheads." We notice at this time Jesus is on the earth, and the 144,000 are with him. If you notice the chronological order of these events you will see that the sealing takes place after Jesus returns to the earth with all his saints. But says one, does not the record say they were the first fruits unto God and the Lamb? What first fruits? First fruits from the dead? Certainly not. I take it that they are the first fruits from among the twelve tribes of the children of Israel. As Israel and Judah take an active part in the subjugation of the nations as many Scriptures teach. See Isa. xi. 12, 13, 14; Zech. xiv. 12-14. It is evident that God has a special work for the 144,000 to do. It seems quite likely they are the ones represented by the angel flying in mid-heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach to them that dwell on the earth. Who would be better prepared for this work?

Present Immortality.

The doctrinal subject of the immortality of the soul has been thrashed over and over again until one would think that there is nothing left to say, yet the leaders of the popular churches of the day continue to hold up to their followers the squib that the old serpent told mother Eve in the Garden of Eden. This does not come to us causing us to question why it is so, for we, together with Timothy, have been warned of this condition of things by Paul, (Read 2 Tim. iii.; iv.)

To go back to the subject of the immortality of the soul, let us grant for the sake of argument that when "God formed man out of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life," Gen. ii. 7 there were really two separate entities which entering, the one into the other, constituted man—the living soul—the being which possessed the senses which enabled him to think, feel, see, hear, taste, etc., for not until God had breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, was he a living soul capable of understanding the commands and promises of God and the lie of the serpent. If the clay did not possess powers, then it must be that the element, "breath of life," which was breathed into his nostrils, possessed them. Now if we view it from this standpoint to prove that the soul is a conscious entity when separated from the clay, I ask then, when God said to man "For in the day thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die," Gen. ii. 17, to which of these entities did he speak? To the one of clay which of itself had no power to think and reason, or to the other which only has these powers? Now God and the serpent spoke to the same being, whether it was the clay or this immortal (?) soul. Do you say that it needs the union of the clay and this immortal essence to make this thinking, feeling, tasting, seeing, hearing man? Very well then. If this be true, and if there were none of these elements in man in his separated state before God united them, (or him) I ask, will not the same conditions (the senses) be absent when death shall cause a separation of this body and its spiritual essence?

We had no consciousness before this union of clay and breath, and what reason have we for believing that there will be consciousness when these are again separated by death? Some tell me that there is no comfort in the thought of being unconscious, non-existent, in the grave. I deny this, but not to argue it, my friend what comfort is there is clinging to a hope based upon false doctrines manufactured for itching ears? God has laid his plans for your salvation before you, for your enlightenment and you alone are responsible to him for the right use of them.

Friends, we are traveling toward the grave and unless the trump shall soon be sounded, we shall be brought face to face with death. How much comfort we shall then receive from God's work will depend wholly with what spirit and how much we have studied it. Will we be ready to enter into that slumber with the hope of awaking when the Master calls his righteous ones forth? What an awful thought it will be for us to die feeling ourselves not worthy to enter the kingdom. Submitted in love and in the hope that this may be read by some one whose ideas on this point are unsettled.

Russian Rapacity in China.

Vancouver, B. C., April 6.—Advices from the far East, brought by the steamer Empress of Japan, indicate that Japan has watched with jealous eye Italy's recent attempt to get a lease of San Mun Bay.

A correspondent of the Northern China News gives some remarkable information regarding Russian progress in Manchuria. Russians in Manchuria are acquiring land as they please and are already working mines. The railroad, too, is obviously a military one, and he asserts that there are 30,000 Russian troops at Port Arthur, 3,000 at Talien Wan, 2,000 at Kin Chou, 200 at Lunchou, 200 at Wafanglien, 200 at New Chwang, 200 at Haichieng, 200 at Liao Yang, 800 at Kirin, 20,000 at Haipion, north of Kirin, and, in fact, Russian soldiers are all over Manchuria.

In Haichieng the Russians have taken a shop and fortified it by mounting guns. At Liao Yang they have a site 200 yards square, where they are building barracks. At Kirin the Russians have possession of the Chinese barracks, and 800 soldiers with twenty officers and mining engineers are quartered there. Visitors to the locality cannot move without being shadowed by Russians. As there is no railway at Kirin, and the branch line which is projected will not reach there for two or three years, the presence of soldiers seems unnecessary. The Russo-Chinese bank has opened a branch in Kirin, worked by Chinese, with one foreigner, who is British, but little beyond political work appears to be done.

At Haipien, where the railway will branch off from the the main line to Vladivostok, there are Russian settlements with 20,000 soldiers.

It is instructive to compare this military occupation with the railway in which British capitalists have their money, a good road with stone embankments and workshops along the line, where carriages and bridges are being built, and yet not one British soldier to protect the property.—Tribune.

Poetry.

"Follow Thou Me."

"Take up thy cross, and follow me,"
The Lord who died on Calvary;
First, sit thee down, count well the cost;
"What things were gain, now count as lost."
Leave all possessions, follow me
If thou wouldst my disciple be;
For who-so-e'er do.h not forsake
Possessions all, I cannot take.

"Take up thy cross, and follow me,"
Man of sorrows, smitten for thee,
Complete afflictions left behind;
Be thou the friend of all mankind.
Thy dearest friends, yea, thine own life
Hated, and made a sacri-fice
If worthy thou wouldst be of me
Deny thyself, and follow me.

"Take up thy cross, and follow me,"
Thine Advocate, who pleads for thee;
Follow not afar, but close beside
The Lamb of God, the Crucified.
"Endure the cross, d spise the shame"
Take up thy cross in Jesus' name;
Take up thy cross, the Lord doth wait,
Go ye with him without the gate.

"Take up thy cross, and follow me,"
I am thy portion—I am he
Who died, but live to bless and cheer
My saints who bear the scoff and jeer.
Take up thy cross, its grief and scorn;
Plait thou thy brow, with sharpened thorn;
Wash thy good works in Jesus' blood.
Take up thy cross, through storm and flood.

"Take up thy cross, and follow me,"
If from all sin you would be free;
Take up thy cross, my pathway choose;
Let not thy human pride refuse.
Take up thy cross, e'er with me stand,
Take up thy cross, 'tis my command;
Sull thine affections to the cross,
'Twill keep thee from all earthly dross.

"Take up thy cross, and follow me,"
If thou wouldst my salvation see;
The Prince of thy Salvation own,
Reflect his image, and make known
Redeeming love; go with the Son
The humble way that crowns are won;
Follow the Lord despite of all.
Hear and heed his heavenly call.

"Take up thy cross, and follow me"—
The Son of God, who bore for thee
Thy sins, the scourge, the nails, the spear;
Take up thy cross, when sin lurks near.
Drink with me from Calvary's cup,
Take up thy cross, and with me sup;
Nor count not up thine earthly loss,
Win Christ, and glory in the cross.

"Take up thy cross, and follow me,"
Till I the Bridegroom come for thee;
Take up thy cross, each hour and day;
E'er walk by faith while I'm away;
Take up thy cross, joint-heir and Bride
Take up thy cross, in me abide;
Take up thy cross if you would wear
My robe and crown; my glory share.

Communicated.

The Coming and Presence of our Lord Jesus Christ.

The testimony with reference to the two-fold coming of the Lord is that which have a mind to present in this paper. The unsettled and unsatisfactory conditions among the nations admonish the believers to be on the watch, and ready to meet the impending crisis. The nearness of the advent is acknowledged on all sides, and by all parties holding pre-millennial views. My object in the study of this subject, is to get down to the right division of the word of truth, and endeavor to apply the testimony of the records to that which occupied the mind of the writer at the time the communication was made and delivered, and also the object to be attained thereby.

And farther: To place Israelism well to the front, or, in the foreground in the study of Matt. especially so, in the study of the parables of Jesus. To recognize the Israelitish conception of the kingdom of heaven as revealed by the prophets.

I quote: "The Master of that servant will come in a day when he does not expect him; and at an hour of which he is not aware, and will cut him off (from something) and appoint his portion with the hypocrites, there will be the weeping and gnashing of teeth"—Matt. xxiv. 50, 51. Compare with verses 45, 46.

The Master finds matters as here represented at his arrival. There is no public announcement made of his approach. No herald sent forth to notify his servants that he is coming. But, on the other hand, he comes as a thief in the night, as the records affirm. Consult Matt. xxiv. 42, 43: xxv. 43: 1 Thess. v. 2, 4: 2 Peter iii. 10: Rev. xvi. 15—"Behold I come as a thief," etc. He comes as the lightning's flash. It is present before one has time to think or act. The admonition to watch is in line with existing conditions, so that the note of warning in a general way, may be applied by the individual watcher. Note particularly the conditions existing at the beginning of chapter xxv. The virgins are aroused from slumber by a public announcement of the bridegroom's coming. The difference is clear cut and positive between this scene, and that of coming as a thief.

These virgins are not the bride: there is no intimation that they ever expect to be, as may be learned by consulting Rev. xix. 8, 9: xxi. 2, 9, 10. We learn that the bride of the Lamb is the great municipality or corporation. The organic governing power of the world to come. Illuminated by the glory of God—The Lamb. The marriage in this case is a politico-ecclesiastic union for a purpose. The administration of the divine government in the earth, so that the will of God may be done on earth as it is in heaven. The government being priestly as well as kingly, "The counsel of peace" being between them both.

The order is: The Lord comes as a thief in the night, settles up matters with his servants, and having arranged the affairs of his household in relation to the unfolding process of his public manifestation when the earth will be lighted with his glory." "Then the magesty of the heavens will be like ten virgins who taking their lamps went forth to meet the bridegroom." The full force of the "Then" as related to the preceding context must be recognized grammatically as well as chronologically.

Confusion may be avoided by attention to this particular; confounding the happenings before the "then" with the representations after that, cannot be admitted in view of the laws of language, and the testimony already referred to.

Consult Psa. xiv. and read carefully: The writer's mind overflows with goodly matter concerning the King:—"Gird thy sword upon thy thigh O Mighty One," verse 4 R. V. Observe the preparation for a coming conflict with his enemies in his progress through the disputed territory of Idumea, Psa. ex. 2, 3:—"Thy throne O God, is for ages repeated." Verse 8 suggests the bridegroom decked out in oriental finery; sweet smelling odors are customary in the preparation for the coming nuptials and banquet, "Garments out of ivory palaces" indicate that "King's daughters"—verse 9—had something to do in preparing those splendid garments. Advice to the prospective bride, verse 10. As to her attitude towards her husband. [The sentence "and worship thou him" is wanting in the lxx. Compare verse 12 with Psa. lxxii. 10, 11, "All glorious is the King's daughter, her clothing is of embroidered work inwrought with threads of gold. She is conducted to the King, verse 14. The virgins her companions that follow her, shall be brought unto thee, with gladness and rejoicing they shall be led. They shall enter into the palace of the King."

The majesty of the heavens may be compared with such a display of splendor, of which the western mind can form only a faint conception.

A herald is dispatched to announce the approach of the victorious hero. Isa. ix. 6. Having triumphed over his enemies, he approaches with a numerous retinue of resplendent ones. Jude xiv. and Zech. xiv. 5; Consult the lofty prophetic ode of Habakkuk, iii., "God cometh from Teman, and the Holy one from Mount Paran—Pause—His glory covereth the heavens, and the land is filled with his renown. His brightness appeareth like the light. He hath rays (marg.) of light from his hands. And he causes a hiding of his splendor." Sun and moon stand still in their habitation. They move at the light of thine arrows, at the shining of thy lglittering spear. Thou marchest through the land with indignation. With anger thou threshest the nations. Thou goest forth for the salvation of thy royal people. For the salvation of thy anointed.".....Paran was the third camping place of the children of Israel in their journey north after leaving Sinai, and located between Sinai and Esion-Geber. Teman near the centre of Idumea, and on farther north the scene of the great wine-press is laid. Isa. xxxiv., Rev. xix. 15. Bozrah at the north end of Idumea, the Capitol of the country.

The watchman in the watchtower on the wall of Jerusalem looks away south clearing the south end of the Dead Sea into the north part of Idumea. He beheld a scene which suggested this question:—"Who is this coming from Edom with dyed garments from Bozrah. He, resplendent in his apparel, marching in the greatness of his strength?

Response. I that speak in righteousness, mighty to save. Watchman; Wherefore art thou red in thy apparel and thy garments like him who treadeth in the wine-fat?

Response: I have trodden the wine-press alone, and of the peoples there was not one with me.

Yea, I will tread (Marg. R. V.) them in my anger, and trample them in my fury; and their life-blood shall be sprinkled upon my garments, and my raiment will be stained. Because the day of retribution is in my heart and the year of my redeemed is come," Is. lxiii. 1–5, and compare ch. xxxiv. 8. Consult Ps. lxviii. 17, "The chariots of God, twenty thousand—thousands of angels. The Lord is among them as in Sinai in the holy (place,") [the phrase "of angels" is wanting in ancient documents.] "Thousands repeated"—"Young's An. Con. and C. A. Briggs: "Two myriads, thousands repeated." "Thousands of changed ones," reminds us of 1 Cor. xv. 52. Will now give the reading of the lxx. "The chariots of God are ten thousand fold, thousands of rejoicing ones, the Lord is among them in Sinai in the holy place." Certainly the changed ones" are "rejoicing ones." And the Lord comes from some place to some place, with his saints, holy ones, sanctified for a purpose. Will copy a reading here from Deut. xxxiii. 2–5 according to the reading of the lxx. "The Lord is come from Sinai, and appeared from Seir to us, and has hasted out from Mount Pharan with the ten thousand of saints: his angels with him on his right (reminds one of Matt. xxv. 31.) And he spared his people, and all his sanctified ones under thy hands; and they are under thee. And he [Moses] received of his words. The law which Moses charged us, an inheritance to the assemblies of Jacob: and [plus these things already mentioned] he shall be prince with the beloved one, when the princes of the people are gathered together with the tribes of Israel."

Moses is dead and buried: nevertheless, "He shall be prince with (in company with) the Beloved One, some time in the future: and the gathering of the heads of the tribes, and the people of Israel will be after the Deliverer comes to Zion, in the manner represented in these testimonies.

The public manifestation of the Lord will be announced, and his approach to the Holy City heralded as the conquering hero from Bozrah after the battle.

Having met and vanquished his enemies and entered into an alliance with Edom, Moab and the chiefs of Ammon, Is. xi. 14: xi. 41, he proceeds onward north from Bozrah, on the east side of the Dead Sea toward the fords of the Jordan, and so on unto the Mount of Olives, which is caused to divide in halves (Zech. xiv. 4). From Olivet he sends a herald to demand the unconditional surrender of the city, which at this juncture is suffering most terribly from the combined forces of the confederate nations which war against Jerusalem. Zech. xiv. 2.

Herald, addressing the rulers of the city: "Lift up your gates, O ye rulers, and be ye lift up ye doors of the age, and the King of glory shall come in." The rulers inquire: "Who is the King of glory? Reply. The Lord full of strength. The Lord mighty in battle." Therefore, Lift up your gates ye rulers, and be ye lifted up ye doors of the age, and he, the King of glory shall come in." Again the inquiry comes from within; Who is he, the King of glory? Reply. The Lord of hosts, he is the King of glory." Psa. xxiv. 7–10. Compare Ezek. xlvii. 2: xliv. 2.

The rulers finally surrender the city. The friends of the Lord go forth to meet him, greeting him with loud hosannas: Blessed the King of Israel who cometh in the name of the Lord, Hosannah in the highest, Matt. xxi. 9: Mark xi. 9, 10, compared with Matt. xxiii. 38, 39. The time has arrived when they see him again and welcome him to the throne of David on the Mount Zion, "Beautiful for situation on the north side, the city of the great King." The entrance to the honor and glory of the age will be by means of the planting of the divine authority "upon Zion my holy mountain." Isa. ii. 16. Compare Zech. xii. 2, 8, 9, 10. Behold he is coming with the clouds, and every eye shall see him, and those who pierced him; and all the tribes of the land shall mourn over him, Yea, so be it." Rev. i. 7.

Obituary.

James H. Burris, aged 42 years. Bro. Burris fell asleep in Jesus, we trust, at his home seven miles west of Shawnee, Oklahoma, March 15th, 1899, leaving a wife and five children to mourn the loss of a kind husband and father. We loose for the present, a good neighbor and brother in the faith. We sorrow not as others which have no hope, for we expect to meet him in the kingdom. Words of consolation from Joh xiv. 14, were spoken by the writer to the bereaved family, and neighbors present, showing that "death" is the opposite of life, that a man is not alive, when dead. "If a man die shall he live again." The writer in his weakness showed by the Scriptures that only by a resurrection from the dead, could we ever expect to see the brother alive again, for the benefit of the living do we speak on these occasions, and not the dead. After which we laid him away in the grave, to await the coming of him [illegible] the power over death and "all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth." John v. 28, 29. For a short time, farewell Brother.

M. L. Adams.

Died March 23, 1899, Ira Smith, son of Wm. and Emma Smith, at the age of eighteen years and two months. He was first taken with the measles, then a complication of diseases terminated in spinal meningitis. His suffering was intense but borne with patience and kindness. Skilled physicians, loving parents and friends stood sympathizingly and anxiously by, but deeply conscious of human power. Ira was young but his nature was that of influence. Many of advanced years were impressed by his personality. His associates often spoke of his ideas and example. In the home he seemed like the guide, so constant and considerate. His chair at the table was seldom vacant and at evening his kind advising voice mingled with the family. He was very conscientious and had a strong-will power. He looked at things seemingly not from a young boy's view. Behind done the work of an engineer successfully for three years; was of a religious turn of mind, and studied the Bible for his guide and support. A. H. Zilmer baptized him last fall. He told his sister a short time before his sickness, "Oh, I am so anxious to be good and want to do only that which is right." To see so young and promising a life taken from us, causes a vacancy and a grief that seems great indeed, but "We sorrow not even as others that have no hope, for if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him." He was buried at Mount Zion cemetery, where J. S. Miller made appropriate remarks. Owing to sickness in the family the funeral service will be arranged for later.

Death the great enemy again to us hath come,
And taken from our midst a precious one,
A loving and familiar voice is stilled:
His place is vacant and never can be filled.

But oh, our loved Master this very debt did pay;
If we are his we'll meet him on the resurrection day,
Then mortal shall immortal be and with Jesus reign,
In this better land free from sin and pain.

His hope was that Jesus to this earth would come,
And give a crown of immortality to each one,
Who in this life the gospel would obey,
And choose to walk with Christ in the straight and narrow way.

Let his example of goodness and right,
Be to friends and relatives a bright and shining light,
That will lead them on as a guardian star,
To the kingdom of God where no death will appear.

Dear Restitution:

If you will allow me space in your much esteemed paper I will announce the death of our much loved Sister in Christ, Mrs. M. E. Leppo, who fell asleep in Feb. 9, 1899, at her home on Santa Creek, Kootenai County, Idaho. As there was no one of her faith to take charge of the funeral services I was requested to do so. The services were held at the Santa school house on the 11th day of Feb., 1899, where I read a few Scriptures on the resurrection and final restitution of all things, and spoke a few words of comfort and encouragement to the bereaved. We then repaired to the cemetery and laid her to rest to await the coming of the Lord. The deceased was born in eastern Missouri, Feb. 25, 1833. She was principally raised in Illinois; moved back to Missouri when she was about twenty years of age, was married to James Jones at the age of twenty-two, and then moved to eastern Kansas, where her husband died during Civil War. She was then left a widow until she married John Benbow, who died Jan. 31, 1866, she was afterwards married to R. W. Leppo and they lived in Kansas until April, 1883, when they crossed the Plains to Umatilla Co., Ore., where her last husband died Mar. 1, 1884. She has since lived with her only son; they moved to Latah Co., Idaho, in 1883, and in 1894 moved to Kootenai Co., Idaho, where they lived ever since. The deceased has lived a Christian life from early childhood. She made her home in the Methodist church until about twenty-five years ago when she saw the true light of the gospel as it was presented to her by John Foore, and was baptized by him, where she has lived a true Christian life, and a faithful worker for the faith she loved, and has also been a great reader of The Restitution for over twenty years. She leaves one son and three daughters to mourn her loss.

G. A. Weeks.

Sister Emma Stephens, wife of James Stephens, who died nearly ten years ago. They emigrated from Indiana in the sixties and made their home in Nebraska ever since. She was in her seventy-ninth year. She died in full faith of the near coming of Christ, the Life-Giver. She died of old age as near as I could make out. She lived on the little farm they obtained until she died. David Brant and family moved in the house with her some five years ago. Three years ago she became unable to do any work, but they kindly cared for her. There were no children. They made many friends and perhaps some enemies, I don't know. They were strong in the faith and always talked it. Their home was the home of the way-worn pilgrim when they were called on by them. We met at the residence on the 20th, where a short discourse was preached by the writer from Rev. xiv. 13, after which we laid her to rest by the side of her husband in the Linden cemetery, awaiting the call of the Master. Oh Lord, how long shall the enemy prevail?

The Story of Israel. No. 89.

TURNED BACK TO THE WILDERNESS, NUM. XIV. 39-45: NUM. XV. 32-37; NUM. XV. 4; DEUT. I. 40-46.

We have not given you the names of the twelve traitor judges; you can look them up if you care to. You will find them in the first part of the 13th chap. of Numbers. They belonged to the seventy upon whom the Spirit of the Lord came at Kibroth.—Hatavah, where the people died from eating so many quails.

Open your Bibles now at the 14th chapter of Numbers. Get the 40th verse. But stop; look at the 25th verse first. It says in brackets, that "the Amalekites and the Canaanites dwelt in the valley."

Then in the same verse, the commandment of the Lord to Israel is given—"Tomorrow turn you, and get you into the wilderness by way of the Red Sea." "The way of the Red Sea," was the lower of the three roads, that led out of Egypt to Palestine. The northern road was called "the way of the Philistines," the middle one, "the way of Shur." They all went out of Egypt by gates through the wall of Etham, or Shur. The Israelites took none of these roads; they went farther down, that God's power might be shown by making them walk dry shod through the sea. So "the way of the sea" is another road, than that by which they came to Kadesh-Barnea. They passed this road at Rithma. It is the way that modern Egyptian pilgrims take to Mecca

40 ver. But the Israelites are rebellious still. Now that the Lord bids them turn back, they do not want to go! They half repent of the murmurings of yesterday, and rising early in the morning, get them up into the top of the mountain and say, "Lo, we be here, and will go up unto the place which the Lord hath promised; for we have sinned." But it is too late now; they have let their last chance slip by; the beautiful flowers and vales of Canaan will never smile on them. Be careful dears, lest you too, "Enter not in because of unbelief." The future rest is only prepared for those who have faith in God. "Be not of them who draw back unto perdition, but of them who believe to the saving of the soul." Heb. x. 39. "Take heed brethren, lest there be in any of you an evil heart of unbelief, in departing from the living God. But exhort one another daily, while it is called today; lest any of you be hardened through the deceitfulness of sin." Heb. iii. 12, 13

Moses tells the Israelite that they are transgressing the commandment of the Lord and that it will not prosper; that the Lord is not among them, and that if they go up they will fall by the sword of the Amalekites and the Canaanites. Yet they persist and are beaten. The ark of the covenant of the Lord and Moses are not with them; the Lord is no longer their captain. No battle can be won without God. It is in vain to go out against the enemy trusting in ourselves.

You will see from the way the next chapter begins, that the Lord does not intend that his purposes shall be frustrated. Though this rebellious generation are to perish. Yet are the children of Israel to come into the land. "When ye be come into the land of your habitations, ' ye shall do so and so, is the message of the Lord to them by the hand of Moses. But we have been over these laws and still pass on to the 3rd verse of this 15th chap.

But some one says, "Auntie, you are too fast, you haven't told us how long the Israelites are to wander in the wilderness." Sure enough, we had forgotten that. They are to wander just as many years as the spies were days in Canaan, or 40 years. The count begins at the time they started out of Egypt, Nisan, 2513 A. M. and will end, when they cross the Jordan on Nisan 2553 A. M. Not much will be told us about them in their wanderings. We know that they came back to the camp at Kadesh after their defeat, and that in disobedience to God, they remain there "many days." Deut. i. 46, our chronologist says 38.

On the first day of the new civil year, the pillar moved and they "took their journey into the wilderness by the way of the Red Sea." Deut. ii. 1.

Now we are ready to go back to Num. xv. 32. It says, "While the children of Israel were in the wilderness, they found a man that gathered sticks on the Sabbath day." And they "brought him to Moses and to Aaron, and to the whole congregation."

But no one seemed to know what to do with him, so he was put in prison. Moses appealed to the Lord and he said, "The man shall be surely put to death," and they "stoned him with stones, and he died." Death was the penalty for sabbath-breaking, but this is the only instance given in the Bible where the penalty was inflicted. The laws were the Lord's laws as well as the laws of the State, and whoever broke them was rebelling against him.

Num. xvi. tells of the rebellion of Korah, Dathan and Abiram. Korah was a cousin of Moses. He was the son of Izhar, the brother of Amram. Dathan and Abiram and on the son of Peleth were Reubenites. Num. xxvi. 8-11; see also Ex. vi. 18-21.

Korah was ambitious. He seemed to think that the way ought to be open, not only to the children of Aaron, but also to the Levites and to any one out of the other tribes, who wished to become a priest.

He won many of the princes of Israel over to his side, and they come together to Moses and Aaron, and say, "Ye take too much upon you, seeing all the congregation are holy, every one of them, and the Lord is among them," just as if these two men had elected themselves to that high position and not the Lord!

But we want to make our lessons shorter and must close for this time. Our next lesson will begin with Num. xvi. 4.

Auntie Winge.

People who do not believe in prayer lose a wonderful rest and refuge. When time and space, the wants, the bitterness, or the duties of life, separate us from those we love so far that our help [illegible] to them, our voices silent, our eyes blind; when we know that suffering, idleness, danger, death, may lie in wait for them every hour, and no strength or longing of ours can avail to help them, where do they fly, what hope or comfort do they have, who cannot give their beloved into the safe keeping of the Omnipotent God; who cannot pour out their tortured and anxious hearts to him who heareth and answereth prayer?—Ledyard.

Religion's grand secret is living upon Christ, looking continually to him. All that is desirable in ourselves, all that is useful to others, must be drawn simply from this source; and everything else must be in subserviency to this. The secret of abiding in Christ is a compound grace of humility, faith and love,—humility, by which the soul feels its own nothingness and emptiness; faith, by which it embraces the Savior, as all sufficient for every want; and love, by which it continually dwells in him.—Bickersteth.

Our Love Feast.

Dear Restitution:

I wish to write a few lines to THE RESTITUTION. I think it is one of the best papers I ever read. I don't think we can do without it. I am not a member of any church, but I do rejoice in an undoubting faith of Christ's coming again to establish the restitution of all things. See Acts iii. and John xiv. The Lord says, "I will come again and receive you unto myself, that where I am ye may be also." O, that is a grand and glorious promise, and I hope to be one of those whom the Lord will have mercy on. I am looking for the dear Savior's return to earth to claim his Bride, for unto those that look for him, he shall appear the second time without sin unto salvation. O, that I may be worthy and ready to meet him is my prayer, "For blessed are those servants whom the Lord will find watching when he cometh." Luke xii. I hope to have the pleasure of having my name enrolled with the courageous little band here, who can stand up in the face of the world today and testify to the grand and glorious hope of our soon coming Savior and King.

CARRIE UPDIKE.

Dear Restitution:

Please find enclosed $1.50 to pay for my paper another year, as I could not do without it. The Bible and THE RESTITUTION are all I have to cheer me on my journey through life. I send love to all of like precious faith. We are living as many others lived of old and have no preaching. Oh, how I long to meet some brother or sister, though it may never be my privilege in this life. My one aim is to hold out faithful to the end, that I may meet you all in the kingdom of God.

A Sister in hope of eternal life.

MRS. W. H. HARTT.

Dear Restitution:

Knowing the times, that indeed we are living in the last days, it is now time to wake out of sleep, for now is our salvation nearer than when we believed, the night is far spent, the day is at hand. Let us therefore cast off the works of darkness and let us put on the armor of light. Let us walk honestly before the Lord, not in rioting and drunkenness, not in strife and envying, but let us have on the Lord Jesus Christ, that we may be able to stand in the evil time of seducers, and having done all to stand, having on the whole armor of God, living soberly, righteously and godly in this present world looking for that blessed hope and the glorious appearing of Jesus Christ, who gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity and purify unto himself a peculiar people zealous of good works, and when he comes again in the glory of the Father and all the holy angels with him. Then will he say to all of his waiting children, "Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." Then this time of suffering will come to an end, when God's own hand shall wipe away the tears from every weeping eye, and pains and groans and sighs and fears and death itself shall die. In view of this glorious time, may we heed the Savior's injunction to the Apostles when he told them to watch and pray always, that they might be accounted worthy to escape all those things that should come to pass and be enabled to stand before the Son of Man, and not be ashamed. And now, dear brothers and sisters, let us strive to enter in at the straight gate, for many will seek to enter therein, and shall not be able.

C. H. & E. J. WATKINS.

Dear Restitution:

I am a little girl eight years old, and I thought I would write a few lines. My mamma and papa have taught me to believe in the all-wise Creator, and his Son, our Savior.

"Christ was born across the sea,
With a glory in his bosom that transfigures you and me."

And when he comes the second time I hope I will be found worthy of eternal life. The wicked will be destroyed and be burnt up; but they will not burn forever. Will there be any sorrow when he comes? No, there will be peace and no sorrow or trouble. I wish Christ would come soon; we are waiting for him, for we have no other friend. I hope I will be saved in the next world; where peace and righteousness will cover the earth as the water does the sea.

ETHEL MARIE VENABLE.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

By request of J. Anthony I thought you might be pleased to hear from your Northern Sister. The dear RESTITUTION, the blessed old Bible and an old hymn book, called the Songs of Zion, why I call it old is because it is a most worn out number printed in 1879, at Grand Rapids, Mich., by W. W. Hart, these three are held as a great treasure in our family circle. We look earnestly forward each week for THE RESTITUTION as a weekly visitor, ladened with good tidings of a love unfeigned, soon to be ushered in. The way I know the great national subject is in this wise, the nations are making daily preparations for their judgment, and feel it a Christian duty to practice lots and preach little, and yet I seldom get into a conversation with anybody without telling of my hope of the promises God gave to Abraham and the story of the promises are the words, "Well done, good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joys of the Lord, prepared for you from the foundation of the world. Hope each and every one may feel worthy and stand ready to say, Welcome, you King of glory, you and I have long been friends. Yes, dear sisters, that long looked for Friend will soon appear to judge the nations and set up that iron rule that will subdue all other rulers. I can think, read, sing and shout, but that will never feed the hungry, clothe the naked the fatherless and the poor, lonely, broken hearted widow. O dear, what would I give to talk with some of like precious faith. But faith without works are dead, so, I can conclude if I go to work and start out and attend some conference meeting, I can have that wished once. I really think I shall some time this coming summer, if the Lord will permit. We have snow here 4-6 feet deep on the level and as cold as any ordinary winter ought to be, and the seventeen days of March the weather has been wofully cold 56 and 57 degrees below zero. My husband thinks he will try to get out of this northern country before the coming of a northern winter, all I have to say is I hope we will have the good fortune to get near some of our faith. So fare you well now till you hear from me again. Take good courage, the storm will soon be over.

Your Sister in hope of eternal of life,

MRS. C. H. CORLENTZ.

Brother Underwood:

We love the household of faith, the gospel of the kingdom and our blessed Master, and are striving to enter into that rest that remaineth for the people of God when Jesus comes, an event we may reasonably expect at any time. Yours in the one faith,

EMMA & LEE SUTHERLAND.

Kansas and Missouri Conference Work.

At our annual conference Sept. 4, 1898, there was reported as having been preached in that year upwards of 140 discourses and twelve baptisms, A good interest was reported at the different points visited, which would not have been had no effort been made by the conference. This is a very good showing, considering the disadvantage under which the work was done. It shows what can be done by united effort. This gives us hope and encouragement for the future, so we are arranging to commence this year's tent campaign about June 15th, or as soon thereafter as the weather will permit. Brethren, let us push the work. There is only one thing to hinder doing more for the Master's cause this year than last, and that is your indifference, or neglect. We know that you love the truth, and desire to see the gospel preached. We cannot all preach but all can give a little, if it is only a quarter don't be afraid to send it along. Let us work while it is day for the night cometh when no man can work. The nations are hastening to the call of the prophet, "Prepare war, wake up the mighty men." Tarshish with all the young lions thereof are making themselves ready. His of the north quarter is making ready. Brethren, the conflict is impending, do you not hear the tread of the mighty host as they are marching to the great battle of decision? Are we using our talent, or, are we like the servant whom his master deprived of all he had? The Master is coming, let us proclaim it to perishing man, and show our faith by our works, for, faith without works is dead, without a live faith no crown of life. Now brethren, you who desire to help in the work, send in your contribution to the treasurer, P. H. Oatman, care of Nave & McCord, St. Joseph, Mo. If you cannot send the money now, send a pledge, with a statement when you can pay it. A report of the work will be given from time to time. A word of encouragement or suggestion on the line of work will be thankfully received.

For the committee.

A. W. DARBY, Sec'y.

An Appeal.

To the Brethren of Missouri and Kansas, and to all others interested in our work:

The Missouri-Kansas Conference Board have employed me as Evangelist, and to go with their tent the coming season, which will open up the last half of May. For this work we will need money. This will have to be made up by donations and by collections upon the field where we go. Will all in these States, and elsewhere who desire to assist in the work send to us at Beatrice, Neb., and to A. W. Darley, secretary of the board, Mound City, Mo., the amount you will contribute, and send the money to the treasurer, P. H. Oatman, care Nave & McCord, St. Joseph, Mo. Give us your name and the amount you can possibly give for the work at an early date, that we may know how to arrange our tent work. Let every brother and sister donate to this work, however small the amount may be. Make us a pledge. We are commanded to sound out the Word. Paul wrote, "It is more blessed to give than to receive; and to give as the Lord has prospered you, preach the Word. Go ye into all the world and preach, and go ye, disciple all nations." To do this it requires money. Let us have a liberal response, and a good work done.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittances should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

The King in his Beauty.

"Thine eyes shall see the King in his beauty" Isa. xxxiii. 17.

The King in his beauty is coming, ere long;
Prepare ye, prepare ye to meet Him,
To share in his glory, and sing the new song—
[illegible]
Then wake thee, and haste thee to arise;
Already the day-star is beaming.
Let slumber depart from thine eyes,—
No time now for indolent dreaming.
Get thee ready!
The King in his beauty to see.

With characters bright He doth bid the record,
With glory in fields beaming;
And all the blest angels are out to invite,
In heaven's bright portals gleaming.
The trumpet of God sounds, Arise.
The dead now awake from the slumber,
And straightway ascend up to the skies,—
A multitude no man can number.
Saints of glory!
And Victory! now all the air.

Earth's captives, now rescued, will sorrow no more;
Nor hunger nor thirst shall annoy them.
No pain shall afflict them their countenance o'er,
No sickness nor death can destroy them;
But freed from mortality's woes,
Eternity opens before them;
Its pleasures are never to close,
God's glory forever beams o'er them.
Glory glory!
Haste O King, in thy beauty descend!

Would Jesus do It? No. 2.

PINE WOODS BIBLE CLASS.

"Casting down imaginations and every high thing that exalteth itself against the knowledge of God, and bringing into captivity every thought to the obedience of Christ." 2 Cor. x. 5.

Teacher. In our last lesson, on the present topic, we considered that the first step in doing just as Jesus would do, were he in our place, would be to believe the one true gospel preached by Jesus, and then obey it, and afterward cast down vain imaginations which "exalted itself against the knowledge of God." Having accomplish this much, our next step, would be that of "bringing into captivity EVERY THOUGHT to the obedience of Christ." Now, Arlon, how does this work strike you?

Arlon. The magnitude of the work almost frightens me. It will certainly require considerable personal discipline to subject "EVERY THOUGHT" to Christ.

Teacher. True, but suppose that if before each act of life, we acquire the habit of asking ourselves the question: "Would Jesus do it?" and then act on the decision it would go a long ways toward the captivity of every thought would it not?

Arlon. It certainly would, and I, for one, mean to try it, and hope the whole class will join me in doing so.

Teacher. Why do you suppose the Scripture emphasizes the captivity of the thought in place of the act?

Arlon. There is wisdom in first controlling the thought. Let a person's thoughts be right, there will be no trouble about the acts. Every good or evil act, is first preceded by either a good or evil thought. We read in Prov. xxiii. 7: "As he thinketh in the heart so is HE." The thoughts control the character of the person, he is in fact just as he thinks. If a person's thoughts are centered upon business, he will care for nothing but business, but if one's thoughts are continually sinful, his acts in life will also be continually sinful, and likewise if God is the burden of his thoughts, his acts will be as surely Godlike.

Teacher. Now, Carrie, suppose an unrighteous man, desires to lead a righteous life, what should he do?

Carrie. He must correct his manner of thinking, he must forsake evil thoughts. There can be no correct life, unless there is first of all right thinking, both doctrinally and practically. See Isa. lv. 6-9,—"Seek ye the Lord while he may be found, call ye upon him while he is near:

Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts: and let him return unto the Lord, and he will have mercy upon him; and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon.

For my thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways, saith the Lord.

For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways, and my thoughts than your thoughts."

Teacher. Please read the text we started with, in 2 Cor. x. 5.

Carrie. I will: "Casting down imaginations, and every high thing that exalteth itself against the knowledge of God, and bringing into captivity every thought to the obedience of Christ."

Teacher. The text speaks of "CASTING DOWN imaginations" "that exalteth against the knowledge of God." What are imaginations? and does God deal with them?

Carrie. Imaginations proceed from thought, and God searches them out, and knows them. We are responsible for our imaginations. See 1 Chron. xxviii. 9: "And thou, Solomon my son, know thou the God of thy father, and serve him with a perfect heart, and with a willing mind: for the LORD searcheth all hearts, and understandeth all the imaginations of the thoughts: if thou seek him, he will be found of thee; but if thou forsake him, he will cast thee off forever."

Teacher. What are the six things which the Lord especially hates, which have their origin in wrong thinking?

Carrie. See Prov. vi. 16-19: "These six things doth the LORD hate: yea, seven are an abomination unto him:

A proud look, a lying tongue, and hands that shed innocent blood.

An heart that deviseth wicked imaginations, feet that be swift in running to mischief.

A false witness that speaketh lies, and him that soweth discord among brethren."

Pride in the mind, or thoughts, precedes a "proud look," and God will certainly cut off a person whose tongue "speaketh proud things." He could not speak proud things, unless the mind first thought proud thoughts. See Psa. xii. 2-4: "They speak vanity every one with his neighbor: with flattering lips and with a double heart do they speak.

The LORD shall cut off all flattering lips, and the tongue that speaketh proud things:

Who have said, With our tongue will we prevail; our lips are our own: who is lord over us?"

The second thing the Lord hates, is a "lying tongue." The mind will first have to think lies, before the tongue speaks lies. Murder is thought out, before blood is shed; "feet that are swift in running to mischief," is first impelled by mischievous thoughts, etc.

Teacher. How about those who seek to produce discord among brethren?

Lud. The last item of the things the Lord hates, is "him that soweth discord among brethren." The sower of discord first thinks of those unpleasant things which make discord before he sows such noxious seed. This might be corrected, if we would first think; "Would Jesus do it?" There would be no offensive words spoken, if every thought was brought into obedience to Christ; then every simple act would be right, and the whole body brought under control. See James iii. 2: "For in many things we offend all. If any man offend not in word, the same is a perfect man, and able also to bridle the whole body." Such a person would surely be pure, gentle and peaceable. Such a life would be full of good fruits. See Jas. iii. 17, 18: "The wisdom that is from above is first pure, then peaceable, gentle, and easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good fruits, without partiality, and without hypocrisy.

And the fruit of righteousness is sown in peace of them that make peace."

This is just as Jesus lived, and all who act like Jesus, live the same kind of life. Let all who would be like Jesus endeavor before every act of life to first enquire, "Would Jesus do it?" How many are there who will try the experiment?"

Teacher. I wish to ask Albert a question, it is this: who will be made like Jesus, when he come in glory, clothed with resurrection power?

Albert. That is truly a searching question, and much is involved in it. I would answer, those who ACT LIKE JESUS now, and if we act like Jesus we will also think like Jesus. If we are not like Jesus in our every day life now, we will never be like him physically hereafter.

Teacher. How can we be like Jesus now?

Albert. Study him as an example. Place your feet in his footprints. 1 Peter, ii. 21-23, illustrates this: "For even hereunto were ye called: because Christ also suffered for us, leaving us an example, that ye should follow his steps:

Who did no sin, neither was guile found in his mouth:

Who, when he was reviled, reviled not again: when he suffered, he threatened not, but committed himself to him that judgeth righteously:"

Teacher. In doing as Jesus would do, that would be copying Jesus as an example, would it not?

Albert. Yes, sir. The last Scripture quoted, says: "Christ also suffered for us, leaving an EXAMPLE that ye should FOLLOW in his STEPS."

Teacher. Have you noticed the phrase: "Follow in his steps?"

Albert. Yes, I have: it reminded me of the time when I was a boy, when my father and myself went out one winter's day, after a heavy snow fall; my father went on ahead, and said, "Albert, you follow in my steps, and you will find it easier walking." Jesus has gone on before, and we are told to "follow in his steps."

Teacher. In following your father's footsteps, didn't you find it easier walking?

Albert. It was certainly easier, but nevertheless laborious.

Teacher. In following Jesus' footsteps, will we be relieved from suffering?

Albert. By no means. In the texts under consideration we read: "Christ also SUFFERED for us, leaving us an example, that ye should follow in his steps."

Teacher. What was the principal cause of his suffering? What do you find it to be George?

George. The principal cause of his suffering was on account of his confession before Pilate. Pilate asked him the question: "Art thou the King of the Jews?" He confessed that was the object of his birth. The Jews clamored for his death, because, he claimed to be the Son of God, the Christ—the King of Israel.

Teacher. What will we have to do if we "follow in his footsteps?"

George. We shall have to proclaim him as the Son of God, the Christ—the King of Israel, together with other kindred truths which naturally cluster about such a central truth. These are the first steps in the trail. Omit these and the trail will be lost. We must place our feet in the first footprint, and follow on step by step, or we will surely loose the trail.

Teacher. Will it cause suffering to follow that trail?

George. It will never fail to do so. Those who have tried it, confess it is true. Suffering both of a physical and mental nature, frequently result.

Teacher. Does it make trouble, and agitate the people, to preach Jesus as King, in the same sense as he preached it, himself?

George. It does. We have a sample given us in Acts xvii. 5-8; "But the Jews which believed not, moved with envy, took unto them certain lewd fellows of the baser sort, and gathered a company, and set all the city on an uproar, and assaulted the house of Jason, and sought to bring them out to the people. And when they found them not, they drew Jason and certain brethren unto the rulers of the city, crying, These that have TURNED THE WORLD UPSIDE DOWN are come hither also; Whom Jason hath received: and these all do contrary to the decrees of Cesar, saying that there is ANOTHER KING, ONE JESUS. And they troubled the people, and the rulers of the city, when they heard these things."

Teacher. What have you to say, Lucy? Does it trouble most of the religious people of our day to preach Jesus as King in a true Bible sense?

Lucy. Indeed it does. Nothing will turn the religious "world upside down" quicker than to preach Jesus as the literal King of Israel. Preach him as a King reigning in the hearts of people, and no objection will be raised. It is also specially distasteful to the class of Adventists, to affirm that "The Lord God shall give unto (Jesus) the THRONE of his FATHER DAVID: and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end."

It brings no end of trouble to faithfully preach the same truths which brought Jesus to the cross, and we may rest assured that if we "follow in his steps," we will most surely have to carry a daily cross.

Teacher. If we do "follow in his steps," how will it all end?

Lucy. The Bible says: "If we suffer with him we shall reign with him?" With regard to the redeemed, who shall appear on Mt. Zion, we read: "These are they which follow the lamb whithersoever he goeth." It is to be perceived that not a foot-print was missed "Whithersoever he goeth," indicated close following.

In Rom. iv. 11, 12, we are exhorted to "Walk in the faith of our Father Abraham, which he had, being yet uncircumcised." To walk in the steps of any other faith will be of no avail. That of Abraham and that of Jesus, are identical there being not even a difference amounting to a shade.

Teacher. Yes, Lucy, you are correct. We will continue this lesson next time.

W. H. WILSON.

Covenants of Promise.

I have been somewhat pained lately by writers in THE RESTITUTION intimating as though I did not believe the "Covenants of promise." A covenant of promise, I understand is something promised in such covenant. God made a covenant with Abraham, and there were somethings promised in that covenant to Abraham and to his Seed. What did God promise in this covenant? "And I will give unto thee, and to thy seed after thee, the land wherein thou art a stranger, all the land of Canaan, for an everlasting possession; and I will be their God." Gen. xvii. 7, 8. The same covenant spoken of in Psa. cv., saying, "Unto thee will I give the land of Canaan, the lot of your inheritance." Ver. 7-11. The Spirit in Acts vii. 1-5; Heb. xi. 8, 9, 12, 13, tells us positively, "Abraham and these all died in faith, not having received the promises," but God will fulfil his promises in the future. See Matt. v. 5; Psa. xxxvii. 9, 11, 22, 29, 34. "But the meek shall inherit the earth; and shall delight themselves in the abundance of peace. God promised the land to Abraham and his SEED." Paul in Gal. iii. 16, testifies that Christ is the "Seed." And that we became an heir of this land, God promised to Abraham through the Seed, (Christ). Gal. iii. 26-29. "And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise." This land promised in the covenant has not been fulfilled yet, but will be when the Seed comes in his glory. Matt. xxv. 31-34, the earth prepared from the foundation of the world.'

There is no remission of sins promised in the Abrahamic covenant, while in the new covenant there is. Matt. xxvi. 28; Heb. viii. 12, 13; ix. 12-15; x. 19, 20; 1 John i. 7. There is no one that believes stronger in this covenant of promise than I do. Yes, the land which God covenanted to Abraham and his Seed, which we will inherit in the future. But is this the covenant that Christ said, "For this is my blood of the New Testament, which is shed for many for the remission of sins?" Matt. xxvi. 28. And to Jesus the Mediator of the New Covenant. Heb. xii. 24. The blood of the everlasting covenant, Heb. xiii. 20. Christ is Mediator of this New Covenant, while God is the Mediator of the covenant made with Abraham. The Spirit's Word for it.

Now, this I affirm, that a covenant engagement previously ratified by God, the law, issued 430 years afterwards does not annul, so as to invalidate the promise. Gal. iii 17. Diaglott. The Revised Version is in harmony with the Diaglott. Showing the covenant God made with Abraham was ratified 430 years before the law was given at Sinai, and ver. 29 shows that God was the Mediator. If you will read Gen. xv., you will discover where God ratified the covenant of promise to Abraham. "For when God made promise to Abraham, because he could sware by no greater, he sware by himself, wherein God, willing more abundantly to show unto the heirs of promise the immutability of his counsel, confirmed it by an oath." Heb. vi. 13, 17. So the Abrahamic covenant was ratified—confirmed before Christ came into the world. So Christ did not ratify, or confirm, and was not Mediator of the covenant of which he was recipient. The promise was not to "Seeds as of many; but as of One, and to thy Seed, which is Christ." Gal. iii. 16. Would Christ be Mediator of what was promised himself by his Father? I trow not. But if we have been baptized into Christ (the Seed) put on Christ; and if we be Christ's, then are we heirs according to the promise. Gal. iii. 27, 29. Here comes in the "blessing of all nations through the Seed," (Christ). "And in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed." Gen. xxii. 18; see also Gen. xxvi. 3, 4. There is neither Jew nor Gentile, but all one in Christ, (the Seed). Gal. iii. 29. If it is not a blessing to have the privilege extended to all nations of becoming heir through Christ to the blessed promises, then I do not know what would be a blessing. These blessings God promised through the Seed to all "nations." Christ is the Mediator, we get the inheritance through him, no difference of what nationality, or color, even a Jew can be grafted in again. The Apostle forever settles this by saying. "That the blessing of Abraham might come on the Gentiles through Jesus Christ." Gal. iii. 14. "And the Scripture, foreseeing that God would justify the heathen (Gentile) through faith preached before the gospel unto Abraham, saying, In thee shall all nations be blessed." v. 8. Christ took on him the Seed of Abraham. Heb. ii. 16.

What is a covenant? 1st, In theology, the covenant of works, is that implied in the commands, prohibitions, and promises of God; the promise of God to man, that man's perfect obedience should entitle him to happiness, this do, and live; that do and die.

2nd, "The covenant of grace, is that by which God engages to bestow salvation on man, upon the condition that man shall believe in Christ, and yield obedience to the terms of the gospel." Webster.

In the first quotation from Webster, see John iii. 16, 17, 36; also Matt. vii. 24-27; John vi. 54, 58; John xv. 1-6. Life and death set before the people. 2nd, The covenant of grace, for by grace are ye saved, (Eph. ii. 5 8; Rom. i. 16;) to the Jew first, (Matt. xxviii. 19, 20; Mark xvi. 15, 16.

This is just a little bit of the teachings of the New Covenant, which was ratified with the blood of the Lamb of God; (Matt. xxvi. 28,) which cleanseth us from all sin. 1 John i. 7. This covenant promises blessings and life to the obedient of all nations. Acts x. 34-36; Acts x. 11-16; Acts xvii. 26; Rom. xi. 13, 14.

Paul says, "I am the apostle of the Gentiles." Also, "That the blessing of Abraham might come on the Gentiles through Jesus Christ, (the Seed). Gal. iii. 14. Blessed with faithful Abraham. Ver. 9. "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who hath blessed us with all spiritual blessings in heavenly places in Christ, (the Seed); Eph. i. 3. "And in thy Seed (Christ) shall the nations of the earth be blessed; (Gen. xxii. 18; xxvi. 4.) in the mouth of two or three witnesses every word should be established."

Now, I wish to modify my statement in THE RESTITUTION of Dec. 28, that Christ ratified the Abrahamic Covenant, and Matt. xxvi. had reference to the same. I only had reference to the promised "blessing of all nations through the Seed." These promises extended to the people through Christ (the Seed) the law was added on account of transgressions, till the Seed should come to whom the promise was made; Gal. iii. 19. "The Spirit's Word for it." Zacharias testimony we now take in regard to this "And his father Zacharias was filled with the Holy Ghost, and prophesied saying, Blessed be the Lord God of Israel; for he hath visited and redeemed his people, And hath raised up an horn of salvation for us in the house of his servant David; as he spake by the mouth of his holy prophets, which have been since the world began: that we should be saved from our enemies, and from the hand of all that hate us; to, perform the mercy promised to our fathers, and to remember his holy covenant; the oath which he sware to our father Abraham, That he would grant unto us, that we being delivered out of the hand of our enemies might serve him without fear, in holiness and righteousness before him, all the days of our life." Luke i. 67-75. Thank the Lord for the teachings of the Spirit.

It has been said in THE RESTITUTION of Dec 28, "They have not been delivered out of the hands of their enemies by Christ's teachings. They do not serve him in holiness and righteousness all the days of their life." Which will we believe? The Spirit's teachings, or man that commences in the middle and never ends? The Spirit through Jeremiah says, "I will put my law in their inward parts; and will be their God, and they shall be my people." Jer. xxxi. 33. We will now see what the teachings of the "able Minister of the New Covenant" says, "Forasmuch as ye are manifestly declared to be the epistle of Christ ministered by us, written not with ink, but with the Spirit of the living God; not in tables of stone, but in fleshly tables of the heart." 2 Cor. iii. 3, 6. So you see the New Covenant Paul was an able minister of, and the Jer. xxxi. 31 covenant correspond for the final consummation. See Rev. vii. 9-14; or Gen. xxii. 18.

I must close this article as it is already getting too long. Long articles are not much liked by editors, and are not read by one half the readers. Boil them down, brethren.

In hope,

M. L. ADAMS.

World to Come to an End.

The world is to come to an end on Nov. 14, 1899. So says the Austrian astronomer, Rudolph Falb. Mr. Falb says that the world will be destroyed by contact with Biela's comet. Biela's comet is the one which was to have destroyed the world in 1833.

Then there was something like a public panic. It was told in the press of the day how the astronomer Olbers, as the result of a careful study in advance of the comet's movements, had found that the comet's center would, shortly before midnight on October 29 of that year, cross the earth's orbit.

Not until next Nov. 18 will the earth return to the critical point in its orbit where it passes the meteoric current, and by that time the whole of the great shoal will generally have swept past and onward along its own orbit.

Sometimes, however, it happens that even in a year the earth's head has not passed the critical point. Then the earth, passing through the luggards, will be treated to another display of celestial fireworks.—Tribune.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME XLVIII. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, APRIL 12, 1899. NUMBER 14.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortalized saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Faithful Warnings.

We were gladdened recently to see earnest exhortations to "preach the Word which liveth and abideth for forever," and to let other matters alone. We think the Spirit has cut out for us all the work we can well do before the Master appears to reckon with us. If that be so, some of it will go altogether undone, and other parts of it imperfectly done, if we allow our minds to be distracted and our time absorbed by matters in no way connected with God's power for saving,—the gospel. Hardly a week passes without a temptation to draw us aside with some human device or other. Some of them may be true, but there is no bread of life in them, if they are true. And, inasmuch as the great Head of the Church bids us occupy till he comes, and has told us with what to occupy ourselves, until he comes, and how to go about, and continue at the task he set us, the lawful conclusion is, that he will not bestow rewards for self-imposed tasks. In the very nature of things the Master's work will be slighted if what little time, talent and means we have, be divided.

From our correspondence with the brotherhood we are convinced that the rank and file generally, have an appetite for the truth as it is in Jesus, doctrinal and practical, and do not want to be distracted with theories based only upon human deductions. The old paths are good enough for them.

Once more, in view of the Spirit's injunction "To preach the Word seasonably and unseasonably,—and in view of the reward by and by we urge all to ride no hobbies.

Important Eastern Matters.

The Old Eastern question has come to the front again; and press reports from London indicate that something to accelerate the evaporation of Turkey may take place in the near future. The Balkins are said to be in a state of siege, and large bodies of Turkish troops are being poured into the disturbed districts; while on the other hand the people all over the province are drilling for the struggle believed to be impending.

It is evident from remarks now and again made in reference to the present condition of things in that region, that it is the settled conviction of the leading editors in England that Russian influence and backing is at the bottom of this trouble, although the Czar is taking steps with the ostensible object of disarming the nation and preventing war. We who heed the sure Word of prophecy know how impossible a thing that is. And when we know that an agent of the Russian government is now in Philadelphia, superintending the building of powerful warships for that country, it seems hard to reconcile that fact with the Peace Proposals, so as to accept them in good faith. Indeed, we believe the Czar will need his warships. We do not think they will be allowed to rust out after they are completed. It is our conviction that they are being constructed in readiness for the last and decisive struggle for the world's dominion, and we can name the victors. Some of our readers may have noticed references to Mr. Bookwalter's trip over the Trans-Caspian railway, and the Trans-Siberian railway, now under construction by Russia, in the daily papers, but no doubt many of them have not. Mr. Bookwalter is a well known Ohio business man, who views things from a commercial and political standpoint, but the statements he makes go far to assure us that we correctly read the prophets when we decide that Russia has a most important part to play in the closing drama of this age. Mr. Bookwalter says:—

"I could not go into the condition of affairs deeply without compromising some of the men I have met. But I have no hesitancy in saying that I believe the center of interest is in Afghanistan and through Central Asia today, and before long the eyes of the world will be turned in that direction. It is my belief, too, that the Trans-Caspian railway which is almost completed, with its branches to important points, is going to be of more strategic importance than the Trans-Siberian railway, about which so much has been said. The Trans-Caspian railway is furnishing Russia an outlet to the Black Sea and the Persian Gulf, and it will furnish her with a means of throwing an enormous force into India, or along the borders of India, if it was ever necessary to menace England in her tenderest spot.

"Russia now has a railway running by way of Tiflis from Baku to Batoum. At Tiflis a branch has been extended to Erivan, the capital of Armenia, and eventually it will reach Ispahan, in Central Persia, giving Persia, which is virtually under Russian control, an outlet to the Black Sea. The Russian government is building another railway from Samarkand to Karshi. Still another road has been built from Merv, to Kushk, on to Afghan border, and since I was there it is being extended to Herat, which is the key to the whole northwestern part of Persia. They also propose to extend a road from Samarkand to Koshgar, which lies well in the Russian Pamirs, and almost in sight of the northern border of India.

"At Karshi, which is the terinus of the road from Samarkand, Russia is establishing one of the greatest military stations of modern times. I was on the train with the Ameer Bokhara when he was on the way up the Amu Darin river with his ministers, accompanying a Russian Commission. They were on the way to establish this great military station at Kurshi. It stands on the border of Afghanistan, and the Russian guns will menace the English possessions....

"England's great strength has always been in her navy. It made her the greatest nation in the world in some respects. But the value of Russia's strategic points in Asia is in the fact that with an army greater than that of any other nation in the world she can attack England at a point where the ironclads cannot come within a thousand miles of her troops.....Russia could encourage sedition among the Hindus, and especially the Mohammedans, of whom there are about 50,000,000, if she wanted to do so for her own end. She could promise independent sovereignty to the Gackwar of Zarola, the King of Oudi, and the Holkar of Indore—the three native princes who now bear England's yoke with a very poor grace. She could afford to do this because I believe Russia has no desire to acquire India. she is simply planning to use her position on the borders of India to compel England to give her an outlet to the commerce of the world. When England shut her off at the Dardanelles, she determined to find an outlet elsewhere, and she has done so. She has gone to the Pacific through Manchuria, and she is going to build a railroad to the Persian Gulf through Persia. England's excitement over Muscat is due do the fact that it controls the mouth of the Persian Gulf, and there she hopes to cut off Russia from the Indian Ocean. But England has made a mistake when she thought to crush a great nation by shutting it off from foreign commerce, forgetting that the strength of a nation lies in agriculture, in which Russia excels. Russia has been perfecting her plans against the day when it will be necessary to force England to give what she wants. That day is approaching, and the point of attack will be India. England sees what is coming and is trying to form alliances with other powers, (Italy, France, and America) to help her resist the aggression of Russia. All the time the English in Russia, and there are many who have interests there,—are unanimous in the opinion that England has made the greatest mistake in her history in not working with Russia instead of against her."

The Englishmen in Russia look at the situation from a human and selfish standpoint of view, ignorant of the fact that God has decreed that these two powers shall come into conflict in the last days. If the English have made a mistake as men estimate things, we believe it is a step toward the development of the situation ascribed long ages ago by the prophets of Israel, when the last grand struggle for the world's dominion shall take place. We stand in awe as we see Jehovah's purposes further by moves of the governments of men.

Without earnestness no man is ever great, or does really great things. He may be the cleverest of men; he may be brilliant, entertaining, popular; but he will want weight. No soul-moving picture was ever painted that had not in it a depth of shadow.—Peter Bayne.

Truth and Love the Most Powerful Things.

Dearly beloved and longed for:

We want to speak as the oracles of God. "It is by every word of God by which man lives." We should pray for God's blessing on all our endeavors in our contention for "Truth," and its compassion,—"Love." Our faith should work by love. Love is a proof that we have passed from death unto life. John iii. 14, "A new commandment I give unto you that ye love one another as I have loved you." "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples if ye have love one to another." Love is the first fruit of the Spirit, and is to be added to faith. "Love is the bond of perfectness." Col. iii. 14. "Love is the fulfilling of the law." Rom. xiii. 10, and "Worketh no ill to his neighbor." Love is the debt we owe to one another. Love is the path the followers of God are called to walk. "Be ye imitators of God as dear children, and walk in love," etc. Love to all the saints is the true companion of faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. "Wherefore I also, after I heard of your faith in the Lord Jesus Christ and love to all the saints," etc. Those taught of God to love one another are exhorted to increase more and more

We are to put on the breastplate of faith and love Love will cover a multitude of sins among ourselves. We are to provoke one another unto love and to good works." "Love never faileth," and is the greatest of graces. Then as to the degree and character of our love: Love is to be fervent, "See that ye love one another with pure hearts, fervently." "Love is to be without dissimilation." "Love is to be in the Spirit." Col. i. 3. Love is to be "in deed and in Truth." Love should "Abound more and more in knowledge and in all judgment." Phil. i. 10. Love is to even make us willing to lay down our lives for the brethren.

Brethren, let us love one another, for love is of God, and every one that loveth is begotten of God, for God is love." "Continue ye in my love."

Philosophy vs. the Bible.

Bro. O. R. L. Crozier writing in the Ann Arbor Register of Mar. 25th the following relative to the Methodist minister whose speech in New York caused such a sensation lately:—

"The Dr. Cadman crevasse through the great Methodist dike against Ingersolism will cause some surprise and much sorrow. The pastor of the Metropolitan temple, speaking before the regular weekly meeting Monday morning, March 6, to four hundred leading Methodist ministers of New York and vicinity, including Bishop Edward G. Andrews,' urged (as reported) the proposition 'that inerrancy and the infallibility of the Bible are no longer possible of belief among reasoning men. * * * The speaker was applauded when he rose to read his address and again when he got through * * * He said that the trend of thought in the Methodist church during the last fifty years had been toward a better knowledge and a newer view of Christ himself rather than of the Bible.' A few days later The Record interviewed leading Chicago preachers on Dr. Cadman's address. Some made light of it; a few condemned it severely: the majority seemed practically with Dr. Cadman.

Four hundred of 'the most representative body of Methodist clergy in America and a bishop' clapping their hands in derision of the Bible. Nothing inerrant and infallible but Human Reason! How do you do, Frenchmen! Progress inverted. Your Baal has indeed been asleep. It has taken fifty years to begin to get awake. Are you sure he is awake now, or only dreaming?

They have not been fair with the Bible. They have carried to the Bible a theology of human invention, and because the Bible will not read in its support they denounce the Bible. How and whence do they get their 'better knowledge and newer view of Christ himself?' They must not go to the Bible for it. They must not call a witness and make him incriminate himself. They must call their only witness, their supreme deity—"Human Reason"—and from outside Christendom, else we will impeach him as biased and particeps criminis. We are aware that it will trouble them to find a specimen of pure human reason absolutely untainted by any Bible influence. That article—unfortunately for our elevated Rev. D. D. friends—has been extremely rare since the first half century of the Christian era. As we would not lose their respect by even seeming to be unreasonable we consent to adjournment till they consult their B. C. cognate philosopher; provided they in the mean time earn respects intelligent men by reading the old Book as candidly as they read other books which they claim are of equal dignity on a few fundamental topics whereon our critical friends are the most sensitive, and see if the Bible does not offer a reasonable theology. Of course we must let the Bible explain itself and be consistent with itself. just as we do other books. We ask no special privileges for the Bible. Give it a fair chance and it will vindicate its right to be regarded as THE BOOK. I beg pardon for being plain; the situation demands it.

They charge that the Bible is self-contradictory. But, the contradicting is on their side. They contradict the Bible on nearly every cardinal point of the Christian faith. When the Bible says 'one' they say three; when it says 'down' they say up; when it says 'death' they say life (or 'passing away' ad nausium); when it says 'asleep' they say more wide awake than ever; when it says 'earth' they say heaven; when it says 'know not anything' they say know everything; when it says 'the saints can't go to heaven' they say they will go to heaven; when it says 'mortality' they say immortality; when it says 'church' they say kingdom; when it says 'resurrection' they say continued life without a resurrection; when it says 'of the wicked destruction' they dare not say anything; when it says 'inhabit the land' they say the skies; when it says 'worse and worse' they say growing better. They are aware that after Paul's time Christianity met Greece, Rome, Judaism and the East at Alexandria in friendly embrace and evolved the Christianity of the middle ages and of 'the last days.' They may also be aware that the 'first lie' (Gen. iii. 4, 5), that death is a better kind of life was the door to sin and the initial of 6,000 years of human misery, and that instead of 'opening' it closed our eyes to the wonderful beauties and fitness of nature (Gen. i. 26-28; ii. 7-17), also that the declared object of expulsion from Eden was a merciful interposition to prevent everlasting life in sin which is the very soul of Anti-Bible theology.'

The 144,000.

Dear Restitution:

I thought I would pen a few thoughts that have presented themselves to my mind of late in reference to the 144,000 spoken of in Rev. vii. 4, as having been sealed in their foreheads. These thoughts presented themselves to my mind by some questions I had asked a friend of mine, a Seventh Day Adventist, and the answers he gave.

I asked my friend if the Seventh Day people understood that the 144,000 spoken of in Rev. vii. to cover all of the saved. His answer was no, for the 9th verse speaks of a great multitude come up after that of all nations. This multitude embraced the saved of all ages. Then he explained that the 144,000 were the living that would be translated at the coming of Christ. As proof of this he cited Rev. xiv. 3-4. They were redeemed from the earth and from among men.

Another question asked him was, Do you people believe that Sabbath-keeping is the seal? He said, No, but said they believed none would be sealed that did not keep the Sabbath. These answers bring us according to their theory to this conclusion, all the living saints who will be translated at the coming of Christ must have the seal, and none but Sabbath-keepers will be sealed. This view of the subject struck me as a little strange, as neither Jesus nor his Apostles commanded the disciples to keep the Sabbath. My friend explained, referring to the four winds of the earth, verse 1, said, winds denote strife. The kings of earth striving with each other. The four angels that hold the four winds are called upon to hold the winds that they blow no more till the servants of God are sealed in their foreheads. This idea seemed to bring out the thought that it was necessary that the strife should cease in order that the servants of God might be sealed. So I asked myself the question, do the facts in the case show the necessity for such a stay in the strifes going on at the time of translation? Referring to 1 Thes. iv. 16-17, we find that the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel and the trump of God, and the dead in Christ shall rise first, then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them to meet the Lord in the air, and so shall we ever be with the Lord No necessity to stay the winds in order to seal the living saints.

Now let us see what Paul says on this subject in 1 Cor. xv. 51-52, "Behold I show you a mystery, we shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump, for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead, shall be raised, and we shall be changed." This seems to settle the question about waiting for the living saints to be sealed before translation.

Now, let us go a little farther in our investigation. As the Scriptures referred to seem to show that there will be a cessation of the winds to blow in order that the servants of God may be sealed, and as there is no chance for any stay of the winds when the living saints are translated, for this change comes instaneous, as Paul says, in the twinkling of an eye. We ask the question then, if the 144,000 are not the living saints that will be translated at the coming of Christ, who are they? That is the question we will try and answer.

We will adopt our friend's view that the 144,000 are redeemed from among the living at that time. Verse 3 of chapter 14 says they were redeemed from the earth. Verse 4 says they were redeemed from among men. What men? Chap. vii. 4 says, "And I heard the number of them that were sealed, and there were sealed 144,000 of all the tribes of the children of Israel," and then goes on to name each tribe separately, so there could be no mistake about where they came from. I am aware that the Seventh Day people claim that all true believers constitute the twelve tribes of Israel. If this is so, why is the distinction made by John in verse 9, he sees a great multitude out of all nations and kindreds and tongues stood before the throne. Two distinct classes of people mentioned, one class from out of the twelve tribes of Israel, the other out of all nations. If they were all Israel, why this distinction? We will now carry our investigation a little farther and see if we can ascertain when this sealing takes place. In 1 Thes. iv. 16-17, we learn that the sleeping saints are raised, the living changed and go out to meet the Lord in the air, and Paul in 1 Cor. xv. 51-52, says this change is instantaneous. Also in 1 Thes. iv., leaves the resurrected and living changed ones in the air. Zechariah sees this grand company descend to the Mount of Olives. Zech. xiv. 4-5. Now we ask where is Jesus when John saw him with the 144,000 sealed ones. Chap. xiv. 1, "I looked and lo, a lamb stood on the Mount Zion, and with him 144,000, having his Father's name written in their foreheads." We notice at this time Jesus is on the earth, and the 144,000 are with him. If you notice the chronological order of these events you will see that the sealing takes place after Jesus returns to the earth with all his saints. But says one, does not the record say they were the first fruits unto God and the Lamb? What first fruits? First fruits from the dead? Certainly not. I take it that they are the first fruits from among the twelve tribes of the children of Israel. As Israel and Judah take an active part in the subjugation of the nations as many Scriptures teach. See Isa. xl. 12, 13, 14; Zech. xiv. 12-14. It is evident that God has a special work for the 144,000 to do. It seems quite likely they are the ones represented by the angel flying in mid-heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach to them that dwell on the earth. Who would be better prepared for this work?

A. Balch.

Present Immortality.

The doctrinal subject of the immortality of the soul has been thrashed over and over again until one would think that there is nothing left to say, yet the leaders of the popular churches of the day continue to hold up to their followers the squib that the old serpent told mother Eve in the Garden of Eden. This does not come to us causing us to question why it is so, for we, together with Timothy, have been warned of this condition of things by Paul, (Read 2 Tim. iii.; iv.)

To go back to the subject of the immortality of the soul, let us grant for the sake of argument that when "God formed man out of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life," (Gen. ii. 7 there were really two separate entities which entering, the one into the other, constituted man—the living soul—the being which possessed the senses which enabled him to think, feel, see, hear, taste, etc. If this be true, we will all agree that the man of clay as it existed before God breathed upon it had no power to think, feel, see, hear, taste, etc., for not until God had breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, was he a living soul capable of understanding the commands and promises of God and the lie of the serpent. If the clay did not possess powers, then it must be that the element, "breath of life," which was breathed into his nostrils, possessed them. Now if we view it from this standpoint to prove that the soul is a conscious entity when separated from the clay, I ask then, when God said to man "For in the day thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die," Gen. ii. 17, to which of these entities did he speak? To the one of clay which of itself had no power to think and reason, or to the other which only has these powers? Now God and the serpent spoke to the same being, whether it was the clay or this immortal (?) soul. Do you say that it needs the union of the clay and this immortal essence to make this thinking, feeling, tasting, seeing, hearing man? Very well then. If this be true, and if there were none of these elements in man in his separated state before God united them, (or him) I ask, will not the same conditions (the senses) be absent when death shall cause a separation of this body and its spiritual essence?

We find no consciousness before this union of clay and breath, and what reason have we for believing that there will be consciousness when these are again separated by death? Some tell me that there is no comfort in the thought of being unconscious, non-existent, in the grave. I deny this, but not to argue it, my friend what comfort is there in clinging to a hope based upon false doctrines manufactured for itching ears? God has laid his plans for your salvation before you, for your enlightenment and you alone are responsible to him for the right use of them.

Friends, we are traveling toward the grave and unless the trump shall soon be sounded, we shall be brought face to face with death. How much comfort we shall then receive from God's word will depend wholly with what spirit and how much we have studied it. Will we be ready to enter into that slumber with the hope of awaking when the Master calls his righteous ones forth? What an awful thought it will be for us to die feeling ourselves not worthy to enter the kingdom. Submitted in love and in the hope that this may be read by some one whose ideas on this point are unsettled. S. J. L.

Russian Rapacity in China.

Vancouver, B. C., April 6.—Advices from the far East, brought by the steamer Empress of Japan, indicate that Japan has watched with jealous eye Italy's recent attempt to get a lease of San Mun Bay.

A correspondent of the Northern China News gives some remarkable information regarding Russian progress in Manchuria. Russians in Manchuria are acquiring land as they please and are already working mines. The railroad, too, is obviously a military one, and he asserts that there are 30,000 Russian troops at Port Arthur, 3,000 at Talien Wan, 2,000 at Kin Chou, 200 at Lunchou, 200 at Wafangtien, 200 at New Chwang, 200 at Haichieng, 200 at Liao Yang, 300 at Kirin, 20,000 at Haipion, north of Kirin, and, in fact, Russian soldiers are all over Manchuria.

In Haichieng the Russians have taken a shop and fortified it by mounting guns. At Liao Yang they have a site 200 yards square, where they are building barracks. At Kirin the Russians have possession of the Chinese barracks, and 800 soldiers with twenty officers and mining engineers are quartered there. Visitors to the locality cannot move without being shadowed by Russians. As there is no railway at Kirin, and the branch line which is projected will not reach there for two or three years, the presence of soldiers seems unnecessary. The Russo-Chinese bank has opened a branch in Kirin, worked by Chinese, with one foreigner, who is British, but little beyond political work appears to be done.

At Haipion, where the railway will branch off from the the main line to Vladivostok, there are Russian settlements with 20,000 soldiers.

It is instructive to compare this military occupation with the railway in which British capitalists have their money, a good road with stone embankments and workshops along the line, where carriages and bridges are being built, and yet not one British soldier to protect the property.—Tribune.

Poetry.

"Follow Thou Me."

"Take up thy cross, and follow me,"
The Lord who died on Calvary;
First, sit thee down, count well the cost;
"What things were gain, now count as loss."
Leave all possessions, follow me
If thou wouldst my disciple be;
For who-so-e'er doth not forsake
Possessions all, I cannot take.

"Take up thy cross, and follow me,"
Man of sorrows, smitten for thee,
Complete affliction left behind;
Be thou the friend of all mankind.
Thy dearest friends, yea, thine own life
Hated, and made a sacrifice
If worthy thou wouldst be of me
Deny thyself, and follow me.

"Take up thy cross, and follow me,"
Thine Advocate, who pleads for thee;
Follow not afar, but close beside
The Lamb of God, the Crucified.
"Endure the cross, despise the shame;"
Take up thy cross in Jesus' name;
Take up thy cross, the Lord doth wait,"
Go ye with him without the gate.

"Take up thy cross, and follow me,"
I am thy portion—I am he
Who died, but live to bless and love
My saints who bear the scoff and jeer.
Take up thy cross, its griefs and scorns;
Plait thou thy brow, with shortened thorns;
Wash thy good works in Jesus' blood,
Take up thy cross, through storm and flood.

"Take up thy cross, and follow me,"
If from all sin you would be free;
Take up thy cross, my pathway choose;
Let not thy human pride refuse.
Take up thy cross, o'er with me stand.
Take up thy cross, 'tis my command;
Nail thine affections to the cross,
'Twill keep thee from all earthly dross.

"Take up thy cross, and follow me,"
If thou wouldst my salvation see:
The Prince of thy Salvation own,
Reflect his image, and make known
Redeeming love; go with the Son
The humble way that crowns are won;
Follow the Lord despite of all,
Hear and heed his heavenly call.

"Take up thy cross, and follow me"—
The Son of God, who bore for thee
Thy sins; the scourge, the nails, the spear;
Take up thy cross, when sin lurks near.
Drink with me from Calvary's cup.
Take up thy cross, and with me sup;
Nor count not up thine earthly loss,
Win Christ, and glory in the cross.

"Take up thy cross, and follow me,"
Till I the Bridegroom come for thee;
Take up thy cross, each hour and day;
Ever walk by faith while I'm away
Take up thy cross, joint-heir and Bride
Take up thy cross, in me abide.
Take up thy cross if you would wear
My robe and crown; my glory share.

The Coming and Presence of our Lord Jesus Christ.

The testimony with reference to the two-fold coming of the Lord is that which have a mind to present in this paper. The unsettled and unsatisfactory conditions among the nations admonish the believers to be on the watch, and ready to meet the impending crisis. The nearness of the advent is acknowledged on all sides, and by all parties holding pre-millennial views. My object in the study of this subject, is to get down to the right division of the word of truth, and endeavor to apply the testimony of the records to that which occupied the mind of the writer at the time the communication was made and delivered, and also the object to be attained thereby.

And farther: To place Israelism well to the front, or, in the foreground in the study of Matt. especially so, in the study of the parables of Jesus. To recognize the Israelitish conception of the kingdom of heaven as revealed by the prophets.

I quote: "The Master of that servant will come in a day when he does not expect him; and at an hour of which he is not aware, and will cut him off (from something) and appoint his portion with the hypocrites, there will be the weeping and gnashing of teeth"—Matt. xxiv. 50, 51. Compare with verses 45, 46.

The Master finds matters as here represented at his arrival. There is no public announcement made of his approach. No herald sent forth to notify his servants that he is coming. But, on the other hand, he comes as a thief in the night, as the records affirm. Consult Matt. xxiv. 42, 43: xxv. 13: 1 Thess. v. 2, 4: 2 Peter iii. 10: Rev. xvi. 15—"Behold I come as a thief," etc. He comes as the lightning's flash. It is present before one has time to think or act. The admonition to watch is in line with existing conditions, so that the note of warning in a general way, may be applied by the individual watcher. Note particularly the conditions existing at the beginning of chapter xxv. The virgins are aroused from slumber by a public announcement of the bridegroom's coming. The difference is clear cut and positive between this scene, and that of coming as a thief.

These virgins are not the bride; there is no intimation that they ever expect to be, as may be learned by consulting Rev. xix. 8, 9: xxi. 2, 9, 10. We learn that the bride of the Lamb is the great municipality or corporation. The organic governing power of the world to come. Illuminated by the glory of God—The Lamb. The marriage in this case is a politico-ecclesiastic union for a purpose. The administration of the divine government in the earth so that the will of God may be done on earth as it is in heaven. The government being priestly as well as kingly. "The counsel of peace" being between them both.

The order is: The Lord comes as a thief in the night, settles up matters with his servants, and having arranged the affairs of his household in relation to the unfolding process of his public manifestation when the earth will be lighted with his glory." "Then the magesty of the heavens will be like ten virgins who taking their lamps went forth to meet the bridegroom." The full force of the "Then" as related to the preceding context must be recognized grammatically as well as chronologically.

Confusion may be avoided by attention to this particular: confounding the happenings before the "then" with the representations after that, cannot be admitted in view of the laws of language, and the testimony already referred to.

Consult Psa. xlv. and read carefully: The writer's mind overflows with goodly matter concerning the King:—"Gird thy sword upon thy thigh O Mighty One," verse 4 R. V. Observe the preparation for a coming conflict with his enemies in his progress through the disputed territory of Idumea. Psa. cx. 2, 3:—"Thy throne O God, is for ages repeated." Verse 8 suggests the bridegroom decked out in oriental finery; sweet smelling odors are customary in the preparation for the coming nuptials and banquet, "Garments out of ivory palaces" indicate that. "King's daughters"—verse 9—had something to do in preparing those splendid garments. Advice to the prospective bride, verse 10. As to her attitude towards her husband. [The sentence "and worship thou him" is wanting in the Ixx. Compare verse 12 with Psa. lxxii. 10, 11, "All glorious is the King's daughter, her clothing is of embroidered work inwrought with threads of gold. She is conducted to the King, verse 14. The virgins her companions that follow her, shall be brought unto thee, with gladness and rejoicing they shall be led. They shall enter into the palace of the King."

The majesty of the heavens may be compared with such a display of splendor, of which the western mind can form only a faint conception.

A herald is dispatched to announce the approach of the victorious hero. Isa. ix. 6. Having triumphed over his enemies, he approaches with a numerous retinue of resplendent ones. Jude xiv. and Zech. xiv. 5: Consult the lofty prophetic ode of Habukkuk, iii; "God cometh from Teman, and the Holy one from Mount Paran—Pause—His glory covereth the heavens, and the land is filled with his renown. His brightness appeareth like the light. He hath rays (marg.) of light from his hands. And he conceals a hiding of his splendor." Sun and moon stand still in their habitation. They move at the light of thine arrows, at the shining of thy lightering spear. Thou marchest through the land with indignation. With anger thou threasheth the nations. Thou goest forth for the salvation of thy royal people. For the salvation of thy anointed."..... Paran was the third camping place of the children of Israel in their journey north after leaving Sinai, and located between Sinai and Ezion-Geber. Teman near the centre of Idumea, and on farther north the scene of the great wine-press is laid. Isa. xxxiv., Rev. xix. 15. Bozrah at the north end of Idumea, the Capitol of the country.

The watchman in the watchtower on the wall of Jerusalem looks away south clearing the south end of the Dead Sea into the north part of Idumea. He beheld a scene which suggested this question:—"Who is this coming from Edom with dyed garments from Bozrah. He, resplendent in his apparel, marching in the greatness of his strength?

Response. I that speak in righteousness, mighty to save. Watchman; Wherefore art thou red in thy apparel and thy garments like him who treadeth in the wine-fat?

Response: I have trodden the wine-press alone, and of the peoples there was not one with me.

Yea, I will tread (Marg. R. V.) them in my anger, and trample them in my fury; and their life-blood shall be sprinkled upon my garments, and my raiment will be stained. Because the day of retribution is in my heart and the year of my redeemed is come." Is. lxiii. 1–5, and compare ch. xxxiv. 8. Consult Ps. lxviii. 17, "The chariots of God, twenty thousand—thousands of angels. The Lord is among them as in Sinai in the holy (place,") [the phrase "of angels" is wanting in ancient documents.] "Thousands repeated"—Young's An. Con. and C. A. Briggs: "Two myriads, thousands repeated." "Thousands of changed ones," reminds us of 1 Cor. xv. 52. Will now give the reading of the lxx. "The chariots of God are ten thousand fold, thousands of rejoicing ones, the Lord is among them in Sinai in the holy place." Certainly the changed ones" are "rejoicing ones." And the Lord comes from some place to some place, with his saints, holy ones, sanctified for a purpose. Will copy a reading here from Deut. xxxiii. 2–5 according to the reading of the lxx. "The Lord is come from Sinai, and appeared from Seir to us, and has hasted out from Mount Pharan with the ten thousand of saints: his angels with him on his right (reminds one of Matt. xxv. 31.) And he spared his people, and all his sanctified ones under thy hands; and they are under thee. And he [Moses] received of his words. The law which Moses charged us, an inheritance to the assemblies of Jacob: and [plus these things already mentioned] he shall be prince with the beloved one, when the princes of the people are gathered together with the tribes of Israel."

Moses is dead and buried; nevertheless, "He shall be prince with (in company with) the Beloved One, sometime in the future: and the gathering of the heads of the tribes, and the people of Israel will be after the Deliverer comes to Zion in the manner represented in these testimonies.

The public manifestation of the Lord will be announced, and his approach to the Holy City heralded as the conquering hero from Bozrah after the battle.

Having met and vanquished his enemies and entered into an alliance with Edom, Moab and the chiefs of Ammon, Is. xi. 14: xi. 41, he proceeds onward north from Bozrah, on the east side of the Dead Sea toward the lords of the Jordan, and so on unto the Mount of Olives, which is caused to divide in halves (Zech. xiv. 4). From Olivet he sends a herald to demand the unconditional surrender of the city, which at this juncture is suffering most terribly from the combined forces of the confederate nations which war against Jerusalem. Zech. xiv. 2.

Herald, addressing the rulers of the city: "Lift up your gates, O ye rulers, and be ye lift up ye doors of the age, and the King of glory shall come in." The rulers inquire: "Who is the King of glory? Reply. The Lord full of strength. The Lord mighty in battle." Therefore, Lift up your gates ye rulers, and be ye lifted up ye doors of the age, and he, the King of glory shall come in." Again the inquiry comes from within; Who is he, the King of glory? Reply. The Lord of hosts, he is the King of glory." Psa. xxiv. 7–10. Compare Ezek. xliii. 2: xliv. 2.

The rulers finally surrender the city. The friends of the Lord go forth to meet him, greeting him with loud hosannas: Blessed the King of Israel who cometh in the name of the Lord, Hosannah in the highest, Matt. xxi. 9: Mark xi. 9, 10, compared with Matt. xxiii. 38, 39. The time has arrived when they see him again and welcome him to the throne of David on the Mount Zion, "Beautiful for situation on the north side, the city of the great King." The entrance to the honor and glory of the age will be by means of the planting of the divine authority "upon Zion my holy mountain," Isa. li. 16. Compare Zech. xii. 2, 3, 9, 10. Behold he is coming with the clouds, and every eye shall see him, and those who pierced him; and all the tribes of the land shall mourn over him, Yea, so be it." Rev. i. 7.

Obituary.

James H. Burris, aged 42 years. Bro. Burris fell asleep in Jesus, we trust, at his home seven miles west of Shawnee, Oklahoma, March 15th, 1899, leaving a wife and five children to mourn the loss of a kind husband and father. We loose for the present, a good neighbor and brother in the faith. We sorrow not as others which have no hope, for we expect to meet him in the kingdom. Words of consolation from Job xiv. 14, were spoken by the writer to the bereaved family, and neighbors present, showing that "death" is the opposite of life, that a man is not alive, when dead. "If man die shall he live again." The writer in his weakness showed by the Scriptures that only by a resurrection from the dead, could we ever expect to see the brother alive again, for the benefit of the living do we speak on these occasions, and not the dead. After which we laid him away in the grave, to await the coming of him who has the power over death and all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth." John v. 28, 29. For a short time, farewell Brother.

M. L. ADAMS.

Died March 23, 1899, Ira Smith, son of Wm. and Emma Smith, at the age of eighteen years and two months. He was first taken with the measles, then a complication of diseases terminated in spinal meningitis. His suffering was intense but borne with patience and kindness. Skilled physicians, loving parents and friends stood sympathizingly and anxiously by, but deeply conscious of human power. Ira was young but his nature was that of influence. Many of advanced years were impressed by his personality. His associates often spoke of his ideas and example. In the home he seemed like the guide, so constant and considerate. His chair at the table was seldom vacant and at evening his kind advising voice mingled with the family. He was very conscientious and had a strong will power. He looked at things seemingly not from a young boy's view. Behind done the work of an engineer successfully for three years; was of a religious turn of mind, and studied the Bible for his guide and support. A. H. Zilmer baptized him last fall. He told his sister a short time before his sickness, "Oh, I am so anxious to be good and want to do only that which is right." To see so young and promising a life taken from us, causes a vacancy and a grief that seems great indeed, but "We sorrow not even as others that have no hope, for if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him." He was buried at Mount Zion cemetery, where J. S. Miller made appropriate remarks. Owing to sickness in the family the funeral service will be arranged for later.

Death the great enemy again to us hath come,
And taken from our midst a precious one,
A loving and familiar voice is stilled:
His place is vacant and never can be filled.

But oh, our loved Master this very debt did pay;
If we are his we'll meet him on the resurrection day,
Then mortal shall immortal be and with Jesus reign.
In this better land free from sin and pain.

His hope was that Jesus to this earth would come,
And give a crown of immortality to eachone,
Who in this life the gospel would obey,
And choose to walk with Christ in the straight and narrow way.

Let his example of goodness and right,
Be to friends and relatives a bright and shining light,
That will lead them on as a guardian star,
To the kingdom of God where no death will mar.

Dear Restitution:

If you will allow me space in your much esteemed paper I will announce the death of our much loved Sister in Christ, Mrs. M. E. Leppo, who fell asleep in Feb. 9, 1899, at her home on Santa Creek, Kootenai County, Idaho. As there was no one of her faith to take charge of the funeral services I was requested to do so. The services were held at the Santa school house on the 11th day of Feb., 1899, where I read a few Scriptures on the resurrection and final restitution of all things, and spoke a few words of comfort and encouragement to the bereaved. We then repaired to the cemetery and laid her to rest to await the coming of the Lord. The deceased was born in eastern Missouri, Feb. 25, 1833. She was principally raised in Illinois; moved back to Missouri when she was about twenty years of age, was married to James Jones at the age of twenty-two, and then moved to eastern Kansas, where her husband died during Civil War. She was then left a widow until she married John Benbow, who died Jan. 31, 1866, she was afterwards married to R. W. Leppo and they lived in Kansas until April, 1883, when they crossed the Plains to Umatilla Co., Ore., where her last husband died Mar. 1, 1884. She has since lived with her only son; they moved to Latah Co., Idaho, in 1883, and in 1894 moved to Kootenai Co., Idaho, where they lived ever since. The deceased has lived a Christian life from early childhood. She made her home in the Methodist church until about twenty-five years ago when she saw the true light of the gospel as it was presented to her by John Foore, and was baptized by him, where she has lived a true Christian life, and a faithful worker for the faith she loved, and has also been a great reader of THE RESTITUTION for over twenty years. She leaves one son and three daughters to mourn her loss.

G. A. WEEKS.

Sister Emma Stephens, wife of James Stephens, who died nearly ten years ago. They emigrated from Indiana in the sixties and made their home in Nebraska ever since. She was in her seventy-ninth year. She died in full faith of the near coming of Christ, the Life-Giver. She died of old age as near as I could make out. She lived on the little farm they obtained until she died. David Brent and family moved in the house with her some five years ago. Three years ago she became unable to do any work, but they kindly cared for her. There were no children. They made many friends and perhaps some enemies, I don't know. They were strong in the faith and always talked it. Their home was the home of the way-worn pilgrim when they were called on by them. We met at the residence on the 20th, where a short discourse was preached by the writer from Rev. xiv. 13, after which we laid her to rest by the side of her husband in the Linden cemetery, awaiting the call of the Master. Oh Lord, how long shall the enemy prevail?

The Story of Israel. No. 89.

TURNED BACK TO THE WILDERNESS, NUM. XIV. 39-45; NUM. XV. 32-37; NUM. XV. 4; DEUT. i 40-46.

We have not given you the names of the twelve traitor judges; you can look them up if you care to. You will find them in the first part of the 13th chap. of Numbers. They belonged to the seventy upon whom the Spirit of the Lord came at Kibroth—Hatavah, where the people died from eating so many quails.

Open your Bibles now at the 14th chapter of Numbers. Get the 40th verse. But stop; look at the 25th verse first. It says in brackets, that "the Amalekites and the Canaanites dwelt in the valley."

Then in the same verse, the commandment of the Lord to Israel is given—"Tomorrow turn you, and get you into the wilderness by way of the Red Sea." "The way of the Red Sea," was the lower of the three roads, that led out of Egypt to Palestine. The northern road was called "the way of the Philistines," the middle one, "the way of Shur." They all went out of Egypt by gates through the wall of Etham, or Shur. The Israelites took none of these roads; they went farther down, that God's power might be shown by making them walk dry shod through the sea. So "the way of the sea" is another road, than that by which they came to Kadesh-Barnea. They passed this road at Rithma. It is the way that modern Egyptian pilgrims take to Mecca.

40 ver. But the Israelites are rebellious still. Now that the Lord bids them turn back, they do not want to go! They half repent of the murmurings of yesterday, as I rising early in the morning, get them up into the top of the mountain and say, "Lo, we be here, and will go up unto the place which the Lord hath promised; for we have sinned." But it is too late now; they have let their last chance slip by; the beautiful flowers and vales of Canaan will never smile on them. Be careful dears, lest you too, "Enter not in because of unbelief." The future rest is only prepared for those who have faith in God. "Be not of them who draw back unto perdition, but of them who believe to the saving of the soul." Heb. x. 30. "Take heed brethren, lest there be in any of you an evil heart of unbelief, in departing from the living God. But exhort one another daily, while it is called today; lest any of you be hardened through the deceitfulness of sin." Heb. iii. 12, 13.

Moses tells the Israelites that they are transgressing the commandment of the Lord and that it will not prosper; that the Lord is not among them, and that if they go up they will fall by the sword of the Amalekites and the Canaanites. Yet they persist and are beaten. The ark of the covenant of the Lord and Moses are not with them; the Lord is no longer their captain. No battle can be won without God. It is in vain to go out against the enemy trusting in ourselves.

You will see from the way the next chapter begins, that the Lord does not intend that his purposes shall be frustrated. Though this rebellious generation are to perish. Yet are the children of Israel to come into the land. "When ye become into the land of your habitations, ye shall do so and so, is the message of the Lord to them by the hand of Moses. But we have been over these two and will pass on to the 3rd verse of this 15th chap.

But some one says, "Auntie, you are too fast, you haven't told us how long the Israelites are to wander in the wilderness." Sure enough, we had forgotten that. They are to wander just as many years as the spies were days in Canaan, or 40 years. The count begins at the time they started out of Egypt. Nisan, 2513 A. M. and will end, when they cross the Jordan on Nisan 2553 A. M. Not much will be told us about them in their wanderings. We know that they came back to the camp at Kadesh after their defeat, and that in disobedience to God, they remain there "many days." Deut. i. 46, our chronologist says 38.

On the first day of the new civil year, the pillar moved and they "took their journey into the wilderness by the way of the Red Sea." Deut. ii. 1.

Now we are ready to go back to Num. xv. 32. It says, "While the children of Israel were in the wilderness, they found a man that gathered sticks on the Sabbath day." And they "brought him to Moses and to Aaron, and to the whole congregation."

But no one seemed to know what to do with him, so he was put in prison. Moses appealed to the Lord and he said, "The man shall be surely put to death," and they "stoned him with stones, and he died." Death was the penalty for sabbath-breaking, but this is the only instance given in the Bible where the penalty was inflicted. The laws were the Lord's laws as well as the laws of the State, and whoever broke them was rebelling against him.

Num. xvi. tells of the rebellion of Korah, Dathan and Abiram. Korah was a cousin of Moses. He was the son of Izhar, the brother of Amram. Dathan and Abiram and on the son of Peleth were Reubenites. Num. xxvi. 8-11; see also Ex. vi. 18-21.

Korah was ambitious. He seemed to think that the way ought to be open, not only to the children of Aaron, but also to the Levites and to any one out of the other tribes, who wished to become a priest.

He won many of the princes of Israel over to his side, and they come together to Moses and Aaron, and say, "Ye take too much upon you, seeing all the congregation are holy, every one of them, and the Lord is among them," just as if these two men had elected themselves to that high position and not the Lord!

But we want to make our lessons shorter and must close for this time. Our next lesson will begin with Num. xvi. 4.

AUNTIE WISE.

People who do not believe in prayer lose a wonderful rest and refuge. When time and space, the wants, the bitterness, or the duties of life, separate us from those we love so far that our help is useless to them, our voices silent, our eyes blind; when we know that suffering, idleness, danger, death, may lie in wait for them every hour, and no strength or longing of ours can avail to help them, where do they fly, what hope or comfort do they have, who cannot give their beloved into the safe keeping of the Omnipotent God; who cannot pour out their tortured and anxious hearts to him who heareth and answereth prayer?—Ledyard.

Religion's grand secret is living upon Christ, looking continually to him. All that is desirable in ourselves, all that is useful to others, must be drawn simply from this source; and everything else must be in subserviency to this. The secret of abiding in Christ is a compound grace of humility, faith and love,—humility, by which the soul feels its own nothingness and emptiness; faith, by which it embraces the Savior, as all sufficient for every want; and love, by which it continually dwells in him.—Bickersteth.

Our Love Feast.

Dear Restitution:

I wish to write a few lines to THE RESTITUTION. I think it is one of the best papers I ever read. I don't think we can do without it. I am not a member of any church, but I do rejoice in an undoubting faith of Christ's coming again to establish the restitution of all things. See Acts iii. and John xiv. The Lord says, "I will come again and receive you unto myself, that where I am ye may be also." O, that is a grand and glorious promise, and I hope to be one of those whom the Lord will have mercy on. I am looking for the dear Savior's return to earth to claim his Bride, for unto those that look for him, he shall appear the second time without sin unto salvation. O, that I may be worthy and ready to meet him is my prayer. "For blessed are those servants whom the Lord will find watching when he cometh." Luke xii. I hope to have the pleasure of having my name enrolled with the [illegible] little band here, [illegible] stand up in the face of the world today and testify [illegible] and glorious home [illegible] Savior and King [illegible]

[illegible] journey through life [illegible] of a precious faith [illegible] and I am sure [illegible] and often I somehow [illegible] I can have that wish [illegible] Truth [illegible] I shall some time this coming season, if the Lord will permit. We have snow here two feet deep on the level and as cold as any ordinary winter ought to be, and the seventeen days of March the weather has been wofully cold 56 and 57 degrees below zero. My husband thinks he will try to get out of this northern country before the coming of a northern winter, all I have to say is I hope we will have the good fortune to get near some of our faith. So fare you well now till you hear from me again. Take good courage, the storm will soon be over.

Your Sister in hope of eternal life,
MRS. C. H. COBLENTZ.

Brother Underwood:

We love the household of faith, the gospel of the kingdom and our blessed Master, and are striving to enter into that rest that remaineth for the people of God when Jesus comes, an event we may reasonably expect at any time. Yours in the one faith,
EMMA & LEE SUTHERLAND.

Kansas and Missouri Conference Work.

At our annual conference Sept. 4, 1898, there was reported as having been preached in that year upwards of 140 discourses and twelve baptisms. A good interest was reported at the different points visited, which would not have been had no effort been made by the conference. This is a very good showing, considering the disadvantage under which the work was done. It shows what can be done by united effort. This gives us hope and encouragement for the future, so we are arranging to commence this year's tent campaign about June 15th, or as soon thereafter as the weather will permit. Brethren let us push the work. There is only one thing to hinder doing more for the Master's cause this year than last, and that is your indifference, or neglect. We know that you love the truth, and desire to see the gospel preached. We cannot all preach but all can give a little, if it is only a quarter don't be afraid to send it along. Let us work while it is day for the night cometh when no man can work. The nations are hastening to the call of the prophet, "Prepare war, wake up the mighty men." Tarshish with all the young lions thereof are making themselves ready. He of the north quarter is making ready. Brethren, the conflict is impending, do you not hear the tread of the mighty host as they are marching to the great battle of decision? Are we using our talent, or, are we like the servant whom his master deprived of all he had? The Master is coming, let us proclaim it to perishing man, and show our faith by our works, for, faith without works is dead, without a live faith no crown of life. Now brethren, you who desire to help in the work, send in your contribution to the treasurer, P. H. Oatman, care of Nave & McCord, St. Joseph, Mo. If you cannot send the money now, send a pledge, with a statement when you can pay it. A report of the work will be given from time to time. A word of encouragement or suggestion on the line of work will be thankfully received.

For the committee,
A. W. DARBY, Sec'y.

Dear Restitution:

I am a little girl eight years old, and I thought I would write a few lines. My mamma and papa have taught me to believe in the all-wise Creator, and his Son, our Savior.

"Christ was born across the sea,
With a glory in his bosom that transfigures you and me."

And when he comes the second time I hope I will be found worthy of eternal life. The wicked will be destroyed and be burnt up; but they will not burn forever. Will there be any sorrow when he comes? No, there will be peace and no sorrow or trouble. I wish Christ would come soon; we are waiting for him, for we have no other friend. I hope I will be saved in the next world; where peace and righteousness will cover the earth as the water does the sea.

ETHEL MARIE VENABLE.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

By request of J. Anthony I thought you might be pleased to hear from your Northern Sister. The dear RESTITUTION, the blessed old Bible and an old hymn book, called the Songs of Zion, why I call it old is because it is a most worn out number printed in 1879, at Grand Rapids, Mich., by W. W. Hart, these three are held as a great treasure in our family circle. We look earnestly forward each week for THE RESTITUTION as a weekly visitor, ladened with good tidings of a love unfeigned, soon to be ushered in. The way I know the great national subject is in this wise, the nations are making daily preparations for their judgment, and feel it a Christian duty to practice lots and preach little, and yet I seldom get into a conversation with anybody without telling of my hope of the promises God gave to Abraham and the story of the promises are the words, "Well done, good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joys of the Lord, prepared for you from the foundation of the world. Hope each and every one may feel worthy and stand ready to say, Welcome, you King of glory, you and I have long been friends. Yes, dear sisters, that long looked for Friend will soon appear to judge the nations and set up that iron rule that will subdue all other rulers. I can [illegible] and sweet [illegible] poor, [illegible] the [illegible] and [illegible]

An Appeal.

To the Brethren of Missouri and Kansas, and to all others interested in our work:

The Missouri-Kansas Conference Board have employed me as Evangelist, and to go with their tent the coming season, which will open up the last half of May. For this work we will need money. This will have to be made up by donations and by collections upon the field where we go. Will all in these States, and elsewhere who desire to assist in the work send to us at Beatrice, Neb., and to A. W. Darley, secretary of the board, Monad City, Mo the amount you will contribute, and send the money to the treasurer, P. H. Oatman, care Nave & McCord, St. Joseph, Mo. Give us your name and the amount you can possibly give for the work at an early date, that we may know how to arrange our tent work. Let every brother and sister donate to this work, however small the amount may be. Make us a pledge. We are commanded to sound out the Word [illegible] and [illegible] "It is more blessed to give than to receive," and to give in the Lord has prospered you, preach the Word. Go ye into all the world and preach, and go ye, disciple all nations." To do this it requires money. Let us have a liberal response and a [illegible]

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME XLVIII. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, APRIL 19, 1899. NUMBER 15.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this and the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Poetry.

Lift Me Up.

Out of mere self, dear Lord,
O, lift me up!
No more I trust myself in life's dim maze
Sufficient to myself in all its devious ways:
I trust no more, but humbly at thy throne
Pray, "Lead me, for I cannot go alone."

Out of my weary self,
O lift me up!
I faint: the road winds upward all the way;
Each night but ends another weary day.
Give me thy strength and may I so blest
Scale "the heights" to find the longed-for rest.

Out of my selfish self,
O lift me up!
To live for others, and in living so
To be a blessing wherever I go,
To give the sunshine and the clouds removal,
Or let them but the silver clouds reveal.

Out of my lonely self,
O, lift me up!
Help me to feel that thou art always near,
Although 'tis night and all around is drear;
Help me to know that though I cannot see,
It is my Father's hand that leads'th me.

Pulpit Echoes from Park Hill.

"Thy Kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven." Matt. vi. 10.

1. The kingdom contemplated in our text is a divine government for the children of men. God alone has the right to enact and give laws. Man has usurped this right and is vainly trying to govern his fellows. This has led to the formation of two classes, rulers, and those who are ruled. The laws made by the rulers, are often arbitrary and unjust. The arrogated power is abused and misrule and tyranny are the results.

God in the beginning gave man a charter of his rights which was to "have dominion over the fish of the sea and over the fowl of the air, and over the cattle, and over all the earth" but the right to rule his fellows or to govern his brother was not a part of this grant. Since sin entered the world, and the curse has fallen, man has endeavored to set aside that part of the penalty of earning his bread by labor and is endeavoring to control the labor of another to satisfy his own requirements.

During all the ages the drones in the human hive have lived and fattened upon the labor of workers. These rulers have grasped the power of law and by manipulations wondrous in their ingenuity have managed to form systems of control of the laboring classes, which systems they call governments.

These man-made governments are not in harmony with God's original purpose. God is the law-maker and ruler or Lord, and while many of these governments formally acknowledge God, they hold on to the rulership with a relentless and ever tightening grasp, and hold down the ignorant and poor by weights which are seldom rolled off.

The world needs today a better government than man can give it. The burdens of the people are heavy. Like Israel in Egypt they cry to God by reason of their task-masters. They want a better kingdom and turning to the only source of help they earnestly pray to God "Thy kingdom come."

Here then, is a kingdom petitioned for. As men's needs are real, so the kingdom they seek is a real kingdom. They ask for deliverance from earthly governments. Jesus knew the secret causes of the troubles of the poor and those under forced authority. He knew the yearnings of the heart whose labors only enriched another. He recognized how the rights of men were trampled upon and that their wages was taken by fraud and framed the prayer to meet their needs.

2. This petition is for a divine kingdom. They do not desire a change of human authority, but a change from human to divine authority. They ask for God's kingdom. They pray for a complete change of authority so that God's will may be done where now evil men hold sway.

3. So then the kingdom petitioned for is not only a real kingdom, an actual bonafide government, but it is also a government of righteousness. God will do right. His laws will be just. His kingdom will bring peace and happiness and contentment and loyalty to all his subjects. Taxation will cease. Combines and trusts to oppress and take advantage of the poor will no longer afflict mankind. Behold a king shall reign in righteousness and princes shall rule in judgment. We do not wonder that John cried out "Come Lord Jesus, and come quickly."

4. The child of God asks for this divine government because it is promised. Since greed and selfishness has taken away the earnings of the poor and perversion in government has taken away man's rights in many things the star of hope has arisen and God has sketched upon the map of the heavens the prophecy of divine things. Daniel unrolls the chart of time and on it we may read the destiny of nations and the coming of this kingdom of God: for "In the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed, and it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand forever." James caught a glimpse of this divine reign when he exclaimed "Hearken my beloved brethren, hath not God chosen the poor, rich in faith, and heirs of the kingdom which he hath promised to those who love him."

There is this comforting thought in relation to this kingdom, that it is to come to the poor, yet faithful child of God. Riches are necessary to heirship. God remembers the worthy poor, and is pleased to promise them a place in his kingdom, associated with his beloved Son. Christ will be King of kings and Lord of lords. Oh the moral beauty and grandeur of that age when God will place his King upon his holy hill and give him the uttermost parts of the earth for his possession, Psa. ii. 6-8. When he shall judge his people with righteousness and the poor with judgment. When this great King shall redeem the poor from deceit and violence and when all kings shall bow before him and all nations serve him. Then will dawn that era of glory so long foretold by sacred love when men shall be blessed in him and all nations shall call him blessed.

I want to tell you this morning that the hope of an inheritance in the coming kingdom rests upon many wonderfully glowing and soul stirring promises. Daniel says, "The kingdom and dominion and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High." Dan. vii. 27. Jesus answered his disciples that when he shall come and sit upon the throne of his glory that he will say to those upon his right hand, "Come ye blessed of my Father inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world," Matt. xxv. 33. And again, to encourage the struggling churches he says, "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne." Rev. iii. 21. Blessed promise. Blessed kingdom. Blessed King, come and reign. The kingdom is thine. Thou hast been appointed heir of all things. The Lord God has promised thee the throne of David and thou shall reign over the house of Jacob forever and of thy kingdom there shall be no end. Luke i. 32, 33.

5. This kingdom which I have described and over which Messiah shall be King, and with whom the saints will be associated in power and blessing is in harmony with the needs of mankind. A better government is needed among all the nations of the earth. A strong government. A government of righteousness. A government not "of the people" nor "by the people" but a government for the people by the Lord himself. The history of six thousand years has demonstrated the need of this kingdom for which we pray in our text. Divine wisdom foresaw this need and taught us to lisp this prayer. The oppressed and wronged and martyred dead of the ages are calling from the dust, come, Lord Jesus, come, and take thy kingdom and reign.

6. The establishment of a kingdom here on earth by the Lord Jesus to bless the world is in harmony with the Bible doctrine of his second coming. His coming again is so often referred to, that no one will in this day of light question the thought. But why should he come? What work has he before him then? The only answer that can be given is that he comes to give a reward to his faithful ones and to bless the nations. This reward cannot be given until the dead are raised and the chosen medium of Divine blessing to mankind is the kingdom of God.

7. Again the establishing of the kingdom is in harmony with the idea of the first resurrection.

The saints must be raised first that that they may be used as God's great judicial and executive body to rule the living nations—to school them—to educate—to discipline them and raise them up to the higher or spiritual plain. Christ will not rule the world alone. The church is never spoken of in the future as being ruled over, but as being rulers, kings and priests, hence I repeat, it is fitting that they should be raised first and given power over the nations, in order that the functions of divine government might reach and bless mankind to the ends of the earth.

7. Let me call your attention to one more reason why a real kingdom should be established under the reign of Jesus and the saints—it is in harmony with the mission of the gospel.

The gospel is a proclamation of the coming kingdom. Jesus began his mission by stating that a kingdom was due and that men should reform and believe the gospel. His gospel was the good news of a divine government. It was an invitation to inherit a kingdom. It was a call to many out of which a few might be chosen as his body politic, to be kings and priests and reign with him on the earth.

That kingdom is now nigh at hand. A few more called out by the gospel and the cabinet will be complete. Now is the time to make our calling and election sure. Soon the angels will be sent to gather the elect. Let us be faithful and as we watch and wait let us ever pray, "Thy kingdom come, thy will be done in earth as it is in heaven."

A. J. EICHANER.

True Immersion. No. 1.

What is it? Three immersions. Why three? It is urged by a body of well meaning people that because Jesus said to his Apostles, "Go and teach all nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit," etc., therefore there must be three immersions of the candidate for baptism, so as to be baptized into three names. I do not doubt the good intentions of those making this claim, but am not nearly convinced of the reasonableness of this position. I shall endeavor to prove from the Scriptures that there is only one name (only referred to; not mentioned here) in which men can be saved, and the Apostles whom the Lord commissioned to announce the glad tidings and to immerse believing ones, baptized only into one name—that of "the Lord Jesus Christ." Wherever baptism is mentioned in "the Acts of the Apostle," which I believe to be a faithful record of some of the Acts" of duly commissioned and divinely inspired men, when a name is spoken of it is the name of Jesus Christ, and in no instance upon record are three names mentioned.

Will the attentive reader please turn to the 4th chapter of Acts, beginning at the 7th verse and read the question directed to Peter and John by the rulers and elders and scribes, relative to the restoration of the lame man: "By what power, or in what name have ye done this? Peter's reply was that by the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, whom ye crucified, whom God raised from the dead, by him doth this man stand here before you whole. This is the stone which was set at nought by you builders, which is become the head of the corner. Neither is there salvation in any other, for there is NONE OTHER NAME UNDER HEAVEN GIVEN AMONG MEN, whereby we must be saved." Not three names, or two names, but one name and no other—the name of JESUS. Let the reader carefully bear this in mind. Also read Heb. i. 4 about "the name more excellent "than that even of angels, and in Phil. ii. 9-11 of the "name which is above every name: that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow,..... and every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father. But let us turn to the first chapter of Matthew, where the angel as the Father's messenger, announces to Mary that the name of her wonderful child is to be "called JESUS, for he shall save his people from their sins." Now when the time was fulfilled Jesus was sent forth of the Father, and "preached the gospel of the kingdom of God." Mark i. 14, 15. He did not play the role of a self constituted teacher or prophet, but comes in his Father's name, as he repeatedly affirmed. "The Son can do nothing of himself, but what he seeth the Father do; for what things soever he doeth, these also doeth the Son likewise." John v. 19. "I am come in my Father's name, and ye receive me not." v. 43. "I am not come of myself." vii. 28; viii. 28, 42; xii. 49; xiv. 10. Also Deut. xviii. 18, 19. So also the works of the power which he did. "The works that I do in my Father's name, they bear witness of me." x. 25. Then again, he also said that he had manifested his Father's name to the men whom the Father had given him; "And I have declared unto them thy name, and will declare it." John xvii. 6, 26. How could he more effectually declare the Father's name than by speaking his words and doing his will?

We must not take an isolated text in the New Testament, and try to suit it to our theory, or endeavor to substantiate an ill-founded claim by it: least of all to set up a doctrine upon one text. I do not wish to be understood that I disregard Matt. xxviii. 19, that I reject it, or anything of the kind, but I am bound to deny that there is in that passage a single iota of proof for a three fold immersion for baptism "into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit." Observe that the Lord did not say into the names in the plural, but name in the singular. Besides, is Father a name in this case, or Son, or Holy Spirit? Are not the terms Father and Son appellations that arise out of a relationship? But to revert to the declaration of Jesus, that he had come in his Father's name, that he did his mighty works in his name, and that he had manifested his name. What is the Father's name? Let us see what the Word says on this matter. "Holy and reverend is his name." Psa. cxi. 9.

This statement is to be understood undoubtedly as setting forth certain qualities of God's name, but not the name itself. Again, "Let them praise thy great and terrible name; for it is holy." Psa. xcix. 3. And further, "I will worship toward thy holy temple, and praise thy name for thy loving kindness and for thy truth; for thou hast magnified thy name above all thy Word." Psa. cxxxviii. 2. Also Matt. x. 5, "Hallowed be thy name." (Luther's translation).

We will now examine the Word to see how God has magnified his name by means of his Word." When Moses was commissioned by God to go to Pharaoh to demand the release of the children of Israel he said, "Who am I that I should go unto Pharaoh, and that I should bring forth the children of Israel out of Egypt?" And he urged that when he should say to the children of Israel, "The God of your fathers hath sent me unto you," they would ask, "What is his name?" and enquired of God, "What shall I say unto them? And God said unto Moses: I AM THAT I AM: and he said thus shalt thou say..... I AM hath sent me unto you. And God says more over unto Moses, Thus shalt thou say unto the children of Israel, Jehovah the God of your fathers, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob, hath sent me unto you: This is my name forever, and this is my memorial to all generations." Ex. iii. 13-15. Notice, here God is speaking of his own absolute, underived existence (v. 14), but in the next verse Moses is to say, "Jehovah, the God of your fathers....." The meaning of Jehovah is, "He who is," "The Existing One." In the one verse God himself speaks, from the standpoint of his own independent existence; but his name to the children of Israel is Jehovah—He who is. This was to be his name among them "unto all generations."

Upon another occasion "God spake unto Moses and said unto him, I am JEHOVAH (marg.): And I appeared unto Abraham, unto Isaac, and unto Jacob by God Almighty, but by my name JEHOVAH was I not known unto them." Ex. vi 2, 3. This, then, is the Father's name. And among the Israelites he alone was to be known by this name. "That men may know that thou, whose name alone is JEHOVAH, art the most high over all the earth." Psa. lxxxiii. 18. "Sing unto God, sing praises to his name: extol him that rideth upon the heavens by his name JAH (a contraction of Jehovah), and rejoice before him." Psa. lxviii. 4. See also Deut. xxviii. 58, and read "Jehovah" instead of "The Lord." Let them praise the name of the Lord (Jehovah); for his name alone is excellent." Psa. cxlviii. 13.

From these Scriptures we see that the Father's name is Jehovah, the Existing One, He who is, that this name alone is excellent, that it is even terrible, and glorious, and holy, and that it has been magnified above all by means of God's Word.

A. H. ZILMER.

What Is It to Confess that Jesus is the Son of God?

Many, perhaps, to glance at this question, would not think it necessary to believe more than the words express, but we will find that it implies much more, and must be understood before such a confession could intelligently be made. Let us turn to the 8th chapter of Acts, beginning with the 27th verse, we read, "Behold a man of Ethiopia, a eunuch of great authority under Candace, queen of the Ethiopians, who had charge of all her treasure, and had come to Jerusalem for to worship, was returning, and sitting in his chariot read Isaiah, the prophet. Then the Spirit said unto Philip, Go near and join thyself to this chariot. And Philip ran thither to him and heard him read the prophet Isaiah, and said, Understandest thou what thou readest? And he said, "How can I, except some man should guide me?" and he desired Philip that he would come up and sit with him. The place of the Scripture which he read was this,—he was led as a sheep to the slaughter; and like a lamb dumb before his shearer, so opened he not his mouth. In his humiliation his judgment was taken away: and who shall declare his generation? for his life is taken from the earth. And the eunuch answered Philip, and said, "I pray thee, of whom speaketh the prophet this? of himself, or of some other man?" Then Philip opened his mouth and began at the same Scripture, and preached unto him Jesus; and as they went on their way, they came unto a certain water: and the eunuch said, See, here is water, what doth hinder me to be baptized?" And Philip said, "If thou believest with all thine heart, thou mayest." And he answered and said, "I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God." And he commanded the chariot to stand still: and they went down both into the water, both Philip and the eunuch; and he baptized him."

We see by this account that before the eunuch confessed Jesus to be the Son of God, Philip preached to him, Jesus, from the prophets. Jesus himself said, "Search the Scriptures, for in them ye think ye have eternal life, and they are they which testify of me." We find Jesus also called the son of Abraham, the son of David, and to understand who Jesus is we must go back to Moses, and the prophets, as Jesus himself taught. We must understand his origin, nature, character, and mission. We find the first reference to him in Gen. iii., the promise of a Seed which should bruise the serpent's head, hence we find the promise made to Abraham, that in thy Seed, meaning Christ, (Gal. iii. 16,) shall all the nations of the earth be blessed. We find this same promise made again to Isaac and Jacob, then to David, (2 Sam. vii. 12) "When thou shalt sleep with the fathers, I will set up thy Seed after thee, I will be his Father and he shall be my Son, thy throne shall be established forever," and through all the prophets we learn of this one who is to come a perfect representation of God, in mind, character, power and purpose; where he is to be born, how he is to be rejected, die, rise, and come again in glory, sit upon the throne of David, to order and establish his kingdom with judgment and justice, from henceforth, even forever.

We come down to the New Testament; we learn how God sent an angel to tell Mary, who was a descendant of David, that she should have a Son and should call his name, Jesus, and that he should be the Son of God (Luke i. 35,) fulfilling what had been prophesied. We see how he was the Son of David through the flesh; his origin was in heaven, having been the Word with God, which by the power of God became flesh. He was human in nature, but divine in character, having come to fulfill his Father's purpose as to the earth and its inhabitants. We learn how God revealed that Jesus was his Son, not only to Mary and Joseph, but also to John the Baptist, who said, "I knew him not, but he that sent me to baptize with water, said unto me, Upon whom thou shalt see the Spirit descending and remaining on him, the same is he which baptizeth with the Holy Spirit, and I saw and bare record that this is the Son of God." It was also revealed to the shepherds and to Simeon who waited for the consolation of Israel, the Messiah. When Jesus asked his disciples, "Whom do you say that I am: and Simon Peter answered and said, "Thou art Christ, the Son of God." and Jesus answered and said unto him, "Blessed art thou, Simon Bar-Jonah, for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father, which is in heaven: and then Jesus said, Upon this Rock will I build my Church, meaning that he was the Rock, the foundation of the Church. If this great truth that Jesus was truly and literally the Son of the living God, is the foundation how important it is to understand what it is to confess that Jesus is the Son of God, and it is only to those that know him, that he will give eternal life.

Hence, to confess that Jesus is the Son of God, we must believe and understand the gospel—the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, "With the heart man believeth unto righteousness, and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation." Whosoever shall confess that Jesus is the Son of God, God dwelleth in him, and he in God.

To fulfil faithfully the duties of your station; to use to the utmost the gifts of your ministry; to bear cruel annoyances and trivial irritations as martyrs bore the pillory and stake; to find the one noble trait in people who try to molest you; to put the kindest construction on unkind words and acts; to love with the love of God even the unthankful and evil; to be content to be a fountain in a wild valley of stones, to urishing a few lichens and wild flowers, or now and again a thirsty sheep; and to do this always, and not for the praise of man, but for the sake of God—this makes a great life.—*F. "CONCENTRATION is the secret of strength."

"MAN was made to be active, and he is never so happy as when he is employed. It is the idle man that is most miserable."

THERE is pleasure in contemplating good; there is greater pleasure in receiving good; but the greatest pleasure in doing good, which comprehends the rest."

NOT merely in our solemn moods, or our grave occupations, but in ordinary actions, our moments of enjoyment, our eating and drinking, must we recognize and own the presence of God.

"THAT we are unprofitable servants is certain; but though *un*profitable to God, we may be profitable to each other, which is one of the duties we have to perform, and one that we might be sure will give satisfaction to our Maker."

"WE are not made to live alone. Even our communion with God must be through the fulness of life. There may be times when hermit isolation becomes a duty, as it may be a duty to cut off the right hand, or to pluck out the right eye; but it exhibits a mutilation, and not an ideal life."

SAYS a contemporary to workers, "See that you preach the gospel, not a gospel—the gospel. "The gospel is the power of God unto salvation, to every one that believeth." There are other gospels abroad today, which are the power of men unto condemnation—How true this is?

BRO. G. M. MYERS has been employed by the Missouri-Kansas Conference Board to preach for them this season. He has severed all connection with the Evangelist, which is now issued as a monthly by Bro. Crowe of Iowa. Bro. Myers' appointments for the next few weeks will be at Oronoque, April 15-22. Traer April 22 to 29, Glasco May 20 to June 2, Huron June 3 to 19, Sycamore Springs June 20 to July 10, all in the State of Kan.

NOTICE is given in this paper of the death of "Grandma Woodward," the mother of Elder B. W. Woodward. It was not surprising considering her age, but when we visited at her home last June her mind was as clear as ever, and her joy that so much of her life had been spent in the service of the Lord, and her determination to continue steadfast to the end of the race, was an admonition to us all assembled there. She rests from her labor, and the work of her hands and head live on to cheer and encourage the left over ones. May we each emulate her in the sterling traits of her character, and live so as to meet her in the kingdom of God.

Little Sins.

We often feel impelled to say that God recognizes no graduated scale of sins. He can look upon sin with no degree of allowance, and yet we constantly find those who think little sins, and as the result, commit little sins without much compunction, apparently. The Apostle asks, "If God be for us, who can be against us?" The important question is, can God be for us if we live day after day in what we consider little sins? Does not this classification of sin come of the flesh? And does not the flesh frame its mind after the fashions of the world around? Does not the fact of known sin at all, prove at least, a divided affection, and more than one rule of life? If so, is this what God asks for when he says, not give me one of your hearts, or a part of your heart, but, "Give me thine heart?" If not, then it behooves us to consider the solemn truth uttered by the Lord Jesus in Matt. vi. 24, "No man can serve two masters." This is an infallible declaration. We may deceive ourselves that we can gratify the flesh just a little, and no harm will come of it; but the desire to do that little shows alienation of mind, that is only restrained by dread of consequences. Look at the Lord's words again, and it will be seen that if we divide our affection and think to retain somewhat of God's favor, we are wofully mistaken. For in spite of our double aims the Master has warned us that we are attempting the impossible. Two masters cannot be served. God cannot be deceived; let us not deceive ourselves, by attempting it, for in spite of profession to the contrary, we will hate the one and love the other. It is a solemn truth that when we love God and keep his commandments, we know we love the children of God, see 1 John v. 2. It is a solemn truth that if we love not our brother we abide in death. Can we call that a little sin which ends in death? 1 John iii. 14, 15. These are some of the commandments we must keep in order to receive what we ask of God. 1 John iii. 22.

God help us to put away all notions of little sins that we may serve him with full purpose of heart. Amen.

Waiting for Christ.

N. S. in Glad Tidings, says, "The brethren of Christ in their present attitude of waiting for him may be fitly represented as a woman waiting for her husband. Days before, nay weeks, if the absence has been a long one, preparations are being made. Things done, and things left undone just as the case may be, ever keeping one thing in mind—the return of the loved one, and having everything as he would like to see it. As the time draws near the watchfulness and care increase. Each sound now causes a flutter of excitement. At times a shade of disappointment creeps in. He has not come. Why the delay? Still she watches and waits, keeping everything ready. Gradually midnight approaches. The watcher falls asleep, but is awakened suddenly by the well known footsteps. She rouses herself speedily. The first thought is one of anxiety. Is everything ready? Yes; she has worked and watched and waited. Happy are those servants whom their Lord when he cometh shall find so doing."

"Son of God, thy people shield,
Must we still thy absence mourn?
Let thy promise be fulfilled,—
Thou hast said, 'I will return.'
Gracious Master soon appear,
Quickly bring thy morning's light,
Then will cease the constant fear,
Hope be turned to joyful sight.

As a woman counts the days
Till her absent Lord she see,
Longs and watches, weeps and prays,
So the church must long for thee
Come that we may see thee nigh;
Then the sleep shall feed in peace,
Hushed for ever trouble's sigh,
Sin and sorrow's triumph cease."

Invaluable Counsel.

"My Son, if thou wilt receive my words, and hide my commandments with thee, so that thou incline thine ear unto wisdom, and apply thine heart to understanding; yea, if thou criest after knowledge, and liftest up thy voice for understanding; if thou seekest her as silver, and searchest for her as for hid treasures, then shalt thou understand the fear of the Lord, and find the knowledge of God; for the Lord giveth wisdom; out of his mouth cometh knowledge and understanding. He layeth up sound wisdom for the righteous; he is a buckler to them that walk uprightly. He keepeth the paths of judgment, and preserveth the ways of his saints. Then shalt thou understand righteousness, and judgment, and equity; yea, every good path."

This is divine instruction throughout, no discount on it at all. How many valuable lessons it contains, and among them the following:—

1. Those who store up God's commands are inclined toward wisdom, and enlargement of mind. Or, as apostolically expressed, exercise their senses by using them.

2. That to reap the reward offered at the end of the above quotation, it is necessary to make whole hearted and strenuous efforts to know God. The example of those who in Colorado and the Klondike and South Africa, and Australia surmount all obstacles and dig for the precious metals, is held up to those who would know the fear of the Lord, and find the knowledge of God. And nothing could be clearer than that mere promiscuous or casual reading of the Scriptures is not the way to reach the sound wisdom laid up for the righteous. Those of such habits only skim the surface, and do not dwell upon divine ideas long enough to digest and assimilate them.

3. This Scripture teaches the same lesson as that taught by Paul in 1 Cor. ii. 14, where he says the natural or animal man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God: for they are foolishness unto him; neither can he know them." It is not in his power to know them. The artist must chemically prepare the plate before he puts it in the camera, or no impression will be made: so also is it in the spiritual realm. The natural mind has to be prepared to receive the things of the Spirit. It is not prepared miraculously,—the natural mind is first influenced on a natural principle. We mean by that, that love is the motive power of the gospel. God sends a loving message to man; and the love manifested therein begets love in him on natural principles, and induces faith in it, and the man is begotten of God, with the Word of Truth. And from that time forward, in proportion to his feeding and growth his capacity for the reception of things of the Spirit will increase, and so grow in God's favor. The passage first quoted, Prov. ii. 1-9, seems to teach just this. "He layeth up sound wisdom for the righteous." Being justified by faith which works by love, a man's mind is swallowed up of God's mind, and spiritually discerns the things of the Spirit.

"The Pope,"

Says Words of Life, "is no longer a temporal Sovereign, but he still dreams of the restoration of his lost dominion, and the Jesuits do not hesitate to join hands with anarchists, in the hope of destroying the Italian kingdom. This was amply proved in the public courts at the time of the riots at Florence and Milan last year. In Milan alone there were distributed some 60,000 copies of a card, having on one side the Pope's portrait, and on the other an address containing the following:—

'The Pope is King of kings and Lord of lords. He is above all temporal sovereigns. For the maintenance of his position, given him by Christ, he must be invested with temporal sovereignty, of which he has been sacrilegiously deprived. Though the Pope's temporal sovereignty is not an article of faith, yet it is so closely related to an article of faith, that those who do not work for its realization render themselves liable to eternal perdition."

The opium revenue is reported by the same magazine to be steadily declining, and says, "In 1881 its value was over eight million rupees. In 1897 it sank to under four millions. An Indian Missionary, who lately visited the district of Malwa, found that in eight years the amount produced had fallen from 40,000 chests to 20,000,—and this, not because a less area was under cultivation, but because the plants yield less juice. It seems as though, man having refused to abandon this iniquity, the hand of God is upon it, and he is about to destroy it. May it be so, but how much better for a nation called Christian to have acknowledged and abandoned the evil, and so saved the shame attending the refusal to walk the righteous path.

We see also that "Confession" is being largely discussed in England, by the public press. At Wellingborough two curates were found to have put improper questions, based upon the seventh commandment, to young people in confirmation classes, and an indignation meeting has been held to denounce such iniquity.

Is Jonah in Your Bible?

The following article over the signature of a Mr. Forrest E. Dager, is going the rounds of the press, and as we think it contains an important lesson for our readers we would like them to read it. It reads as follows:—

"The first evening of his vacation, a student sat in the parlor at home, conversing with his father, when the latter said: 'My son, how are they treating the old Bible at the university, these days?'

'They honor it just as they did in your college days, I imagine, father; at least, I have heard nothing to the contrary.'

'Do they still accept it in its entirety as the Word of God?'

'Yes' as far as I am aware.'

'They still believe in the Pentateuch and the whole of Isaiah, in Daniel and Revelation?'

'I think so.'

'Well, how about Jonah—do they still consider it an authentic narrative?'

'Jonah—why, I can't say that they do still cling to Jonah, father. Is Jonah in all editions of the Bible?'

'Certainly, my boy, and I shall be compelled to consider very seriously the question of your return to an institution that dares to repudiate any portion of the Word Divine.'

'But, father, are you sure that Jonah is in all modern editions of the Bible? Is it in yours?'

'Is it in mine? I assure you that no vestige of the sin of Jehoiakim could ever appear in my home. I want a whole Bible or none at all.'

'But, father, let me see the book of Jonah. Your earnest words have aroused my interest.'

The book was produced—the old copy the father had been reading for many years, every page in the Psalms, the gospels and the epistles soiled by frequent handling. But in vain they searched for Jonah. After turning over the leaves of the New Testament a number of times, the old gentleman repeated in order the names of the prophetic books, but still Jonah could not be found.

'Father,' said the young man, 'do not get angry, but come here.' As he spoke, he held the book under the light, and it was evident that the two leaves containing Jonah had been cut out with a sharp knife.

'Father, pardon me, but I cut those leaves three years ago, and yet you did not miss them. Now, father, was Jonah in your Bible?'

The father's face revealed a peculiar mental struggle, but he answered, 'I see it, my son, I am as bad as the higher critics. There has been no Jonah in my Bible for three years.'

Friend, how is it with you? You have been scorning Jehoiakim for using the knife upon the Word. You have no mercy for those who mutilated the dear old Book, but have you a whole Bible? Is Habakkuk in your edition? When did you read Nahum? Are you acquainted with Obadiah? A Bible neglected is a Bible mutilated."

Passing Events in the Light of Prophecy.

The United Service Gazette says, "The one great stumbling-block in the progress toward a more stable order of affairs in France is the Parisian's instinctive dislike to the existence of a united race of foreigners in their midst, who in all vicissitudes of good and evil fortune rejoice in the name of Hebrew, and the daily martyrdom of their race, which the teachings of history should have convinced their oppressors in Russia, France, and elsewhere can never be extirpated until the promises are fulfilled which will gather this scattered and oppressed people within the limits of their ancestral home. And this, be it observed, is not a private interpretation of obscure Scriptures; for, putting the Divine records aside, we see the Jews fulfilling their destiny by their own rending of the obligations of their law. No nation scattered throughout the world ever united as have the Jews in the race for one goal."

Russia, according to the London Times has caused another flutter of excitement. She insisted upon the revision of the Northern Railway Loan Contract. According to a telegram from Pekin, Britain renewed her emphatic declaration that the contract could not be altered, and undertook to assist China in aggression should be attempted in consequence of China's refusal to accede to Russia's protest. Russia withdrew her protest, and a threatened crisis was averted.

Italy and Belgium have followed the example of the other powers. Italy demanded a lease of the port and coaling-station of Sammun. Her Ambassador's dispatch has returned by the Tsung-li-Yamen, and the Ambassador has been recalled to Rome. The Belgian minister for foreign affairs stated in the Chamber that the Government had asked for territory for a Belgian settlement at Hankuow.

It is a strange spectacle to see the Great Powers of Europe watching like vultures the inevitable breakup of the celestial Empire.

The disarmament Conference to assemble at The Hague is looked forward to with considerable interest in England: and the Peace Crusade has been holding meetings in the large towns throughout the United Kingdom. Mr. Stead, the leading spirit, seems to have given up the idea of carrying on his crusade on the Continent.

The Scotsman says in regard to the Conference:—"Although the Peace Conference will have the good wishes of all the world, those who expect a large or immediate result from it appear to be laying up for themselves a store of disappointment."

We do not wonder the press is preparing to let the people down easy in view of the vast sums being expended in preparation for war by all the Powers which consider themselves Great. The First Lord of the British Admiralty has introduced the navy estimates for the coming year. Four new battleships and four new cruisers are to be built, and their guns are to be of the most powerful type. The battleships are to be of the most powerful ships afloat in any navy in the world. The cruisers are to be stronger than any now building in any country. Besides these, torpedo boat destroyers, sloops, and gunboats are to be built. There is to be an increase of over 4,000 men and boys. The total increase on the vote is £2,866,000, and the total estimate £26,594,500, or $182,972,500.

The Scotsman commenting on this, says:—"This remarkable advance in the strength and cost of our sea defences follows hard upon the heels of an increase in the estimates for the current year over its predecessor, of £2,948,000 in money and 6340 in men. The sum which the country is expected to spend upon the naval services during the coming year reaches the enormous total of £26,594,500. In the year 1883-4 the charge was £10,720,000. In sixteen years of peace, therefore, naval expenditure has much more than doubled. It has kept growing at an average rate of a million a year. But in the year now running, and in the year soon to open, the annual rate of increase has risen to nearly three millions. Is this enormous development in the expense of the navy, implying as it does corresponding burdens and sacrifices on the part of the country, justified by the circumstances and the necessities of the times? Those who will question this are the visionaries who believe that in a world armed to the teeth, we can have peace without power, and who are willing to repose their trust and confidence in "the sweet reasonableness of Europe." In the present circumstances of the world and of the Empire, the crime would be in shrinking from proposing, or from bearing the burdens which the nation's duty and the nation's danger demand."

Selected.

Morocco as a Danger Point.

Efforts of European Powers to Divide with Great Britain the control of the Strait of Gibraltar may lead to trouble.

Morocco is the one danger point in Africa and its possession may one day imperil the peace of Europe. The power that ultimately possesses Morocco will de troy just one-half of the effectiveness of Gibraltar and divided with Great Britain in the control of the gateway to the Mediterranean.

France is known to have designs upon Morocco, for it is necessary not only for the protection of the south coast of France but of Algiers.

Italy would like to sit as mistress of the shore that commands the Strait of Gibraltar, for it would be of inestimable value if she were involved in war with any of the States of northern Europe.

Germany has long held designs upon Morocco, for its possession would give the Kaiser an important influence in the Mediterranean, and make him almost an arbiter in any old world dispute that might arise.

Great Britain, for motives of safety, can never permit any other power to hold and fortify Morocco. Above all else Great Britain protects her shortest highway to India, and rather than see Morocco seized by any European power would promptly take up arms against combined Europe if necessary.

On the other hand, just as Great Britain would fight all Europe to prevent the cession of Morocco, just so would all Europe combine to prevent Great Britain taking possession of the strip of shore opposite Gibraltar.

Russia Clashes with England.

Opinion is steadily gaining ground in St. Petersburg that a conflict with Great Britain is inevitable in the near future.

St. Petersburg advices are pessimistic in regard to the prospects for peace. There is undoubtedly a pervading opinion in the Russian capital that sooner or later war must ensue between Russia and Great Britain. And notwithstanding the Czar's proposal for general disarmament Russia is making the most stupendous preparations for a conflict.

Great Britain and Russia are rivals at three points in Asia—Persia, Afghanistan, and China. At all three points Russia is spending immense sums of money in laying the groundwork for future campaigns. Railroads have been constructed to the frontiers of Persia and Afghanistan, and Russian funds are extending these lines into the heart of these states. Extraordinary efforts are being made to complete the Trans-siberian railroad in order to expedite the forwarding of troops, munitions of war, and naval stores to Port Arthur.

If Great Britain and Russia cannot succeed in settling their Asiatic disputes by diplomacy and war must be resorted to, the great land battles of the conflict are almost certain to be waged in the mountain denles of Afghanistan, for India would be the first point of attack. Great Britain has 75,000 troops on the southern frontier of Afghanistan, while Russia has an equal number on the northern frontier. Both nations can throw an army into Afghan territory within a few days or a few hours even after the declaration of war.

On the sea the conflict would extend from the Baltic half way round the world, for the British navy would strike at every exposed bit of Russian territory. Port Arthur would unquestionably be at the mercy of the British fleet after a single naval Battle, for Russia is overmatched in Chinese waters.

If war ever comes between Great Britain and Russia—and the government of the two powers are unquestionably striving to avert war, thus proving its danger—three important naval battles may be expected within a few days after a declaration. A British fleet will crush the Baltic squadron at a single blow. Russia will endeavor to bring her Black Sea squadron through the Dardanelles, where it will find the British Mediterranean fleet in waiting, and the British fleets at Hongkong and Wei-Hai-Wei will immediately engage the Russian warships at Port Arthur.

Obituary.

Margaret Haskin was born in Saratoga Co., N. Y., Oct. 11, 1807; was married to Daniel Woodward in the winter of 1823, being at that time but a few weeks past her sixteenth birthday. They moved to Michigan in 1845, and the year following purchased and moved on the farm which was ever after their home till death came. They were in the true sense of the term "pioneers." She was the mother of eleven children, only three of which survive her, viz: Geo. W., Sarah C. and B. W. She died at the residence of her son B. W., April 8, 1899, of pneumonia of the lungs, after an illness of ten days, being in the 92nd year of her age. Ever of a religious and devoted turn of mind she early united with the Methodist church, but under the teachings of Eld. O. R. L. Crozier and Edwin Hoyt she embraced the Gospel of the Coming Kingdom of Christ, and was baptized in the all-saving name of Jesus, the Messiah, by Bro. Wm. Wilson. This was in the year 1854, and ever since she has led a consistent and devoted life. Ever has she been ready with open hand to assist in the spread of that faith and hopeshe so much loved; ever ready to give the word of cheer to the discouraged; ever ready to hear and help the distresses of others, her great heart like the ocean ready to receive the outpourings of every stream of life. Dying in the triumphs of a living faith, she sleeps in the hope of the coming of her Lord and the resurrection to the immortal life. Funeral services were held from the residence of her son Eld. B. W. Woodward on the 11th inst. in which the writer presented to a very large concourse of people "Grandma Woodward's" hope and her reasons for that hope, after which we committed the "sacred dust" to the care and keeping of him who will "raise it up at the last day."

O friend, never strike sail to a fear. Come into port greatly, sail with God the seas. Not in vain you live, for every passing eye is cheered and refined by the vision.—Emerson.

It has been said a kind word or a smile does not cost anything, but I should judge some people thought so, as they never seem to have any on hand.

They are wise who profit by their own experience and mistakes, but they are much wiser who also profit by the mistakes of others.

Sympathy is more than kindness; it is kindness able to enter into another's feelings, so as in some measure to feel with them.

The most profitable work that we can do is to work out our salvation with fear and trembling.

Poetry.

Maranatha.

Ye zephyrs, pray whisper the message
You're wafting o'er mountain and lea;
Ye songsters, what gladness your keynote
To symphonies rapturous, free?
O streamlet, your lullaby hushes
My fears with the fullest to sleep
Did ever your anthems o'erwhelm me
In sounding in coral caves deep?

By what runs your slumber-song, streamlet?
Your hymn grand in cresting, I see!
And roses just kissed by the sunbeams,
Your sweets at thought whisper to me!
Ye lily bells chiming at twilight
The hour of the bird's evensong,
You're singing a promise of gladness
Which to you shall forever belong!

O sun, in your crimson bed sinking,
Ye lamps of the angels at night
Which gleam through the windows of heaven,
Reveal now your secrets of light!
Hark! hark! how the answer is swelling
Till the earth and the heavens resound,
'Maranatha! The Lord he is coming,
O spread the glad tidings around!'

'Maranatha!' the zephyr doth murmur,
'Till wafted it floats o'er the sea!'
'Maranatha!' the ocean cries loudly,
'Till trumpet the world's jubilee!'
Ah, that is our rapturous keynote,'
The birds in their evensong sing;
While the streamlets, responsive keep bubbling,
'He's coming! our Lord and our King!'

The lily bells down in the valley
Keep time to the flower song sweet;
'Maranatha! the Lord he is coming,
We will blossom around his dear feet!'
The lingering sunbeams are telling,
'We'll herald his coming one day!'
And quivering star gleams are saying,
'We'll gather to crown him for aye!'

'Maranatha!' again it is ringing,
My soul, echo back the refrain,
And hasten be the trumpets and battles,
He's coming with blessings to reign!
Hark! hark! to the strains of his escort,
The harps of the heavenly choir!
And see where the clouds part above us,
The horses and chariots of fire!

Preach the Gospel.

"And he said unto them, Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth, and is baptized, shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be condemned. So then, after the Lord had spoken unto them, he was received up into heaven, and sat on the right hand of God." Mark xvi. 19. Again, Acts i. 9, "And when he had spoken these things, while they beheld, he was taken up; and a cloud received him out of their sight. And while they looked stedfastly toward heaven as he went up, behold, two men stood by them in white apparel, who also said, Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? This same Jesus which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." These two men in white apparel may have been Enoch and Elijah, at any rate their testimony agrees with many other promises found in the Bible.

What is meant by "preaching the gospel to every creature," and baptism, and the result of believing or unbelief and obedience or disobedience? The Greek word translated gospel is angelion and means a message, and with the prefix of eu, means a good message, and all who believe the good message are evangelical. All who have a living faith in the gospel will be saved, but he that believeth not shall be damned, (not sent to hell torment forever) but condemned to the "second death." Rev. xx. 14; xxi. 8. All those who believe the gospel and are baptized will experience a great salvation, and "inherit an everlasting kingdom under the whole heaven." Dan. vii. 27. "The gospel of the kingdom" is often spoken of in the Bible, also the gospel of salvation spoken of in these farewell words of the Savior.

The good message is two-fold, the promise of salvation and kingdom. We may become heirs of both in this life, but cannot inherit either until the second coming of Christ. Paul shows the kingdom of God will be inherited by those who have become heirs of it in this life, at the resurrection of the just. When "this mortal shall put on immortality"—death be swallowed up in victory. Paul adds, "But thanks be to God which giveth us the victory, through our Lord Jesus Christ." The Apostle sends words of consolation to his brethren at Thessalonica who were afflicted by the death of their Christian friends. He says, "I would not have you to be ignorant, brethren, concerning them who are asleep, that ye sorrow not, even as others who have no hope. For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him." As "he brought Jesus from the dead," so will he bring those who sleep in Jesus, "For this we say unto you, by the Word of the Lord, that we which are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord shall not go before them who are asleep. For the Lord himself descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first: then we who are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord. Wherefore, comfort one another with these words." Thes. iv. 13-18. "These words," should be a great comfort to every dying Christian. "But let us who are of the day, be sober, putting on the breastplate of faith and love, and for an helmet, the hope of salvation. For God hath not appointed us to wrath, but to obtain salvation by our Lord Jesus Christ." Thes. v. 8, 9. "When Christ who is our life shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory." Col. iii. 3, 4. "For our citizenship is in heaven," and Paul writes to the church at Rome (Rom. xiii. 11) that now it is high time to awake out of sleep: for now is our salvation nearer than we believed. When they believed they gained the hope of salvation." "To them who by patient continuance in well-doing, seek for glory, and honor, and immortality; he will render eternal life." Rom. ii. 6, 7. We groan within ourselves, waiting for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of our body. For we are saved by hope. Rom. viii. 23.

Some of the church at Corinth denied the resurrection, "Now, if Christ be preached that he rose from the dead, how say some among you 'that there is no resurrection of the dead'? Then is Christ not risen, then is our preaching and your faith in vain Then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished." Not if they went to heaven at death. "Christ was raised as the first fruits. Afterward they that are Christ's at his coming. Then cometh the end, when he shall have delivered up the kingdom to God, even the Father. For he must reign until he hath put all enemies under his feet. The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death." If after the manner of men I have fought with beasts at Ephesus, what advantage to me, if the dead rise not?" It would be a great advantage if he went to heaven at death. "Now, this I say, brethren, flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God." When will they inherit the kingdom of God? "When the Son of God shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory. Then shall the King say unto them on his right hand, Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you." Matt. xxv. 31. Also we look for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body. For what is our hope, or joy, or crown of rejoicing? Are not even ye in the presence of our Lord Jesus Christ at his coming?" 1 Thes. ii. 19. "And to you who are troubled rest with us, when the Lord Jesus Christ shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels." 2 Thes. i. 7. "And the Lord direct your hearts in the love of God and into the patient waiting for Christ." 2 Tim. iv. 1-8. "I charge thee before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and kingdom. Preach the Word." Therefore the day of judgment and kingdom will not be at death, but at the first resurrection. "Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Judge shall give me at that day; and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing." Will not that appearing be lovely? What does Titus say? "For the grace of that bringeth salvation hath appeared to all men, teaching us, that denying ungodliness, and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously, and godly, in this present world, looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God, and our Savior Jesus Christ." The angels, says Paul to the Hebrews, are ministering spirits sent forth to minister to them who shall be heirs of salvation." Now, we can become heirs of salvation, but cannot become inheritors until the second advent. How shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation." Says Paul (Hebrews ii. 3); so Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many, and unto them that look for him, shall he appear the second time unto salvation. When Christ who is our life shall appear then shall ye also appear with him in glory." Col. iii. 4.

Let us look at the prophets of the old Book. "And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul." Was he an immortal soul? So he drove out the man from the garden and placed a flaming sword to keep the way of the tree of life, lest man should become an immortal sinner. The living soul of Adam was the man himself, and mortal because he died; and nothing said about his going to heaven. So David slept with his fathers, and was buried in the City of David. It is said of nearly all the kings of Israel that they slept with their fathers. David says, "As for me, I will behold thy face in righteousness, I shall be satisfied when I awake with thy likeness." Ps. x. 11. "Break forth into joy, sing together ye waste places of Jerusalem: For the Lord hath comforted his people, he hath redeemed Jerusalem. The Lord hath made bare his holy arm in the eyes of all the nations. All the ends of the earth shall see the salvation of our God." Isaiah, "Thy dead men shall live, with my dead body shall they arise. Awake and sing ye that dwell in dust: for thy dew is as the dew of herbs, and the earth shall cast out the dead." Isaiah, "In those days, Hezekiah was sick unto death, and Isaiah, the prophet, came unto him and said, Set thine house in order, for thou shalt die and not live." If that solemn message had been carried out, would he have lived? Isa. xxviii. 18, says, "The grave cannot praise thee, death cannot celebrate thee, they that go down into the pit cannot hope for thy truth." Isa. xxvi. 19, "Thy dead men shall live, with my dead body shall they arise. Awake and sing, ye that dwell in dust, for thy dew is as the dew of herbs, and the earth shall cast out the dead." These are words of the first resurrection.

"And many of those that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to everlasting life, and some to shame and everlasting contempt." Psa. xi. 15. "I will behold thy face in righteousness, I shall be satisfied when I awake with thy likeness." Psa. xlvii. 1. God breathed into Adam's nostrils the breath of life, and he became a living not an immortal soul, and that soul lived 930 years and the soul died. No immortal soul is found in the Old Testament or New. We read in Joshua x. 28, that he smote several cities, and destroyed all the souls therein with the edge of the sword. The Psalmist says, "Put not your trust in princes, nor in the son of man, whom there is no help." "His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth: in that very day his thoughts perish." Psa. cxlvi. "For the grace of God that bringeth salvation hath appeared to all men teaching us, that denying worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously, etc., looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ." Titus ii. 11, 12, 13. It is said of David and Solomon and nearly all the kings of Israel that they slept with their fathers. "And at that time shall Michael, the great prince, stand up for the children of thy people, and a time of great trouble, etc. And many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to everlasting life, and some to shame and endless contempt.

"The Decalogue Abrogated."

Editor Restitution:

This is the title of an article I copy from Our Hope. It seems to me the arguments and the Scripture used is irrefutable, showing that the ten commandments under this gospel dispensation, that is, since the kingdom of heaven is preached, is imperfect, and not applicable under the New Covenant. I desire to see it printed in The Restitution.

M. L. Adams.

"The foundation on which those who keep Saturday as the Sabbath base their claim for its observance is the 'fourth commandment' of the decalogue. God first spoke the words of the decalogue with an audible voice from heaven in the hearing of Israel as they were assembled about Mount Sinai. He afterwards wrote them upon tables of stone and delivered them to Moses to be given to the children of Israel, to be observed by them for a perpetual covenant. Hence they tell us they are just as binding now as they were when given. If this is so, and the ten commandments as a code of laws, by virtue of their having been thus given by God, are still in force, then those who keep Saturday as 'The Sabbath of the Lord' are doing right, and we are without excuse who do not keep it, for no one will deny that Saturday is the Seventh day of the Jewish week. These commandments, after being spoken by the Lord, were written, with other 'statutes and judgments,' in a book, by Moses, who, it is said, 'wrote all the words of the Lord.' He then 'took the book of the covenant and read in the audience of the people: and they said, All that the Lord hath said will we do and be obedient.' Then Moses took blood and sprinkled it on the people and said, Behold the blood of the covenant, which the Lord hath made with you concerning all these words.' Ex. xxiv. 4-8. However, it is that part of the words that was afterward written on the stone tables that we desire now to consider.

Paul informs us that the first covenant was imperfect or faulty, and it was therefore superceded by the second covenant. He says: 'If the first covenant had been faultless, then should no place have been sought for the second.' Also, 'In that he saith, A new covenant, he hath made the first old.' Heb. viii. 7-13.

I propose now to prove that the commandments as written on the tables of stone, and especially the fourth commandment, contain that which is imperfect or faulty, which imperfections are entirely and forever left out of the new covenant. The Apostle says, 'If a covenant be confirmed, no man disannulleth or addeth thereto,' Gal. iii. 15. He was arguing that when once made and confirmed it could not be altered; no one could add to it, or take from it, but it must stand or fall in its entirety. So with the covenant under consideration; if one part is annulled or rendered void, the whole must necessarily be void, and only so much of that covenant is now binding as has been incorporated into the new and 'better covenant,' and that part is binding, not because it was of the old covenant, but because it is a part of the new one.

The first fault to which I call attention is that its penalties were inherited: the punishment for breaking the law was to be inflicted not only upon the actual transgressor, but also upon his posterity. On the stone tables it was written, 'I the Lord thy God am a jealous God, visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation of them that hate me.' Ex. xx. 5. We have numerous instances in the Lord's subsequent dealings with that people where this principle was carried out; but we only refer as an illustration to the case of Daniel. He was carried into captivity, not for his own sin—for even in captivity he was true and loyal to God, and would not defile himself with the king's meat—but for the sins of his people. It was from this statement of the Lord that the Jews deduced the proverb, 'the fathers have eaten sour grapes, and the children's teeth are set on edge.' Eze xviii. 2. This, surely, is not in accordance with new covenant principles. Moreover, the Lord declared by the prophet Jeremiah, that he would remedy this fault: 'In those days they shall no more say, 'The fathers have eaten sour grapes and the children's teeth are set on edge: but every one shall die for his own iniquity, every man that eateth the sour grapes his teeth shall be set on edge. Behold the days come, saith the Lord, that I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel and the house of Judah.....I will put my law in their inward parts, and in their heart will I write them." Jer. xxxi. 29-34, R V. In the eighth chapter of Hebrews, Paul quotes this passage and applies it to the new and 'better covenant' which was established upon better promises, and should supercede the old one. The 'first' was written on the tables of stone, and in the blood-sealed book of the covenant, but the second is written upon the hearts of all who come into the covenant relation with God through Jesus, the Mediator.

The second fault, however, is found in the very heart of the fourth commandment itself—it recognizes human slavery. Don't be startled, dear reader. I have made the above statement, I think, after careful consideration. I will even go a step further, and say, that while the fourth commandment was in force it was just as legitimate to buy and hold in bondage human souls as it was to buy and own cattle and sheep. In Ex. xx. 10, we read, 'But the seventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God: in it thou shalt not do any work, thou, nor thy son, nor thy daughter, thy man-servant, nor thy maid-servant, nor thy cattle, nor thy stranger that is within thy gates.' Here, 'thy man-servant' and 'thy maid-servant' are sandwiched in between the children and the cattle, recognizing one to be as legitimate property as the other, and property that the owner should not require or permit to work.

We now proceed to consider who these servants were, whether they were hired-servants or bond-servants. We have only to examine the next chapter to have the matter settled. In Ex. xxi. 2-7, we read: 'If thou buy a Hebrew servant, six years he shall serve: and in the seventh he shall go out free for nothing.' This liberty was only required to be given to the Hebrew servant. 'If his master gave him a wife and she bear him sons or daughters: the wife and her children shall be her master's, and he shall go out by himself.' Here is perpetual bondage for the wife and children and their posterity. 'If the servant shall plainly say, I love my master, my wife, and my children; I will not go free. Then his master shall bring him to the judges; he shall also bring him to the door, or unto the door post: and his master shall bore his ear through with an awl; and he shall serve him forever. And if a man sell his daughter to be a maid-servant she shall not go out as the men-servants do.' Here we learn that the men-servants and maid-servants were bought and sold. And these are the very classes that are recognized as legitimate property in the Sabbath commandment. Is traffic in human souls a legitimate business under the covenant provisions of him who gave himself a ransom for all, and who has declared, 'All ye are brethren,' and, 'Whosoever the Son makes free is free is free indeed?' No, no! A thousand times no! In the moonlight and among the shadows of the old covenant, where the seventh day Sabbath law is found, these things abounded; but under the bright shining of the great 'Light that shineth in darkness.' John i. 5. These shadowy forms of darkness have all and forever disappeared. Amen and amen."

Questions and Answers.

Some time since, my correspondent, J. B. Lent, requested an answer to some questions, to which I responded. He now makes further enquiry, and offers some suggestions. He says: "I am free to admit that I made a mistake when I said that the resurrection took place under the opening of the sixth seal. I should have said under the sixth seal, and before the seventh seal opens."  "I would also point Bro. Wilson to the fact of the resurrection being under the sixth seal and before the seventh seal opens."

It will be noticed that my correspondent in his criticism, has twice placed the resurrection "under the sixth seal, and before the seventh opens." I now call attention to another statement he has made, with regard to the time of the resurrection. He says: "I am aware that Paul says that the resurrection takes place at the last trump, but is that the seventh trump or some other trump altogether?"

QUESTION.

Why don't you accept what you say you are aware Paul teaches? How can the resurrection be "under the sixth seal, and before the seventh opens," and also at the "last trump," as in above quotation, if the seals and trumpets occupy different periods of time, one succeeding the other?

When are the living and dead raised and judged? See 2 Tim. iv 1: "I charge thee therefore before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and kingdom." When will that be? See Rev. xi. 15-18: "And the SEVENTH ANGEL SOUNDED; and there were great voices in heaven, saying, the kingdoms of this world, are become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of his Christ: and he shall reign forever and ever.  And the nations were angry, and thy wrath is come, and the TIME of the DEAD that they should be JUDGED, and that thou shouldst give reward unto thy servants the prophets, and to the saints, and them that fear thy name."

Now, if all this previously took place "under the sixth seal, and before the seventh opens," how comes it to be also located at the "seventh trump," if they are entirely different periods of time?

If the sixth seal brings us to the resurrection, and the commencement of the blessed millennial age, and then have the trumpets, woes, and vials of wrath, string along afterward, each succeeding the other, pray tell us where can all the terrible things they speak of, find a place in that blessed age of peace?

Apart from the above, my correspondent asks another question, he says: "I take it from some of Bro. Wilson's remarks at times past that he holds with the Romish and Protestant Churches, that the Lord's day that John says he was in the Spirit, was Sunday, or first day of the week, am I right in this Bro. Wilson?"

You are not right. That day is a period of time still in the future. I don't see where my correspondent ever picked up such a notion. No writings of mine can be produced to show it.

W. H. Wilson.

Our Duty to Each Other

It is not uncommon for those who profess to be of the "One Body" in different places and calling themselves by different names,—and entirely estranged from each other, having no care or sympathy. Yet it is written "God hath tempered the Body together that there should be no schism, but the members should have the same care for one another; and whether one member suffers, all the members suffer with it, or, one member be honored, all the members rejoice with it. It may be some of you are saying, "I cannot remedy this." But mistake not,—had such an one desired and attempted it, as much as lieth in him it would be remedied. Perhaps you may meet a brother who thinks you take no interest in him, because you differ with him in judgment,—then seek to convince him that you do take an interest in him, by some little acts of love, or by being at least kindly affectioned toward him as a brother toward a brother.—and, if done for Jesus' sake, because such an one belongs to Christ, our Lord will accept the smallest service. Christ proved his love by his service; it cost him his life. Let not ours be inactive love; but may we seek opportunities of serving the brethren. "Be steadfast, immovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord," and in "due season we shall reap if we faint not."

Report.

Editor Restitution:

I want to say to the brethren of like precious faith, that the brethren here at Gordon, Neb., have been made to rejoice through a visit from Brother and Sister Courtney. Brother C. H. Shultz has also visited us and held a two weeks meeting. The attendance was small, but we are thankful that a few are not tied up so with the attractions of the world but what they can listen to the gospel of the kingdom of God, and we are also glad to know that one young man and wife decided to come out on the Lord's side, and were buried with him by baptism into his death, that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so they should walk in newness of life. In the evening we assembled at Brother C. H. Watkins' home and partook of the emblems of the broken body and shed blood of our Savior.

This meeting has been the means of bringing together a few of God's children who are in harmony with the first principles of the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ, and who are looking for eternal life through the Life Giver. The meeting closed April 3rd. Much good has been done in many ways, the seed of the gospel has been well sown, our heavenly Father only knows when and where. Paul planted, Apollos watered and God gave the increase. "Ye that make mention of the Lord keep not silence." Brother Shultz has planted, others may water, but God will give the increase. We have been built up spiritually and scripturally, the meetings have benefited each and every one, and we have felt that it was good to be there. We feel assured the Lord is with us although we had much opposition from the same class of people who persecuted our Lord and Master. He said, "If they persecute me they will persecute you." Also, they can only persecute with their tongues, but God will make it abound to his honor and glory. It will be the means of making others see how we stand on the Word of God. We regret the departure of Brother Shultz. If he could have remained longer we feel sure that some of the outside prejudice could be rubbed off. Our prayers and love go with him, and if we do not meet again here, may we all meet in the kingdom. Brothers and Sisters, pray for this young brother and sister, that they may be able to overcome the evils that surround them and stand pure and shining before the Savior when he comes Your Sister, in the cause of Christ.

Our Love Feast.

Dear Restitution:

I thought I would write a few lines this morning, as I love to read the letters in our dear old paper, and to hear from those whose faces I have never seen in this world, but truly believe if faithful to God and his written Word I shall see them in the world to come, where we shall know them as they are known, and to those that we know and have learned to love them for their many good Christian graces and devotions to him that they have chosen to serve fearless of the contempt of the world. May each and every one of you earnestly contend for the holy faith a little longer, don't get weary in well doing, for if we faint not we shall receive that great reward that has been promised—eternal life. Oh, who can comprehend the gift that is offered to the overcomers? Earth in its present state seems gloomy with its burdens of sin and death, when cleansed from all these evils, and Christ our life shall come and rule and reign in righteousness, how changed will be our surroundings and our lives. I trust that each one of us that have taken his precious name upon us may not fail to get in his kingdom and help to put down all evils, for we are brought face to face with the evils that would come in the last days of Gentile times. Dear brothers and sisters, in writing for our paper how careful should each one be, not to use words that do not look well in a Christian paper. I saw some in our last of March, that I do not love to see. For those that we are striving to get to learn the truth as it is in Christ.

Your Sister,
M. E. KNOWLES.

Dear Household of Faith:

I feel like saying a few words (although a little late) for our love feast. In my judgment it is a grand privilege that we have to express our thoughts from time to time through our good old tried and true medium, THE RESTITUTION, which to my mind comes as near teaching what the prophets have spoken by the command of the All-wise, since the world began. I wish it god-speed and hope to be able to take it through this age, or the remainder of my short life, but prefer the former a thousand times. I know this is the same old thought, as a few of our brethren say. The love feast has nothing new, but refers to the same old thoughts from time to time. Probably a few modern, up-to-date thoughts would not be out of place here that I heard expressed on the streets a short time since as the average so-called pedestrian confronted me, Are you going to the show to-night? There is going to be a great pony and dog show, I would not miss it for anything. They have the smallest horse on earth, only weighs eighty-five pounds; and the largest dog that ever ate liver. Well. The parade is on, music fills the air, all is excitement, about all the children of the town are in the wake, most of the grown people: all traders neglect business for the time being, to see the grand horse and a few dogs, and fifty per cent or more goes to the entertainment. This is only one little attraction among the tens of thousands of worldly amusements and religiously so-called. Oh, ye thinkers of the world that cannot penetrate the wisdom of Almighty Power, who can turn the worlds in a balance, and crush nations at a single blow, penetrate old ocean's depths, bring to our face all hidden things, in one infinite thought, answer all the prayers of the faithful from Abel down to the end of the age, wipe the curse from the face of the earth, cause all tears and sorrow to cease, redeem man from the power of death, and establish a kingdom that spans the cycles of eternity, whose righteous laws shall govern the earth as the waters cover the sea and an eternity of happiness and pleasure in store for those that form a character in harmony with his glorious plan of salvation. Dear brethren, the same old thought, it is the father of thoughts to me. The first thing when I receive THE RESTITUTION is, has any brother or sister written about the coming of our blessed Savior? There cannot be a wheel turned in the execution of God's plan until the presence of our elder Brother, so all true believers pray for the number to be completed so we can realize the grand privilege of subduing the nations with Jesus, King of kings and Lord of lords. Why, dear brethren, this is the flame that has kept me in rank for the past twenty-five years, and I have never had a place to worship in, with the exception of about three years in that time. How we would like to have a church to attend the balance of our short lives to train our sweet babe in the true way. We cannot trust to those great walls of modern wisdom, so we will trust to our kind and loving Father to prepare a way for the called-out ones, and may we be always found ready to embrace the glorious opportunity. May the good Lord keep us and at last administer to us all an abundant entrance into his everlasting kingdom is my prayer,

J. C. VENABLE.

Editor Restitution:

I thank God that I am yet in the land of the living. I am a sister of A. J. Eychaner, the Evangelist of Iowa. I am seventy-five years old. My desire is to live till the Life Giver comes. This world has no more attraction for me, my mind, my hope, my all, is on the things of the kingdom, and evidence is growing brighter that we are nearing the time of the coming of our King. Let us be faithful in the service of our Master, and let not anything take our attention from him. If we lose a place in the kingdom, we lose all. Let us watch and pray. Yours, ever in the one hope.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending THE RESTITUTION to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the donors request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trustworthy.

Kansas and Missouri Conference Work.

At our annual conference Sept. 4, 1898, there was reported as having been preached in that year upwards of 140 discourses and twelve baptisms. A good interest was reported at the different points visited, which would not have been had no effort been made by the conference. This is a very good showing, considering the disadvantage under which the work was done. It shows what can be done by united effort. This gives us hope and encouragement for the future, so we are arranging to commence this year's tent campaign about June 15th, or as soon thereafter as the weather will permit. Brethren, let us push the work. There is only one thing to hinder doing more for the Master's cause this year than last, and that is your indifference, or neglect. We know that you love the truth, and desire to see the gospel preached. We cannot all preach but all can give a little, if it is only a quarter don't be afraid to send it along. Let us work while it is day for the night cometh when no man can work. The nations are hastening to the call of the prophet, "Prepare war, wake up the mighty men." Turkish with all the young lions thereof are making themselves ready. He of the north quarter is making ready. Brethren, the conflict is impending, do you not hear the tread of the mighty host as they are marching to the great battle of decision? Are we using our talent, or, are we like the servant whom his master deprived of all he had? The Master is coming, let us proclaim it to perishing men, and show our faith by our works, for, faith without works is dead, without a live faith no crown of life. Now brethren, you who desire to help in the work, send in your contribution to the treasurer, P. H. Outman, care of Nave & McCord, St. Joseph, Mo. If you cannot send the money now, send a pledge, with a statement when you can pay it. A report of the work will be given from time to time. A word of encouragement or suggestion on the line of work will be thankfully received.

For the committee,
A. W. DARBY, Sec'y.

Evangelizing Tour to Southern Oregon.

I expect to be in the extreme southern part of Oregon to begin meetings per arrangements of Bro. Merit Elliott, on the 13th of May, at Central Point on the Southern Pacific R. R. If any brethren near that place, or on that R. R. wish my labors in a series of meetings during this trip, please correspond with me at Scholls, Ore.

An Appeal.

To the Brethren of Missouri and Kansas, and to all others interested in our work:

The Missouri-Kansas Conference Board have employed me as Evangelist, and to go with their tent the coming season, which will open up the last half of May. For this work we will need money. This will have to be made up by donations and by collections upon the field where we go. Will all in these States, and elsewhere who desire to assist in the work send to us at Bentrice, Neb., and to A. W. Darby, secretary of the board, Mound City, Mo., the amount you will contribute, and send the money to the treasurer, P. H. Outman, care Nave & McCord, St. Joseph, Mo. Give us your name and the amount you can possibly give for the work at an early date, that we may know how to arrange our tent work. Let every brother and sister donate to this work, however small the amount may be. Make us a pledge. We are commanded to sound out the Word. Paul wrote, "It is more blessed to give than to receive; and to give as the Lord has prospered you, preach the Word. Go ye into all the world and preach, and go ye, disciple all nations." To do this it requires money. Let us have a liberal response, and a good work done.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertized in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended to.

President Harper, of the University of Chicago, makes this month's contribution to the discussion of the educational question which The Cosmopolitan magazine has been conducting during the past two years. The Cosmopolitan's title, "Modern College Education—Does it Educate to the Broadest and Most Liberal Sense of the Term?" is not used as President Harper's theme. He confines himself rather to the consideration of the relations which universities bear to our republic and to the people. President Harper is one of the men who seem to desire to take broad and liberal views of the subject of education.

Lift Me Up.

Out of myself, dear Lord,
O, lift me up!
No more I trust myself in the slim maze
Sufficient to myself in all its devious ways;
I trust no more, but humbly at thy throne,
Pray, "Lead me, for I cannot go alone."

Out of my weary self,
O lift me up!
I faint, I fall while I make speed. Still the way
Each night but ends another weary day.
Give me thy strength and may I be so blest
As on "the heights" to find the longed-for rest.

Out of my selfish self,
O lift me up!
To live for others and in living so
To be a life-long wherever I go.
To give the sunshine and the clouds conceal,
Or let them but the silver clouds reveal.

Out of my lonely self,
O, lift me up!
Though other hearts with love are running o'er
Though dearness fill my lonely home no more.
Though every day I miss the loved caress,
Help me to join in others' happiness.

Out of my doubting self,
O, lift me up!
Help me to feel that thou art always near,
Although 'tis night and all around seems fear;
Help me to know that though I cannot see,
It is my Father's hand that leads the me.

Pulpit Echoes from Park Hill.

"Thy Kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth as it is in heaven." Matt. vi. 10.

1. The kingdom contemplated in our text is a divine government for the children of men. God alone has the right to exact and give laws. Man has usurped this right and is vainly trying to govern his fellows. This has led to the formation of two classes, rulers, and those who are ruled. The laws made by the rulers, are often arbitrary and unjust. The arrogated power is abused and misrule and tyranny are the results.

God in the beginning gave man a charter of his rights which was to "have dominion over the fish of the sea and over the fowl of the air, and over the cattle, and over all the earth" but the right to rule his fellows or to govern his brother was not a part of this grant. Since sin entered the world, and the curse has fallen, man has endeavored to set aside that part of the penalty of earning his bread by labor and is endeavoring to control the labor of another to satisfy his own requirements.

During all the ages the drones in the human hive have lived and fattened upon the labor of workers. These rulers have grasped the power of law and by manipulations wondrous in their ingenuity have managed to form systems of control of the laboring classes, which systems they call governments.

These man-made governments are not in harmony with God's original purpose. God is the law-maker and ruler or Lord, and while many of these governments formally acknowledge God, they hold on to the rulership with a relentless and ever tightening grasp, and hold down the ignorant and poor by weights which are seldom rolled off.

The world needs today a better government than man can give it. The burdens of the people are heavy. Like Israel in Egypt they cry to God by reason of their task-masters. They want a better kingdom and turning to the only source of help they earnestly pray to God "Thy kingdom come."

Here then, is a kingdom petitioned for. As men's needs are real, so the kingdom they seek is a real kingdom. They ask for deliverance from earthly governments. Jesus knew the secret causes of the troubles of the poor and those under forced authority. He knew the yearnings of the heart whose labors only enriched another. He recognized how the rights of men were trampled upon and that their wages was taken by fraud and framed the prayer to meet their needs.

2. This petition is for a divine kingdom. They do not desire a change of human authority, but a change from human to divine authority. They ask for God's kingdom. They pray for a complete change of authority so that God's will may be done where now evil men hold sway.

3. So then the kingdom petitioned for is not only a real kingdom, an actual bonafide government, but it is also a government of righteousness. God will do right. His laws will be just. His kingdom will bring peace and happiness and contentment and loyalty to all his subjects. Taxation will cease. Combines and trusts to oppress and take advantage of the poor will no longer afflict mankind. Behold a king shall reign in righteousness and princes shall rule in judgment. We do not wonder that John cried out "Come Lord Jesus, and come quickly."

4. The child of God asks for this divine government because it is promised. Since greed and selfishness has taken away the earnings of the poor and perversion in government has taken away man's rights in many things the star of hope has arisen and God has sketched upon the map of the heavens the prophecy of divine things. Daniel unrolls the chart of time and on it we may read the destiny of nations and the coming of this kingdom of God. for "In the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed, and it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand forever." James caught a glimpse of this divine reign when he exclaimed "Hearken my beloved brethren, hath not God chosen the poor, rich in faith, and heirs of the kingdom which he hath promised to those who love him."

There is this comforting thought in relation to this kingdom, that it is to come to the poor, yet faithful child of God. Riches are necessary to heirship God remembers the worthy poor, and is pleased to promise them a place in his kingdom, associated with his beloved Son. Christ will be King of kings and Lord of lords. Oh the moral beauty and grandeur of that age when God will place his King upon his holy hill and give him the uttermost parts of the earth for his possession, Psa. ii. 6-8. When he shall judge his people with righteousness and the poor with judgment. When this great King shall redeem the poor from deceit and violence and when all kings shall bow before him and all nations serve him. Then will dawn that era of glory so long foretold by sacred love when men shall be blessed in him and all nations shall call him blessed.

I want to tell you this morning that the hope of an inheritance in the coming kingdom rests upon many wonderfully glowing and soul stirring promises. Daniel says, "The kingdom and dominion and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High." Dan. vii. 27. Jesus answered his disciples that when he shall come and sit upon the throne of his glory that he will say to those upon his right hand, "Come ye blessed of my Father inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." Matt. xxv. 33. And again, to encourage the struggling churches he says, "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne." Rev. iii. 21. Blessed promise. Blessed kingdom. Blessed King, come and reign. The kingdom is thine. Thou hast been appointed heir of all things. The Lord God has promised thee the throne of David and thou shall reign over the house of Jacob forever and of thy kingdom there shall be no end. Luke i. 32, 33.

5. This kingdom which I have described and over which Messiah shall be King, and with whom the saints will be associated in power and blessing is in harmony with the needs of mankind. A better government is needed among all the nations of the earth. A strong government. A government of righteousness. A government not "of the people" nor "by the people" but a government for the people by the Lord himself. The history of six thousand years has demonstrated the need of this kingdom for which we pray in our text. Divine wisdom foresaw this need and taught us to lisp this prayer. The oppressed and wronged and martyred dead of the ages are calling from the dust. come, Lord Jesus, come, and take thy kingdom and reign.

6. The establishment of a kingdom here on earth by the Lord Jesus to bless the world is in harmony with the Bible doctrine of his second coming. His coming again is so often referred to, that no one will in this day of light question the thought. But why should he come? What work has he before him then? The only answer that can be given, is that he comes to give a reward to his faithful ones and to bless the nations. This reward cannot be given until the dead are raised and the chosen medium of Divine blessing to mankind is the kingdom of God.

7. Again the establishing of the kingdom is in harmony with the idea of the first resurrection.

The saints must be raised first that they may be used as God's great judicial and executive body to rule the living nations—to school them—to ameliorate—to discipline them and raise them up to the higher or spiritual plain. Christ will not rule the world alone. The church is never spoken of in the future as being ruled over, but as being rulers, kings and priests, hence I repeat, it is fitting that they should be raised first and given power over the nations, in order that the functions of divine government might reach and bless mankind to the ends of the earth.

8. Let me call your attention to one more reason why a real kingdom should be established under the reign of Jesus and the saints—it is in harmony with the mission of the gospel.

The gospel is a proclamation of the coming kingdom. Jesus began his mission by stating that a kingdom was due and that men should reform and believe the gospel. His gospel was the good news of a divine government. It was an invitation to inherit a kingdom. It was a call to many out of which a few might be chosen as his body politic, to be kings and priests and reign with him on the earth.

That kingdom is now nigh at hand. A few more called out by the gospel and the cabinet will be complete. Now is the time to make our calling and election sure. Soon the angels will be sent to gather the elect. Let us be faithful and as we watch and wait let us ever pray, "Thy kingdom come, thy will be done in earth as it is in heaven."

Trine Immersion. No. 1.

What is it? Three immersions. Why three? It is urged by a body of well meaning people that because Jesus said to his Apostles, "Go and teach all nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit," etc., therefore there must be three immersions of the candidate for baptism, so as to be baptized into three names. I do not doubt the good intentions of those making this claim, but am not nearly convinced of the reasonableness of this position. I shall endeavor to prove from the Scriptures that there is only one name (only referred to; not mentioned here) in which men can be saved, and the Apostles whom the Lord commissioned to announce the glad tidings and to immerse believing ones, baptized only into one name—that of "the Lord Jesus Christ." Wherever baptism is mentioned in "the Acts of the Apostle," which I believe to be a faithful record of some of the Acts" of duly commissioned and divinely inspired men, when a name is spoken of it is the name of Jesus Christ, and in no instance upon record are three names mentioned.

Will the attentive reader please turn to the 4th chapter of Acts, beginning at the 7th verse and read the question directed to Peter and John by the rulers and elders and scribes, relative to the restoration of the lame man: "By what power, or in what name have ye done this? Peter's reply was that by the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, whom ye crucified, whom God raised from the dead, by him doth this man stand here before you whole. This is the stone which was set at nought by you builders, which is become the head of the corner. Neither is there salvation in any other, for there is NONE OTHER NAME UNDER HEAVEN GIVEN AMONG MEN, whereby we must be saved." Not three names, or two names, but one name and no other—the name of JESUS. Let the reader carefully bare this in mind. Also read in Heb. i. 4 about "the name more excellent" than that even of angels, and in Phil. ii. 9-11 of the "name which is above every name: that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow,..... and every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father. But let us turn to the first chapter of Matthew, where the angel as the Father's messenger, announces to Mary that the name of her wonderful child is to be "called JESUS, for he shall save his people from their sins." Now when the time was fulfilled Jesus was sent forth of the Father, and "preached the gospel of the kingdom of God." Mark i. 14, 15. He did not play the role of a self constituted teacher or prophet, but comes in his Father's name, as he repeatedly affirmed. "The Son can do nothing of himself, but what he seeth the Father do: for what things soever he doeth, these also doeth the Son likewise." John v. 19. "I am come in my Father's name, and ye receive me not." v. 43. "I am not come of myself." vii. 28; viii. 28, 42; xii. 49; xiv. 10. Also Deut. xviii. 18, 19. So also the works of the power which he did "The works that I do in my Father's name, they bear witness of me." x. 25. Then again, he also said that he had manifested his Father's name to the men whom the Father had given him; "And I have declared unto them thy name, and will declare it." John xvii. 6, 26. How could he more effectually declare the Father's name than by speaking his words and doing his will?

We must not take an isolated text in the New Testament, and try to suit it to our theory, or endeavor to substantiate an ill-founded claim by it: least of all to set up a doctrine upon one text. I do not wish to be understood that I disregard Matt. xxviii. 19, that I reject it, or anything of the kind, but I am bound to deny that there is in that passage a single iota of proof for a three fold immersion for baptism "into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit." Observe that the Lord did not say into the names in the plural, but name in the singular. Besides, is Father a name in this case, or Son, or Holy Spirit? Are not the terms Father and Son appellations that arise out of a relationship? But to revert to the declaration of Jesus, that he had come in his Father's name, that he did his mighty works in his name, and that he had manifested his name. What is the Father's name? Let us see what the Word says on this matter. "Holy and reverend is his name." Psa. cxl. 9.

This statement is to be understood undoubtedly as setting forth certain qualities of God's name, but not the name itself. Again, "Let them praise thy great and terrible name; for it is holy." Psa. xcix. 3. And further, "I will worship toward thy holy temple, and praise thy name for thy loving kindness and for thy truth; for thou hast magnified thy name above all thy Word." Psa. cxxxviii. 2. Also Matt. x. 5, "Hallowed be thy name." (Luther's translation).

We will now examine the Word to see how God has magnified his name by means of his Word." When Moses was commissioned by God to go to Pharaoh to demand the release of the children of Israel he said, "Who am I that I should go unto Pharaoh, and that I should bring forth the children of Israel out of Egypt?" And he urged that when he should say to the children of Israel, "The God of your fathers hath sent me unto you," they would ask, "What is his name?" and enquired of God, "What shall I say unto them? And God said unto Moses: I AM THAT I AM: and he said thus shalt thou say.....I AM hath sent me unto you. And God says moreover unto Moses, Thus shalt thou say unto the children of Israel, Jehovah the God of your fathers, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob, hath sent me unto you: This is my name forever, and this is my memorial to all generations." Ex. iii. 13-15. Notice, here God is speaking of his own absolute, underived existence (v. 14), but in the next verse Moses is to say, "Jehovah, the God of your fathers." The meaning of Jehovah is, "He who is." "The Existing One." In the one verse God himself speaks, from the standpoint of his own independent existence; but his name to the children of Israel is Jehovah—He who is. This was to be his name among them "unto all generations."

Upon another occasion "God spake unto Moses and said unto him, I am JEHOVAH (margin): And I appeared unto Abraham, unto Isaac, and unto Jacob by God Almighty, but by my name JEHOVAH was I not known unto them." Ex. vi. 2, 3. This, then, is the Father's name. And among the Israelites he alone was to be known by this name. "That men may know that thou, whose name alone is JEHOVAH, art the most high over all the earth." Psa. lxxxiii. 18. "Sing unto God, sing praises to his name: extol him that rideth upon the heavens by his name JAH (a contraction of Jehovah), and rejoice before him." Psa. lxviii. 4. See also Deut. xxviii. 58, and read "Jehovah" instead of "The Lord." Let them praise the name of the Lord (Jehovah): for his name alone is excellent." Psa. cxlviii. 13.

From these Scriptures we see that the Father's name is Jehovah, the Existing One, He who is, that this name alone is excellent, that it is even terrible, and glorious, and holy, and that it has been magnified above all by means of God's Word.

What is it to Confess that Jesus is the Son of God?

Many, perhaps, to glance at this question, would not think it necessary to believe more than the words express, but we will find that it implies much more, and must be understood before such a confession could intelligently be made. Let us turn to the 8th chapter of Acts, beginning with the 27th verse, we read, "Behold a man of Ethiopia, a eunuch of great authority under Candace, queen of the Ethiopians, who had charge of all her treasure, and had come to Jerusalem for to worship, was returning, and sitting in his chariot read Isaiah, the prophet. Then the Spirit said unto Philip, Go near and join thyself to this chariot. And Philip ran thither to him and heard him read the prophet Isaiah, and said, Understandest thou what thou readest? And he said, "How can I, except some man should guide me?" and he desired Philip that he would come up and sit with him. The place of the Scripture which he read was this,—he was led as a sheep to the slaughter; and like a lamb dumb before his shearer, so opened he not his mouth. In his humiliation his judgment was taken away: and who shall declare his generation? for his life is taken from the earth. And the eunuch answered Philip, and said, "I pray thee, of whom speaketh the prophet this? of himself, or of some other man?" Then Philip opened his mouth and began at the same Scripture, and preached unto him Jesus; and as they went on their way, they came unto a certain water: and the eunuch said, See, here is water; what doth hinder me to be baptized?" And Philip said, "If thou believest with all thine heart, thou mayest." And he answered and said, "I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God." And he commanded the chariot to stand still: and they went down both into the water, both Philip and the eunuch; and he baptized him."

We see by this account that before the eunuch confessed Jesus to be the Son of God, Philip preached to him, Jesus, from the prophets. Jesus himself said, "Search the Scriptures, for in them ye think ye have eternal life, and they are they which testify of me." We find Jesus also called the son of Abraham, the son of David, and to understand who Jesus is we must go back to Moses, and the prophets, as Jesus himself taught. We must understand his origin, nature, character, and mission. We find the first reference to him in Gen. iii., the promise of a Seed which should bruise the serpent's head; next we find the promise made to Abraham, that in thy Seed, meaning Christ. (Gal. iii. 16.) shall all the nations of the earth be blessed. We find this same promise made again to Isaac and Jacob, then to David, (2 Sam. vii. 12) "When thou shalt sleep with the fathers, I will set up thy Seed after thee, I will be his Father and he shall be my Son, thy throne shall be established forever," and through all the prophets we learn of this one who is to come a perfect representation of God, in mind, character, power and purpose; where he is to be born, how he is to be rejected, die, rise, and come again in glory, sit upon the throne of David, to order and establish his kingdom with judgment and justice, from henceforth, even forever.

We come down to the New Testament: we learn how God sent an angel to tell Mary, who was a descendant of David, that she should have a Son and should call his name, Jesus, and that he should be the Son of God (Luke i 35,) fulfilling what had been prophesied. We see how he was the Son of David through the flesh; his origin was in heaven, having been the Word with God, which by the power of God became flesh. He was human in nature, but divine in character, having come to fulfill his Father's purpose as to the earth and its inhabitants. We learn how God revealed that Jesus was his Son, not only to Mary and Joseph, but also to John the Baptist, who said, "I knew him not, but he that sent me to baptize with water, said unto me, 'Upon whom thou shalt see the Spirit descending and remaining on him, the same is he which baptizeth with the Holy Spirit, and I saw and bare record that this is the Son of God." It was also revealed to the shepherds and to Simeon who waited for the consolation of Israel, the Messiah. When Jesus asked his disciples, "Whom do you say that I am: and Simon Peter answered and said, 'Thou art Christ, the Son of God," and Jesus answered and said unto him, "Blessed art thou, Simon Bar-Jonah, for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father, which is in heaven; and then Jesus said, Upon this Rock will I build my Church, meaning that he was the Rock, the foundation of the Church, If this great truth that Jesus was truly and literally the Son of the living God, is the foundation how important it is to understand what it is to confess that Jesus is the Son of God, and it is only to those that know him, that he will give eternal life.

Hence, to confess that Jesus is the Son of God, we must believe and understand the gospel—the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, "With the heart man believeth unto righteousness, and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation." Whosoever shall confess that Jesus is the Son of God, God dwelleth in him, and he in God.

To fulfil faithfully the duties of your station; to use to the utmost the gifts of your ministry; to bear cruelly annoyances and trivial irritations as martyrs bore the pillory and stake; to find the one noble trait in people who try to molest you; to put the kindest construction on unkind words and acts; to love with the love of God even the unthankful and evil; to be content to be a fountain in a wild valley of stones, nourishing a few lichens and wild flowers, or now and again a thirsty sheep; and to do this always, and not for the praise of man, but for the sake of God—this makes a great life.—F. The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME XLVIII. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, APRIL 19, 1899. NUMBER 15.

Walter Tomlinson 20 Kinnaman St

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as co-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

"Concentration is the secret of strength."

"Man was made to be active, and he is never so happy as when he is employed. It is the idle man that is most miserable."

There is pleasure in contemplating good; there is greater pleasure in receiving good; but the greatest pleasure in doing good, which comprehends the rest."

Not merely in our solemn moods, or our grave occupations, but in ordinary actions, our moments of enjoyment, our eating and drinking, must we recognize and own the presence of God.

"That we are unprofitable servants is certain; but though unprofitable to God, we may be profitable to each other, which is one of the duties we have to perform, and one that we might be sure will give satisfaction to our Maker."

"We are not made to live alone. Even our communion with God must be through the fulness of life. There may be times when hermit isolation becomes a duty, as it may be a duty to cut off the right hand, or to pluck out the right eye; but it exhibits a mutilation, and not an ideal life."

Says a contemporary to workers, "See that you preach the gospel, not a gospel—the gospel. "The gospel is the power of God unto salvation, to every one that believeth." There are other gospels abroad today, which are the power of men unto condemnation—How true this is?

Bro. G. M. Myers has been employed by the Missouri-Kansas Conference Board to preach for them this season. He has severed all connection with the Evangelist, which is now issued as a monthly by Bro. Crowe of Iowa. Bro. Myers' appointments for the next few weeks will be at Oronoque, April 15-22, Traer April 22 to 20, Glasco May 20 to June 2, Huron June 3 to 10, Sycamore Springs June 20 to July 10, all in the State of Kan.

Notice is given in this paper of the death of "Grandma Woodward," the mother of Elder B. W. Woodward. It was not surprising considering her age, but when we visited at her home last June her mind was as clear as ever, and her joy that so much of her life had been spent in the service of the Lord, and her determination to continue steadfast to the end of the race, was an admonition to us all assembled there. She rests from her labor, and the work of her hands and head live on to cheer and encourage the left over ones. May we each emulate her in the sterling traits of her character, and live so as to meet her in the kingdom of God.

Little Sins.

We often feel impelled to say that God recognizes no graduated scale of sins. He can look upon sin with no degree of allowance, and yet we constantly find those who think little sins, and as the result, commit little sins without much compunction, apparently. The Apostle asks, "If God be for us, who can be against us?" The important question is, can God be for us if we live day after day in what we consider little sins? Does not this classification of sin come of the flesh? And does not the flesh frame its mind after the fashions of the world around? Does not the fact of known sin at all, prove at least, a divided affection, and more than one rule of life? If so, is this what God asks for when he says, not give me one of your hearts, or a part of your heart, but, "Give me thine heart?" If not, then it behooves us to consider the solemn truth uttered by the Lord Jesus in Matt. vi. 24, "No man can serve two masters." This is an infallible declaration. We may deceive ourselves that we can gratify the flesh just a little, and no harm will come of it; but the desire to do that little shows alienation of mind, that is only restrained by dread of consequences. Look at the Lord's words again, and it will be seen that if we divide our affection and think to retain somewhat of God's favor, we are wofully mistaken. For in spite of our double aims the Master has warned us that we are attempting the impossible. Two masters cannot be served. God cannot be deceived; let us not deceive ourselves, by attempting it, for in spite of profession to the contrary, we will hate the one and love the other. It is a solemn truth that when we love God and keep his commandments, we know we love the children of God, see 1 John v. 2. It is a solemn truth that if we love not our brother we abide in death. Can we call that a little sin which ends in death? 1 John iii. 14, 15. These are some of the commandments we must keep in order to receive what we ask of God. 1 John iii. 22.

God help us to put away all notions of little sins that we may serve him with full purpose of heart. Amen.

Waiting for Christ.

N. S. in Glad Tidings, says, "The brethren of Christ in their present attitude of waiting for him may be fitly represented as a woman waiting for her husband. Days before, may weeks, if the absence has been a long one, preparations are being made. Things done, and things left undone just as the case may be, ever keeping one thing in mind—the return of the loved one, and having everything as he would like to see it. As the time draws near the watchfulness and care increase. Each sound now causes a flutter of excitement. At times a shade of disappointment creeps in. He has not come. Why the delay? Still she watches and waits, keeping everything ready. Gradually midnight approaches. The watcher falls asleep, but is awakened suddenly by the well known footsteps. She rouses herself speedily. The first thought is one of anxiety. Is everything ready? Yes; she has worked and watched and waited. Happy are those servants whom their Lord when he cometh shall find so doing."

"Son of God, thy people shield,
Must we still thy absence mourn?
Let thy promise be fulfilled,—
Thou hast said, 'I will return.'
Gracious Master soon appear,
Quickly bring thy morning's light,
Then will cease the constant tear,
Hope be turned to joyful sight.

As a woman counts the days
Till her absent Lord she sees,
Longs and watches, weeps and prays,
So the church must long for thee
Come that we may see thee nigh;
Then the sheep shall feed in peace,
Hushed for ever trouble's sigh,
Sin and sorrow's triumph cease."

Invaluable Counsel.

"My Son, if thou wilt receive my words, and hide my commandments with thee, so that thou incline thine ear unto wisdom, and apply thine heart to understanding; yea, if thou criest after knowledge, and liftest up thy voice for understanding; if thou seekest her as silver, and searchest for her as for hid treasures, then shalt thou understand the fear of the Lord, and find the knowledge of God; for the Lord giveth wisdom; out of his mouth cometh knowledge and understanding. He layeth up sound wisdom for the righteous; he is a buckler to them that walk uprightly. He keepeth the paths of judgment, and preserveth the ways of his saints. Then shalt thou understand righteousness, and judgment, and equity; yea, every good path."

This is divine instruction throughout, no discount on it at all. How many valuable lessons it contains, and among them the following:—

1. Those who store up God's commands are inclined toward wisdom, and enlargement of mind. Or, as apostolically expressed, exercise their senses by using them.

2. That to reap the reward offered at the end of the above quotation, it is necessary to make whole hearted and strenuous efforts to know God. The example of those who in Colorado and the Klondike and South Africa, and Australia surmount all obstacles and dig for the precious metals, is held up to those who would know the fear of the Lord, and find the knowledge of God. And nothing could be clearer than that mere promiscuous or casual reading of the Scriptures is not the way to reach the sound wisdom laid up for the righteous. Those of such habits only skim the surface, and do not dwell upon divine ideas long enough to digest and assimilate them.

3. This Scripture teaches the same lesson as that taught by Paul in 1 Cor. ii. 14, where he says the natural or animal man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God: for they are foolishness unto him; neither can he know them." It is not in his power to know them. The artist must chemically prepare the plate before he puts it in the camera, or no impression will be made; so also is it in the spiritual realm. The natural mind has to be prepared to receive the things of the Spirit. It is not prepared miraculously,—the natural mind is first influenced on a natural principle. We mean by that, that love is the motive power of the gospel. God sends a loving message to man; and the love manifested therein begets love in him on natural principles, and induces faith in it, and the man is begotten of God, with the Word of Truth. And from that time forward, in proportion to his feeding and growth his capacity for the reception of things of the Spirit will increase, and so grow in God's favor. The passage first quoted, Prov. ii. 1-9, seems to teach just this. "He layeth up sound wisdom for the righteous." Being justified by faith which works by love, a man's mind is swallowed up of God's mind, and spiritually discerns the things of the Spirit.

"The Pope,"

Says Words of Life, "is no longer a temporal Sovereign, but he still dreams of the restoration of his lost dominion, and the Jesuits do not hesitate to join hands with anarchists, in the hope of destroying the Italian kingdom. This was amply proved in the public courts at the time of the riots at Florence and Milan last year. In Milan alone there were distributed some 60,000 copies of a card, having on one side the Pope's portrait, and on the other an address containing the following:—

'The Pope is King of kings and Lord of lords. He is above all temporal sovereigns. For the maintenance of his position, given him by Christ, he must be invested with temporal sovereignty, of which he has been sacrilegiously deprived. Though the Pope's temporal sovereignty is not an article of faith, yet it is so closely related to an article of faith, that those who do not work for its realization render themselves liable to eternal perdition.'"

The opium revenue is reported by the same magazine to be steadily declining, and says, "In 1881 its value was over eight million rupees. In 1897 it sank to under four millions. An Indian Missionary, who lately visited the district of Malwa, found that in eight years the amount produced had fallen from 40,000 chests to 20,000,—and this, not because a less area was under cultivation, but because the plants yield less juice. It seems as though, men having refused to abandon this iniquity, the hand of God is upon it, and he is about to destroy it. May it be so, but how much better for a nation called Christian to have acknowledged and abandoned the evil, and so saved the shame attending the refusal to walk the righteous path.

We see also that "Confession" is being largely discussed in England, by the public press. At Wellingborough two curates were found to have put improper questions, based upon the seventh commandment, to young people in confirmation classes, and an indignation meeting has been held to denounce such iniquity.

Is Jonah in Your Bible?

The following article over the signature of a Mr. Forrest E. Dager, is going the rounds of the press, and as we think it contains an important lesson for our readers we would like them to read it. It reads as follows:—

"The first evening of his vacation, a student sat in the parlor at home, conversing with his father, when the latter said: 'My son, how are they treating the old Bible at the university, these days?'

'They honor it just as they did in your college days, I imagine, father; at least, I have heard nothing to the contrary.'

'Do they still accept it in its entirety as the Word of God?'

'Yes' as far as I am aware.'

'They still believe in the Pentateuch and the whole of Isaiah, in Daniel and Revelation?'

'I think so.'

'Well, how about Jonah—do they still consider it an authentic narrative?'

'Jonah—why, I can't say that they do still cling to Jonah, father. Is Jonah in all editions of the Bible?'

'Certainly, my boy, and I shall be compelled to consider very seriously the question of your return to an institution that dares to repudiate any portion of the Word Divine.'

'But, father, are you sure that Jonah is in all modern editions of the Bible? Is it in yours?'

'Is it in mine? I assure you that no vestige of the sin of Jehoiakim could ever appear in my home. I want a whole Bible or none at all.'

'But, father, let me see the book of Jonah. Your earnest words have aroused my interest.'

The book was produced—the old copy the father had been reading for many years, every page in the Psalms, the gospels and the epistles soiled by frequent handling. But in vain they searched for Jonah. After turning over the leaves of the New Testament a number of times, the old gentleman repeated in order the names of the prophetic books, but still Jonah could not be found.

'Father,' said the young man, 'do not get angry, but come here.' As he spoke, he held the book under the light, and it was evident that the two leaves containing Jonah had been cut out with a sharp knife.

'Father, pardon me, but I cut those leaves three years ago, and yet you did not miss them. Now, father, was Jonah in your Bible?'

The father's face revealed a peculiar mental struggle, but he answered, 'I see it, my son, I am as bad as the higher critics. There has been no Jonah in my Bible for three years.'

Friend, how is it with you? You have been scorning Jehoiakim for using the knife upon the Word. You have no mercy for those who mutilated the dear old Book, but have you a whole Bible? Is Habakkuk in your edition? When did you read Nahum? Are you acquainted with Obadiah? A Bible neglected is a Bible mutilated."

Passing Events in the Light of Prophecy.

The United Service Gazette says, "The one great stumbling-block in the progress toward a more stable order of affairs in France is the Parisian's instinctive dislike to the existence of a united race of Frenchmen in their midst, who in all vicissitudes of good and evil fortune rejoice in the name of Hebrew, and the daily martyrdom of their race, which the teachings of history should have convinced their oppressors in Russia, France, and elsewhere can never be extirpated until the promises are fulfilled which will gather this scattered and oppressed people within the limits of their ancestral home. And this, be it observed, is not a private interpretation of obscure Scriptures; for, putting the Divine records aside, we see the Jews fulfilling their destiny by their own reading of the obligations of their law. No nation scattered throughout the world ever united as have the Jews in the race for one goal."

Russia, according to the London Times has caused another flutter of excitement. She insisted upon the revision of the Northern Railway Loan Contract. According to a telegram from Pekin, Britain renewed her emphatic declaration that the contract could not be altered, and undertook to assist China in aggression should be attempted in consequence of China's refusal to accede to Russia's protest. Russia withdrew her protest, and a threatened crisis was averted.

Italy and Belgium have followed the example of the other powers. Italy demanded a lease of the port and coaling-station of Sammun. Her Ambassador's dispatch has returned by the Tsung-li-Yamen, and the Ambassador has been recalled to Rome. The Belgian minister for foreign affairs stated in the Chamber that the Government had asked for territory for a Belgian settlement at Hankuow.

It is a strange spectacle to see the Great Powers of Europe watching like vultures the inevitable breakup of the celestial Empire.

The disarmament Conference to assemble at The Hague is looked forward to with considerable interest in England; and the Peace Crusade has been holding meetings in the large towns throughout the United Kingdom. Mr. Stead, the leading spirit, seems to have given up the idea of carrying on his crusade on the Continent.

The Scotsman says in regard to the Conference:—"Although the Peace Conference will have the good wishes of all the world, those who expect a large or immediate result from it appear to be laying up for themselves a store of disappointment."

We do not wonder the press is preparing to let the people down easy in view of the vast sums being expended in preparation for war by all the Powers which consider themselves Great. The First Lord of the British Admiralty has introduced the navy estimates for the coming year. Four new battleships and four new cruisers are to be built, and their guns are to be of the most powerful type. The battleships are to be of the most powerful ships afloat in any navy in the world. The cruisers are to be stronger than any now building in any country. Besides these, torpedo boat destroyers, sloops, and gunboats are to be built. There is to be an increase of over 4,000 men and boys. The total increase on the vote is £2,866,000, the gospels and the epistles soiled by and the total estimate £26,594,500, or $132,972,500.

The Scotsman commenting on this, says:—"This remarkable advance in the strength and cost of our sea defences follows hard upon the heels of an increase in the estimates for the current year over its predecessor, of £2,948,000 in money and 6340 in men. The sum which the country is expected to spend upon the naval services during the coming year reaches the enormous total of £26,594,500. In the year 1883-4 the charge was £10,720,000. In sixteen years of peace, therefore, naval expenditure has much more than doubled. It has kept growing at an average rate of a million a year. But in the year now running, and in the years soon to open, the annual rate of increase has risen to nearly three millions. Is this enormous development in the expense of the navy, implying as it does corresponding burdens and sacrifices on the part of the country, justified by the circumstances and the necessities of the times? Those who will question this are the visionaries who believe that in a world armed to the teeth, we can have peace without power, and who are willing to repose their trust and confidence in "the sweet reasonableness of Europe." In the present circumstances of the world and of the Empire, the crime would be in shrinking from proposing, or from bearing the burdens which the nation's duty and the nation's danger demand."

Morocco as a Danger Point.

Efforts of European Powers to Bride with Great Britain the control of the Strait of Gibraltar may lead to trouble.

Morocco is the one danger point in Africa and its possession may one day imperil the peace of Europe. The power that ultimately possesses Morocco will destroy just one-half of the effectiveness of Gibraltar and divided with Great Britain in the control of the gateway to the Mediterranean.

France is known to have designs upon Morocco, for it is necessary not only for the protection of the south coast of France but of Algiers.

Italy would like to sit as mistress of the shore that commands the Strait of Gibraltar, for it would be of inestimable value if she were involved in war with any of the States of northern Europe.

Germany has long held designs upon Morocco, for its possession would give the Kaiser an important influence in the Mediterranean, and make him almost an arbiter in any old world dispute that might arise.

Great Britain, for motives of safety, can never permit any other power to hold and fortify Morocco. Above all else Great Britain protects her shortest highway to India, and rather than see Morocco seized by any European power would promptly take up arms against combined Europe if necessary.

On the other hand, just as Great Britain would fight all Europe to prevent the cession of Morocco, just so would all Europe combine to prevent Great Britain taking possession of the strip of shore opposite Gibraltar.

Russia Clashes with England.

Opinion is steadily gaining ground in St. Petersburg that a conflict with Great Britain is inevitable in the near future.

St. Petersburg advices are pessimistic in regard to the prospects for peace. There is undoubtedly a pervading opinion in the Russian capital that sooner or later war must cause between Russia and Great Britain. And notwithstanding the Czar's proposal for general disarmament Russia is making the most stupendous preparations for a conflict.

Great Britain and Russia are rivals at three points in Asia—Persia, Afghanistan, and China. At all three points Russia is spending immense sums of money in laying the groundwork for future campaigns. Railroads have been constructed to the frontiers of Persia and Afghanistan, and Russian funds are extending these lines into the heart of these states. Extraordinary efforts are being made to complete the Trans-siberian railroad in order to expedite the forwarding of troops, munitions of war, and naval stores to Port Arthur.

If Great Britain and Russia cannot succeed in settling their Asiatic disputes by diplomacy and war must be resorted to, the great land battles of the conflict are almost certain to be waged in the mountain defiles of Afghanistan, for India would be the first point of attack. Great Britain has 75,000 troops on the southern frontier of Afghanistan, while Russia has an equal number on the northern frontier. Both nations can throw an army into Afghan territory within a few days or a few hours even after the declaration of war.

On the sea the conflict would extend from the Baltic half way round the world, for the British navy would strike at every exposed bit of Russian territory. Port Arthur would unquestionably be at the mercy of the British fleet after a single naval Battle, for Russia is overmatched in Chinese waters.

If war ever comes between Great Britain and Russia—and the government of the two powers are unquestionably striving to avert war, thus proving its danger—three important naval battles may be expected within a few days after a declaration. A British fleet will crush the Baltic squadron at a single blow. Russia will endeavor to bring her Black Sea squadron through the Dardanelles, where it will find the British Mediterranean fleet in waiting, and the British fleets at Hongkong and Wei-Hai-Wei will immediately engage the Russian warships at Port Arthur.

Obituary.

Margaret Haskin was born in Saratoga Co., N. Y., Oct. 11, 1807; was married to Daniel Woodward in the winter of 1823, being at that time but a few weeks past her sixteenth birthday. They moved to Michigan in 1845 and the year following purchased and moved on the farm which was ever after their home till death came. They were in the true sense of the term "pioneers." She was the mother of eleven children, only three of which survive her, viz: Geo. W., Sarah C. and B. W. She died at the residence of her son B. W., April 8, 1899, of pneumonia of the lungs, after an illness of ten days, being in the 92nd year of her age. Ever of a religious and devoted turn of mind she early united with the Methodist church, but under the teachings of Eld. O. R. L. Crozier and Edwin Hoyt she embraced the Gospel of the Coming Kingdom of Christ, and was baptized in the all-saving name of Jesus, the Messiah, by Bro. Wm. Wilson. This was in the year 1854, and ever since she has led a consistent and devoted life. Ever has she been ready with open hand to assist in the spread of that faith and hope she so much loved; ever ready to give the word of cheer to the discouraged; ever ready to hear and help the distresses of others, her great heart like the ocean ready to receive the outpourings of every stream of life. Dying in the triumphs of a living faith, she sleeps in the hope of the coming of her Lord and the resurrection to the immortal life. Funeral services were held from the residence of her son Eld. B. W. Woodward on the 11th inst. in which the writer presented to a very large concourse of people "Grandma Woodward's" hope and her reasons for that hope, after which we committed the "sacred dust" to the care and keeping of him who will "raise it up at the last day."

"A Thrilling Night's Ride."

Is the title of a very interesting illustrated story, which will be mailed free upon receipt of 2 cents postage, by A. H. Waggener, 6 Jackson place, Indianapolis, Ind.—apr 29.

The young man of brilliant mind and engaging manners commands general admiration; but he alone is trusted who possesses that priceless, peerless treasure—good character.

O friend, never strike sail to a fear. Come into port greatly, sail with God the seas. Not in vain you live, for every passing eye is cheered and refined by the vision.—Emerson.

It has been said a kind word or a smile does not cost anything, but I should judge some people thought so, as they never seem to have any on hand.

They are wise who profit by their own experience and mistakes, but they are much wiser who also profit by the mistakes of others.

Sympathy is more than kindness; it is kindness able to enter into another's feelings, so as in some measure to feel with them.

The most profitable work that we can do is to work out our salvation with fear and trembling.

Poetry.

Maranatha.

Ye zephyrs, pray whisper the message
You're wafting o'er mountain and fen;
Ye songsters, what gladness your keynote
To symphonies rapturous, free?
O streamlet, your lullaby hushes
My fears with the lilies to sleep
Old ocean, your anthems o'erwhelm me
Re-sounding in cent'ries deep!

By what means your slumber song, streamlet?
Your hymn ascend, increasing, O soul
And cross put to flight by the sunbeams,
Your sweetest thought whisper to me!
Ye lily bells chiming at twilight
The hour of the birth of a Savior,
You're ringing a promise of gladness
Which to you shall forever belong!

O sun, in your crimson bed sinking,
Ye lamps on the angels at night
Which gleam through the windows of heaven,
Reveal now your secrets of light!
Hark! hark! how the answer is swelling
Till the earth and the heavens resound,
'Maranatha! The Lord he is coming,
O spend the glad tidings around!'

'Maranatha!' the zephyr doth murmur,
'I'll wait it from sea unto sea!'
'Maranatha!' the ocean cries loudly,
'I'll trumpet the world's jubilee!'
Ah, that is our rapturous keynote,'
The birds in their ecstacy sing;
While the streamlets, responsive, keep tinkling,
'He's coming! our Lord and our King!'

The lily bells down in the valley
Keep time to the flower song sweet;
'Maranatha! the Lord he is coming!'
We will blossom around his dear feet!'
The lingering sunbeams are tinging
'We'll herald his coming one day'
And quivering star gleams are saying,
'We'll gather to crown him for aye!'

'Maranatha!' again it is ringing,
My soul, echo back the refrain,
And hushed be the tempests and battles,
He's coming with blessings to reign!
Hark! hark! to the strains of his sword,
The harps of the heavenly choir!
And see where the clouds part above us,
The banners and chariots of fire!

Preach the Gospel.

"And he said unto them, Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth, and is baptized, shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be condemned. So then, after the Lord had spoken unto them, he was received up into heaven, and sat on the right hand of God." Mark xvi. 19. Again, Acts i. 9, "And when he had spoken these things, while they beheld, he was taken up; and a cloud received him out of their sight. And while they looked steadfastly toward heaven as he went up, behold, two men stood by them in white apparel, who also said, Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? This same Jesus which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." These two men in white apparel may have been Enoch and Elijah, at any rate their testimony agrees with many other promises found in the Bible.

What is meant by "preaching the gospel to every creature," and baptism, and the result of believing or unbelief and obedience or disobedience? The Greek word translated gospel is angelion and means a message, and with the prefix of en, means a good message, and all who believe the good message are evangelical. All who have a living faith in the gospel will be saved, but he that believeth not shall be damned, (not sent to hell torment forever) but condemned to the "second death." Rev. xx. 14; xxi 8. All those who believe the gospel and are baptized will experience a great salvation, and "inherit an everlasting kingdom under the whole heaven." Dan. vii. 27. "The gospel of the kingdom" is often spoken of in the Bible, also the gospel of salvation spoken of in these farewell words of the Savior.

The good message is two-fold, the promise of salvation and kingdom. We may become heirs of both in this life, but cannot inherit either until the second coming of Christ. Paul shows the kingdom of God will be inherited by those who have become heirs of it in this life, at the resurrection of the just. When "this mortal shall put on immortality"—death be swallowed up in victory. Paul adds, "But thanks be to God which giveth us the victory, through our Lord Jesus Christ." The Apostle sends words of consolation to his brethren at Thessalonica who were afflicted by the death of their Christian friends. He says, "I would not have you to be ignorant, brethren, concerning them who are asleep, that ye sorrow not, even as others who have no hope. For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him." As "he brought Jesus from the dead," so will he bring those who sleep in Jesus, "For this we say unto you, by the Word of the Lord, that we which are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord shall not go before them who are asleep. For the Lord himself descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first: then we who are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord. Wherefore, comfort one another with these words." Thes. iv. 13-18. "These words," should be a great comfort to every dying Christian. "But let us who are of the day, be sober, putting on the breastplate of faith and love, and for an helmet, the hope of salvation. For God hath not appointed us to wrath, but to obtain salvation by our Lord Jesus Christ." Thes. v. 8, 9. "When Christ who is our life shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory." Col. iii. 3, 4. "For our citizenship is in heaven," and Paul writes to the church at Rome (Rom. xiii. 11) that now it is high time to awake out of sleep: for now is our salvation nearer than we believed. When they believed they gained the hope of salvation." "To them who by patient continuance in well-doing, seek for glory, and honor, and immortality; he will render eternal life." Rom. ii. 6, 7. We groan within ourselves, waiting for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of our body. For we are saved by hope. Rom. viii 23.

Some of the church at Corinth denied the resurrection; "Now, if Christ be preached that he rose from the dead, how say some among you that there is no resurrection of the dead? Then is Christ not risen, then is our preaching and your faith in vain. Then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished." Not if they went to heaven at death. "Christ was raised as the first fruits. Afterward they that are Christ's at his coming. Then cometh the end, when he shall have delivered up the kingdom to God, even the Father. For he must reign until he hath put all enemies under his feet. The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death." If after the manner of men I have fought with beasts at Ephesus, what advantage to me, if the dead rise not?" It would be a great advantage if he went to heaven at death. "Now, this I say, brethren, flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God." When will they inherit the kingdom of God? "When the Son of God shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory. Then shall the King say unto them on his right hand, Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you." Matt. xxv. 31. Also we look for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body. For what is our hope, or joy, or crown of rejoicing? Are not even ye in the presence of our Lord Jesus Christ at his coming?" 1 Thes. ii. 19. "And to you who are troubled rest with us, when the Lord Jesus Christ shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels." 2 Thes. i. 7. "And the Lord direct your hearts in the love of God and into the patient waiting for Christ." 2 Tim. iv. 1-8. "I charge thee before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and kingdom. Preach the Word." Therefore the day of judgment and kingdom will not be at death, but at the first resurrection. "Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Judge shall give me at that day; and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing." Will not that appearing be lovely? What does Titus say? "For the grace of that bringeth salvation hath appeared to all men, teaching us, that denying ungodliness, and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously, and godly, in this present world, looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God, and our Savior Jesus Christ." The angels, says Paul to the Hebrews, are ministering spirits sent forth to minister to them who shall be heirs of salvation." Now, we can become heirs of salvation, but cannot become inheritors until the second advent. How shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation." Says Paul (Hebrews ii. 3) so Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many, and unto them that look for him, shall he appear the second time unto salvation. When Christ who is our life shall appear then shall ye also appear with him in glory." Col. iii. 4.

Let us look at the prophets of the old Book. "And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul." Was he an immortal soul? So he drove out the man from the garden and placed a flaming sword to keep the way of the tree of life, lest man should become an immortal sinner. The living soul of Adam was the man himself, and mortal because he died; and nothing said about his going to heaven. So David slept with his fathers, and was buried in the City of David. It is said of nearly all the kings of Israel that they slept with their fathers. David says, "As for me, I will behold thy face, and I shall be satisfied when I awake with thy likeness." Ps. x. 11. "Break forth into joy, sing together ye waste places of Jerusalem, For the Lord hath comforted his people, he hath redeemed Jerusalem. The Lord hath made bare his holy arm in the eyes of all the nations. All the ends of the earth shall see the salvation of our God." Isaiah. "Thy dead men shall live, with my dead body shall they arise. Awake and sing ye that dwell in dust: for thy dew is as the dew of herbs, and the earth shall cast out the dead." Isaiah. "In those days, Hezekiah was sick unto death, and Isaiah, the prophet, came unto him and said, Set thine house in order, for thou shalt die and not live." If that solemn message had been carried out, would he have lived? Isa. xxviii. 18, says, "The grave cannot praise thee, death cannot celebrate thee, they that go down into the pit cannot hope for thy truth." Isa. xxvi. 19, "Thy dead men shall live, with my dead body shall they arise. Awake and sing, ye that dwell in dust, for thy dew is as the dew of herbs, and the earth shall cast out the dead." These are words of the first resurrection.

"And many of those that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to everlasting life, and some to shame and everlasting contempt." Psa. xi. 15. "I will behold thy face in righteousness, I shall be satisfied when I awake with thy likeness." Psa. xlvii. 1. God breathed into Adam's nostrils the breath of life, and he became a living not an immortal soul, and that soul lived 930 years and then soul died. No immortal soul is found in the Old Testament or New. We read in Joshua x. 28, that he smote several cities, and destroyed all the souls therein with the edge of the sword. The Psalmist says, "Put not your trust in princes, nor in the son of man, whom there is no help." "His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth: in that very day his thoughts perish." Psa. cxlvi. "For the grace of God that bringeth salvation hath appeared to all men teaching us, that denying worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously, etc., looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ." Titus ii. 11, 12, 13. It is said of David and Solomon and nearly all the kings of Israel that they slept with their fathers. "And, at that time shall Michael, the great, prince, stand up for the children of thy people, and a time of great trouble, etc. And many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to everlasting life, and some to shame and endless contempt.

"The Decalogue Abrogated."

Editor Restitution:

This is the title of an article I copy from Our Hope. It seems to me the arguments and the Scripture used is irrefutable, showing that the ten commandments under this gospel dispensation, that is, since the kingdom of heaven is preached, is imperfect, and not applicable under the New Covenant. I desire to see it printed in The Restitution.

M. L. Adams.

"The foundation on which those who keep Saturday as the Sabbath base their claim for its observance is the 'fourth commandment' of the decalogue. God first spoke the words of the decalogue with an audible voice from heaven in the hearing of Israel as they were assembled about Mount Sinai. He afterwards wrote them upon tables of stone and delivered them to Moses to be given to the children of Israel, to be observed by them for a perpetual covenant. Hence they tell us they are just as binding now as they were when given. If this is so, and the ten commandments as a code of laws, by virtue of their having been thus given by God, are still in force, then those who keep Saturday as 'The Sabbath of the Lord' are doing right; and we are without excuse who do not keep it, for no one will deny that Saturday is the Seventh day of the Jewish week. These commandments, after being spoken by the Lord, were written, with other 'statutes and judgments,' in a book, by Moses, who, it is said, 'wrote all the words of the Lord.' He then 'took the book of the covenant and read in the audience of the people: and they said, All that the Lord hath said will we do and be obedient.' Then Moses took blood 'and sprinkled it on the people and said, Behold the blood of the covenant, which the Lord hath made with you concerning all these words.' Ex. xxiv. 4-8. However, it is that part of the words that was afterward written on the stone tables that we desire now to consider.

Paul informs us that the first covenant was imperfect or faulty, and it was therefore superceded by the second covenant. He says: 'If the first covenant had been faultless, then should no place have been sought for the second.' Also, 'In that he saith, A new covenant, he hath made the first old.' Heb. viii. 7-13.

I propose now to prove that the commandments as written on the tables of stone, and especially the fourth commandment, contain that which is imperfect or faulty, which imperfections are entirely and forever left out of the new covenant. The Apostle says, 'If a covenant be confirmed, no man disannulleth or addeth thereto' Gal. iii. 15. He was arguing that when once made and confirmed it could not be altered; no one could add to it, or take from it, but it must stand or fall in its entirety. So with the covenant under consideration; if one part is annulled or rendered void, the whole must necessarily be void, and only so much of that covenant is now binding as has been incorporated into the new and 'better covenant,' and that part is binding, not because it was of the old covenant, but because it is a part of the new one.

The first fault to which I call attention is that its penalties were inherited: the punishment for breaking the law was to be inflicted not only upon the actual transgressor, but also upon his posterity. On the stone tables it was written, 'I the Lord thy God am a jealous God, visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation of them that hate me.' Ex. xx. 5. We have numerous instances in the Lord's subsequent dealings with that people where this principle was carried out; but we only refer as an illustration to the case of Daniel. He was carried into captivity, not for his own sin—for even in captivity he was true and loyal to God, and would not defile himself with the king's meat—but for the sins of his people. It was from this statement of the Lord that the Jews derived the proverb, 'the fathers have eaten sour grapes, and the children's teeth are set on edge.' Ize xviii. 2. This, surely, is not in accordance with new covenant principles. Moreover, the Lord declared by the prophet Jeremiah, that he would remedy this fault: 'In those days they shall no more say, 'The fathers have eaten sour grapes and the children's teeth are set on edge; but every one shall die for his own iniquity, every man that eateth the sour grapes his teeth shall be set on edge. Behold the days come, saith the Lord, that I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel and the house of Judah.....I will put my law in their inward parts, and in their heart will I write them." Jer. xxxi. 29-34. R. V. In the eighth chapter of Hebrews, Paul quotes this passage and applies it to the new and 'better covenant' which was established upon better promises, and should supercede the old one. The 'first' was written on the tables of stone, and in the blood-sealed book of the covenant, but the second is written upon the hearts of all who come into the covenant relation with God through Jesus, the Mediator.

The second fault, however, is found in the very heart of the fourth commandment itself—it recognizes human slavery. Don't be startled, dear reader. I have made the above statement, I think, after careful consideration. I will even go a step further, and say, that while the fourth commandment was in force it was just as legitimate to buy and hold in bondage human souls as it was to buy and own cattle and sheep. In Ex. xx. 10, we read, 'But the seventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God: in it thou shalt not do any work, thou, nor thy son, nor thy daughter, thy man-servant, nor thy maid-servant, nor thy cattle, nor thy stranger that is within thy gates.' Here, 'thy man-servant' and 'thy maid-servant' are sandwiched in between the children and the cattle, recognizing one to be as legitimate property as the other, and property that the owner should not require or permit to work.

We now proceed to consider who these servants were, whether they were hired-servants or bond-servants. We have only to examine the next chapter to have the matter settled. In Ex. xxi. 2-7, we read: 'If thou buy a Hebrew servant, six years he shall serve: and in the seventh he shall go out free for nothing.' This liberty was only required to be given to the Hebrew servant. 'If his master gave him a wife and she bear him sons or daughters; the wife and her children shall be her master's, and he shall go out by himself.' Here is perpetual bondage for the wife and children and their posterity. 'If the servant shall plainly say, I love my master, my wife, and my children; I will not go free. Then his master shall bring him to the judges: he shall also bring him to the door, or unto the door post; and his master shall bore his ear through with an awl; and he shall serve him forever. And if a man sell his daughter to be a maid-servant she shall not go out as the men-servants do.' Here we learn that the men-servants and maid-servants were bought and sold. And these are the very classes that are recognized as legitimate property in the Sabbath commandment. Is traffic in human souls a legitimate business under the covenant provisions of him who gave himself a ransom for all, and who has declared, 'All ye are brethren,' and, 'Whosoever the Son makes free is free is free indeed?' No, no! A thousand times no! In the moonlight and among the shadows of the old covenant, where the seventh day Sabbath law is found, these things abounded; but under the bright shining of the great 'Light that shineth in darkness.' John i. 5. These shadowy forms of darkness have all and forever disappeared. Amen and amen."

Questions and Answer.

Some time since, my correspondent, J. B. Lent, requested an answer to some questions, to which I responded. He now makes further enquiry, and offers some suggestions. He says: "I am free to admit that I made a mistake when I said that the resurrection took place under the opening of the sixth seal. I should have said under the sixth seal, and before the seventh seal opens." * * * "I would also point Bro. Wilson to the fact of the resurrection being under the sixth seal and before the seventh seal opens."

It will be noticed that my correspondent in his criticism, has twice placed the resurrection "under the sixth seal, and before the seventh opens." I now call attention to another statement he has made, with regard to the time of the resurrection. He says: "I am aware that Paul says that the resurrection takes place at the last trump, but is that the seventh trump or some other trump altogether?"

QUESTION.

Why don't you accept what you say you are aware Paul teaches? How can the resurrection be "under the sixth seal, and before the seventh opens," and also at the "last trump," as in above quotation, if the seals and trumpets occupy different periods of time, one succeeding the other?

When are the living and dead raised and judged? See 2 Tim. iv 1: "I charge thee therefore before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and kingdom." When will that be? See Rev. xi. 15-18: "And the SEVENTH ANGEL SOUNDED; and there were great voices in heaven, saying, the kingdoms of this world, are become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of his Christ; and he shall reign forever and ever. * * * And the nations were angry, and thy wrath is come, and the TIME of the DEAD that they should be JUDGED, and that thou shouldst give reward unto thy servants the prophets, and to the saints, and them that fear thy name."

Now, if all this previously took place "under the sixth seal, and before the seventh opens," how comes it to be also located at the "seventh trump." if they are entirely different periods of time?

If the sixth seal brings us to the resurrection, and the commencement of the blessed millennial age, and then have the trumpets, vials, and bowls of wrath, string along afterward each succeeding the other, pray tell us where can all the terrible things they speak of, find a place in the blessed age of peace?

Apart from the above, my correspondent asks another question, he says: "I take it from some of Bro. Wilson's remarks in times past that he holds with the Romish and Protestant Churches, that the Lord's day that John says he was in the Spirit, was Sunday, or first day of the week, am I right in this Bro. Wilson?"

You are not right. That day is a period of time still in the future. I don't see where my correspondent ever picked up such a notion. No writings of mine can be produced to show it.

W. H. Wilson.

Our Duty to Each Other

It is not uncommon for those who profess to be of the "One Body" in different places, and calling themselves by different names,—and entirely estranged from each other, having no care or sympathy. Yet it is written "God hath tempered the Body together that there should be no schism, but the members should have the same care for one another; and whether one member suffers, all the members suffer with it, or, one member be honored, all the members rejoice with it. It may be some of you are saying, "I cannot remedy this." But mistake not,—had such an one desired and attempted it, as much as lieth in him it would be remedied. Perhaps you may meet a brother who thinks you take no interest in him, because you differ with him in judgment,—then seek to convince him that you do take an interest in him, by some little acts of love, or by being at least kindly affectioned toward him as a brother toward a brother,—and, if done for Jesus' sake, because such an one belongs to Christ, our Lord will accept the smallest service. Christ proved his love by his service; it cost him his life. Let not ours be inactive love: but may we seek opportunities of serving the brethren. "Be steadfast, immovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord," and in "due season we shall reap if we faint not."

Report.

Editor Restitution:

I want to say to the brethren of like precious faith, that the brethren here at Gordon, Neb., have been made to rejoice through a visit from Brother and Sister Courtney. Brother O. H. Shultz has also visited us and held a two weeks meeting. The attendance was small, but we are thankful that a few are not tied up so with the attractions of the world but what they can listen to the gospel of the kingdom of God, and we are also glad to know that one young man and wife decided to come out on the Lord's side, and were buried with him by baptism into his death, that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so they should walk in newness of life. In the evening we assembled at Brother C. H. Watkins' home and partook of the emblems of the broken body and shed blood of our Savior.

This meeting has been the means of bringing together a few of God's children who are in harmony with the first principles of the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ, and who are looking for eternal life through the Life Giver. The meeting closed April 3rd. Much good has been done in many ways, the seed of the gospel has been well sown, our heavenly Father only knows when and where. Paul planted, Apollos watered and God gave the increase. "Ye that make mention of the Lord keep not silence." Brother Shultz has planted, others may water, but God will give the increase. We have been built up spiritually and scripturally, the meetings have benefited each and every one, and we have felt that it was good to be there. We feel assured the Lord is with us although we had much opposition from the same class of people who persecuted our Lord and Master. He said, "If they persecute me they will persecute you." Also, they can only persecute with their tongues, but God will make it abound to his honor and glory. It will be the means of making others see how we stand on the Word of God. We regret the departure of Brother Shultz. If he could have remained longer we feel sure that some of the outside prejudice could be rubbed off. Our prayers and love go with him, and if we do not meet again here, may we all meet in the kingdom. Brothers and Sisters, pray for this young brother and sister, that they may be able to overcome the evils that surround them and stand pure and shining before the Savior when he comes. Your Sister, in the cause of Christ.

Mrs. E. J. Watkins.

Our Love Feast.

Dear Restitution:

I thought I would write a few lines this morning, as I love to read the letters in our dear old paper, and to hear from those whose faces I have never seen in this world, but truly believe if faithful to God and his written Word I shall see them in the world to come, where we shall know them as they are known, and to those that we know and have learned to love them for their many good Christian graces and devotions to him that they have chosen to serve fearless of the contempt of the world. May each and every one of you earnestly contend for the holy faith a little longer, don't get weary in well doing, for if we faint not we shall receive that great reward that has been promised—eternal life. Oh, who can comprehend the gift that is offered to the overcomers? Earth in its present state seems gloomy with its burdens of sin and death, when cleansed from all these evils, and Christ our life shall come and rule and reign in righteousness, how changed will be our surroundings and our lives. I trust that each one of us that have taken his precious name upon us may not fail to get in his kingdom and help to put down all evils, for we are brought face to face with the evils that would come in the last days of Gentile times. Dear brothers and sisters, in writing for our paper how careful should each one be, not to use words that do not look well in a Christian paper. I saw some in our last of March, that I do not love to see. For those that we are striving to get to learn the truth as it is in Christ.

Your Sister,
M. E. KNOWLES.

Dear Household of Faith:

I feel like saying a few words (although a little late) for our love feast. In my judgment it is a grand privilege that we have to express our thoughts from time to time through our good old tried and true medium, THE RESTITUTION, which to my mind comes as near teaching what the prophets have spoken by the command of the All-wise, since the world began. I wish it god-speed and hope to be able to take it through this age, or the remainder of my short life, but prefer the former a thousand times. I know this is the same old thought, as a few of our brethren say. The love feast has nothing new, but refers to the same old thoughts from time to time. Probably a few modern, up-to-date thoughts would not be out of place here that I heard expressed on the streets a short time since as the average so-called pedestrian confronted me, Are you going to the show to-night? There is going to be a great pony and dog show, I would not miss it for anything. They have the smallest horse on earth, only weighs eighty-five pounds; and the largest dog that ever ate liver. Well, the parade is on, music fills the air, all is excitement, about all the children of the town are in the wake, most of the grown people all traders neglect business for the time being, to see the grand horse and a few dogs, and fifty per cent or more goes to the entertainment. This is only one little attraction among the tens of thousands of worldly amusements and religiously so-called. Oh, ye thinkers of the world that cannot penetrate the wisdom of Almighty Power, who can turn the worlds in a balance, and crush nations at a single blow, penetrate old ocean's depths, bring to surface all hidden things, in one infinite thought, answer all the prayers of the faithful from Abel down to the end of the age, wipe the curse from the face of the earth, cause all tears and sorrow to cease, redeem man from the power of death, and establish a kingdom that spans the cycles of eternity, whose righteous laws shall govern the earth as the waters cover the sea and an eternity of happiness and pleasure in store for those that form a character in harmony with his glorious plan of salvation. Dear brethren, the same old thought, it is the father of thoughts to me. The first thing when I receive THE RESTITUTION is, has any brother or sister written about the coming of our blessed Savior? There cannot be a wheel turned in the execution of God's plan until the presence of our elder Brother, so all true believers pray for the number to be completed so we can realize the grand privilege of subduing the nations with Jesus, King of kings and Lord of lords. Why, dear brethren, this is the hope that has kept main rock for the past twenty-five years, and I have never had a place to worship in, with the exception of about three years in that time. How we would like to have a church to attend the balance of our short lives to train our sweet babe in the true way. We cannot trust to those great walls of modern wisdom, so we will trust to our kind and loving Father to prepare a way for the called-out ones, and may we be always found ready to embrace the glorious opportunity. May the good Lord keep us and at last administer to us all an abundant entrance into his everlasting kingdom is my prayer,

J. C. VENABLE.

Editor Restitution:

I thank God that I am yet in the land of the living. I am a sister of A. J. Eychaner, the Evangelist of Iowa. I am seventy-five years old. My desire is to live till the Life Giver comes. This world has no more attraction for me, my mind, my hope, my all, is on the things of the kingdom, and evidence is growing brighter that we are nearing the time of the coming of our King. Let us be faithful in the service of our Master, and let not anything take our attention from him. If we lose a place in the kingdom, we lose all. Let us watch and pray. Yours, ever in the one hope.

MARGARET ANDREW.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending THE RESTITUTION to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the donors request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trustworthy.

Kansas and Missouri Conference Work.

At our annual conference Sept. 4, 1898, there was reported as having been preached in that year upwards of 140 discourses and twelve baptisms. A good interest was reported at the different points visited, which would not have been had no effort been made by the conference. This is a very good showing, considering the disadvantage under which the work was done. It shows what can be done by united effort. This gives us hope and encouragement for the future, so we are arranging to commence this year's tent campaign about June 15th, or as soon thereafter as the weather will permit. Brethren, let us push the work. There is only one thing to hinder doing more for the Master's cause this year than last, and that is your indifference, or neglect. We know that you love the truth, and desire to see the gospel preached. We cannot all preach but all can give a little, if it is only a quarter don't be afraid to send it along. Let us work while it is day for the night cometh when no man can work. The nations are hastening to the call of the prophet, "Prepare war, wake up the mighty men." Tarshish with all the young lions thereof are making themselves ready. He of the north quarter is making ready. Brethren, the conflict is impending, do you not hear the tread of the mighty host as they are marching to the great battle of decision? Are we using our talent, or, are we like the servant whom his master deprived of all he had? The Master is coming, let us proclaim it to perishing man, and show our faith by our works, for, faith without works is dead, without a live faith no crown of life. Now brethren, you who desire to help in the work, send in your contribution to the treasurer, P. H. Oatman, care of Nave & McCord, St. Joseph, Mo. If you cannot send the money now, send a pledge, with a statement when you can pay it. A report of the work will be given from time to time. A word of encouragement or suggestion on the line of work will be thankfully received.

For the committee.

A. W. DARBY, Sec'y.

Evangelizing Tour to Southern Oregon.

I expect to be in the extreme southern part of Oregon to begin meetings per arrangements of Bro. Meritt Elliott, on the 18th of May, at Central Point on the Southern Pacific R. R. If any brethren near that place, or on that R. R. wish my labors in a series of meetings during this trip, please correspond with me at Scholls, Ore.

W. L. SHEPLER.

Criticise by creation, not by fault finding.—Michael Angelo.

An Appeal.

To the Brethren of Missouri and Kansas, and to all others interested in our work:

The Missouri-Kansas Conference Board have employed me as Evangelist, and to go with their tent this coming season, which will open up the last half of May. For this work we will need money. This will have to be made up by donations and by collections upon the field where we go. Will all in these States, and elsewhere who desire to assist in the work send to us at Beatrice, Neb., and to A. W. Darley, secretary of the board, Mound City, Mo., the amount you will contribute, and send the money to the treasurer, P. H. Oatman, care Nave & McCord, St. Joseph, Mo. Give us your name and the amount you can possibly give for the work at an early date, that we may know how to arrange our tent work. Let every brother and sister donate to this work, however small the amount may be. Make us a pledge. We are commanded to sound out the Word. Paul wrote, "It is more blessed to give than to receive; and to give as the Lord has prospered you, preach the Word. Go ye into all the world and preach, and go ye, disciple all nations." To do this it requires money. Let us have a liberal response, and a good work done.

G. M. MYERS.

Say nothing that you would not like God to hear.

Important Notices.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertized in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended to.

Literary News.

President Harper, of the University of Chicago, makes this month's contribution to the discussion of the educational question which The Cosmopolitan magazine has been conducting during the past two years. The Cosmopolitan's title, "Modern College Education—Does it Educate in the Broadest and Most Liberal Sense of the Term?" is not used as President Harper's theme. He confines himself rather to the consideration of the relations which universities bear to our republic and to the people. President Harper is one of the men who seem to desire to take broad and liberal views of the subject of education.

Poetry.

A Woman's Prayer.

O Lord, who knowest every need of mine,
Help me to bear each cross, and not repine;
Grant me fresh courage every day;
Help me to do my work alway
Without complaint.

O Lord, thou knowest well how dark the way,
Guide thou my footsteps, lest they stray.
Give me fresh faith for every hour,
Lest I should ever doubt thy power,
And make complaint.

Give me a heart, O Lord, strong to endure;
Help me to keep it simple, pure;
Make me unselfish, helpful, true
In every act, whate'er I do,
And keep content.

Help me to do my woman's share;
Make me courageous, strong to bear
Sunshine or shadow in my life;
Sustain me in the daily strife

Would Jesus do it? No. 3.

PINE WOODS BIBLE CLASS.

Teacher. I am often asked the question, Is it right to do such and such things? And among these things, is it right for a Christian to dance? Now Carrie, how would you answer this question?

Carrie. I have one rule by which to measure every practical question of life, and that is, "Would Jesus do it?" You know he is the Christian's pattern and example, we must measure ourselves by him. Can any one for one moment suppose that the pure-minded Son of God would take part in one of our modern dances, which are fraught with sinful revelry, and dissipation, which tend to destroy social purity between the sexes? I cannot. Again, I don't think it proper to engage in anything upon which we could not previously ask God's blessing upon it, before we engage in the same.

Teacher. I know that public dances are very sinful, both with regard to excess of eating, drinking and are also ruinous to our physical well being. But how about private, select dances in our homes?

Carrie. I have found that such dances tend to evil, there is something so fascinating about dances, that the temptation is to go to excess. Another I do not like is, that while engaged in such amusement, God is liable not to be present in their minds, except at first an accusing conscience may at times smite them, but by frequent repetition that will soon become seared. But I am certain Jesus would not dance a polka, or waltz with the girls, and that must decide the case with Christians.

Teacher. Now, in treating of practical things, which seem to us to be adverse to the cultivation of a pure and spotless life like unto the Son of God, we do not mean it as an offense to those who may practice those things, of which we speak, but we desire to be a blessing to them. I read in God's Word with regard to the New Jerusalem: "There shall in no-wise enter into it anything that defileth, neither whatsoever worketh abomination, or maketh a lie: but they which are written in the Lamb's book of life."

I wish also to call attention to the purity of those who will be found with Christ upon Mount Zion: "These are they which were not defiled with women; for they are virgins. These are they which FOLLOW the Lamb WITHERSOEVER he goeth. These were redeemed from among men, being the FIRSTFRUITS unto God and the Lamb. And in their mouth was found NO GUILE: for they are WITHOUT FAULT before the throne of God." Rev. xiv. 4, 15. Beloved, how many of us have attained to the above standard? If the Lord should come today, could we judge ourselves worthy of being classed with the "firstfruits," who are found "without fault?"

Now, if we should speak plainly of practices which seem to us to be an hindrance to purity of life, it is not in a spirit of faultfinding, or condemnation, we simply draw the picture, and let each one judge him or herself, that we may help each other on to glory. Now, Lad, the question of using tobacco has frequently been spoken of as a practice which has a tendency to hinder purity. How do you view it?

Lad. The Bible says that whether we eat or drink, or whatsoever we do, do all to the glory of God. The question occurs to me, could we smoke a pipe, or take a chew of plug tobacco, and ask God to bless it to his glory? Let those who use it, settle that question. Can we ask God's blessing on it as we do on the food we eat? If it is right for us to chew and smoke tobacco, it would also be right for Jesus to do it? It would almost seem like impiety to speak of Jesus chewing tobacco, and spitting the juice out on the pavement of the New Jerusalem, would it not? Why not do so, if it is a pure, clean habit, and does not defile the temple of God?

We read in 1 Pet. ii. 2, 22: "Christ also suffered for us, leaving us an example, that we should FOLLOW IN HIS STEPS, who did no sin, neither was guile found in his mouth." Nor any other defilement of any kind.

Teacher. There is only one position a real Christian can take. If he would be in friendship with God, he is a positive enemy to the world, and everything that is worldly?

Now, Albert, what is your conviction?

Albert. The Word of God leaves no room for two opinions on this point. See James iv. 4: "The friendship of the world is enmity with God. Whosoever therefore will be a friend of the world is the enemy of God." Let me emphasize this: "Whosoever (takes in everybody) will be a FRIEND of the world, is the ENEMY of God." There is a choice of the two, "friend" or "enemy," which shall it be? There can be no mixing of the two, God will accept no compromise. "No man can serve two masters." Matt. vi. 24.

It is not a possible thing for a person to be an enemy of the world, and the world not to know your attitude towards it. The line between the friends of God, and the friends of the world, is so absolutely distinct, that the two are as opposite as day is from night.

Teacher. Suppose we are enemies to the world, what will be the attitude of the world toward us?

Albert. Jesus spoke from personal experience, I will give his words: "If the world HATE you, ye know that it hated me before it hated you. If ye were of the world, the world would LOVE his own." What is our personal experience? If we find the world is friendly towards us, it is evident that we have not acted as Jesus would do. The world is just the same today, (probably worse) as it was in Jesus' day. If we followed Jesus, and acted as he would do, (were he in our place,) it would most surely have no more use for us, than it did for him. If the world loves us, we have good ground to doubt our being loved by God. We cannot be loved by both. "Not every one that saith unto me Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven, but he that DOETH the WILL of my Father who is in heaven." Matt. vii. 21. The entrance to God's kingdom will most positively be limited to the one who actually in fact "DOETH the WILL," and not the one who merely makes a profession. "Why call ye me Lord, Lord, and DO NOT the things that I SAY." Luke vi. 46.

Teacher. I have often noticed that many professors do not object to condemning the world in a general sense, but when we speak of worldliness specifically, is where objections are raised. Tell us what you think Arloa.

Arloa. To attack worldliness specifically, is that which rouses the enmity of the world the quickest. A strong practical political lesson can be learned from Jesus' answer to Pilate: "My kingdom is NOT of THIS world: if my kingdom were of THIS world, then would my servants fight, that I should not be delivered to the Jews: but now is my kingdom not from hence," that belongs to the world, or age to come.

The servants of this world, will fight for the kingdoms of this world, it is theirs, it belongs to them, and it is natural that they should fight to sustain their own.

If Jesus' kingdom were of this world, then would his servants fight, but as it is not of this arrangement or order of things, which are essentially worldly and corrupt, unclean, and abominable in the extreme, they must take the advice of God's Prophet, and "Let the potsherds of the earth strive with the potsherds."

Those in control of this government, use the power to foster that which is evil, worldly, ungodly, and detrimental to the highest interests of the people, and morality. Why do they do this? because they are of this world, are essentially worldly, consequently are at enmity with God." The friendship of the world is enmity with God." It is out of harmony, and perfectly incompatible for the friends of God, and the friends of the world to unite in running a government, because they are at enmity with each other, if they ARE what they really profess to be.

Teacher. Did Jesus take any active part in running the politics of Cesar's government, under which we lived? If we are servants of Jesus, we will "follow Jesus," and do as he would do, were he in our place. Our kingdom is not of THIS world, we seek one to come. This being the case, let the servants of this world take care of their own. Our interests pertain to something higher, nobler and more enduring.

Teacher. The kingdoms or governments of "THIS WORLD," are now in the hands of the PEOPLE of this WORLD," will they always remain there? What do you say George?

George. Under the sounding of the seventh trump, we read: "The kingdoms of THIS WORLD are become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of his Christ; and he shall reign forever and ever."

The servants of Jesus can have no interest in the "kingdoms of this world," until the above CHANGE takes place. If they had, then would his servants fight to sustain them.

Teacher. What relation do the servants of Jesus sustain to "the kingdoms of this world," at the present time?

George. Just the same as Jesus. He went about everywhere proclaiming the coming change, above spoken of, under a message entitled, "The gospel of the kingdom," and he sent his servants to preach the very same message. Our duty is to do just what we are sent to do, and not to spend our time in helping worldlings to patch up their rotten systems. If Jesus were in our place, he would do just what he was sent to do.

Teacher. We have not heard from Lucy yet along the line we have been investigating what have you to offer?

Lucy. I have an extract from a book which conveys my convictions, I will read it: "As men waiting and preparing for the kingdom of God (whose citizenship is in heaven, and not upon the earth) they accept the position of STRANGERS and PILGRIMS among men. They are not at home: they are passing on. They take NO part with Cesar. They pay his taxes and obey his laws where they do not conflict with the laws of Christ; they take no part in his affairs. They do not vote; they do not ask the suffrages of his supporters; they do not aspire to Cesar's honors and emoluments; they do not bear arms. They are sojourners in Cesar's realms during the short time God may appoint for their probation; and, as such, they sustain a passive and non-resisting attitude, bent only on earning Christ's approbation at his coming, by their OBEDIENCE to his commandments during his absence. They are not of the world; and therefore they REFUSE to be conformed to it. The way is narrow, and full of self-denial—too much so for those who would like to perform the impossible feat 'of making the best of two worlds.' But the destination is so attractive, and the results of the cross-bearing so glorious, that the enlightened pilgrim deliberately chooses the journey, and resolutely endure its hardships."

Teacher. To walk in the footsteps of Jesus requires more nerve, get-up and moral courage, than mere professors can conceive of.

Next week our study will be to apply the question "would Jesus do it?" with regard to business life. In other words, Is business transacted as Jesus would do it, were he in our place?

Trine Immersion. No. 3.

Farrar [illegible] said, "No one cometh to the Father but by the Son." Likewise, [illegible] separate baptism into each of three names would bring the person baptized into the Father first, then into the Son, and lastly into the Holy Spirit. We have already seen that to come into Christ, we must be properly baptized into him. And being "in him," "in Christ Jesus" (an expression that occurs with great frequency in the Scriptures, and is fraught with meaning) we through him by one Spirit have access to the Father. Eph. ii. 18. Oh! the simplicity and beauty of the divine plan for our salvation. "Therefore, being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ." Rom. v. 1. "In whom we have boldness and access with confidence by the faith of him." Eph. iii. 12. He is "a great High Priest that is passed into the heavens, Jesus the Son of God," and is "not an high priest who cannot sympathize with our infirmities, but was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin. Let us therefore come boldly unto the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need." Heb. iv. 14-16. "Christ also hath suffered for sins, the just for the unjust, that he might bring (or introduce) us to God." 1 Peter iii. 18. Friends, let us see that we are introduced to God through the proper person, "the man Christ Jesus" (1 Tim. ii. 5), and in the proper way. This matter is of too much importance to be passed over lightly. Let us deal with God through our Lord Jesus Christ, whom he appointed as the mediator between himself and men. According to the Word there is but one way to come into Christ, that is, by baptism into his name; bearing this name and being truly in him and abiding in him, we have uninterrupted access to the Father.

But where did the idea of three immersions for one baptism originate?

Not in the Scriptures, as we have already seen, but it had its rise in the doctrine of the trinity, as propagated in the council at Nice, in 325, and "developed" through the fertile imaginations of some who were styled "fathers." This doctrine of "three persons in the Godhead" was confessedly and manifestly "not drawn from the New Testament, and cannot be expressed in New Testament terms." Enc. Brit. xxiii. 240. The term "trinity," or "triados," (Greek), as applying to God, was first introduced into the theological vocabulary in the second century 168 A. D. by Theophilus, the sixth Bishop of Antioch. I have this information from Wakefield's Theology, which is good orthodox authority and not likely to make such a statement without good reasons.—But this doctrine was not generally taught until the 4th century when it was first preached at Alexandria by Alexander, bishop of the church at that place; but was severely opposed by Arius, a presbyter of the same church, who stoutly maintained that the Son could not possibly be co-existent and co-eternal with the Father; and, being the Son, there must have been a time when the Son was not, though he was created before the foundation of the world. Arius was expelled from the church, but continued his agitation against the doctrine of Alexander. The quarrel at last gained the attention of the Emperor Constantine who directed conciliatory letters to the contending parties, but all to no purpose. At last he convened a council at Nice in Bythinia, consisting of 318 bishops and 2048 other delegates, to consider and settle this matter. The Emperor himself presided at this meeting. After much discussion pro and con the assembly with very few exceptions endorsed the doctrine of Alexander, while Arius was branded and anathematized as an heretic. It was at this assemblage that the material out of which the doctrine of the so-called "trinity in unity" was subsequently constructed, was first brought into definite shape. And ever since those days we have had a trinity of person in the Godhead in the commonly accepted theology. And it is but misapprehension at this point that the idea of trine, or as some term it, "triune" immersion arises. If there are three persons in the trinity, God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Spirit, and baptism into each of them is required, then of course three baptisms are not only in order but necessary. If the Word of God teaches a trinity in the Godhead, as set forth in the theological textbooks of the doctors and the schools, then every believer in the Bible must accept it as a matter of course; but if such teaching is entirely absent from the Scriptures, we have no right to accept, much less to teach it.

The fact is as shown above that the trinity was an unknown term among the early Christians, not a word of the kind being taught in the Bible, but it was developed by the speculative, theorizing, spiritualizing school of teachers who had obtained their wisdom from the pagan philosophers, and managed to insinuate their pernicious methods and doctrines into the Church "unawares;" and in the course of time a whole system of doctrines was elaborated and foisted upon the credulous populace which gladly resigned the right to think to the doctors. In this way also a clergy separate from the laity was developed, and in the course of time also a papa, or father (pope), "the man of sin, the son of destruction."

But how about the trinity above mentioned? Is it true? I am obliged to say, notwithstanding the fact that this is regarded in the religious world as a "fundamental doctrine," that it is not true. The Bible everywhere speaks of God as one, and not three. I shall cite a few New Testament examples. "God is one." Gal. iii. 20. Jesus prayed to his "Father," as "the only true God." John xvii. 3. "It is one God who justifies." Rom. iii. 30. "There is none other God but one".... "to us there is but one God" says Paul, and in order that we may not be left in the dark about this matter he adds that this one God is "the Father." 1 Cor. viii. 4-6. "One God and Father of all." Eph. iv. 6. And he is not only our God and Father, but is also "the God and Father of Jesus Christ." Eph. i. 3; 1 Peter i. 4. In Mark xv. 34 Jesus himself addresses the Father as "My God," which is in harmony with Paul's statements above. See also John xx. 17, where he says to Mary that he will ascend to his Father and his God. How can these statements, so positive, so emphatic, as to leave no room for doubt as to their meaning, be explained? Were they not based upon the monotheism (one God) of the Old Testament, so strongly set forth in the writings of Moses and the prophets? Jehovah had repeatedly and emphatically declared that he alone is God and that no other could be either acknowledged or tolerated; and it meant death to the Israelite who would attempt to worship or have regard for any other God. Will the reader carefully examine the Scriptures of the Old Testament on this point? See Ex. xx. 3; Deut. iv. 35, 39; Isa. xlv. 18. As there is but one God so there is also but one Lord, which is Jesus the Christ. 1 Cor. viii. 6; Eph. iv. 5. And he became Lord and Christ, not of himself, but by virtue of authority and appointment of the Father. "God hath made him both Lord and Christ." Acts ii. 36. "Him hath God exalted .....to be a Prince and a Savior." Acts v. 31. This exaltation was on account of his voluntary humiliation and obedience to the Father's will. See Phil. ii. 5-11. Jesus, "the Man Christ Jesus," is also the Mediator between the "one God" and men. 1 Tim. ii. 5. Frequently throughout the New Testament he is spoken of as a MAN. Mark xv. 39; Luke xxiii. 4, 6, 14; John xix. 5. Peter, on the day of Pentecost, addressed JEWS with these words among others: "Jesus of Nazareth, a man approved of God among you." Acts ii. 22. "As the children are partakers of flesh and blood, he also himself likewise took part of the same." Heb. ii. 14-18. And why should he not, inasmuch as he was taken from among the brethren." Deut. xviii. 15-19. For this reason he is able to sympathize with the weakness of those over whom he is the great High Priest. Heb. iv. 14-16; v. 1, 2; vii. 24-27. And is not ashamed to own them as brethren. Heb. ii. 9-12. "And though he were a Son, GOD'S SON, yet learned he obedience by the things he suffered." Heb. v. 8. How it makes us rejoice to know we have an High Priest who has been upon our own plane of existence, who has tasted all the bitterness of our griefs and sorrows, "being tempted in all points like as we, yet apart from sin;" and is fully able to appreciate our endeavors to overcome sin and to render unto him an acceptable service; who can sympathize with our infirmities rising out of our weak and corruptible flesh: Jesus the Son of God who has gone to the heavens in behalf of us. Such statements as these, in which the Scriptures abound, can be appreciated by poor needy mortals; but such a "trinity" as popular theology teaches can neither be appreciated nor understood; neither have we any need of it. And now, kind reader, I leave the case as we find it in the Word of God. There is One Mediator between God and men, the Man Christ Jesus; there is one way to the Father, and that is Jesus; there is one Name which is above every name among men, the Name of Jesus; there is one way of coming under that great and saving name, and that is by being immersed into it, as they did in the days of the Apostles, as set forth in their acts. Reader, put on this Name!

A. H. ZILMER.

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME XLVIII. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, MAY 3, 1899. NUMBER 17.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations: the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked: eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Russia's Proposed Calendar Reform.

News from Russia is that the Czar's Ministers favor the early change of their calendar from the Julian, now in use, to the Gregorian. The change will make Russian dates in consonance with those of the rest of the civilized world. At present Russia is twelve days behind. In Russia today is April 13, and Christmas is celebrated twelve days after we celebrate in America. The result is embarrassing to those Russians who have foreign correspondence, and they usually use both dates. The Julian calendar, made under the direction of Cæsar by Sosigenes about B. C. 45, provided for a leap year every fourth year. This did well for awhile, but in reality a day every fourth year is too much by 11 minutes and 10 and 3-10 seconds. Hence the actual time fell behind the reckoning. By 1582 Pope Gregory found that there had been an over-reckoning of ten days, and he moved the date up by that number, and to keep the year right in future he ordered that every centurial year that could not be divided by 400 (1700, 1800, 1900, 2100, etc.) should not be a leap year. Catholic countries immediately adopted the change, but it was not followed in England nor in the American colonies until the year 1752, when the discrepancy was eleven days. This is the reason why, though Washington was born on Feb. 11, we celebrate Feb. 22 as his natal day. In Russia alone of all Christian countries the old style has been retained.—Tribune.

Mankind's alienation or divorcement from God tends to barbarism and savagery. Man's care over the beast leads to domestication. God's recognized care over man leads to divinely-bestowed exaltation.—W. H. Lamkin.

Classic story tells us of one Pylades who laid down his life to save a friend; but God's Book tells of one Lord Jesus Christ, who laid down his life for his enemies. What a wonderful Savior is ours!

Plymouth, Indiana, May 3, 1899.

We call special attention to the notice in another column of the works of our late Bro. Wiley Jones. The books and tracts have all been sent to this office, and we trust our friends will take advantage of this opportunity to supply themselves with these excellent works at the prices named.

The Church at Plymouth had the pleasure of a visit from Bro. R. W. Woodward last Thursday evening. He was on his way to his appointment at Warren Co., and stopped for a few hours. We were absent from the city and missed seeing him, but the Church enjoyed his being here very much, and we hope he will call again.

Bro. A. B. Zilmer preached for the Church here last Sunday, and we never listened to better sermons than he gave us. Bro. Zilmer goes this week to Blackford Co., this State, and next week expects to go to Kansas and Oklahoma, where he was last year. He should be kept in the field all the time, for he is a valuable worker.

Faith and Hope

Reader, is your faith built upon the foundation of the Apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ being the chief corner stone? Eph. ii. 19, 20, or is it built upon the teachings of Apostate Christendom? 2 Thes. ii. 7-12. We are taught that if we simply believe that Jesus Christ died for us, and lead good lives, that our immortal souls will go away off beyond the bounds of time and space. Is this true? Is this teaching according to the law and the testimony? Paul said concerning the preachers of any other gospel than what he preached, "Let him be accursed, or cut off." Gal. i. 8, 9. Let us see what constituted the gospel preached by the Apostles and Jesus Christ, and then it will rest with you, whether you can remain amongst those who preach another gospel.

In the first place, it is a demonstrable fact that the idea that you have a never-dying soul is a Pagan Fiction. Positively it is not a Bible doctrine.

It is a fact that although the word soul occurs over 700 times in the Bible, never once is it said to be immortal; thus showing that popular theology is wrong.

Immortality is something to be sought for, and to be put on at the resurrection of the dead. Luke xiv. 14; Acts xxvi. 6-8; Rom. ii. 7, 16; xv. 4.

Immortality is a matter of Hope. 1 Thes. iv. 13-16; Rom. xv. 13; 1 Cor. vi. 14; xv. 12-23; John vi. 39, 40, 44.

What then, is the gospel? Paul said in Rom. i. 16 that the gospel of the Anointed is the power of God unto salvation," and as there is only one faith, one God, and one hope Eph. iv. 4-6, it is a matter of awful importance to know what the gospel is. If you read Luke ix. 2, 6 you will find that it is the news concerning the kingdom of God that constitutes the gospel.

The gospel is not merely the Death and Resurrection of Christ, for we find that although the Apostles previous to the crucifixion preached the gospel, they knew not of his death and resurrection, and therefore they could not preach it. Luke xviii. 31-34.

Paul said the gospel was preached to Abraham, Gal. iii. 8; and if you turn to Gen. xiii. 14-17 you will find that God promised Abraham the Land upon which he stood for ever. Isaac and Jacob had the same hope. Gen. xxvi. 3, 4; xxviii. 13, 14.

It is a fact they have never yet realized the fulfilment of these promises. See Heb. xi. 8, 9, 13, 39, 40. All the prophets had the same hope and faith. Read Isa. ix. 6, 7; xi. 1-4; ll. 2, 3. He speaks of a time when the knowledge and glory of the Lord shall cover the earth, xi. 9-11, and Ezek. speaks of the restoration of Israel, chap. xxxvi. 24; xxxvii. 21, 22, when they shall divide the land to inherit it. Chap. xlvii. 13, 14. Daniel speaks of the God of heaven overturning the kingdoms of this world, chap. ii. 4, and says the saints shall rule the earth. Chap. vii. 13, 14, 18, 27. Joel saw that the kingdom of God would be in the future established on this planet. Chap. iii. 1, 2, 16, 17. Zechariah saw the Messiah or Christ reigning over all the earth. Chap. vi. 12, 13; viii. 23; xiv. 9, 16.

Coming to the New Testament we find in Matt. v. 5 that the meek shall inherit the earth. And that Abraham, Isaac and Jacob and all the prophets shall be in the kingdom of God, —also that people shall come from the north, south, east and west to the kingdom. Luke xiii. 28, 29. Christ also spoke of his second coming. Lu. xxi. 27; Mark viii. 38. Christ also told his twelve Apostles that they would sit on 12 thrones ruling over the twelve tribes of Israel. Luke xx. 29, 30; Matt. xix. 27, 28.

It is a fact, according to the inspired Scriptures that Christ is to come again to earth. Acts i. 11; 2 Thes. i. 7, where, after the resurrection he and his saints, who will be made like unto the angels, Mark xii. 25, will reign over the nations of earth for 1000 years. Rev. xx. 1, 6; v. 10; ii. 26, 27.

Considering, then, that there is not one passage in the Bible that states we have immortal souls, or that heaven is the abode of the righteous, it will be seen how necessary it is to seek and know the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ.

The disciples were told to go into the world and preach the gospel of the kingdom to every creature. He that believeth the gospel of the kingdom and is baptized shall be saved. Mark xvi. 15, 16.

Then do we say baptism is absolutely necessary to salvation? Yes; certainly; Christ said, "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit he cannot enter into the kingdom. John iii. 5. Please read also Acts ii. 38, 41, etc.

What a glorious hope is the hope of a true Christian! Is it not worth having? A resurrection, eternal life, and an inheritance with all the saints in the kingdom, which will exist on the earth for 1000 years, after which there will be no more sin, or death, for God shall be all in all. Rev. xxi. 2, 4, 5, 6, 7, 10.

Anti-Semitism in America.

CHRISTIANS (?) AND JEWS AGAINST JEWISH-CHRISTIANS.

Perhaps the dear ones who read The Restitution have never heard of The Warszawiak, Jewish-Christian Mission No. 424 Grand St., New York City. I have been watching it for a number of years, and have felt deep sympathy for its earnest founder and his dear wife, who, though not of us, yet believe in our coming King, and are waiting anxiously for his return from the far country. But never in all this time have my feelings been so deeply stirred as they are at the present writing. I seem to have been thrust back into the times of the inquisition, when torturing thumbscrews, flame and fagot were in vogue; I never dreamed that such things as have been done in New York City, could be done in a land of freedom, by a professed Bible-loving people. It is almost too incredible for belief.

As a nation we take great interest in foreign missions; there is systematic giving for the support of these, men and women leave home and friends and press into the service. Lives are given up to the sole purpose of translating the precious Book into other tongues; discomfort, privation and cruel deaths are faced unflinchingly, that the heathen may come to a saving knowledge of our Lord and Savior. But the poor Jew, alas, for him! Mr. and Mrs. Warszawiak are both of noble Jewish families in Poland. They forsook all for Christ's sake,—even their own darling little children [the grand parents would not give these up to apostates from the Jewish faith!] They came to this country from London, with the highest recommendations, and began the mission I have spoken about. A great work has been, and is being accomplished among the Jewish population of New York City, many of which speak and read no language but the Yiddish—a jargon of German, Hebrew and other tongues.

A noble friend of the mission writes thus of its present aspects. "Preaching the gospel to the Jews by Mr. Warszawiak continues at No. 424 Grand Street, four times a week with unabated energy and unparalleled success. The place is habitually thronged and overflowed by Jews at all services—an ever-changing but always deeply interested and inquiring concourse. Personal salvation by Jesus Christ as the only Savior and promised Messiah is the invariable theme, and is enforced with straightforward directness and boldness, and is yet received with singular attention and respect. The eagerness of the Jews to hear the gospel is preternatural, and can only be of God. Nothing but the physical impossibility of getting in keeps hundreds and thousands of them outside, clamoring and struggling in vain for admittance, especially on the Jewish Sabbath eve, or Friday night. The sight is heart-breaking. Before the hour—sometimes an hour before—the more provident ones, have secured all the seats. Fresh comers fill the passages and invade the platform. Floor space all filled, they begin to get upon the chairs and stand above the shoulders of the sitters. Notice is hung out "No more admitted," and the door-keeper holds fast the door. The crowd increases and in spite of a half dozen policemen they strive to force the door, and if the janitor's strength yields for a moment, in they rush, joining in the order and silence of the listening throng. All this continuously in a city of churches, half empty at best, and three or four of them around the spot! How long, O Lord, how long? How long? Sixteen months now I have watched this same miraculous "sign," waiting from day to day until its intensity was awful, portending some imminent mighty work, for which we have been waiting! * * * There is one way to settle all doubts. Come near; come see and hear. Nobody who knows, who ever knew, who ever showed a Christian's interest in the man, or the work here on the ground, ever turned against it, or him. "All love him most who know him best."

Bible classes of Jews are held every Saturday and Sunday afternoon—including some of the Jewish children, (Wm. Cowper Conant, says this). He has stood by the mission against all its enemies, as has also James G. Patterson, and the late lamented Dr. John Hall, of New York, Gustavus Cohen, of London, Miss Douglas, of Edinburgh, Dr. H. A. Wood of Hoboken, New Jersey, and many more.

But we started out to tell you of the Anti-Semitic feeling that is shown in New York against the converted Jews. It originates with the Jews themselves. They pursue with implacable hatred, all who dare leave the ancient fold of the Jewish church to embrace the hated religion of Jesus of Nazareth. They persecuted Jacob Freshman, and lied about him, till the agony and shame of it all forced him to give up the mission and die. They have tried the same tactics on Warszawiak. All that Satanic malice can invent in the way of falsehood and slander has been turned against this innocent man, that the mission might be broken up, and the thirsty ones find no place to drink of the healing waters. But if the persecution had gone no farther than the unbelieving Jews, it would have excited no wonder in my heart. They honestly think it apostacy to turn from Judaism to Jesus of Nazareth. To them it seems like dying a spiritual death. They deem it the joining of idolators. But that the opposers of the mission should be joined by many of the elite of New York is something that causes a feeling of disgust and indignation. Have the days of our fathers been forgotten? Do we no more remember the times when those of our kith and kin passed through the fire?

It seems dreadful that Protestants should become the instruments of torture to those, who like Wickliffe and Huss, are seeking to bring about a reformation of their people, "Father, forgive them, they know not what they do." No pen, however graphic, can paint the sufferings of that faithful pair. "All income is absorbed by the barest necessities of the mission chapel itself. And God only knows the agony of the prayer, 'Give us this day our daily bread.'" Never had they imagined a lot so bitter as this, and yet both are ready to pass through a furnace heated seven times hotter; with only the watchword, "Though he slay me yet will I trust in him."

I had seen in my late studies, that, before Judah could be joined to Israel in everlasting federation, there must first be the acceptance of Christ by the Jews, as individuals. Individual salvation must precede national salvation, there must be the hiding of the leaven in the hearts of these, that the leavening of the whole may be brought about. The elect ones have not been taken out of Judah yet; they have been and are being taken out of the other tribes. The gospel came first to Judah, and he rejected it; he is therefore, put last, as to the time of its reception, and the other tribes first. If we would hasten the coming of the blessed kingdom we must work and give and pray for the salvation of the Jew, we must put no hindrances in his way.

But in seeing that some elect ones must now be taken from Judah, I had not seen that these must go through the fires of persecution to "be made white and tried," just as our fathers of old had to go. Dan. xii. 10; xi. 35. Yet this must be the way that God intends to bring them home. How portentious it all is! even Conant, sees that there is something preternatural in the eagerness of the Jews, to hear about Jesus. There is something preternatural in it. The time has come for the veil to be torn from Judah's eyes; God wills that he shall be blind no more, for the advent is near at hand. Well, let us help him all we can. The Jewish missionaries must not starve. Judah must hear about Jesus, the Messiah; he must be "grafted into his own olive tree again."

The work will not stop, no matter what opposition and persecution it may have to meet. "The devil and all his tools cannot frighten the workers away from their charge; they will never surrender it to human or to Satanic power." It is of God, though all be not true that is taught. The Jew, like his Protestant brother, must learn one lesson at a time; the other lessons will come in due order, order. He will learn much from the Book when he comes to read it with his new glasses on. Give him the Bible.

The Middle Wall of Partition.

"For he is our peace, who hath made both one, and hath broken down the middle wall of partition between us."

This Scripture is found in Eph. ii. 14. It was spoken by Paul and is expressive of one of the greatest events of our Lord Jesus Christ, in as much as it opened the way of salvation to the Gentiles. Before this the Gentiles were shut out from the commonwealth of Israel and the covenants of promise; for it is a Scriptural fact that God had chosen out and separated a people to whom he gave special opportunities, of which all other people were deprived as long as the middle wall of partition existed. The people which God had chosen and separated and placed in a land by themselves was the Children of Israel. Unto them was given the oracles of God, and in those oracles a great benefit and blessing was promised, but under certain conditions. Israel failed to comply with those conditions, therefore Paul says that Israel didn't obtain that for which he sought, but the election hath obtained it and the rest were blinded. Rom. xi. 7. It is evident that every individual of Israel was not blinded, which is easily seen by the reading of Heb. xi. I will ask, was not Israel, as a people, always blind? Trace them through a wilderness and see if they gave proof of the knowledge of God's light. Follow them if you please from the days that God called them from under the hand of Pharaoh until the days of the crucifixion of Christ, and we see them walking in darkness, as a people. True there were a few who did receive the light of God's Word. On the other hand the Gentiles have always been as blind as Israel. Look for a moment at both Jew and Gentile at the time of the crucifixion. Not one nation in the world offered a word of defence in behalf of the just one. They were united in the same offense of condemning the Prince of Peace, and they slew the Lamb that God had offered for the sins of many, not knowing what they did, therefore, we hear Christ say while in the agony of death, "Father, forgive them for they know not what they do." In that act we see the words of Paul verified that we are no better than they. Both Jew and Gentile have proved themselves under sin, we can therefore see why the middle wall of partition was broken down. Let us study the 2nd chapter of Ephesians. In it we learn that Christ desires to make of both one new man in himself thereby making peace, and that he might reconcile both unto God in one body by the cross having slain the enmity thereby.

Yes, the middle wall of partition has been broken down, and if so, the Israelites and Gentiles are placed in one common field together, and if either or both will listen to the gospel they may feast on the hope of receiving those blessings offered to all the faithful ones, for in Christ Jesus there is neither Jew nor Gentile. Paul has given timely warning not to be wise in our own conceit, or in other words, not to think that we are held in lighter esteem than the Jew; for he (Paul) says that God has not cast his people away. Therefore, let us be careful how we treat one of the Jews upon whom the light of God's gospel has shone. Shall we boast that they are blind while we can see? No, brethren, this would not be in keeping with God's Word to Peter when he said, that which God hath cleansed call not thou common or unclean. Well, says some one, the Jews were broken off and that ends it with them during the Gentile times. 'Tis true that they were broken off as a nation or a people, but has God built another wall of partition? I find no Scripture to that effect. No doubt they were broken off from being a specially chosen people, for the Scripture says that both have access unto the Father by one Spirit, and the Scripture also says that if they abide not in unbelief they shall be grafted in, "for God is able to graft them in again." God has not changed the Gentiles over into the Jewish pasture, nor the Jews over into the Gentile pasture, for the Jews are no more a chosen generation but like the Gentiles must come to the Father through faith in the crucified and resurrected Son of God, which they as a people will not do until the times of the Gentiles have been fulfilled. Do the Gentiles en masse put their trust in God's Son? Not any more than the Jews, and there is no peace between them in general. There should be perfect peace with all the faithful Seed of Abraham, whether they have been blind Jews or blind Gentiles, for nearly all of us that now see, have sometime in our day, knelt at the devil's altar; but thanks be to God, since the middle wall of partition has been broken down it makes no different about our nationality, for Peter says in Acts x. 3, "But in every nation he that feareth him (God) and worketh righteousness, is accepted with him." If God accepts the returning prodigals, why should any one complain? Let us be thankful unto God for his mercy unto us in allowing us to be grafted into the good olive tree, that we may bring forth fruit worthy of God's approval.

Submitted in love and the hope of the better resurrection,

John Porter.

Obituary.

Bro. J. H. Pettigrew was born in Schiller Co., Ill., Aug. 13, 1831; died in Manatee, Fla., April 5, 1899; aged 68 years, 7 months and 21 days. He embraced the gospel of the kingdom under the preaching of Bro. Chase, father of our beloved Bro. L. C. Chase, of Adrian, Mich. He was baptized by Bro. Chase some time in the sixties. He came to Manatee, Fla. eleven years ago. It can be said of Bro. Pettigrew that he was a kind husband and father, and a very quiet citizen, but friendly to all. He leaves a wife, a daughter, a brother and other friends and relatives here in Manatee, besides many friends and relatives in Illinois to mourn their loss. Funeral services held in the M. E. S. Church here in Manatee, conducted by the writer; after which we laid him away to await the coming of our blessed Master. Text 1 Thes. iv. 13; an attentive and sympathetic audience.

N. H. Gieselman.

We have received from the Bible Institute Colportage Association, Chicago, Ill., a copy of rather a Unique Work, being the New Testament "Marked." The text is the Authorized Version, with about 225 markings, on about 100 pages. The marked texts are confined to a certain line, the Way of Salvation, divinity of Christ, repentance, faith, obedience being the principal themes in view. It is designed to be a help for young workers, and for learners in the school of Christ, enabling one to catch sight of texts readily as they appear in their connection, and is far better than a few texts taken out by themselves. The book is pocket size, and can be had for 10 cents—with three cents additional for postage. Without doubt it will have a large sale, as the cost is so little. You can order them from this office.

Few temptations are more common to ardent souls than that which leads them to repine at the lot in which they are cast, believing that in some other situation they could serve God better, and, therefore, to every such man St. Paul speaks, telling him that it is his duty to try to be himself—simply to try to do his duty; for here in this world we are nothing apart from its strange and curious clockwork; and if each man had the spirit of self-surrender, the spirit of the cross, it would not matter to him whether he were doing the work of the mainspring or one of the inferior parts.—*Fredrick W. Charity.

Only a drop in the bucket,
But every drop will tell;
The bucket would soon be empty
Without the drops in the well.

Only a poor little penny,
It was all I had to give;
But as pennies make the dollars,
It may help the cause to live.

A few little bits of ribbon,
And some toys that were not new;
Yet they made the sick child happy,
Which makes me happy too.

Only some outgrown garments,
They were all that I could spare;
But they helped to clothe the needy,
And the poor are everywhere.

A word now and then of comfort,
That costs one nothing to say;
But the poor old man died happy,
And it helped him on his way.

God loveth the cheerful giver,
Though the gifts be poor and small:
But what can he think of his children,
Who never give at all?

The Angel's Testimony.

Those who contend that Jesus was the Son of Joseph set up the claim that Gabriel's words were spurious, having been interpolated by some one who desired to paganize the teachings of the Scriptures. In all probability this notion originated with some Unitarian skeptic desirous of eliminating miracle from the record; glorifying the natural as all sufficient, because not apprehending or believing in a divinely prepared sin offering in the person of Mary's Son. This too would be natural as a reaction from Trinitarianism, and the papal dogma of an "immaculate conception." Besides it would be a summary way in which to dispose of the theory of pre-existence thus avoiding the extremes of a pre-existentent Son on one hand, and the mystery of the trinity on the other. In all this, however, nothing of importance was gained, in the way of arriving at the truth. The fact that Jesus is a divinely created Son out of the Adamic race—a "body prepared"—a Lamb without blemish, made a little lower than the angels, "to declare God's righteousness" by a violent death, and raised from the dead for the justification of those believing in him, was not taken into account by either Trinitarian or Unitarian.

In the early centuries dating back, almost to the immediate successors of the Apostles, there were heated and acrimonious debates on the nature and divinity of the Lord's Anointed. Reading the history of those times of religious controversy is like passing through a country once full of plenty and prosperity, but now turned into a wilderness by the misfortunes of war. Spiritual poverty and famine prevails, where once apostolic truth and righteousness had a vigorous growth. Grecian philosophy found in the word "Logos" a wide field for philosophical speculation and evolved various theories, equally contradictory and mysterious, beyond even the intelligent comprehension of learned and unlearned alike. I may add also that the formulated creed, which in the end was decreed orthodoxy, and enforced by the civil power, was scarcely more unscriptural in one thing than another. If there is any one thing that will unbalance a man's mind, make him intellectually confused and erratic in his reasoning, it is the effort to mingle and harmonize human philosophy with divine wisdom. To be down in the gutter from the effects of alcohol hardly makes a man more unreasonable and mentally disconcerted than the spiritual intoxication resulting from the unholy mixture of fleshly thinkings and philosophizings, with revealed truth.

I can, however, discover no evidence of this intoxicating Spirit's work in the record of either Matthew or Luke, as touching the birth of the Lord Jesus. Indeed, John is the writer over whose words the controversy raged so fiercely. That word "Logos" which was "in the beginning with God, and was God," is the focal point, where Arian and Trinitarian met in battle, and where all the theological combatants sought to combine Platonism with Apostolic teaching. If I were to look for a corrupted text any where it would be in the first chapter of John, for it was the storm center of theological dispute. Luke and Matthew confine themselves to historical facts, but John mingles fact with doctrine as to the cause, intent and purpose of certain things, suggestive of thought, and the exercise of reason, and therefore all the more attractive to those who take kindly to speculative philosophy. Matthew, Mark and Luke are scarcely mentioned as affording debatable ground, and for this reason we are justified in concluding that they escaped the hand of the interpolator. Again, if such interpolation had occurred it could hardly have been so cunningly devised, as to conceal its fraudulent nature. It is impossible to corrupt a text without creating discord, especially when some important matter of fact, or doctrine is involved. A falsehood cannot be so incorporated into Luke's record, without exposing itself on all sides, as the work of a mutilator, or the blunder of some transcriber.

The angel said to Mary "Thou shalt call his name Jesus, he shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest, and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David, and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever, and of his kingdom there shall be no end." The foregoing quotation is so doctrinally sound, and consistent with all the balance of the Scriptures that it bears on every feature, and in every particular the stamp of genuineness. It is in perfect accord with the covenant made with David, even in detail, and in no uncertain sound voices the sentiment of the prophets.

Can it be possible that these words emanated from some paganized Christian? Such must have been the case if the angel's conversation with Mary be an interpolation as claimed. If I were called upon to discourse some human origin for the angel's words, I should not hesitate to say from some converted Jew, but from a paganized Christian never. So far as I am able to learn apostate Gentiles never took kindly to the idea that Jesus would reign on David's throne, and still less to his reigning over the house of Jacob. The forms of speech employed by the contending bishops of the 3rd and 4th centuries are in no way consonant with Gabriel's words to Mary, as to the future career and destiny of her Son. And in our day we are unable to discover any improvement. On the whole, therefore, we are compelled to accept of the angel's words as genuine, as there appears to be no ground upon which we can reasonably infer fraud, or corruption of the text. It is folly to permit the idea of theory to lead us astray, and then seeks to excuse such action by assuming what we cannot prove; nor are we justified by leaning upon some learned man's criticism, which in fact is nothing more than his opinion. Men's opinions are of little value on all points where a vital element of the truth is involved, for in all such matters, the teaching of the Scriptures as a whole will invariably guide us in the right way.

I cannot forbear inviting the reader to become better acquainted with the angel who visited Zacharias and Mary, before committing himself to the hypothesis that his words are spurious and false. This we can do without much effort as our heavenly Father has made provision either by design, or otherwise, for such acquaintance. Doubtless it will inspire confidence in his Word, and strengthen our faith. Moreover, we are inclined to indulge the hope that possibly it may be the means of causing some to retrace their steps, and get back into the way of truth and life. Why go wrong, when it is easier to go right? We are able to identify the heavenly messenger of Luke's record by his name Gabriel. Had no name been given an interesting line of thoughts and reflection would have been denied us. Michael and Gabriel appear to be the two angel princes that control the history and shape the destiny of Israel. Gabriel said to Daniel "there is none that holdeth with me in these things, but Michael your prince." The defence and deliverance of Israel seems to be chiefly entrusted to Michael, and possibly the resurrection of the dead may result from his voice, when he shall stand up for the "children of thy people." While Gabriel's special charge is in the way of imparting information—explaining the prophet's visions, and foretelling to him and all others like him, coming events. It is remarkable that among the chief things he revealed to Daniel, was the birth, anointing and crucifixion of the Messiah, may we not, therefore, reasonably infer that into Gabriel's keeping was committed the trust of preparing the way for the manifestation of God's Anointed, and this being the case, would it not follow as a natural sequence that he would appear again on the scene at the critical epoch of Messiah's birth? This appears the more probable when we consider that Gabriel had informed Daniel as to the time when the Messiah would be born, also the time when he would be crucified, and further when desolations would sweep away his city and people by the invasion of the Romans. He who foretold these events doubtless created the circumstances necessary to their fulfillment. When, therefore, Gabriel appeared to Zacharias he was simply preparing to execute what he foretold to Daniel about 500 years before. He had said to the prophet that from the decree of Cyrus to restore and build Jerusalem, there would be 483 years to the birth of Messiah, and from the time of Jerusalem's restoration there would be 434 years to the crucifixion of the Messiah. The circumstances necessary to the accomplishment of these wonderful events, would lead us to conclude that the same Gabriel who foretold them, would be present to fulfil his Word, and establish the vision. Indeed, we are not disappointed for Luke identifies him by name. This personal identification suggests if it does not prove the design of forestalling all possibility of uncertainty as to the facts Luke purports to record. Daniel and Luke by clasping hands with Gabriel, span as it were the 69 weeks of years that ended with the birth of Jesus. Daniel wrote what Gabriel foretold, and Luke testifies that he was present to fulfil and verify his prediction. Indeed, from whatever standpoint we examine Luke's history, the clearer and brighter it shines as true and authentic. We cannot reject Luke because of the supernatural, and believe Daniel. When we cross the line that divides the natural from the supernatural we have no means of measuring what is, or is not possible. The prophet passed over that line when he predicted "Behold a virgin shall conceive and bring forth a Son." Shall we hesitate to believe the testimony because the spiritual supplants the natural? Really the plan and purpose of retrieving and regaining what was lost by the natural or animal, requires the interposition as the law of the inevitable. What avail is it to kick against this law of absolute necessity, when in the consciousness of our helplessness, the ignorant and the wise alike in the hour of distress and danger prostrate themselves to invoke its relief and deliverance.

In fact the more clearly we come to understand God's purpose, as revealed in the Scriptures, the more intense is our conviction that the interposition of the spiritual begins its work where the weakness of the animal cannot make it abortive. Daniel talked with the angel face to face, a privilege accorded only to the few, but that few includes Mary the mother of Jesus. If the former was a man "greatly beloved," the latter was a woman "highly favored of God." These are kindred expressions, emanating from the same mouth, and unite the predictions of the prophet and the history of the evangelist as an unbroken chain, no "missing link" to perplex the mind, or to stagger faith.

GEO. MOYER.

Judges Chapter 14.

1. And Sampsoon went down to Timnatha and saw in Timnatha a woman from the daughters of the other tribesmen.

2. And he went up and told his father and his mother and said, I have seen a woman from the daughters of the Phulistines and now do ye take her for me for a wife.

3. And his father and his mother said unto him, Are there not daughters of thy brethren and from all my laity is there not a woman, that thou shouldst go thy way to take a wife from the uncircumcised other-tribesmen? And Sampsoon said unto his father, Take this one for me because she is upright in mine eyes.

4. And his father and his mother did not comprehend that it was from God that he was seeking a requirement (or requital) from the other tribesmen; and in that period the other tribesman were lording it in Israel.

5. And Sampsoon went down, he and his father and his mother to Timnatha and he had got as far as the vineyard of Timnatha, and lo a lion's whelp roaring to meet him,

6. And the Spirit of the Lord leaped upon him and he crushed it even as one will crush a kid of the goats; and there was nothing in his hands and he did not tell his father and his mother what he had done.

7. And they went down and talked with the woman, and she appeared upright in the eyes of Sampsoon.

8. And he returned days afterward to take her; and he was inclining out to see the carcass of the lion, and lo, a swarm (a synagogue) of bees in the mouth of the lion and honey;

9. And he took it out into his hands and was going his way going along and eating, and he went his way to his father and to his mother and gave to them and they ate, and he did not tell them that he had taken the honey from out the mouth of the lion.

10. And his father went down unto the woman, and Sampsoon appointed there a drinking-feast for seven days, because in this way were the young men accustomed to do.

11. And it came to pass when they saw him they also took thirty invited guests and were with him;

12. And Sampsoon said unto them I am propounding a problem (problems) for you; if ye announce it in the seven days of the drinking-feast and find it out I will give you thirty of coarse linen and thirty flowing robes for outer-garments.

13. And if ye are not able to announce it to me ye shall give me thirty of fine linen and thirty changeable flowing-robes for outer-garments; and they said propound thy problem and we will hear it.

14. And he said unto them, What eatable thing hath come out of an eater and what sweet thing from a strong one? And for three days they were not able to tell the problem.

15. And it came to pass on the fourth day that they said unto the wife of Sampsoon, Do thou forsooth deceive thy husband and let him tell thee the problem lest perchance we burn thee and the house of thy father with fire, or to do us no violence have ye invited us?

16. And Sampsoon's wife complained to him and said, Didst thou only hate me and not love me, in that thou hast not told me the problem which thou didst propound to the sons of my laity? And Sampsoon said unto her, If I have not told my father and my mother shall I tell thee?

17. And she complained unto him for the seven days during which their drinking-feast was; and it came to pass on the seventh day even that he told her because she hindered him; and she told the sons of her laity.

18. And the influential men of the city said unto him on the seventh day before the sun rose, What is sweeter than honey, and what is stronger than a lion? And Sampsoon said unto them, If ye had not ploughed with my heifer ye would not have comprehended my problem.

19. And the Lord's Spirit leaped upon him and he went down to Ashkalon and he smote of them thirty prominent men and took their outer-garments and gave the flowing-robes to those who had told the problem, and Sampsoon become wrathful with anger, and went up to the house of his father.

20. And Sampsoon's wife became the wife of one of his friends to whom he had shown himself friendly.

CHAPTER 15.

1. And it came to pass days afterwards in the days of a summer-harvest of wheat that Sampsoon also visited his wife with a kid of the goats and said, I am going in unto my wife and into the inner-chamber, and her father did not allow him to enter in.

2. And her father spake saying, I said that thou didst hate her, and I gave her unto one of thy friends. Is not her younger sister better than she? And let her be thine in place of that one.

3. And Sampsoon said unto them, I am guiltless once for all of other-tribesmen, because I am doing a wicked thing in relation to them.

4. And Sampsoon went his way and gathered together their hundred foxes and took lamps, and turned them tail to tail, and placed a lamp between each two tails and tied them.

5. And he kindled a fire in the lamps and let them go in among the standing grain of the other-tribesmen; and they set things on fire from threshing-floor to standing-grain and unto vineyard and olive-orchard.

6. And the other-tribesmen said, Who hath done this? And people said Sampsoon the bridegroom of Thamnai because he took his wife and gave her to one of his friends; and the other tribesmen went up and burned her and the house of her father with fire.

7. And Sampsoon said unto them, If ye are going to do even as to her, because in very truth I am going to make requital on you, I shall also grow weary at last.

8. And he smote them hip and thigh a great blow; and went down and sat down in a hole in the rock Etam.

9. And the other-tribesmen went up and pitched camp Jouda and displayed in Lechi.

10. And the men of Jouda said, For what have ye come up against us? And the other-tribesmen said, To find Sampsoon have we come up, and to do to him in the way he hath done to us.

11. And three thousand men from Jouda went down to the hole of Rock-Etam, and said unto Sampsoon, Dost thou not know that the other-tribesmen are lording it over us, and what is this that thou hast done unto us? And Sampsoon said unto them, In the way they did unto me, even so have I done unto them.

12. And they said unto him, To bind thee have we come down, to give thee up into the hand of the other-tribesmen. And Sampsoon said unto them, Give me your oath that ye will never jointly oppose me.

13. And they said unto him, No, no, we will only bind thee and deliver thee into their hand: and we will not put thee to death: and they bound him with two new small cords and brought him up from that rock.

14. And came unto Singoon (Jawbone) and the other tribesmen raised the alala (the shout of victory) and ran to meet him, and the Lord's Spirit leaped upon him and the small cords upon his arms became as it were tow that hath been burned with fire, and the bonds melted from off his his hands.

15. And he found an ass's jawbone that had been cast away and he stretched out his hand and took it and smote therewith a thousand men.

16. And Sampsoon said with a jawbone of an ass I wiped them out, because with the jaw-bone of an ass have I smitten a thousand men.

17. And it came to pass when he had ceased speaking and had cast away the jaw bone in his hand, he also call the place Anath-els Slagonos (an undertaking of a jawbone).

18. And he became exceedingly thirsty and complained unto the Lord and said, Thou hast been satisfied to give this great salvation at the hand of thy bond-servant, and now I am about to die with thirst and fall into the hands of the uncircumcised am I?

19. And God rent open the well that is in Singoon (jawbone) and there came forth water therefrom, and he drank and his spirit returned and he revived: therefore its name hath been called to this day, The fountain of him who invoked in Singoon.

20. And he judged Israel in days of other-tribesmen for twenty years.

COMMENT.

These two chapters, the 14th and 15th, are full of spiritual food for the thoughtful reader. Sampsoon of course as a Nazar or a Nazarite is a type of the Christ as the true Nazarite. Even the name of the village of Christ's early childhood and later manhood was originally so called because it had at an earlier period been a dwelling-place of Nazars according to the vows and conditions provided in such cases.

His name meaning "Touch Sign" was significant of the manner in which God's Spirit was to manifest itself in this particular case, not that his natural physical strength or developments were extraordinary as I understand it; but simply to show that God can work in an extraordinary way through an human being by using any one or more of the ordinary human endowments, even so common a thing as physical strength when sanctified and made subject to his conditions. When true to his vows Sampsoon has the divine enducement, when unfaithful he loses it. This teaches us on the higher plane of Christianity that God's spiritual gifts (and we each and all have one or more) are conditioned upon faithfulness in the use. The whole story is as susceptible of spiritual interpretation and application to the higher teaching as the story of Joseph and his brethren. Thamnatha, the place he went down to and where he met the woman who became his wife, means "a wine place." And he gave "a drinking-feast" at his nuptials—bad associations and a bad beginning for a young Nazar to make in starting life on his own account, one who was under vows not to drink wine or strong drink. Then he disregards parental advice in this important step, we learn another bad beginning.

Much might be profitably said about the so-called "riddle" which Sampsoon propounds at the drinking-feast; but as I gave this years ago in THE RESTITUTION I will not repeat it.

Our Love Feast.

Editor Restitution:

Please find enclosed $1.50 for THE RESTITUTION. As we have never had our names on the subscription list and are now among strangers we feel as though we could not get along without something to cheer us up, and it such a pleasure to read the many letters from our brothers and sisters, even if we cannot meet them face to face, it is a joy to know there are so many of us of the one faith. Do not think, brothers and sisters, that we are not readers of THE RESTITUTION because I say we have never signed for it, for our friends and relatives have always allowed us to read their paper. It has found a place in our home for many years. Lord, who shall abide in thy tabernacle, who shall dwell in the new earth, who shall attain to immortality? Answer, he that has heard the Word of the kingdom, and understood it, and with a good and honest heart beareth much fruit. Now, the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, meekness and faith. Dear ones in the faith, can we say from every day experience, that we bear the fruits of the Spirit? If so, we can hope to meet each other in the sweet by and by.

Yours in hope of eternal life through Jesus Christ, the Life-Giver,

MRS. RHODA FISHER.

Dear Restitution:

The paper is a most welcome visitor, for there are no preachers in this part of the country who seem to know anything concerning the coming kingdom, or that the curse will ever be removed from the earth, and they mystify the doctrine of the resurrection as taught by Christ and his Apostles. They seem to look at Christ's coming to earth none as a calamity than as a blessing to all nations. But they choose the misty darkness, the clear light of the gospel hurts their spiritual eyes.

Your Sister in hope of immortality when Christ comes to wake the sleeping dead and not before.

SADIE SKEELS.

Dear Restitution:

A few words to the brothers and sisters of the one faith scattered abroad, grace, peace and love from our Father and the Lord Jesus, the Christ. I write those few lines to cheer you up if possible, seeing that the return of our Lord lies at hand, the rumbling of his chariot wheels can plainly be heard in the signs of the times. The orthodoxy are converting the world to Christ, so they say, without the Bible. Its too old fashioned for them, so they have found a new road to their heaven. The political world is about to usher in the millennium by the peace congress; disarmament and arbitration is to bring peace on earth and good will to men. Well, man may propose, but God will dispose. Man's words and actions do not agree; the very man that proposes disarmament keeps straight on preparing for war, building ships and manufacturing ammunition and weapons of war, but the Christian warrior's weapons are not carnal, but mighty through God. We have the shield of faith, the breastplate of righteousness, and his loins are girded with truth and his feet are shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace. Brethren and sisters, let us war a good warfare and fight the good fight of faith, so that we may lay hold of an eternal life. May we all be found faithful when the Life-Giver comes is my humble prayer.

Your Brother in the one faith,

I. L.

To the Household of Faith:

It is some time since you heard from me. I am one of the isolated ones; I have not heard a sermon of the true gospel preached for a number of years; but I am trying to so live that I may be one of the worthy ones when the blessed Lord shall come. Pray for me, brothers and sisters, that I may be found ever ready.

Your Sister in hope,

IDA C. GODDARD.

Dear Restitution:

I am one of the sisters of the one faith, one Lord, one baptism. I am alone in the work here, as there are none other but me. I have lived close to Lexington, Mo., for 10 years, no one to speak on the great life. I am almost the only one in Lafayette Co., I know of no other in the precious faith. My sister, Ida Goddard, sends me THE RESTITUTION now and then; it and my dear Bible are my comfort, without them I would be lost. I read them nearly every day, I try to make myself useful as I can, of course I see trouble and have trials, but you see we must bear with this sinful world. Pray for me when you enter into your secret closets, that I may cast my bread upon the waters till we may all meet where sickness, sorrow and pain, nor death will ever disturb us. This is my prayer for Christ and his cause.

Yours in hope of better things to come with Christ our Savior when he comes to claim his own.

From your Sister in Christ,

E. A. MENDES.

Great Movement to Rescue Oppressed Hebrews.

The return of the Jews to Palestine, the organization of a great corporation for the colonization and development of large areas in Syria and Asia Minor, the rescue of all Hebrews from the power of oppressing despotism! Such are some of the plans that form part of the great movement introduced in New England through a crowded mass meeting in the Baldwin Place Synagogue in this city, yesterday afternoon.

The plans were perfected at a convention of leading Hebrews from all over the world, held in Bosel, Switzerland, a short time ago, and a company wasformed with a capital of $2,000,000, with headquarters in London and branches in various parts of the world, to proceed to prompt measures for securing territory and the removal thereto of Jews who are persecuted in Russia, Roumania and Gallacia, or any part of the world.

The leading American delegate to this convention was Dr. Richard Gottheil, professor of archeology in Columbia University, who was made a member of the council, and is now president of the American Federation of Zionists, the organization in charge of the movement in America. Thesubscription lists were opened simultaneously in London and New York, March 28 last, and will be open until April 28.

The plans of the Zionist leaders have been received with the greatest enthusiasm throughout the United States, and, though the idea of a return to Palestine is not a new one, being, in fact, included in the accepted prophecies of the Hebrew faith, and the ever present dream for a distant future, these definite practical steps toward the realization of the prophet's idea, this bodnesslike attempt to answer the prayers of the devout Jews for many centuries, is entirely new, and was explained to the congregation in Boston yesterday.

The mass meeting in the Baldwin Place Synagogue was under the management of Dorshai Zion, the local Zionist Society. During an hour and a half before the meeting was called to order, Mr. I. B. Reinhertz, manager of the Boston subscriptions, sat at a table upon the platform in front of the rabbi's desk, and received cash for subscriptions, as fast as the necessary entries could be made. One Salem street banker, took a hundred of the $1 shares, and a long line of young men put down the necessary dollar as advance payment for one share each. It was explained that no profit was expected from these, except to the race as a whole, and it may be regarded as a tremendiously large charitable organization, by and for the Jewish race.

The meeting was first addressed by Rabbi Margolis, speaking in the German language, who explained the object of the meeting, extolled the fraternal devotion of the organizers of the movement, and compared the general awakening of the Jews to its importance to the miraculous quickening to life of the dry bones seen by the olden prophet in his Judean valley.

Prof. Gottheil was then introduced, and, in a stirring speech, which was heartily applauded, told the story of the convention. It almost seemed like a dream, he said, too beautiful to be real, those three days in the old Swiss city. I have attended many conventions here and in Europe, but never saw anything like that. We forgot to sleep and neglected meals, so completely absorbed were we in the work.

The last meeting extended from 11 o'clock Tuesday morning until 5 o'clock Wednesday morning, and for 18 hours those delegates, with set and determined faces, firmly resolved not to leave the hall until the mighty task was done, planned and reconciled. When the plans were at length complete, and we started back to the hotel, the dawn of morning was breaking over the hills along the Rhine. And we called it a symbol of the dawn of a new day for Israel.

Though there is opposition in our own ranks, there is no reason for discouragement, since opposition has always been the great spur to effort for the Jew. The movement is now no longer a dream or a project, but a reality. There has been enough of talk; the time has come for us all to act, and then see what will be the result of action. All Israel is responsible for one another. Not a stricken Hebrew groans in any part of the world, but the sound rings in the ears of us all. It is the duty of all to help those who sit in darkness, under the shadow of persecution. Pity is nothing, tears are vain, unless you act. Nothing can be done till the money is in the hands of our London bankers. Remember the law, "If thou hast vowed a vow unto the Lord, thou shalt not delay to pay it."

Prof. F. G. Lyon of Harvard was occupying a seat on the platform, and was called upon to speak by Prof. Gottheil, who said the views of thoughtful and sympathetic men from outside were welcome, and valuable, to the leaders of the Zionist movement.

Prof. Lyon said he had come to the meeting to learn about the movement, and was not prepared to express an opinion upon it. His studies having been pursued in ancient Jewish history rather than in modern, he could not judge the best steps by which the race should climb to its highest possible development. But he had observed that in every community where they take up their abode the Jews are above the average in intelligence, virtue and charity.

Conversation with some of the gentlemen in charge of the movement in Boston revealed the fact that the bulk of the subscriptions already received in America alone are enormous, and by themselves seem to insure the sound success of the undertaking.

The prospectus of the company states at length the objects for which it was established, among which are: "To promote, develop, work, carry on industries, undertakings and colonization schemes in Palestine, in Syria and in any other part of the world which may, in the opinion of the council, be to the interest of the Jewish race in any country or place. Also, to promote, develop, work and carry on immigration into any country or countries, and in particular, to promote and work the immigration of persons of the Jewish race into Syria, Palestine and other countries in the East."—Boston Herald, April 10.

If a Man Die is He Dead?

Dear Restitution:

Last Sunday being Easter, our preacher took for his text, "If a man die shall he live again?" Our preacher does not believe that we obtain the future life through a resurrection from the grave. He says Bishop Foster doesn't believe, nor does Lyman Abbott. When the old house is taken down, he says we step out as the chicken does from its shell, and think no more of the old frame than the chicken does of the old shell. He spoke like one who had been there, and just came back to tell us how it was.

He said there was no death. The writer of the verses, "My Old House," seems to think kindly of the old structure for the shelter it has afforded, through so many snows and hurricanes; but our preacher seemed to have a frown on his nicely groomed face when referred to the "mortal coil" or "tenement of clay." If Job could have met with a man like our preacher his inquiry would have been, "If a man die is he dead?" I will say, that until I began to read THE RESTITUTION I could see nothing wrong in the chicken and egg theory. The theme of Paul's preaching is now supplanted by dreams about how we take the other life, and not how it is given. According to our preacher, a vigorous pecking at the old shell, like the chicken works itself out into greater liberty.

MY OLD HOUSE.

"(Written by a Lady of Ninety-four Years.)

I hail once more my natal day,
Still in my tenement of clay,
With many favors blest.
Now he who placed the structure here
Can prop it up another year,
If he should think it best.

Long hath it stood, through snows and rain,
And braved life's fearful hurricanes,
While many a stronger fell.
The reason why we cannot see,
But what to us seems blustery
The Leader knows full well.

But now 'tis weather-worn and old;
The Summer's heat and Winter's cold
Pierce through the walls and roof.
'Tis like a garment, or a coat,
To speed their course no wherewhoot,
So gone is warp and woof.

The tottering pillars are all weak;
The poor old rusty hinges creak;
The windows, too, are dim.
These slight discomforts we'll let pass,
For, looking darkly through a glass,
We catch a hopeful gleam.

Nature and reason tell us all
This withered frame we long must fall.
When, where, or how's unknown.
We'll leave that to the Architect,
And trust his wisdom to direct
The taking of it down."

ISAAC MCCURRY.

"He who would remember the poor must do something to make the poor remember him."

Obituary.

Died on the 11th of April, Anna Lucille, youngest daughter of S. W. and Emma J. Trott; aged 8 months and 7 days. The popular explanation among church people is, "God took your loved one, your darling today, to draw parents and other sorrowing ones to the skies." I incline to the opinion that this is a slander on our heavenly Father. He surely can take no pleasure in tearing an infant from its mother's breast. He gave his Son to wean us from the excessive love of mundane things and raise us to an immortal life when he comes, but I repeat I cannot believe that he takes pleasure in wrecking homes for any cause. I am a house painter and people sometimes blame me because the paint lasts such a short time on the steps. I tell them it is not my paint, but their rough treatment of the paint is to blame. No paint will stand being scrubbed with a brush, soap, hot water and sand. And thousands of children are hurried away from this life by the carelessness of parents and nurses. Sometimes it is a fall and again something else. And God, who is very pitiful, is blamed all the time for the blunders of others. We grown up people often dig our grave with our teeth, and some use a bottle. The popular teaching in the churches makes us too careless about our own body as well as that of our little ones. The best machine I know of would come to a standstill, if treated like many of us treat our body. Our little darling was not neglected, but yet she may have come in contact with germs or gases in spite of her mother's vigilance. Any way I do not blame the Lord for it. I pray that the loss of this darling little life may cause all of us to so live that we will all be raised with her to immortality at resurrection morn.

Oh, how we do miss our sweet Anna Lucille,
Our plans are all spoiled by her leaving;
We ought to be ready and submit to God's will,
But we're crushed and we cannot help grieving.

Her Grandfather,
ISAAC MCCURRY.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME XLVIII. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, MAY 10, 1899. NUMBER 18.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Poetry.

"Keep Step With Jesus."

"Keep step with Jesus!" Can that be for me?
Oh, may I really walk by faith with Thee?
I who have often wandered far away,
And grieved thee with my coldness day by day?

How often, Master, I have "lagged behind."
And feared to follow; when thy voice so kind
Has called me on, bidding me trust in thee,
However dark the path may seem to me.

And have I not sometime stepped out alone,
Nor waited for thy hand to lead me on,
And of the future thought with anxious care,
Instead of taking "the next step" in prayer.

Afresh to-day I put my hand in thine,
With child-like trust would all to thee resign;
And lead me where thou will and guide me still,
Fulfilling in me all thy blessed will.

The Gospel Recovered. No. 16.

DRAWBACKS AND HINDRANCES.

"That they all may be one.....that the world may believe that thou hast sent me."

In the previous article a number of statements, in which the simplicity of the gospel was maintained by Dr. Thomas, were quoted. It was also noted that at the same time he took part with, and practically approved of a certain section of the brotherhood who excommunicated certain others on account of disagreement on secondary questions. The Doctor's partiality for speculation was also noticed, and his "gladiatorial" zeal in contending for opinions on admittedly non-vital points of doctrine. Of the evil of this he was not ignorant, having had experience of it as early as 1835, from certain treatment he complains of received from the "Reformation" in connection with the 34 questions headed "Information wanted." His reference, in 1849 (Elpis Israel) to the "rubbish" of "creeds," etc. and "leaving" spiritual guides alone in all their glory," was quoted.

In further prosecuting the subject of these papers it seems fitting to mention here that most of Dr. Thomas' followers both in America and in Britain were persons of the stamp who had left "spiritual guides" previously. A specimen of this he himself records in the "Herald of the Kingdom," Vol. III. (1853) p. 36. Referring to his correspondence with some brethren in Dundee about 1850, he says:—"It was contended," in the words of one of them, writing to me that human traditions and practices should receive no quarters; that human praise and popular plans should be treated as dangerous.....You know we disapprove of all clericals of whatever name or degree, and discountenance the assumptions of all hierarchs from Christ's pretended Vicar on earth to Baptist pastors, and their minic 'presidents.'"

Apropos of this, Dr. Thomas, among his numerous condemnatory remarks on the socalled Fathers of the early centuries, censures their departure from the simplicity of the gospel. Thus in "Eureka," Vol. I. p. 440, "Origen was a man of very presumptuous spirit which impelled him to philosophize to the destruction of the faith. He was never content with plain truth but ever hunting after something singular and extraordinary." Speaking of Eusebius he says:—p. 449, "He was the most learned of all the Christians, whose learning and philosophy were inimical to the simplicity which is in Christ."

In another extract from "Eureka" the Doctor makes a statement which appears to me so exactly descriptive of those who adopted the name "Christadelphian" especially in Britain, that I crave the liberty to give it here:—"This class of men were a serious and fatal trouble to Paul and the Ecclesias. They first made their appearance on the page of New Testament history in Acts xv. 1-5. Their new-fangled crotchet was that the belief of the gospel of the kingdom, and baptism, were not sufficient for salvation; but that a disciple must besides, or in addition to this, be circumcised and keep the law of Moses. This dogma was their stock in trade.....the basket of small wares with which they began the world." Vol. I., p. 195.

In case any explanation may be required of the application of the preceding paragraph to the Christadelphian position, I beg to make the following remarks. The view always taken of the Birmingham position by the present writer, was that the "Record" or creed was not a mere list of doctrines to be accepted by believers of the gospel of the kingdom in order to church fellowship, but a creed in the true sense (credo, I believe). This view right or wrong, found expression in the Church Messenger, in June 1873, as follows:—"The real difference between the Christadelphians and us is —not such points as mortal or immortal resurrection in themselves, but their making such points necessary to saving faith, and consequently, to church fellowship; and that, while we, as a body, do not make such points essential, individuals use their own discretion in maintaining their own views, both sides being represented in our fellowship; and also that our public advocacy of the truth is properly confined to the fundamental truths, irrespective of such details as are involved in mortal resurrection, etc."

In justification of the statement in the previous paragraph, I quote the closing sentence of the "Record" of the Ecclesia in Birmingham, England, issued somewhere in the later sixties. The "Record" consisted of 34 articles, positive and negative; truths to be believed and fables to be rejected. The nature of Christ, mortal resurrection, nature of Satan, etc. make up the staple of the document. "The sting," however, "is in its tail:"—"That the foregoing facts, doctrines, and principles constitute the whole counsel of God declared by the Apostles for enlightenment unto salvation, and form the only basis for saving faith for Jews and Gentiles in the present dispensation."

That there can be no mistake as to the significance of the paragraph just quoted, I find in the Church Messenger, Dundee, July, 1873, the following utterance of the editor of the Christadelphian. The following question had been put to him, "Who hath required it at your hands to contend for anything beyond 'the faith once delivered to the saints.'" The answer is "It is required at the hands of every believer to contend earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints, and therefore of me. But says, You contend for something beyond the faith." This is his mistake. Not one of the things I contend for is outside the faith once delivered to the saints. It would, of course, take a book to show this. A rejoinder to this naturally contains these words:—"It would take a book to show this." Well, if such a book has not been written, why not write it? It is as necessary as much that he has written; and he surely does not expect professed disciples of twenty years' standing, and who for years stood side by side with himself to admit the essentiality, upon insufficient demonstration, of propositions upon obstruse subjects, upon which even Christadelphians are not agreed." Aug., 1873. "The faith was 'delivered' not later than A. D. 33. If 'mortal resurrection' was ever delivered, it was earlier than A. D. 59—the date of 1 Cor. being twenty-six years after thousands had been baptized. Paul tells the Corinthians that they had received the gospel at a former time, which Acts xviii. shows to have been five years before. How, then, could 'mortal resurrection' be essential?"

In singular, but most unaccountable connection with this "Record," is another publication entitled the 'Christadelphian Trumpet' issued by the Birmingham Ecclesia. A church, in objecting to creeds, and especially to the Birmingham 'Record,' which had been proposed to them as a basis for Union said, "Our position is very well indicated in the Christadelphian Trumpet sent to us along with the 'Record.'"

"Beware of clerical.....liturgies, articles, creeds, and so forth, which are detestable even to nausea, as polluting and of no avail, and fit only, in the expressive words of no avail, and fit only, in the expressive words of the Spirit, to be spewed out of the mouth."

"We know no reason why unclerical articles and creeds, by whatever name they may be called should be exempt from this warning, seeing that being but human, they must partake, in a greater or less degree of error either in substance or form, or in both." Church Messenger, August, 1873.

Trine Immersion.

After my three articles were finished and in the hands of the Editor, I came into possession of some more facts which I desire to place before our readers. It is urged with a great deal of satisfaction that history gives support to the doctrine of a three-fold baptism, that it was practised among the Christians at an early date and that this is further a reason why we should practice it. That Tertullian, who lived A. D. 150-220, speaks of candidates in his day being "thrice immersed" is a fact, but that we should on this account also use this manner of baptism does by no means follow. I will cite at some length from this noted Father, the founder of the socalled "Latin Christianity." He says, in his treatise on the Chaplet (De Corona). Let us inquire therefore, whether tradition, unless it be written, should not be admitted. Certainly we say that it ought not to be admitted, if no cases of other practices, which we maintain on the ground of tradition alone, affords us any precedent. To deal with this matter briefly, I shall begin with baptism. When we are going to enter the water, but a little while before, in the presence of the congregation and under the hand of the president, we solemnly profess that we disown the devil, and his pomp and his angels. Hereupon we are thrice immersed, making a somewhat ampler pledge than the Lord has appointed in the gospel. Then when we are taken up (as newborn children) we taste first of all a mixture of milk and honey, and from that day we refrain from the daily bath for a whole week. We take also in congregations before daybreak, and from the hands of none but presidents, the sacrament of the Eucharist, which the Lord both commanded to be eaten at meal times, and enjoined to be taken by all alike .....As often as the anniversary comes around we make offerings for the dead as birthday honors. We count fasting or kneeling in worship on the Lord's Day to be unlawful. We rejoice in the same privelege also from Easter to Whitsunday.....At every forward step or movement, at every going in or out, when we put on our clothes or shoes, when we bathe, when we sit at table, when we light the lamps, on couch, on seat, in all the ordinary actions of daily life, we trace upon the forehead the sign (i. e. of the cross). Ante-Nicene Fathers III. 94, 95. Reader, note what he says: that they made "a somewhat ampler pledge than the Lord had appointed in the gospel." I understand "ample" to mean large, wide, spacious, and it also carries the idea of comprehensiveness. Now, why require a more comprehensive pledge than that enjoined in the gospel? Certainly the Lord left none of the work he came to do, unfinished: neither did he authorize any who should appear later to amplify or enlarge the gospel injunctions. Can not every reader plainly see that this "amplification," on the part of those in authority, was entirely out of order? But, as Mosheim in his Church History very properly says, "There is no institution so pure and excellent which the corruption and folly of man will not in time alter for the worse, and load with additions foreign to its nature and original design. Such in a particular manner was the fate of Christianity. In this (second) century many unnecessary rites and ceremonies were added to the Christian worship.....These changes disfigured the beautiful simplicity of the gospel."

After making the foregoing remarks on baptism, etc., Tertullian continues: "If for these and other such rules, you insist upon having positive Scripture injunction, you will find none. Tradition will be held forth to you as the originator of them, custom as their strengthener, and faith as their observer." And he lived and wrought in the same century in which as Mosheim says, these innovations were made. So confessedly "no Scripture injunction" for trine immersion, no command of him to whom all authority in heaven and on earth has been given, but for practice the decree of custom, and for doctrine the commandments of men. And this during the same time in which trinitarianism was formulated into a system and introduced into the doctrine of the church.

I will add just one more example, which shows what a bearing the doctrine of the "three persons in the Godhead" had upon the subject of baptism. I cite from a document entitled "Constitutions of the Holy Apostles," brought into use prior to A. D. 325. In the 50th canon it is said: "If any bishop or presbyter does not perform the three immersions of the one admission, but one immersion, which is given into the death of Christ, let him be deprived; for the Lord did not say, 'Baptize into my death,' but, 'Go ye and make disciples of all nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost. Do ye therefore, O bishops, baptize thrice into one Father, and Son, and Holy Ghost, according to the will of Christ, and our constitution by the Spirit." So it was unlawful, according to this man-made "constitution," to baptize with one immersion into the death of Christ." Either the framers of this document were not in possession of Paul's epistles to the Romans and the Corinthians, or else they maliciously set aside the statements of Paul," a servant of Jesus Christ," that "as many as were baptized into Jesus Christ, were baptized into his death." Rom. vi. 3, 4. See also 1 Cor. xv. 29; Col. ii. 12; 1 Peter iii. 21. They seemed to have lost sight of the fact that baptism typifies a burial and resurrection; and that to be "baptized into Christ Jesus" (Gal. iii. 27) is not only to bear his name, but also to share his reproach, his suffering, his death, as well as resurrection; to be associated with him in all his relations. No wonder, therefore, that we find also the following sentiments in the socalled "teaching of the twelve Apostles: "Concerning baptism, thus baptize ye: Having first said all these things, baptize into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit, in living (i. e. running) water. But if thou have not living water, baptize into other water; and if thou canst not in cold, in warm. But if thou have not either, pour out water thrice upon the head into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit." Of course, if baptism is comparatively unimportant and meaningless, it matters little what its form may be, just so we "retain the substance," as Calvin said, "that is, the words;" and pouring will do just as well and will be just as satisfactory as immersion, and much more convenient. But by all means, and whatever else we sacrifice, we must jealously guard the doctrine of "three in one," even if we must warp and bend other things, so as to suit our theory. This is about the line of reasoning pursued by those who introduced THREE IMMERSIONS FOR ONE BAPTISM.

Brethren of the one faith of the gospel, let us hold fast the form of sound words and the ordinances of the Lord Jesus Christ, as given by himself and practiced by his Apostles. Let us read our faith out of the Book; and what cannot be read in plain terms from the oracles of God, let it go to its own place as coming from man.

And again, One God, the Father; one Lord, Jesus the Christ; one faith, of the gospel; one baptism, of obedience to the faith, into the one name in which alone there is salvation.

A. H. ZILSEN.

Day Follows Night.

Night with its sable gloom is now upon us—the midnight hour approaches—the darkness is appalling. The oppressor spreads forth like the green bay tree, and for greed of gain grinds to earth the poor who live by toil. His hard heart is impervious to the appeal of the hungry or the cry of the needy widows and orphans which have pierced the heavens, and "entered into the ears of the Lord of Sabbaoth," and vengeance will not always slumber. Thick clouds appear—the storm gathers—the distant hills echo with ominous mutterings. Sentence is pronounced—"Weep and howl for your miseries that shall come upon you." The charge is—you have kept back by fraud," the hire of your laborers who have reaped down your fields," "ye have condemned and killed the just," "ye have lived in pleasure on the earth and been wanton, ye have nourished your hearts as in a day of slaughter," and our just God avers—"it shall eat your flesh as it were fire."

The hour of retribution hastens. In the lurid sky threatening lightnings will play, its forked tongues darting hither and thither will terrify the cowardly heart of the oppressor, his lips will quiver, his face gather paleness. The Lord has heard the cry:—"How long, O Lord, holy and true dost thou not judge and avenge our blood on them that dwell on the earth?"

Misrule, oppression and crime of the darkest hue is prevalent. The insane desire for wealth has led to the formation of unholy combinations called trusts, (but are in truth mistrusts) organized to gain wealth out of the people, by controlling the prices of the necessaries of life.

But the day hastens when terrified "Kings of the earth, and the great men, and the chief captains," will hide themselves in the dens and rocks of the mountains, and say "to the mountains and rocks, fall on us, and hide us from the face of him that sitteth on the throne, and from the wrath of the Lamb, for the great day of his wrath is come, and who shall be able to stand?"

Let me repeat the question, "Who shall be able to stand?" Will you and I "be able to stand?" dear reader, the last trials and judgments of the darkest hour of the night? Will we be able to stand composed and without fear, no matter what may happen? It is in our power to do so. A consciousness of a right relationship with God, will drive away all fear. Believe and obey from the heart the ancient faith of the gospel, and afterward before every act of your life, ask yourself this one question: Would Jesus do it? and then act as you think Jesus would do were he in your place, without regard to personal consequences, and you will surely be "able to stand." Let us try it. It will cost something. Can we carry the cross?

The night is far spent, and even now in the east, omens of coming day appear. The swelling buds revive hope that winter with its storms and icy reign will soon melt before the genial breath of spring. But the shadows of night still linger on the plain while on the mountain-tops gleams of glory gild their lofty peaks, as the sun emerges from behind their colossal banks. What means it? What does it portend? Why just this, it is the Sun of Righteousness rising higher, and still higher, and with still increasing brilliancy as the gloomy night fades away before its majestic approach, with a beauty and glory far excelling the magnificent orb of day in its noon-day splendor. The thought is enrapturing, and the vision transporting. Around the Sun of Righteousness is seen a grand retinue of angels arrayed in robes of light.

Listen, what is it we hear? It is the sound of a trumpet, its blasts pierces the secret caverns of the dead, in every land, and clime and even in the stormy depths of the sea; its echo is also heard, over hill-top and vale, in the valley, and over mountain-tops. The golden harvest of God's precious jewels is being garnered to shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father. See them rise in clouds to meet the coming King. What a glorious sight! They are like the Son of God! Oh, what magnificent glory! The excellent splendor of angels pales into significance, because they are made like unto the Son of God. At this time the weary night will have flown and given place to the morning of an endless day—"the sun riseth, a morning without clouds; as the tender grass springing out of the earth, by clear shining after rain." The Bright and Morning Star has appeared and shed its early morning lustre. "And the city had no need of the sun, neither of the moon to shine in it; for the glory of God did lighten it. And the Lamb is the light thereof." "There shall be no night there."

The vista of futurity is unveiled. God's will is accomplished. Gladness beams from every eye, and songs of joy break forth from every heart, and all nature responds—Amen.

Drops of Honey.

Sometimes we do not care to know all about a subject; it wearies us; we want little restful thoughts, full of sweetness and comfort—just a paragraph or two, that is like a few unexpected drops of honey to a tired child. We need these, they help us to get comfortably through the long day's toil. Without them we might stumble: with them we can climb. When there is plenty of time, and we feel well and strong, we like to go the bottom of things, or "to get inside of the bones," as the school boy expressed it, but when there is only a moment, and we can but stop to taste, we are glad that somebody has prepared food for just such an emergency. We can read and go away satisfied. God seems nearer and the world brighter. "The shadows flee away," and our hearts are full of melody, for home, our everlasting home, is but a few steps away. We can be patient a little longer now, for the little paragraph has said,

"Tell o' the glittering sparrows
Not one o' them can fa'l"

Editor Restitution:

Our Conference work is progressing very nicely, the prospects are for a good work. Some brethren from outside the State are making contributions to the cause, for which we are very thankful. Bro. Clint Wilson of Blythdale, Mo., will assist in the tent work; he is a young man and this will be his first experience. The young men should be encouraged to take the field, for they are needed to take the place of the old ones who are dropping off. My prayer is, Lord, let thy blessing rest upon the work.

Plymouth, Indiana, May 10, 1899.

In this paper will appear an article by Brother Joblin on the "Covenants of Promise." Those of our readers who have followed the articles that have appeared from time to time on this subject, know that now all the argument and proof that is necessary has been given, and we ask that the discussion further be kept out of the paper. Bro. Joblin has plainly set the matter forth for all to see, and Bro. Adams has had a chance to do the same, so we wish for the good of all that it be left as it is, and each may study the question, and so decide for himself.

From the Independent-Democrat of Oregon, Ill., we clip the following notice of the meeting held there on April 30:—

"The opening services of the new stone church, last Sunday, were largely attended, the edifice being crowded at the meetings in the forenoon, afternoon and evening. About forty out of town brethren were in attendance, Lanark, Adeline, Antioch and Forreston being represented. Elder Hadley delivered three excellent sermons, and, by the way, he is one of the most forcible, entertaining and pleasing divines who has ever labored with Oregon audiences. Services will continue throughout this and next week with the exception of Saturday night, and the people of our city and surrounding territory are invited to attend these meetings, resting assured that it will be time profitably spent.

From the Chicago Tribune of May 6, we clip the following:—

"Secretary Hay has received details of the new railroad which is to cross the Holy Land. The proposed capital is $50,000,000, but no shares will be put on the market, so it is said, until the line is completed as far as Nazareth. The road will run from Haifa, a seaport town seventy-five miles south of Beirut, to Damascus, a distance of 142 miles, and the project includes an extension from Damascus to Bagdad and the Persian Gulf.

While the Jaffa-Jerusalem, the Beirut-Damascus-Hauran, and the Lebanon tramways are narrow gauge concerns the Haifa-Damascus railway will be of standard width. It is primarily intended to tap the great Hauran wheat regions, which are only partly developed, being still under the sway of Bedouins and Druze tribes, and to afford another outlet for the growing trade of Damascus, the largest city in Asiatic Turkey.

Active operations commenced last month on the division between Haifa and the Jordan, and the line is to be completed in less than two years as far as Damascus. The Thames Iron works being crowded with orders it is likely rails, locomotives, and other material will be bought in the United States."

March of Events in the East.

According to a dispatch from St. Petersburg to the Lokal Anzeiger (Berlin) on April 30, the Shah of Persia on March 1, signed a concession to a Russian Mining Company covering the whole province of Ozorbaijan, the most northerly province of Persia, having an area of over 30,000 square miles. The concession is for seventy years. The province contains rich copper deposits, and the company will exploit the tract for metals and gems, and construct railways, roads and harbors.

On May 1, the Frankfurter Zeitung (Berlin) published a dispatch from Bagdad, Asiatic Turkey, asserting that Great Britain has already taken steps to counteract the efforts of the Russian expedition which recently completed a survey for the extension of the Tiflis and Vars railway from a point on the Little Zab River, northeast of Bagdad, to the Persian Gulf. According to the advices in question a British gunboat has been sent to the Persian Gulf, presumably with the object of taking possession of the mouths of the rivers Euphrates and Tigris.

Under date of London, May 2, we learn by a dispatch the Marquis of Salisbury, Prime Minister and Minister of Foreign Affairs, and A. J. Balfour, first Lord of the Treasury announced in the House of Lords and in the House of Commons respectively, the general drift of the Anglo-Russian agreement regarding the spheres of influence of the governments of Great Britain and Russia in China, as has already been made known. Under date of St. Petersburg May 2, we have the following relating to the above compact:—"The Anglo-Russian agreement with reference to the 'spheres of influence' in China is not in the form of a convention, but is set forth in a note, duplicates of which have been exchanged between the Russian Minister of Foreign affairs, and the British Ambassador to Russia, Sir Charles S. Scott. The preamble states that both countries agree to uphold the integrity and independence of the Chinese Empire. [A rather novel way to begin to uphold the integrity and independence of the Chinese Empire, is it, for two of the most powerful nations in the world to agree mutually upon their privileges in that Empire without asking its consent.]

Un Ting-Fang, Chinese Minister to the United States, in an address before the American Academy of Political and Social Science at Philadelphia the second week in April, is said to have set forth the missionary question to his audience so dispassionately, and without the least show of prejudice, that the truth of his argument left his hearers dumb. He said Christian nations had forced themselves into China with sword and musket, and compelled the Chinese to enter into treaties regardless of their prejudices, and they were compelled after a bloody war to add a clause admitting missionaries to proselyte among them; and that the missionaries began by assailing the doctrines of Confucius, which represented a development of three thousand years, asking the Chinese to discard them and accept at once a revealed religion of more recent date. Continuing, he said the Chinese wanted to see what Christianity had done for the Christians, and a lamentable exhibit has been before them from the day the Christian powers first broke into China until the present hour, and added that today Russia, Great Britain, France, and Germany were armed intruders upon their soil; and while their missionaries are preaching the gospel of the Prince of Peace their governments are seizing Chinese territory; and not only ordering China to stand and deliver, but are quarreling among themselves over the division of the spoil before it is delivered into their hands. The Detroit "Tribune" says: Under such circumstances it is no wonder that furious mobs rage against the "foreign devils," and stone the missionaries to death, and burn their mission houses. They suspect that the missionaries are sent to chloroform them with false doctrine while their masters commit a stupendous burglary, and this explains the reluctance of China to accept anything at the hand of Christian nations.

The minister asked, supposing that a number of Confucian proselyters in large American cities met with troubles of their own raising, what would be the consequence if, instead of taking hostile demonstrations of this character philosophically, they should lose their temper, call in the aid of the police, and report the case to the Government at Washington for official interference? I verily believe that such action would render missionaries so obnoxious to the American people as to put an end to their usefulness, and that the American government would cause a law to be enacted against them as public nuisances. Can it be wondered at then, that now and then we hear of riots occurring against missionaries in China, notwithstanding the precautionary measures taken by the local authorities to protect them?.....What I desire to point out is that the preaching of the gospel of Christ in the interior of China (except with great tact and discretion) will, in the nature of things, now and then run counter to popular prejudice and lead to some disturbance."

[These wholesome truths ought to show the advocates of the world's conversion idea, the madness of going in the face of revealed truth on this, as well as other matters. Even if the missionaries had the glorious gospel of the grace of God to offer the people, the diabolical work of their respective governments would go far to destroy their influence for good,—much more so must it when they have only a spurious gospel to offer.

The language of the Minister respecting Russia was most remarkable. He likened it to the leviathan, which, "having no vitals, cannot be mortally wounded, however severe the blow may be. With limitless numbers entrenched in her remote and unassailable strongholds she can neither be ousted from her possessions nor prevented from advancing. "It is," he said, "madness to abate one particle of the issue and declare that something ought to be conceded for the cause of peace, to pretend as do some Englishmen, already weary of the strain, that Russia, if given Northern China, or Constantinople, or a port on the Persian Gulf, will be content. She is not striving for portions, but for the whole of Asia; when she has gained this she knows, and we must eventually agree, that nothing human can resist her."

[Most remarkable utterances from a heathen Chinese. One would almost conclude that he had graduated in the school of the prophets, and foresaw the conclusion of the preparatory work of him who is preparing a place for his people, where only squatter sovereignty now prevails. We thank God that his purposes have so far ripened that state-craft seems to have, not only a foregleam of the rule of Russia in the latter days but of the ONE irresistible power it will come in contact with.]

"The Covenants of Promise" Again.

Forty-five years ago it was our privilege to hear for the first time, the "Gospel of the Kingdom" that Jesus in Matt. xxiv. 14 said should be preached in all the world for a witness. We had been a pious sinner in one of the popular churches for several years at that time. Yes, a devout sinner. We had inherited a religious tendency, but as to the gospel of Christ, which is the power God employs to save, we knew absolutely nothing,—not one item of the unadulterated truth of God did we know,—and not knowing it, how could we believe it? Not a particle of did we have,—and therefore could not please him. Heb. xi. 6. The reason of this was that faith cometh by hearing the Word of God, Rom. x. 17, and is not something infused or pumped into a person by excitement or animal magnetism. In other words, religious excitement is not faith in God. It is just religious excitement, and that is all. It is good to be religiously excited if while in that condition the can be heard and believed, as was the case with the three thousand at Pentecost. But instead of that, we were told to just come to Jesus,—believe that he died in our stead and paid it all, and ask him to pardon us, and he would surely do it, and save us then and there, and heaven above, at death, would be our home, and our chief occupation through endless ages would be singing hallelujah choruses.

FAITH IN GOD

NOT A WORD OF TRUTH

is there in all this. Moreover, we were taught that there was an eternal hell of fire awaiting us at death. If we neglected this so-called gospel. The God of the Bible was represented as composed of three persons; and one of the three consented to be born of a woman in order to die instead of us, and so appease the wrath of the other two persons in the Godhead. This voluntary victim was called Jesus Christ as if one was the given name and the other the surname. Not knowing the gospel of the kingdom, it will be seen that we had no Christ at all. We believed in a Jesus, but had

NO CHRIST AT ALL.

There was no room for an Anointed One in the kind of gospel presented to us, and no need of one. The heaven-going doctrine nullified the glowing prophecies of the good time coming, and so, doctrinally, were considered out of date, and the New Testament as all sufficient for salvation purposes. But when it was shown to us that the Gospel Age began in Eden, and that later on God severely tested a man and then constituted him the

FATHER OF THE FAITHFUL,

because he believed the promises which embraced all the blessings he purposed to bestow upon mankind, and called it an everlasting covenant, and during hundreds of years unfolded to his servants further details of the Original Purpose;—yes; when it dawned upon us that the gospel of the kingdom Jesus preached was based upon the covenant to Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and David, where the territory and the throne and even the King is specially provided, then, the Bible became as if it had dropped down from heaven.

A NEW BOOK TO US,

On coming into the United States some six years later we found matters relating to the truth of God in a very unsettled state. The definite-timists who were disappointed in 1844 formed one party, and had nothing different to the popular churches, except that the Lord was coming soon to destroy the earth, and all the wicked were to be sent to hell forever; another party believed the Lord was coming, but had learned that man was mortal and could not exist for ever in fire and sulphur; and that the wages of sin was death, and that the righteous would inherit the earth, but that there was to be no probation after the coming of the Lord.

Alexander Campbell, then in the height of his power and popularity was trying in his way to restore Christianity, by uniting all denominations into One Body, by confessing that and by being immersed for the remission of sins, and accepting the idea that the Church is the kingdom of God, and that it was set upon the day of Pentecost,—Jesus reigning on the throne of David in heaven, and, in fulfillment of Matt. xix. 28 the Apostles were reigning over the 12 tribes of spiritual Israel (the members of the church) by their Epistles. And lastly, that the "New Institution," as he styled this system, was based upon THE COVENANT PROMISED IN JEREMIAH xxxi. 31. Take a note of this historic fact, reader, it may assist you further on.

In addition to the above mentioned agitators or investigators and would-be reformers, there were others who believed the Lord was coming to restore all things God's prophets had foretold, see Acts iii. 20, 21; and who had searched out the glorious truth that Christ and his resurrected and glorified saints would unroll the last and of Redemption's story when he comes, that the residue of men may seek after the Lord. See Acts xv. 20, 21. Further research had disclosed that the whole of the riches of God's grace, including the Redeemer, in all his offices and work as prophet, priest, sacrifice, Mediator, Life-Giver and King had been promised—covenanted—to Abraham and David in an Everlasting Covenant comprising numerous promises,—and that these promises were and all his desire. And when to this it was found from Rom. iv. 13-16 that these promises to Abraham are only sure to those who walk in the steps of the faith of Abraham, and that Christ had died to make it possible for Gentiles to share Abraham's blessing, Gal. iii. 14; and from verse 8 of the same chapter that the promise of these blessings was gospel to Abraham, they conferred not with flesh and blood but joyfully accepted Abraham's faith in order to receive a part of the blessing. And then, in the very nature of things, they had to confess it and teach it in connection with the name of Jesus Christ and the conditions upon which he taught us we could be joint-heirs with him and Abraham.

Bros. Wilcox, Wagoner, Halstead, Reed, Wilson, Hall, Thompson, McLauchlan, Woodruff, Lent, Hoyt, Townsend, Dwiggins, Moyer, Hatch, Adams, Woodward, Tuttle, Anthony, Bowles, Curtis, Lehman, Crozier, Tomkins, Clinkenbeard and others still survive as witnesses of the exhaustive discussions which took place over the Three-fact Gospel, the world-burning theory, the Restoration of Israel, The Age-to-Come doctrine, what baptism was for, what to believe as pre-requisite to baptism, the covenants of promise, etc., etc., before things assumed definite shape, and three or four different Advent churches with their respective organs resulted,—while those of the Abrahamic faith, or the majority of them organized through the various States as the "Church of God;" others under the leadership of Dr. Thomas took the name of Christadelphians while the war of the rebellion was in progress, ostensibly to conform to the law which allowed exemption from military duty.

THE ESSENTIAL GOSPEL,

It may be seen from the prospectus at the right upper corner of the first page of THE RESTITUTION, that it represents which makes it its special duty to call men to God's kingdom and glory, and make it clear to them that if they are strangers to the covenants of promise in which God pledges himself to set up that kingdom, which is to be Israelitish from the King of kings, and Lord of lords, down to the lowest official, who became Abraham's Seed and an heir according to promise, through becoming Christ's. Every saint being the seed of Abraham, faithwise.

In THE RESTITUTION for April 12, a correspondent who has written considerable of late respecting the "covenants of promise" says he has been pained by writers in THE RESTITUTION because they intimate that he does not believe the covenants of promise. And, judging by the wishes of more than a dozen brethren and sisters that we would review what they regard as "very erroneous and injurious statements," the author of them would likely be pained as much as he will by our complying with their request. We expect to give him some pain, but we assure him that we will say nothing for the purpose of giving him pain, but at the same time we shall expose what we believe to be gospel nullifying statements even if they are likely to give pain.

In the first place, we do not object to the gentleman believing what he conscientiously believes to be truth. We have not assailed his theory. He took exceptions to a statement of ours that the covenant of Jeremiah xxxi. 31 was not the new covenant which was confirmed by the blood of Christ and called in Heb. xiii. 20, and asked our reasons, and we gave them respectfully, (not knowing what he believed) and PROVED that the covenant God made with Abraham was the everlasting covenant, and after the death of Abraham the same everlasting covenant was made with Isaac, and some forty-four years after that the same everlasting covenant was made with Jacob; and about 450 years later still, additional promises were made to David respecting an everlasting kingdom to be established in the land covenanted to Abraham in and concerning the King that should occupy the throne of it, and that it promised life to David also, for he is to witness it,—he is to be there; it says so, 2 Sam. vii. 16; and in the last words of David in 2 Sam. xxiii. 5, he tells us that these promises were an "everlasting covenant, ordered in all things and sure." And beyond all that, he said they were

THE ORIGINAL DOCUMENT,

ALL HIS SALVATION,

and all his desire, or hope. What more could he desire but life in the everlasting kingdom of God under the sceptre of his Greater Son, who was to be the Son, also of God? In addition to this we proved that what the correspondent regards as the everlasting covenant ratified and confirmed by

THE BLOOD OF CHRIST,

viz., that promised in Jer. xxxi. 31 was promised to the mortal descendants of Abraham when the Lord Jesus returns to Zion; and the testimony was so conclusive that he dared not attempt to refute it, but instead attempted to fortify his own position by Scriptures that were ENTIRELY MISAPPLIED.

Under these circumstances we cannot help him, because he ignores divine testimony, and therefore we from this point ignore him as much as possible, and deal only with the obnoxious statements in THE RESTITUTION as if they emanated from an unknown person, and for the benefit of others,—but in dismissing the author, personally, we might say that it would be amusing to be told that he did not yet know for what purpose we have come together as the Church of God, if it were not a matter of eternal life and an everlasting inheritance to us.

The first statement we will examine, reads as follows:

"A covenant of promise, I understand is something promised in such covenant."

True,—but notice,

1. The covenant promised in Jeremiah xxxi. does not promise life after death.

2. The blood of Christ imparted life-giving power to some covenant, and it was the everlasting covenant, for Heb. xiii. 20 declares that Jesus was raised by God through the blood of the everlasting covenant.

3. The phrase, "The blood of the everlasting covenant" is proof that the everlasting covenant did promise life from the dead, but was powerless to fulfil it without the blood of Christ.

4. Jesus says in Matt. xxvi. 28, "This is my blood of the New Testament, which is shed for many for the remission of sins." This shows that the term "New Testament," and the term "Everlasting Covenant" refer to the same instrument.

5. The word "Testament" in Matt. xxvi. 28, and the word covenant in Heb. xiii. 20 are both translated from the Greek word diatheke, which is the only Greek word that can be rendered "Testament." And Dr. Campbell, endorsed by Dr. Buck, says, "diatheke" is the proper word for covenant. And the Revised Version renders diatheke in Heb. ix. 16, 17, Testament, and in the margin, it is said, that it signifies both covenant and testament.

6. A Testament is a will.

7. God made the will which the blood of Jesus was about to give effect to. Proof.—Psa. xl. 6: "Then said I, Lo, I come: in the volume of the book it is written of me. I delight to do THY WILL, O, my God." This is applied to Christ in Heb. x. 9, 10.

8. The Spirit informs us some four hundred years before the covenant recorded in the volume of the book that he was coming to do the Father's will, and when in sad Gethsemane he said, "Not my will, but thine be done," we can understand the dear Lord when he said, "This is my blood of the New Testament," or will.

9. All this is in perfect harmony with Jesus, in beginning at Moses, and all the prophets, the Psalms and all the Scriptures, and expounding unto them the things concerning himself. And when the everlasting covenant was all David's salvation and all his desire, is it not absolutely certain that he trusted in the oath confirmed will, or Testament or covenant for salvation? How else would he know he would rise from the dead in Christ's likeness?

It would be highly culpable not to notice the following injurious statements:—

"There is no remission of sins promised in the Abrahamic covenant, while in the new there is, Matt. xxvi. 28; Heb. viii. 12, 13; Heb. ix. 12-15."

There are two things here which must be condemned; first, the statement that there is no remission of sins promised in the Abrahamic covenant; and second, one of the boldest assumptions we ever remember to have met with, and then passages of Scripture are offered as proof that have not a shadow of proof in them. We do not impugn the writer's motives, but we tremble for him, because he does not seem to realize the responsibility assumed in such utterances.

May God help us to show him how he errs, that he may repent, and as far as possible undo the mischief done.

Remission of sin is forgiveness of sin,—to absolve from sin—the state of a forgiven person is a justified state. Abraham had been unjust or unrighteous, but is now reckoned just, or righteous. Abraham was a sinner, he became a saint. As to the process or principle on which this sainthip, or justification was brought about, we read in Gen. xv. 6, that he believed in the Lord, and that his belief in the Lord was counted to him for righteous, and so he was rid of his sin on precisely the same principle as Paul and his brethren at Rome were, when he wrote them, that "Therefore being justified (from sin) by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ." If it be asked what it was he believed that brought about the glorious change, we will let Paul tell us what God preached to him,—he tells us in Gal. iii. 8, it was

THE GOSPEL.

This ought to clear up everything. He got rid of his sins on the same principle as we do; we have to believe the same gospel as he did. It may be objected that it says in the New Testament that there is no remission of sins without the shedding of blood. True, but that principle has been enforced all the way from Eden. A gospel promise was made while the disobedient ones were trying

TO HIDE THEIR SHAME

with fig leaves; and if it was not through belief of this gospel and compliance with the conditions exacted of them, that immediate death was averted, and a lingering one substituted so that he could have another probation, what was it? Is not the coat of skin the origin of the utterance of the Psalmist regarding the blessedness of him whose sin is covered, etc? And might it not explain why we have to put on Christ as a garment to cover our sin. As the skins for a covering could not be obtained without the shedding of blood, we think we see in this the

BEGINNING OF THE SACRIFICES

which were continued till he came, of whom from first to last, they were typical. If this be not so, what made the difference between the offerings of Cain and Abel? If this be so, then the explanation is, that Abel, in the divine way, acknowledged that he was a sinner and deserved a violent death, like that of the animal, and Cain acknowledged nothing of the kind. We are afraid we do not see Christ in Moses and the Prophets and the Psalms as much as we should.

WATCH NOAH

building an altar as soon as he and his had safely landed,—watch Abraham doing the same on arriving in the land God showed him,—look at him as he toils up Mount Moriah with material for a sacrifice,—listen to the Lord God as he bids Abraham to take a heifer, a goat, a ram, a turtle dove and a pigeon on the occasion of making an everlasting covenant with him. How would this shed blood show that Abraham would live after death and inherit what was promised him, except as it typified the blood of him who said this is my blood of shed for many for the remission of sins; and by which the REVIVIFIER HIMSELF was to be raised from the dead? Was not this what made him glad when by faith he saw the day of his Seed, who was raised for the justification of all believers? This may be thought to conflict with what was before said respecting justification by faith; but no; the believer is legally, justified when he believes and obeys but has to wait with Abraham and David and all others to overcome the physical effects of sin. See Act iii. 19 for the time to blot them out, and "can be uncovered no more." We need not fear the Father of the faithful expected to be SAVED IN HIS SIN. He was accounted righteous. It must be remembered that every one who in faith offered animal sacrifices foreshadowed and died symbolically in the animal, and we would like to know if this does not embody the same feature as baptism into Christ? Does not the candidate die symbolically with Christ? Is he not baptized into his death? Do they not thus confess that they deserve a violent death like Christ's?

THE NEW TESTAMENT

THE SACRIFICE OF CHRIST;

Before dismissing this part of our subject,—we would remark that circumcision was the seal of the covenant, and was a divine assurance of Abraham's righteousness; this, too, involved blood-shedding, and if proof be wanted that the cutting off of a piece of human flesh was a sign of the crucifixion of Christ, or his cutting off by death, (Dan. ix. 26), turn to Col. ii. 11, 12, 13 and read it.

Another statement far away from both truth and commonsense is this:—

"God is the Mediator of the covenant made with Abraham."

This is bad enough, but to say that the Spirit is the author of such a statement seems reckless and irreverent. It means that God made a covenant with Abraham, and then came between himself and Abraham, making it evident that the writer should not have written on this subject. What if this should prove to be misinformation on a vital theme? Heb. vi. 13-17 is referred to as authority for the above statement. But nothing could make the promises surer than did the word and oath of Jehovah to Abraham; that was not why the covenant required before it could give life. If Heb. ix. 8 had been consulted, it would have been seen that it was DEDICATION that was necessary; or as the Diaglott reads: "Hence, not even the first (covenant) was INSTITUTED without blood." To institute is the same as to dedicate in the Common Version,—both meaning to establish, set in operation, to bring into force. It required blood to do this with the first,—it also required blood to institute,—bring into force the second; not of bulls and goats, but of their antitype, the spotless Lamb of God.

Gal. iii. 17 is supposed to sustain the assertion that God was the Mediator of the Abrahamic covenant, but it is another egregious error, as we will show. Happily there is no dispute as to what covenant is referred to,—

THE CONTEXT SETTLES THAT.

The passage to which we are cited reads as follows:—"And this I say, the covenant that was confirmed before of God, in Christ,—the law which was four hundred and thirty years after, cannot disannul that it should make the promise of none effect."

Christ from the beginning has been the centre of Jehovah's Purposes,—all the promises revolve about him. Paul says the covenant was confirmed of God in Christ, that is the one anointed to be of the kingdom to be set up on the land covenanted for that purpose; the Anointed One who declared before his death even that he was the resurrection and the life; the Anointed One who said it was WRITTEN that it behooved the Anointed to suffer and to rise; the Anointed One who shed his blood for the remission of sins, and rose again for the justification of

KING ON THE THRONE

yes; the whole covenant of exceeding great and precious promises by which we might be partakers of divine nature, was confirmed of God to Abraham and Christ, the two legatees, through whom all blessings must flow to human kind, not a part of them. How preposterous to expect remission of sin, and eternal life from a secondary, or supplementary covenant.

Again, Jesus, the Anointed, is called the Faithful Witness, Rev. i. 5; this was one grand feature of his mission to witness, declare, manifest, show, and confirm, and confess. We find his testimony condensed into a brief sentence or two, by himself in John xviii. 37 where it is said, "Pilate therefore said to him [Jesus], Art thou not a King then?" Jesus answered, "Thou sayest; I am a King. For this have I been born; (Luke i. 30-33) and for this I have come into the world that I may TESTIFY TO THE TRUTH." This is what is called "the good confession" in 1 Tim. vi. 15. To what truth did he testify? Ans. To the truth that he was a King, and to that end he had been born and he had come into the world to TESTIFY to those facts, not to assume his royal prerogatives at that time. This makes the grand containing,—all embracing, central truth of God's Revelation,—and explains why it is the GOSPEL OF THE KINGDOM that is to be preached in all the world for a witness. Yes; glory to God in the highest, it carries along with it remission of sins, resurrection to a deathless life, and crowns, and thrones, and an eternal weight of glory for all who believe and obey it.

Where is the will of God that bequeathes or bestows this kingdom, and which constitutes Jesus the everlasting King on its throne, to be found? Is it to be found in Jeremiah xxxi. 31 or in the oath confirmed promises to David and Abraham? Our readers know, and we believe, that as candidates for crowns and thrones, and everlasting life, they cannot be allured by temporal blessing offered in Jer. xxxi. 31 to Israel in the flesh.

Matt. xxvi. 28; Heb. viii. 12, 13; ix. 12-15; x. 19, 20; 1 John i. 9 do not tell what the new covenant is. The writer expects his ipse dixit to be taken for it: and all who want to take it, can.

It is said that John iii. 16, 17, 36; Matt. vi. 24-27; John vi. 51, 53, Jno. xv. 1-6; are a little bit of the teachings of the new covenant which was ratified with the blood of the Lamb of God, (Matt. xxvi. 28) which cleanseth from all sin. 1 John i. 7. This covenant of grace, for by grace are ye saved, Eph. ii. 5-8; Rom. i. 16; Matt. xxxviii. 19, 20; Mark xvi. 15, 16.

There are two covenants represented by two sons in Gal. iv. 22-31, one from Sinai, and the other of Promise to Abraham. ver. 14. There is no getting around or over this. Paul and the church at Galatia had become heirs of the promise the same as Isaac was. v. 28. There is no getting around or over this. The law of commandments from Sinai had been abolished in Paul's day. Eph. ii. 15. There is no getting around or over this either, if Paul was what he claimed to be. That being the case the only remaining one was that promise recently come into force, and of which Paul and the Galatians had become children, Gal. iii. 28, and this is another impregnable fortress. And still another equally strong is found in Heb. x. where the same two covenants are referred to, and one of them is taken away—what for? Ans. of the Spirit is: "That he may ESTABLISH the second." Does it stop there? No; the second for the establishment of which the first was taken away is here called God's will, as follows:—"By the which will we are sanctified" or "Have been sanctified," as the Diaglott reads. This is what Jesus prayed for,

THEIR SANCTIFICATION.

This is the answer. But he always prays that they be sanctified through the Father's Truth. So the Father's Truth in John is the Father's will in Hebrews. James says, "Of his own will begat he us with the Word of truth." What Word of Truth? Jesus in John xv. 3, tells his disciples they were clean through the Word [of the Father] he had spoken to them. What Word was that?

THE WORD OF THE KINGDOM,

Matt. xiii. 19, which was the gospel he preached. See Mark i. 15. and Matt. iv. 23. By what authority was this Word of the kingdom preached which begat them, and sanctified them? Ans. Psa. cv. 8 says, "He hath remembered his covenant for ever, the WORD which he commanded to a thousand generations, which covenant he made with Abraham, and his oath to Isaac, and confirmed the same unto Jacob for a law [of faith] and to Israel for an everlasting covenant. Heb. vi. 17, 18, prove that the things sworn to in that covenant is the hope set before us,—not what is promised in Jer. xxxi. 31.

It is claimed Christ could not be Mediator of the Abrahamic covenant because he was a beneficiary of it or under it. If that were true, the everlasting covenant is now without a mediator, because he was raised from the dead through it. But it is not true. We have an Advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous.

The folly of the Jer. xxxi. 31, contension is further apparent from the fact that Christ is the Mediator of the New Testament that by means of death for the redemption of the transgressions that were under the first testament, they which were called might receive the promise of eternal inheritance. This applies to those who sinned while under the law, although they had been called by the exceeding great and precious promises, and accepted them by faith and rejoiced in them,—often failed, as David to obey the law perfectly, and they would never see the light unless redeemed from the curse of the law,—showing that they were heirs of God as Abraham was, without reference to the Jeremiah covenant.

The name of "covenant of grace" is borrowed from the Apostacy by Webster, and appropriated in the article in question, and called the new covenant which was ratified by the blood of the Lamb of God which cleanseth us from all sin. 1 John i.

Was Abraham worthy of eternal life and the inheritance, or did he earn or purchase his heirship? Or was the gospel promises offered to him on condition of faith and obedience, and by God's favor constituted an heir?

The Church of God believes and teaches that some of the Scriptures above referred to, and styled the covenant of grace, invite men to God's kingdom and glory; as the context proves. Others of them state the conditions on which eternal life in the kingdom can be obtained, including both faith and practice, and insist that the gospel of the kingdom preached by Jesus, and commanded by him to be preached in all the world is in force today as the divine rule of faith, (with the things concerning the name of Christ added after his death, resurrection and ascension). The Church of God holds that we have Apostolic authority to demand of every candidate for baptism belief in the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ; and that to alter these conditions as enacted in Acts viii. 12 and Acts ii. 38, would be an awful assumption of the divine authority, and constitute us a community of religious frauds.

The Church of God holds it to be its duty to do what Jude enjoins; "To contend earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints; and having traced out the names of those saints, and found them to be Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and David, and learned from Rom. iv. 11-17 that Abraham is only the father of those who walk in the steps of his faith,—we take the foundation of his faith as the foundation of ours, and set our face like a flint in defence of it, assured by Is. l. 7 that "the Lord God will help us, therefore we shall not be confounded."

How can the Church of God with one faith and one hope cruelly treat others as if in a salvable state, whom they know to have other faiths and hopes,—and utterly ignorant of the covenants of promise, and therefore without God, Christ or hope; and treat as baptism into Christ the going under water while supposing their immortal souls would wing their flight to heaven whether they have a resurrection like Christ, or not? Impossible!

Conference Notice.

The Third Quarterly Conference of the Church of God, of the Abrahamic Faith, in Indiana, will be held at the Antioch meeting-house, five miles south of Plymouth, commencing on Friday, 10 o'clock A. M. June 9, 1899, and continuing over the following Sunday.

We urge that every church organization that possibly can be represented by duly appointed delegates as their will be important business to be considered at this meeting, and we desire a full attendance.

A committee on program, which will appear later, has been appointed, and we hope to have a good, profitable meeting. We extend a welcome to all.

The Second Coming of Christ.

The second coming of our Savior will consist of two stages; the first stage when he comes for his saints and the second stage when he comes with his saints.

We read that he shall come as a thief in the night and again that he shall come with the clouds of heaven and every eye shall see him. This might seem to be a contradiction, but if any have thought so it is because it was not rightly understood.

The thief-like coming will take place when our Savior leaves his Father's throne and descends to mid-heaven, and the righteous dead are raised and the living ones who are waiting and watching for him are changed in a moment in the twinkling of an eye, and these two companies, the ones who have been resurrected, and the ones that have been translated will rise with shouts of victory on their lips, to meet the Lord in the air, as recorded by the apostle Paul.

Then the prophecy shall be fulfilled, that we find recorded Isa. xxvi., "Come, my people, enter thou into thy chambers and shut thy doors about thee, hide thyself as it were for a little moment, until the indignation be overpast. For, behold, the Lord cometh out of his place to punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity. The earth also shall disclose her blood and no more cover her slain."

After this time of trouble, the second stage of our Lord's second advent will take place. He will be seen coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory. Yes, he comes as King of kings, and he will descend to Mt. Olive's brow, followed by the saints robed in shining white with golden diadems upon their heads. He comes to take possession of his kingdom, to put down all evil, and to inaugurate a universal reign of peace. He is to be King of all the earth, and the immortalized saints will be his subordinate rulers. Then the proclamation shall be issued to the inhabitants of the earth to fear God and give glory to him for the hour of his judgment has come. This kingdom shall reach from sea to sea and from the rivers to the ends of the earth. Jerusalem shall be called the throne of the Lord, and he shall reign in Mt. Zion and before his ancients gloriously. The knowledge of the Lord shall cover the earth as the waters cover the sea. There shall be no more wars but the white banner of peace shall float from every hill-top, for we shall have a righteous King and righteous laws. This reign of peace shall continue for 1000 years. Then the nations, (mortal nations, remember not immortalized saints) will be given a final trial to test them before being permitted to enter the new earth. Those who disobey will be destroyed. John says he "saw the great white throne, and him that sat on it, and from whose face the earth and the heaven fled away." O, says one, the earth is to flee away is it? Very well, my friend, the same verse says the heaven is to flee away also. The truth is that there will be a change. Then the general resurrection takes place. All the dead are raised and judged according to their works, and whosoever was not found written in the book of life was cast into the lake of fire. This is the second death, from which there is no promise of a resurrection. This is the time spoken of by Peter. But the heavens and the earth which are now by the same word are kept in store, reserved unto fire against the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men, nevertheless we by his promise look for a new heavens and a new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness. Read all of the 3rd chapter of 2nd Peter. He says, "According to his promise we look for a new heaven and a new earth." John and Peter agree on this point, for the very next thing recorded by John after he describes the judgment and second death, is that he saw a new heaven and a new earth. Yes, the earth is to be renewed and purified; the curse removed, and death itself destroyed, for John says he saw the Holy City, the new Jerusalem, coming down out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband. And I heard a great voice out of heaven saying, Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them and be their God, and God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes, and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain, for the former things are passed away. Rev. xxi 1-5.

Christ is coming to restore the earth to more than its pristine beauty, to destroy all evil-doers, and at the time all things are made new to destroy death. The inhabitants of the new earth will never say I am sick. Never will those who are permitted to enter that fair land stand by the bedside of a dying friend. Nevermore will be seen a funeral train wending its sad way to the cemetery, these will all be over. Is it not worth striving for?

If Christ's second coming and the work that will follow it, were understood, surely all would cry, "Come, Lord, Jesus Come."

All the glories of the future, eternal life itself, depend upon his coming, without which, and a resurrection from the dead, death would be an eternal sleep, for there is no promise of eternal life for those who have gone down into the dark and silent grave except by a resurrection from the dead.

John gives us a description of that beautiful city, the New Jerusalem, which is to be the metropolis of the new earth. The walls are decked with all manner of precious stones, the streets are paved with pure gold, as it were, transparent like glass. The gates are of pearl and the throne of God, and the Lamb are to be in that city. A pure river of water of life will be there.

That city will have no need of the sun, neither of the moon to shine in it for the glory of God will lighten, and the Lamb will be the light thereof.

If we wish to enter those pearly gates and walk the gold-paved streets of the New Jerusalem, we must love God and obey him, for none but the righteous shall enter there.

"If I had my Life to live Over Again."

And what would you do if you could be so highly privileged?

"I would spend my life differently."

I have heard a great many persons, advanced in years, say this. Looking back over the years spent to little purpose, and often in folly and wickedness they see much to regret, much that they sadly wish could be blotted from life's record, and none of us have been so good but what some things we said and did, when called to mind, make us feel bad. We do not wish to repeat them; nor is it likely we will, now that we despise such things. To dwell regretfully on the past is of no particular advantage unless it leads to reformation. Many a man feels sorry and even remorseful over his former self, but he lets it end there. He "sorrows not to repentance" as Paul says. He goes on repeating what he professes to hate. The drunkard goes to his cup, the lover of the world continues to worship at the same shrine as in younger days, and the man who has for years served mammon finds himself enslaved for the remainder of life. So the large majority of that portion of the race born under the blaze of light and knowledge live in utter indifference to the claims of Jehovah and die like the beasts. Is this rational? Is this the purpose of man's creation? Surely not. Men who ought to know better apologize for all this as if the race was doomed by constitutional defect to serve the devil instead of God. If this is so, human responsibility is a lie, and the Bible a forgery gotten up by designing men to bring gain to themselves.

Those who use the language of my caption should make it appear that they mean what they say by turning squarely about and serving the Lord. The past is gone beyond recall. What remains of life is yours to improve to your own advantage and to God's glory. It is very foolish to regret the past and go on sinning. Now is the day of salvation. Be wise heeding the call.

Crestfallen Spiritualists.

I received the other day a letter from a friend in Washington City. He says, "You may have heard of the hard blow received by that sect here a few days ago, if not, I give it you. There was a meeting of Spiritualists on the evening just after the first news reached Washington of the death of John Sherman. As usual the slate was hung up and soon a scratching was heard! It was a message from his spirit. 'Now the world will be convinced that we are right,' they said and there was great rejoicing in the camp. Before the sun rose it was known that John Sherman still lived and was better. He is now in the city. They were a crestfallen lot!"

I thought this of interest to some of the brethren and so give it to them, through The Restitution. Spiritualism isn't half as smart now as it was in the palmy days of Greece.

My Theology and my Comfort.

He holds the key of all unknown,
And I am glad.
If other hands should hold the key,
Or if he trusted it to me,
I might be sad.

What if to-morrow's cares were here
Without its rest?
I had rather he unlock the day,
And, as the hours swing open say,
"My will is best."

The very dimness of my sight
Makes me secure;
For, groping in my misty way,
I feel his hand—I hear him say:
"My help is sure."

I cannot read his future plan,
But this I know;
I have the smilings of his face,
And all the refuge of his grace
While here below.

Enough; this covers all my want,
And so I rest;
For what I cannot, he can see,
And in his care I more shall be Forever blest.

Obituary.

Albert Lorin Evans, only child of Cyrus and Nettie Evans, was born March 9, 1898; died April 23, 1899.

The joy of his parents, the delight of many, was taken sick upon the first anniversary of his birth, which sickness soon developed into typhoid fever. Like millions of instances in the past, patient, active, and tender care proved unsuccessful; nor was love's breakless cord sufficient to keep him from captivity in the enemy's land. The sorrowing parents laid their little darling to rest, their quenchless love anxiously awaiting the fulfillment of the prophet's words, "They shall come again from the land of the enemy." Many were the sympathizing friends that accompanied Brother and Sister Evans to the place where they laid the silent dead, and the greater number of them unite in saying, "Come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly."

F. L. Austin.

"The man who always feels neglected is destined to have a hard time in life. Such a feeling is compounded largely of selfishness. A good way to get rid of the neglected feeling is to hunt up some one who has been really neglected and tell him of the Savior's love."

"Do all the good you can
To all the people you can,
In all the ways you can,
At all the times you can,
As long as ever you can,
For Jesus Christ's sake."

Romans xi. 25.

"For I would not, brethren, that ye should be ignorant of this mystery, lest ye should be wise in your own conceits; that blindness in part is happened to Israel, until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in."

Now, in the first place, Paul does not want us to be in ignorance of God's plan of salvation, lest we should become conceited, and set up our own ideas and cling to them in preference to God's Word. Now, in the entire 11th chapter of Romans Paul seems to want to impress on the minds of the Gentiles, the blindness or broken-off condition of Israel. In the 25th verse he says, "Blindness in part is happened to Israel," now when he says blindness in part, we stop and think, is this blindness happened to a part of the people? No, this cannot be the case, or Paul would have said so, but no, he says, "blindness in part has happened to Israel," so we conclude that Paul has reference to them as a nation, for he says in verse 32, "For God hath concluded them all in unbelief, that he might have mercy upon all." Now, the question comes to my mind, to what are they blinded? As we ponder over this question, we come to the conclusion that it must mean a part of the prophecies that they are blinded to, but if we can and prove this to be a fact by the Scriptures, then we are wrong in the conclusion we have drawn. Let us see what Paul says in Rom. x. 2, 3, "For I bare them record that they have a zeal of God; but not according to knowledge, for they being ignorant of God's righteousness, and going about to establish their own righteousness, have not submitted themselves unto the righteousness of God." And in the 21st verse it says, "But to Israel he saith, all day long I have stretched forth my hands unto a disobedient and gainsaying people." Paul says, "Because of unbelief they were broken off." Now, by turning to 1 Cor. iii. 14, 15, we can find out what it was they did not believe, Paul says, "But their minds were blinded: for until this day remaineth this same vail, untaken away, in the reading of the Old Testament, which vail is done away in Christ: but even unto this day, when Moses is read, the vail is upon their heart."

It seems to me this is a very plain statement of Paul's as to what part Israel is blinded to, and now let us notice the latter part of this 25th verse, see how long this blindness, or vail is to remain on them. Paul says, "Until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in." By turning to the 15th chapter of Acts verses 14 to 17, we may gain some idea as to the time when the Gentile times will be accomplished, or fulfilled. It says, "Simeon hath declared how God at first did visit the Gentiles, to take out of them a people for his name, and to this agree the words of the Prophets: as it is written, After this I will return, and will build again the tabernacle of David, which is fallen down; and I will build again the ruins thereof, and I will set it up: that the residue of men might seek after the Lord, and all the Gentiles upon whom my name is called, saith the Lord, who doeth all these things." I understand that the residue of men has reference to Israel, and Paul says "If they abide not still in unbelief, shall be grafted in, for God is able to graft them in again." and so all Israel shall be saved, as it is written, there shall come out of Zion, the deliverer, and shall turn away ungodliness from Jacob, for this is my covenant unto them, when I shall take away their sins." Rom. xi. 26, 26, 27. "For this is the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel after those days, saith the Lord; I will put my laws into their mind, and write them in their hearts: and I will be to them a God, and they shall be to me a people." Heb. viii. 10. This is the covenant that is to be made with Israel. "When the law shall go forth of Zion, and the Word of the Lord from Jerusalem." It is at this time that the blindness will fall from Israel's eyes, for God says, "I will bring you into the wilderness of the people, and there will I plead with you face to face, and I will cause you to pass under the rod, and I will bring you into the bond of the covenant, and I will purge out from among you the rebels and them that transgress against me." Ezek. xx. 35-38.

Conference Notice.

The Annual Conference of the Church of God, in Michigan, will be held (D. V.) at Dutton, Kent Co., Thursday evening June 1st, 1899, and continue over the following Sunday.

These meetings have been held so long that they have become an established fact in the minds of the brethren, and they expect the meeting as surely as the time comes. And then it seems we get so much real encouragement and enjoyment from them, it seems like a family reunion where we can enjoy the blessed communion of those of like precious faith. We would be lost without them, for from these meetings we derive much strength if we come in the right spirit. All who can come should make a special effort to be there—"So much the more as ye see the day drawing on."

To keep in close touch with God in the secret chamber of his presence is the great underlying purpose of prayer. To speak with God is a priceless privilege; but what shall be said of hearing and hearing him speak with us! We can tell him nothing he does not know; but he can tell us what no imagination has ever conceived, no research ever unveiled.—Pierson.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Poetry.

Deceitful Calm.

The winds are still! The sea lies all untroubled
Beneath a cloudless sky! The morn is bright!
Yet, Lord, I feel the need of thee redoubled.
Come nearer to me in this blaze of light!
The night must fall; the storm will break at length—
Oh, give me strength!

So well, so well I know the treacherous seeming,
Of days like this. They are too heavenly fair,
Those waves that laugh like happy children dreaming
Are mighty forces brewing some despair
For thoughtless hearts. And ere the hour of need
Let mine take heed.

Joy can not last. It must give place to sorrow
As certainly as solar systems roll;
I would not wait till that time comes, to-morrow
The strength prayer offers to the suffering soul—
Here in the sunlight, yet undismayed by shade,
I cry for aid.

I dare not lightly drain the cup of pleasure,
Though thine the hand that proffers me the draught;
Such bitter lees lie lower in the measure—
I shall need courage ere the portion's quaffed:
Then strengthen me, before that time befall,
To drink the gall.

I need thee in my joys and my successes,
To make me humbly grateful and not vain;
I need thee when the weight of sorrow presses
The tortured heart that crieth aloud in pain;
So close your pleasure and your anguish lie—
O God, come nigh!

Futurism.

I have been reading a tract entitled "Truths and Errors of Futurism," by O. H. Wallace, an Adventist. He commences by saying—"By the term futurism, we mean, those theories now so commonly taught in relation to events and circumstances attendant upon, and immediately following the close of the present dispensation."

He says again—"There are matters taught in relation to futurism upon which there are grave differences of opinion; and upon the truth or falsity of which much of eternal interest depends." He says again—"Permit me, then, to call attention to several propositions which are living questions of these times:"

"First—Will the second coming of Jesus Christ be for the purpose of a more extended evangelization? Is his coming for the purpose of reformation, or for judgment?" We answer, for both. He says, "If there is to be an intermediate dispensation of probation intervening between this dispensation and the kingdom of God, we shall expect to find that fact plainly stated by the Scriptures." Yes; that fact is plainly stated by the Scriptures, Christ is coming back to earth to superintend the restitution of earth and man upon the earth, back to the position in which God created them. Jesus Christ as the second Adam will have dominion over the earth and he will subdue and multiply his obedient sons and daughters by means of his Bride, who shall evangelize the heathen and subdue the refractory nations and bring them into harmony with the mind and will of the second Adam, and so "the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the sea." This is what Jesus Christ is coming to earth for, to evangelize, not to destroy as his quotation of Luke xvii. 27, 29, would indicate. If Christ comes to destroy instead of to save, he is a Destroyer and not a Savior. I would like to refer our author to Jer. xxxiii. 24, 25, 26, and tell him that this quotation fits him and Seventh Day Adventists exactly. You, not only despise God's ancient people, but you despise his covenant. He refers, verse 21, to his covenant with David, Psa. lxxxix. 34, 35, 36, and shows that his covenant with David in the perpetuity of his throne; is as permanent as his covenant with day and night.

Our author again says, "But after a careful search and research of the entire Bible for light upon this subject, our findings are to the effect that there seems to be no reasonable ground for doubt, that the present dispensation closes the last period of human hope, so far as character formation is concerned."

Our author then refers to Daniel 2nd chapter to show that there was "no interregnum between the gold, the silver, the brass, the iron and the stone kingdoms." To this we agree. But notice that the iron kingdom is still in existence but mixed with miry clay. Then the prophet says, "And in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed, ... it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms and it shall stand forever." Our author was quite right in quoting Daniel 2nd to prove that there was no interregnum between these kingdoms, but wrong in claiming no probation after the kingdom of God is set up. But see 2nd ch. 35th ver. the stone became a great mountain and filled the whole earth. This is in accord with the teachings of the Master in many of his parables. He said, Matt. xiii. 31, The kingdom of heaven is like to a grain of mustard seed, when it is grown it becometh a tree—or like leaven in meal till the whole was leavened. So Christ when he sets up his kingdom will "rule in the midst of his enemies" and "shall sit and rule upon his throne; and he shall be a priest upon his throne." The office of a priest is to go between, "and the counsel of peace shall be between them both." Zech. vi. 12, 13. Here it is clearly shown that there will be probation when the "BRANCH shall build the temple of the Lord, and sit a priest upon his throne."

Our author says again, "Much of the futuristic speculation of the present, relates to the gathering and re-nationalization of carnal Israel. It is devoutly believed, by many excellent people, that there is a magnificent future before that race." "And we will observe, first, that those prophecies which are used to teach the great future of carnal Israel, date prior to the gathering of that people from their Babylonian dispersion." Will our author please read Amos ix. 14, 15, "And I will bring again the captivity of my people of Israel and they shall build the waste cities," etc., "And I will plant them upon their land, and they shall NO MORE be pulled up out of their land which I have given them, saith the Lord thy God." Does our author realize that since the return from the Babylonian dispersion, Israel has been pulled up out of their land and scattered to the four winds of heaven, as it is this day? Either our author is mistaken, or the prophet Amos is. See also Jer. xxxi. 10, "Hear the Word of the Lord, O yenations, and declare it in the isles afar off, and say, he that scattered Israel, will gather him and keep him, as a shepherd doth his flock."

Our author again says, "What will the shedding of the blood of animal sacrifices mean in this great future of Israel? By the Apostle Paul we are told that it pointed to the sacrifice of God's Lamb." We reply, Our Savior instituted the paschal supper and said, "This is my body which is broken for you." And of the cup he also said, "This cup is the New Testament in my blood, this do ye in REMEMBRANCE of me." We ask, "Why may not animal sacrifices point as REMEMBRANCES of the sacrifice of God's Lamb as an atonement for the sins of national Israel, as well as the paschal supper for his disciples and the church in the gospel age?

Our author again says, "But the anxious enquiry is, "Will not all Israel be saved?" To which we reply; that depends upon what is meant by Israel. If by the word Israel one means carnal Israel in the flesh, we say a positive no. If, on the other hand the spiritual prevailer regardless of nationality is meant, the Word declares that all Israel shall be saved." Our author then quotes Rom. ii. 28, 29, and Rom. ix. 6, to prove that by Israel is meant all true believers whether of Jews or Gentiles. This spiritualising Israel and claiming to be Jews or spiritual Israel reminds me of a Tract that I once read, that was published by one of our author's brethren of the Advent faith. Herald that the seven churches of Asia Rev ii. and iii. represent seven stages of the church in the gospel dispensation. If this be true, it would seem plainly to indicate that the Laodicean church represents the orthodox churches of the present day. It certainly fits them completely. See Rev. iii. 17.

But where will we find the church of Philadelphia? Not a word of fault t[o] uttered against the church of Phila[-] delphia. Read what he says that he [has] the key of David v. 7, also 8, 9, 10, "Behold, I will make them of the synagogue of Satan, which say they are Jews and are not, but do lie; Behold, I will make them to come and worship before thy feet, and to know that I have loved thee." Our author can make his own application.

Our author then says, "If! If there had been in the divine intention a great future for Israel in the flesh, it does seem as though this agonizing Apostle would have known something of it. This surely would have been the place, for at least a mere hint of such an arrangement. But no such intimation seems to be given." To which we reply, Paul gives more than a hint of such an arrangement. He says it plainly. It is very evident that Israel were looking for a deliverance from their Roman yoke about the time that Christ made his appearance. The Apostles still believed this, even after the crucifixion of Christ. See Acts i. 6. The two disciples on their way to Emmaus said, "We trusted that it had been thee which should have redeemed Israel." Now for Paul's testimony. See Acts xxviii. 20, "For this cause, therefore have I called for you, to see you, and to speak with you; because that for the hope of Israel I am bound with this chain." Paul's hope was identical with the hope of Israel, with only this difference. Israel looked for the [re]demption of their nation through a Messiah to come, while Paul preached the same redemption through a Messiah already come, even Jesus of Nazareth. This was the only difference doctrinally between Saul of Tarsus and Paul the Apostle.

Our author refers to Luke xvii. 28, 29, 30, evidently to show that where the Son of Man is revealed, all except his saints will be destroyed. But we cannot accept his conclusion, because there is such an abundant array of Scripture that is in plain contradiction to it. See Acts xv. 15, 16, 17. This is one plain and positive proof out of the many that might be adduced to prove that there will be probation after the coming of Christ.

Our author refers to the parable of the two virgins of Matt. xxv. and assumes that those of the after probation theory are "the disappointed" ones; but there is, at least, as much proof in the parable, (and elsewhere much more) that those who reject the gathering of literal Israel in fulfilment of prophecy; are the disappointed.

Our author again says, "We more than suspect, were it not for the misplacement of the thousand year period of Rev. xx., and a sense of great need of a program for that millennial period, we might possibly have been spared much of the error of this larger hope-theory, which now lulls [to] science, in too many cases, to sleep in sin. We regard this place of futurism as decidedly dangerous to souls."

Our author does not say where the thousand year period should be placed, but I once heard one of his brethren, a prominent preacher (W. L.) say that the thousand year period was already in the past.

We cannot imagine when Satan has ever been bound a thousand years: but these Adventists are very inventive. They can make black white, and white black when they have an axe to grind.

We are wondering what kind of a tract our author would have written if he had waited till such men as Hersl and Nordeau, men infidel in sentiment, were engaging heart and soul in Zionism, and the return of Israel back to their ancient patrimony—to see Israel fulfilling the very spirit of prophecy ought to cause the stoutest hearted infidel to quail and acknowledge the Divine authenticity of the Scriptures. But our author can see nothing but a

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME XLVIII. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, MAY 17, 1899. NUMBER 19.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

religious error in probation after Christ comes and sets up his kingdom. But whether there shall be probation after the kingdom is set up we call on James to decide. Acts xv. 15, 17. James declares as plainly as language can speak, that there will be probation after the kingdom is set up, the kingdom that Christ will build for the restored kingdom of Israel. See Luke i. 32, 33.

DRAWBACKS AND HINDRANCES.

"That they all may be one.....that the world may believe that thou hast sent me."

The preceding article was copied with some instances from Eureka in which the author censures the "Fathers" of the early centuries for their departure from the simplicity that is in Christ." Also his reference to the origin of this departure in the case of the Judaizing teachers of the first century mentioned in Acts xv. 1-5. As I ventured to suggest a parallel between this and the position taken up by those calling themselves Christadelphians, I take the liberty to reproduce a portion of the extract. "Their new-fangled crotchet was that the belief of the gospel of the kingdom, and baptism were not sufficient for salvation; but that a disciple must besides, or in addition to this, be circumcised and keep the law of Moses. This dogma was their stock in trade.....the basket of small wares with which they began the world." Vol. I. p. 195. These extracts naturally gave occasion to mention the "Record" published by the Christadelphians of Birmingham, and to show that their contention was for a new faith-basis.

[The] extract given in the preceding paragraph recalls what I must consider an extravagant eulogy of Eureka which used to be printed on the cover of the "Christadelphian." This eulogy took the form of twenty questions, such as. "Do you desire to know all about the kingdom of God?" The answer, printed in large capitals, was to every question—"READ EUREKA." This twenty-fold eulogy of Eureka might well have an application to the Christadelphian Creed. Thus, Do you desire to know all about "the simplicity that is in Christ," as maintained by Dr. Thomas? READ EUREKA.

In further pursuing the subject of the "Gospel Recovered" in connection with "drawbacks and hindrances," I beg to introduce a matter which threatened to involve the gospel of the kingdom itself in mystery. As this point possesses importance of a vital character, I trust it will not be considered inappropriate. It has a direct bearing on division, inasmuch as it became the occasion of considerable controversy in Britain, especially in Scotland. This was previous to any divisions that arose on the other questions already referred to.

In the "Herald of the kingdom," Vol. VI. (1856) pp. 29-31, were printed two letters—one by a brother John T. Davis, the other by one signing himself "OLD," both of Richmond, Virginia. These letters describe an anniversary meeting of the "Reformation" held in that city in December, 1855. Among a number of speakers, were Alexander Campbell of Bethany, Va., and Dr. Silas E. Shepherd of New York City. Davis says. "Dr. Shepherd, a new man in these parts, was almost the sole spokesman." Among a variety of statements, Dr. Shepherd made one to the effect that John, the Baptist, "taught that the kingdom was at hand; and, indeed, came to hand on the Day of Pentecost."

The editor of the "Herald," in his usual "gladiatorial" style, takes up a number of Dr. Shepherd's statements in an article occupying 14 columns. The closing section is headed "The kingdom of heaven at hand." In an article of nearly four columns the editor meets Dr. Shepherd's assertion by a denial that it was the kingdom that was at hand, and affirming that it was simply the person of our Lord that had approached. He says, "It is well known, that the English version does not render this correctly." How this is well known he does not show. He then quotes the versions of the French, Spanish, Italian, and German New Testament, giving the equivalents in English, all of which, however, substantially agree with the English. He adds, "None of these versions accurately express the meaning of the Greek."

"He then proceeds to support his contention by a critical examination of the Greek words basileia and eggike and by an argument drawn from Isaiah xl. where the mission of John the Baptist is predicted. Referring to the preaching of John, he says, "John the Baptist was alluding not to the reign, nor to the territory, nor to the power, but to the person to whom the title and honor of the kingdom belonged—"THE LORD." The quotation from Isaiah which immediately follows proves this.....For this (John) is he, says Matthew, who was spoken of by the prophet Isaiah, saying, 'the voice of one crying (or preaching) in the wilderness.' What did he preach? Matthew has told us,—but what saith Isaiah? Hear him—'Prepare ye the way of Jehovah, make straight in the desert a highway for our Elohim:' and then adds, the Majesty of Jehovah shall be revealed.'"

It will be observed that a very important clause is omitted here from the words of Isaiah, namely, "and all flesh shall see it together." [The present writer was so struck with this omission, and had so distinct an impression of the weakness of this argument thence arising, that his copy of the "Herald" bears pencilled at foot of page the omitted clause]. The editor seems not to have conceived the possibility that the words quoted from Isaiah's prophecy had reference to the future restoration of Israel, as well as to the mission of John the Baptist in the first century.

The Doctor says in closing—"Let us not be misunderstood. We give the foregoing, exegesis as applicable to the words of John, the Baptizer of Jesus, and of his Apostles, in their proclamation of repentance; and not as an interpretation of the kingdom of the heavens wherever they occur. Basilica has more significations than one; but which of its several is to be used in a particular place must be determined by the context."

Without here entering into the merits of such an argument, it may suffice to say, that what shows further the weakness of the editor's argument is the fact that the proclamation—"The kingdom of heaven is at hand," was not confined to John the Baptist. It was made in the very identical terms by our Lord himself after he had been manifested to Israel publicly at his baptism, with the descent of the Spirit, and by the announcement of his Divine Sonship. Our Lord was at this time not merely "at hand" but actually come. The prayer he taught his disciples contained the petition "Thy kingdom come" clearly showing that "basileia" at that time could not have two meanings—one, King or "Royal Majesty"—in the preaching, and another, "kingdom"—in the prayer. The same preaching was continued by our Lord, his twelve Apostles, and seventy disciples, and that at a time when the fame of Jesus had extended far and wide throughout the country.

It is difficult to see how Dr. Thomas could reasonably expect by such a style of argument, to make any impression on such men as Alexander Campbell, Dr. Shepherd, or any of their coreligionists. The reader will judge as to whether this may be credited to drawbacks and hindrances.

It should be mentioned here that Dr. Shepherd introduced this question to the Doctor in 1854, in connection with John's call to Repentance. The Doctor contents himself by stating that the reason for the command to repent was that "his Celestial Majesty was in the midst of them." p. 180 "Herald" Vol. IV. In the same year (1854) the "Calendar of the seven times of Babylon and Judah" printed at the end of Eureka, and also inserted in Vol. IV. of the Herald p. 153, contains the rendering—"the royal dignity of the heavens has approached."

Besides Dr. Thomas' replies mentioned above, the question of the kingdom "at hand" was brought under his notice in 1848 while in Britain. A member of the "Reformation" in London, addressed a friendly letter to him, in which, among a variety of other matters, the preaching of John, Jesus, the 12 and the 70—"the kingdom of God is at hand" was referred to. In a lengthy reply in which the Doctor set out 14 numbered paragraphs, the 13th being—"That the kingdom was set up on Pentecost." In response to this item, he contents himself with stating that it is contrary to fact, giving no explanation of the kingdom "at hand."

It is really singular that so few instances occur in which any notice is taken by Dr. Thomas of this form of gospel preaching, considering that the gospel of the kingdom formed so prominent an element in his advocacy, not only as early as 1847 but considerably earlier. Beyond the replies referred to I have met with no independent allusion to it in any of his works. It is equally singular that in the earlier writings of Alexander Campbell and Walter Scott, as for instance in the "Christian Baptist" (1823-30) there is no trace of it among their many contendings for the "Ancient Gospel," although the preaching of John was the most "Ancient" form of gospel preaching in New Testament times. They, on the suggestion of W. Scott, adopted the Messiahship as the most prominent point of the Ancient gospel, and overlooked the kingdom as an element of it.

Fight the Devil.

Yes, fight him, and fight him hard, "give him a black eye." And why fight him? Because he murdered our great grandparents and most all their children and grand children and is after us. To fight against God is to oppose him and his doctrines, so to fight the devil is to oppose him and his doctrines. Jesus says he was a murderer from the beginning, and abode not in the truth, because there is no truth in him. When he speaketh a lie, he speaketh of his own: for he is a liar, and the father of it." What did the devil do and say in the beginning that made him a liar and a murderer? He said what most all folks say, What is that? "Ye shall not surely die." If the devil told a lie when he said this, how is it with us when we believe and say the same? If he told a lie then, when he said, "Ye shall surely die," do we not now tell the same when we tell the same old story? A more disastrous story never was or will be told. It charmed mother Eve, and caused her to disbelieve her Creator and disobey him, which was sin, and death came by or on account of sin. And all the sickness, sorrow, pain and death is the fruits of the old, old story, that has captured and ensnared the world, and led them to believe that the accursed thing is a blessing, whose author is God. Paul says, "Fight the good fight of faith; lay hold of eternal life." To do this is to oppose and fight the devil. To fail in this, is to miss eternal life. Jesus will soon destroy the devil, and his work. He now roars all over the land, deceiving and seeking who he may devour. He has but short time and is wroth.

"Worldly policy and the underlying principles of righteousness do not blend into each other imperceptibly, like the colors of the rainbow. Between the two a broad, clear line is drawn by the eternal God. The likeness of Christ stands out as distinct from that of Satan as midday in contrast with midnight."

The good we can accomplish in this world is small. The good that all men in all ages could accomplish if they would is vast. But in order that this may be done each working being must serve his own generation and do his part to render his next generation more efficient.—T. D. Woolsey.

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, MAY 17, 1899.

SISTER Jane Parslow, of Correctionville, Iowa, has some old papers that she would like to give to some one not able to pay for them. Address her as above.

BRO. L. E. CORNELL of Slidell, Ill., was in Plymouth last Sunday and on the evening spoke for the Church here. We were all glad to greet him once more, and trust he may be with us again in the near future.

BROTHER T. E. ADAMS, Osawkee, Kan., has issued a four page tract on the important question, "Sirs, What must I do to be Saved?" The name of the author is a guarantee of its worth, and if you will send a few stamps for postage he will supply you with them free. Send to him for them.

FRIENDS interested should make note of the dates of the different State Conferences that are announced, and arrange to attend them. Many stay away from these meetings thinking they can do no good there, and will only be one more in the way. This is a mistake,—your presence there is evidence of your interest in the truth, and you cannot help but do good, and besides you will go home with the conviction that you have received good from the communion with brethren and sisters.

PARENTS, whatever you think proper to grant a child, let it be granted at the first word, without entreaty, and above all without conditions. Grant with pleasure,—refuse with reluctance, but be your refusal be irrevocable; let no importunity shake your resolution. Let the particle no, when once pronounced, be a wall of brass, which a child after he has tried his strength against it half-a-dozen times, shall never after endeavor to shake."

The Man Christ Jesus.

Truly has it been said that "Of all the race there is none to be so gazed on and persistently studied. We ponder the thoughts of others; we smile at their weaknesses; we allow for their prejudices; we condemn their errors; but in this man there are no weaknesses, nor prejudices, nor errors. His judgments are ever accurate; his morals are ever perfect; his emotions are ever pure. No personal ambition, or hatred, or love, or interest sways him at any instant. He thinks as before God; he weeps as before God. All he does is right. By him alone was the precept ever fulfilled: "Whether ye eat or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God."

Selfishness is Unchristian.

"Live for some purposes in the world. Conduct yourself so that you shall be missed with sorrow when you are gone. Multitudes live in such a selfish manner that they are not likely to be remembered after they are put out of sight. They are neither regretted by the rich nor wanted by the poor, because no one has been better for their life. They have dried no tears, healed no miseries, supplied no wants. No one would care to usher the gate of death to re-admit them to life. What a wretched unproductive life does the selfish man live! Selfishness is its own curse. It is a vice that starves oneself. He who does no good gets none."

"A Plain Prophecy."

"Behold the days come saith the Lord that I will raise unto David a righteous Branch, and a King shall reign and prosper, and shall execute judgment and justice in the earth. In his days Judah shall be saved, and Israel shall dwell safely, and this is his name whereby he shall be called, The Lord our righteousness." Jer. xxiii. 5, 6.

1. The name of this predicted King is distinctly given, viz., "The Lord our Righteousness."

2. He is to reign and "execute judgment and justice in the earth."

3. As positively as he is to reign, so positively, "In his days [mark, in the days of his reign] Judah shall be saved, and Israel shall dwell safely."

4. This King is to reign on David's throne. All who claim that this reign is in the future, are compelled to admit a chance for Israel and Judah in the future age."—W. Sheldon, in Expositor and Advocate, Aug. 20, 1851.

BRETHREN and sisters, the difficulties in our daily path were not intended to stop us, to make us give up, or faint, or turn back. They were meant solely for us to overcome, and the power to do it only waits upon our will. When we overcome them, we acquire their strength. If we allow them to overcome us, they take away ours. Therefore our mission, our destiny is to overcome all difficulties. In regard to this light, the object which seemed formidable yesterday recedes to-day, and is to-day.

A Life of Trust.

The life of the godly is a life of trust. It is only by trusting in the Lord that we can attain that security and comfort we need as to peace, confidence, stability and growth in God's favor. Those who trust in the Lord are compared to Mount Zion which cannot be moved. The storms of adversity, the tempests of sorrow, and the woes and the warnings of the world cannot shake the steadfast soul who trusts in the living God, who is the preserver of all men, especially of those that believe. The testimony of God's faithfulness is most abundant. Who of all who have rested in Him has ever failed to protect and deliver? Who ever trusted him in vain? Who that built his hope in God has ever been confounded? What promise of his was ever known to fail? Not one. So that we ought to be able to say with the Psalmist, "Blessed is the man who maketh the Lord his trust;" and then follows the promise that those who put their trust in the Lord shall be safe and that none who trust in him shall be desolate." Of course Devil is all against us here. The great tendency of the flesh is to be self-sufficient; and this is exactly what a true Christian in Christ Jesus is commanded not to be. The Spirit in Paul says we must not trust in ourselves, but in God, and a curse is pronounced upon him who trusts in man. Isaiah says, "Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace whose mind is stayed on thee—because he trusteth in thee."

But organized as man is he must have a reason for trusting in God. He must have a motive for his actions, and all motives to trust God must grow out of what he has done for us in the past,—all that he is doing for us now, and all that he promises to do for us in the future.

In the nature of things the evidence of God's goodness and love and mercy, and faithfulness must be believed, before we can have a motive to trust him. The sum of all the good things God proposes to do for us is set forth in the gospel of the kingdom of God, and includes all its glory, together with eternal life, through forgiveness if sin through Jesus' name now in order to obtain a resurrection out from among the dead by and by, to share this felicity. If we do not believe the promise of these blessings, it is impossible to trust him. In the Bible sense, Sincerity will not save.

Passing Events in the Light of Prophecy.

From Glad Tidings we learn that the English Chancellor of the Exchequer has presented his Annual Budget to the House of Commons. The expenditure to be provided for 1899-1900 reaches the immense figure of £112,927,000. The estimated revenue is £110,287,000. There is to be taken from the Excel amount for the reduction of the National Debt the sum of £2,000,000, which leaves a deficit still of £610,000 which is to be raised by an addition to the stamps and wine duties.

In the last four years the increased expenditure has averaged nearly five million pounds a year, and the estimate for the current year is more than six millions higher than that for last year. The greater part of this enormous increase is due to increased military and naval expenditure.

In the course of a debate on the National Expenditure the leader of the House of Commons justified the increased expenditure on the army and navy, and re-affirmed the principle that the navies must be equal to the navies of two other Powers.

Nineteen European States, the United States of America, China, Japan, Persia, and Siam have been invited to attend the Peace Conference at The Hague this month. An influential deputation representing the Crusade of Peace, recently waited at the Foreign office, London. In the absence of Lord Salisbury it was received by Mr. Balfour, the First Lord of the Treasury, who said. "What is so important, so striking, and so interesting about the movement initiated by the Emperor of Russia is that it has been started by the head of the greatest military nation in the world, and that to the Conference are invited, not merely Europe, not merely Christendom, but every power with any claim to be civilized, wheresoever that Power may be situated. This is the first time, so far as I know, that nations differing in race, in creed, in geographical situation, in tradition, have yet been called together and asked to consider together a matter so intimately bound up with the future prosperity and development of the world. I hail the movement as a great landmark in the history of mankind, and as a step which brings us perceptibly nearer to the great ideal of universal peace."

The Scotsman commenting upon this says:—"There has been no more disturbing factor in the problem than the conduct of Russia since the date of the Rescript. As to armaments, there has been a great increase in the Russian naval programme. A great scheme is announced for arming the Russian forces with new artillery at a cost of eight millions. Certainly Russia's ways are not the ways of peace. Nor are the other Powers behindhand. Germany is adding to her army and navy. France is spending heavily on her navy and coast defences. We ourselves have been obliged to follow the example of our neighbors. It is a fact that admits of no denial that ever since the Czar's message the Great Powers have been displaying remarkable activity in making sure that whatever comes of the Conference they will be found in as favorable a position for offence and defence as possible. The sympathy of all peace-loving people was assured from the first. It is the practical problems involved in the Peace Message that are in doubt."

The Dreyfus affair in France is still agitating the French public mind. The full Court of Cassation is now considering within closed doors, but the Figaro has by unknown means obtained the report and is daily publishing instalments. The evidence given was of the most conflicting nature, but it is becoming clear that Captain Dreyfus was condemned on most insufficient evidence, much of it the most groundless it is possible to conceive. One witness stated that when protesting his innocence Dreyfus said, "My whole crime is that I was born a Jew."

Engineering says—"Russia is approaching India from another quarter, and seems as determined to get an outlet on the Persian Gulf as on the Pacific. The problems connected with this part of the world are as interesting and probably as difficult as those in the Far East, and they are certain before long to attract more attention than they now receive."

On Sunday, April 16th a crowded and enthusiastic meeting was held by Jews in Edinburg, Scotland, at which Mr. A. Shmuelich of Glasgow, who was a delegate to the Basle Congress delivered an address. He said Zionism had aroused no little opposition, but admitted that healthy opposition was good. Sympathy and pity were excellent but for their oppressed and persecuted brethren these were not sufficient. The people must not be allowed to die. Their condition demanded help. In France, Germany, Hungaria, Roumania and Russia the Jewish persecution still continues. The Jewish masses at least were stirred to the very core to release their brethren from this persecution. What country would have them? All looked towards the country which all Jews love, and which is theirs by divine right. Zionists decided to elect their aim through the instrumentality of a banking institution. Germany and Russia were hoarding for war. Zionists want money for Peace. By business methods they wanted to accomplish what they had long aimed at, and this was what the Jewish Colonial Bank was for. It was not Zionism. It was merely an instrument. Banks might fail, but Zionism would exist as long as Judaism existed—for ever. The Bank would be a guarantee that they would be able to say to the governments of Europe or to the Sultan, —"We can pay for what we want to buy." The sole object of the bank was to assist in obtaining a home in Palestine for persecuted Jews. They made no promises as to dividends. The bank would keep money in trust for the Jewish nation. A share certificate would be a diploma of honor. The bank was now established with a capital of two millions, and the head office was in London. It would not dispense charity, but its object would be for the encouragement of Jewish enterprise in railways, mines, agriculture, etc. First, the starving Jews in Palestine would be helped to become self-supporting, and then persecuted Jews would be drawn from Roumania and other European countries. None would be forced to go. Every man, woman and child in Israel should and would become a shareholder. A refuge would thereby be provided for their distressed brethren. They would not return en masse. For the return of all their people they must wait for heaven's own appointed time. The lecturer appealed to his hearers to help the oppressed of the chosen race. Their race had a legal claim to Palestine. The law of love and justice would yet go forth from Palestine to all the world. In response to his appeal at the close of his address the Jews crowded forward to the platform to become shareholders in the Jewish Colonial Bank, and 250 shares were subscribed for. The Editor of Glad Tidings says the address and the enthusiasm of the Jewish audience had a strange effect upon him, because no matter what the immediate result may be, the present movement which is so deeply stirring the entire Jewish people throughout the world, is full of significance to those who are watching the signs of Jewish restoration. The Jew is aiming at the deliverance of his people, and their reinstatement as a nation, and some of them look for the appearance of their Messiah. To Zion's watchman the signs which point to the realization of these aims are not only interesting because of these in themselves, but chiefly because their realization will mean the coming of the Lord—the Jew's Messiah. The manifestation of all the sons of God, and the establishment of the Kingdom of God over all the earth. The list of shareholders of the Jewish Colonial Bank is not confined to the Jews. All lovers of Zion are invited to aid in the movement by taking shares which are of the value of £1 each.

For Our Children.

The City Waif.

Bare are his feet and torn are his clothes,
When asked his name he scarcely knows,
Down in an alley lies said "I was "Tim"
Stood were the odds to him.

He had a home on an upper floor
Alone with his mother—now no more.
In the early dawn she passed away,
Leaving her orphan boy that day.

Poor now a waif—left to roam and care
Whether he grow or what he dare?
The busy world regards him not,
Though hunger and want may be his lot.

Curled up at night in a box of straw,
When the air is chill and the winds are raw,
He sometimes sleeps, in the wanderer's bed,
Where such as he may lay the head.

Lend a helping hand to the little waif,
Kind words may gladden a cheerless life;
And then may'st see beyond the skies
A weary head, less to sigh, or rise.

Then in that blessed world of light,
Where all is pure and all is bright,
His words thy perfect joy shall be,
"In doing this I was done to me."

—I. E. Cornelius.

Where There's a Will There's A Way.

This is a very old proverb and a very true one. Sometimes we forget it, though, and say "I can't" before we have really tried at all. Some years ago a few people made up their minds to try to get hold of all the chimney-sweeps in Dublin and give them an education. One day a little fellow came who was asked if he knew his letters.

"Oh, yes," he answered.

"Can you spell?"

"Oh, yes."

"Can you read?"

"Oh, yes."

"What books did you learn from?"

"Please, sir, I never had a book."

"Then who was your schoolmaster?"

"I never went to school at all."

The gentleman stared, for it seemed very strange that a boy should be able to read and spell and yet never have had a master.

"Then, how did you ever learn?" he asked.

The little boy smiled, and linked his arm in that of a sweep somewhat older than himself.

"Please, sir, Jim taught me the letters over the shop doors as we went to our work, and now I know all the words by heart; and if you'd kindly let us have some books to read, and teach us to do sums and writing we'd be very thankful."

Can't you fancy what good pupils those two boys became, and how they delighted in reading in books instead of making their necks ache by peering up at the shops?

The Story of Israel. No. 90.

I want the little folks—the boys and girls from seven to fourteen years of age, to go; their lesson this morning and read Num xvi. 1-50, the lesson. Some of them have read, or listened to the reading of the lessons by their fathers, but established on to a hard rough place and then they axed it up. A man said in his paper the other day, that "we as parents and children, ought to try, that is to put on the toughest question"—that "no one takes [that is] what he does not understand, is of no use to him," because "the very effort that must be made to understand, is in itself the very best gift that any teacher can have for you intellectually. The more resolution into your young ears of the grand and primal statements of the Bible, hard as they are now, will sprout and open in after years and grow and expand with your growth to the noblest breadth and altitude of man."

The same man says "he used to sit and listen, when a little boy, to two long sermons every Sunday, that he could never begin to understand," and yet "the solid, old-fashioned preaching of that grave pastor, for the very reason that he was so young, excited the germ of sound words" into the inmost constitution of his mind, and prepared a bed-rock (or rock-foundation) for that immovable faith in divine truth, for which he thanks God every time he remembers that unappreciated pastor of his infancy."

When he was twelve or thirteen years of age, his older brother then in college, drew his attention to a book that had a short time before been published, called "Kants' Critique of Pure Reason," "Was it ridiculous?" he asks, and then says, the deepest critical discipline of his whole life began from that moment, and proceeded from a dogged wrestling with that book of Coleridge's which he read through no less than six times before he fairly began to understand it, and after that metaphysics was his exhilaration and delight."

It takes something more than baby food, for the mind, if we want it to become strong, because the mind, like the hand must be used, must strike hard blows on hard subjects, or, in other words, it must be taught to think, by being used on something that will make it think.

But our lesson today is not so hard; have you all read it? It is about those wicked men who thought Moses and Aaron had no better right to the high position they had been called of the Lord to fill, than had any other member of the tribes, "seeing all of them were holy." What do you think about it? It seems, that some one of the Levites wanted the priesthood, and I suppose some one of the Reubenites wanted to be a leader, or commander-in-chief (like Moses, and the other men were going to help put Moses and Aaron out, so these chiefs could take their place.

They had forgotten that the Lord had chosen Moses and Aaron, and that they, being of the tribe of Levi, it gave honor to that tribe. And they all forgot that they were despising the places and the privileges that the Lord had given to them, bringing them "near to himself to do the service of the tabernacle." It is a dreadful thing to imagine that the work of the Lord is a small or mean work, or that those who are engaged in it, have no honor.

You would think it a mark of great favor, if the President of the United States would give one of you little folks some small position to work for him,—then is it not a mark of greater favor, when the great President of this, and of all other worlds, sees fit to admit you into his service? I know you will all say, "Yes, yes!" I am so glad that he has given me even a lowly place among his soldiers, and it makes me happy to know, that he is letting me help to bring the glad time of peace and joy more near. That is the way you all want to feel.

Moses talked to Korah, and to his company. He told them to come up on the morrow, and the Lord would show who were his, and who were holy. The chosen ones he would cause to come near to him. The naughty men wanted to bear the incense in censers into the holy place, just as Aaron and his sons did; so Moses told them to make the experiment, to take the censers, and put fire in and incense on the fire, before the Lord. Would you have thought they would have dared do such a thing?

They certainly knew, that any one not of Aaron's family, who came nigh to wait on the priest's office would be put to death, for that was the law. Num. iii. 10. To break the law that no stranger should come nigh, was to rebel against the Lord. But Dathan and Abiram would not come up to Moses when he sent for them. They seemed to think he had made himself a prince or king, and that it was all his fault that they must die in the wilderness, and could not come into the promised lake (ounce of fields and vines, and honey and milk).

The next day Korah and his company came and all the rebels crowded around to see how it would turn out. It seems as if Korah had won over the whole congregation to his side, against Moses and Aaron, for it says, "Korah gathered all the congregation against them to the door of the tabernacle." How frightened they would have been and they not known the Lord was on their side!

Pan censers are taken, and the fire and the incense are cast in them. Then the glory of the Lord appears to all the people, and he tells Moses and Aaron to walk out of that great crowd, that "he may consume them all in a moment." But Moses and Aaron fall flat on their faces, and pray for the poor people, that they may not all be destroyed for the sin of one man, and the Lord then commands that the congregation get away from the tents of the naughty men. And the earth cracked open and down they went, crying and screaming with fear. But it was too late then; the earth closed and buried them, and their goods and their horses, and "there came out a fire from the Lord and consumed the 250 men that offered incense." And they took the censers and made a covering of them for the altar, so that the people might remember that no stranger, "Not of the seed of Aaron, must come near to offer incense before the Lord."

You see little ones, that when we break God's laws, we sin against our own soul's or lives? He tells us what the consequence will be, if we do not obey him, and if we dare disobey, we know what will come; that it will be death, from which there will be no possible way of escape. Do not imagine that you can sin, and yet have hope of the life and glory that God has promised to the good; there is no hope of eternal life for those who willfully rebel against the laws and government of God. We can't finish our lesson this time.

Editor Restitution:

Notice of the Annual Meeting of the Michigan Conference at Dutton, Kent Co., June 1, has just come to me through your paper and from the local evangelist. It seems desirable that there should be co-operation among the sects of Second Advent believers—

1. In the defence of the Bible against the floods of infidelity.

2. The better to publish great truths and facts in which we agree.

3. To promote among ourselves good fellowship.

4. For more and better aggressive work.

5. To these ends an exchange of delegates at our Conferences.

There is short time to do much of this sort at Dutton Conference. If, however, our brethren will volunteer to come to the Dutton Conference and make themselves known, something may be done in a line of work much needed, not disparaging the great and good work now being done.

For the truth's sake,

O. R. L. C.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending THE RESTITUTION to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the doners request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trustworthy.

Did you ever watch a little child taking a lesson in model drawing? Never two strokes of the pencil without a glance at the model. And the first law and the last law of the imitation of Christ is just this—"looking unto Jesus." We must must fix our eyes upon him; we must hold him steadily in our hearts and in our minds, until just as the sunlight prints the object on the sentilized plate of the camera so we "beholding, are transformed into the same image from glory to glory."—D. L. Moody.

The working of the good and brave seen or unseen, endures literally forever, and cannot die.—Carlyle.

Poetry.

"Thy Kingdom Come."

Oh, Thou who art our hope, our life,
Amid the world's unceasing strife,
Amid our cares from day to day,
We bow to Thee and humbly pray,
"Thy kingdom come."

The earth has borne its load a long—
Say thousand years of sin and wrong;
Creation groaneth in bitter pain
For Thee, our Lord, to come again—
"Thy kingdom come."

For "man of sin" is filling up,
Fill to the brim his sinful cup,
And evil spirits hasten forth,
To revive the nations of the earth.—
"Thy Kingdom come."

Our hearts do grow when we behold
The love of many waxing cold;
But some are waiting still for Thee,
And daily cry on bended knees—
"Thy kingdom come."

We know that summer time is near
When all the budding trees appear;
So by the signs we understand
The promised day is near at hand,—
"Thy Kingdom come."

While in this world of sin we stay,
Be Thou our guide, as day by day
We travel o'er life's stormy way;
And may we ever love to pray—
"Thy kingdom come."

Life after Death. No. 1.

Modern Spiritualism claims to have settled the question of "life after death" beyond the possibility of doubt. Practical Spiritualism is founded upon the supposed fact or notion that the spirit of man is a personal entity and survives the death of the body; that, being freed from its material encumbrance it mounts higher and higher in the scale of being till it attains perfection; that in the enjoyment of this freedom from physical weights and impediments it comes and goes, and puts itself in communication with its fellows in the flesh for their good, their comfort and enlightenment. On this is based the claim of the utility of Spiritualism. It must at a useful end and its advocates try to make all that pertains to it sufficiently grave and respectable as to attract the attention, and challenge the consideration of learned and polite society. They have eliminated things that tended to lower the system in the eyes of the refined, such as table tipping and table-rapping; and frown on all frauds. The question which Spiritualists claim to have settled, and which another class, to which the Bible speaks with little authority, wish to see settled, is the immortality of the human soul. It was, I think, in the year 1850, six years after the Fox girls' manifestations at Hydeville, N. Y. that Spiritualism made its advent in the community where I lived.—Muskingum County, Ohio. Nothing more marvelous than table tipping and sundry rappings in furniture about the houses of families disposed to tamper with it occurred, except that a little girl one of our neighbors became a writing medium, writing a very legible hand, and answering many weighty questions. The father, Mr. Wright, said to me, "This will settle the question of the immortality of the soul." Since then I have been reading of various manifestations of the spirits, and of some frauds and clever imitations by artful men and women who wished to turn a dishonest penny and gain a little notoriety.

ROBINSON,

who exposed Madame Blavatsky has found in Mrs. Piper, a medium of Boston, spirit phenomena that has proved more than match for his coolness and skepticism. Hodgson and Prof. James, of Harvard University, subjected this medium to about 500 tests—rigidly and scientifically applied and guarded against fraud. The former does not hesitate to affirm that the facts he witnessed have but one meaning, that is survival after death. We are told that these tests have satisfied some of the ablest investigators of the immortality of the soul. It is quite likely that these men believed in the immortality of the soul to begin with, or, if otherwise, had no positive convictions on the negative of this question. The Spiritualists themselves, believe that the problem of life after death is fully demonstrated by the phenomena which they witness. There are many others who are not convinced by the class of evidence in hand. These are looking for a "scientific demonstration that the spirit of a single person has come back to earth, and communicated with his (its J. L. W.) friends." This they think will establish the fact of life after death and satisfy their longings for immortality. But when will this eagle eye come, for since the days of the Witch of Endor" no advance has been made along this line. What this woman did or seemed to do, is hardly matched by anything of the like among the moderns. One thing the Spiritualistic mediums of today bring on the stage as a part of their marvelous exhibitions, are spirits of horses and other animals materialized. Perhaps the ancient "divines" had not the power to bring up or to bring down the spirits of their domestic pets. If the materialized spirits of dead men are proof of life after death, then the materialized spirits of animals prove after-life for them also. This of course gives the Spiritualist no trouble as he has no doubt of the one, so not of the other. But it is different with those who think there is something in Spiritualism but withhold their assent on the ground that the proof is not quite sufficient. These, from the circumstance that animal spirits appear in these visions along with those of men, would be forced logically to treat the entire phenomenon as an illusion of some sort.

A CLEAR CASE IN POINT.

The Bible, it is said, is full of Spiritualism, but the kind that looks most if not exactly like the modern article, is prohibited under penalty of death. There are several cases on record in the Inspired Volume of life after death. The most notable of these, the one that is placed pre-eminently before the world, and challenges the faith of all who read the testimony, is that of Jesus, the Messiah of the Hebrew prophets, who "was put to death in the flesh but quickened by the Spirit." 1 Pet. iii. 18. His death was an assured fact, believed to be so by friends and enemies; the latter taking every precaution to guard against deception; sealing by order of Pilate, the great stone which Joseph placed at the entrance of the tomb, and setting a watch, all with a view to falsifying the statement which Jesus made a short time before his death, "After three days I will rise again;" fearing this his disciples might come by night and steal him away. This Jesus, styled by the Jews "a deceiver," rose from the dead the third day, in tangible form, flesh and bones that was seen by credible witnesses. "To whom he showed himself alive after his passion (death) by many infallible proofs being seen of forty days, and speaking of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God." Acts i. 3. Here is life after death in substantial form, a real person, concerning which John says "That which was from the beginning, which we have heard, which we have seen with our eyes, which we have looked upon, and our hands have handled of the Word of life." 1 John i. 1. Luke says that "God showed him openly, not to all the people, but unto witnesses chosen before, even to us who did eat and drink with him after he rose from the dead." Acts x. 40, 41. The real Christ with whom the apostles associated and bore company during his ministry, is seen after he rose from the dead by these same witnesses and by above five hundred brethren at one time, the greater part of whom was alive when Paul wrote the first letters to the Corinthians, to whom, in case of doubt or denial, an appeal might be made. Two or three witnesses are sufficient to prove a fact. But above five hundred could be appealed to in proof of the Christian system, on which the dearest hopes of the believer depend.

JOHN L. WISE.

In the Beginning—What?

Colossal scenes lend inspiration to minds which are receptive of the same. It begets within the conception of lofty thoughts and aspirations after that which is high and noble. It is mental food garnered during a golden harvest, whose ripened fruits delight the senses of those capable of assimilating rich repasts of such a nature.

As a sample, I would invite the study of creation, in its various aspects. View the great expanse—the blue vault of heaven, in its evening glory, a magnificent shining frame—the blue ethereal sky spangled with glistening orbs—the diamonds of the heavens revolving each in its own sphere. Amid the shades of night also appears the soft light of the silvery moon, playing hide and seek amid the fleecy clouds.

Next appears the sun, the king of day. (The stars fade away, the pale moon sinks behind the western horizon) and at its rise in the east, imparting light, life and joy to every thing it smiles upon; gladdening the heart, dispelling gloom and despondency, as it rises to its zenith, attracting the limpid element from broad lakes, and flowing rivers, to distill, and return again in gentle showers to cheer, water, invigorate, and beautify all nature.

What does it all mean?—IN THE BEGINNING GOD.

We have another scene fraught with wonder and amazement, and so deep and grand, that unregenerate flesh can never fathom its depths. I will describe it in the language of the poet.

"At Golgotha behold the blessed Christ! upon the cross his holy limbs were stretched, and every nerve and vein is racked and wrenched in agony unspeakable; and see! where through his palms the hammered nails have pierced and through his bare and unresisting feet the red wound gape and spout! stupendous scene of awful pain, the martyred Son of God appeared upon the cross to save the world! Approach! and gaze! and wonder till ye weep! But see, the sun hath sunk in clouds away, as if aghast! a pall of darkness veils the land of Palestine—a stilly gloom more dreadful than the deepest night. The hills groan, the rivers roll as if in wrath! And men with quailing limbs and dropping lips, come forth and stare, tongue-tied upon the skies; and hark! From the cross, is loudly heard in piercing tones of death—My God! my God! Oh, why hast thou forsaken me! Armia, my God! my God! Oh, why dost thou forsake? 'Tis o'er—a sable red eye is filmed and shoe within its socket—against his weary breast the last heart pulse hath beat; and now, behold! with waxen limbs, and gore-wreathed locks, and lips with sweet compassion printed on their curve—the Christ—a sacrifice for lost mankind."

What does this all mean?—IN THE BEGINNING GOD, preparing for the new creation. "Thou hast said thou wilt visit earth again, but not the homeless orphan of the world, to wander on in pain and woe, and weep and perish on the tree; but on thy car of lightning, rolling from the unfathomed depths of heaven! while angels robed in radiant light, brandish their glittering banners o'er thy throne, and all the clouds like burning billows flash and bound beneath thy feet! the trump shall peal the dead-awakening blast, more full and deep than thunder in its maddest roar. The sea shall yawn—her dead arise; the graves burst open, her buried hosts emerge with shouts of victory! then comes the new life, and the new age."

What does it all mean? The manifestation of the goodness of God from the BEGINNING, to the BEGINNING.

W. H. WILSON.

The Sun.

The Sun is a very appropriate symbol of the Supreme power of a political world. In Joseph's dream it was predictive of his exaltation, and the homage that would be paid him by his kindred. His father is represented by the "Sun" as the ruling authority of the circle. "They all made obeisance to me," said Joseph. This dream was highly figurative. You see Jacob readily perceived its significance, saying, "Shall I and thy mother and thy brethren indeed bow down ourselves indeed to the earth?" This figure extends from the family circle, and also symbolizes gradation of powers of the same circle when it came to endorse a nation of twelve tribes. Hence we read in Isaiah, "Thy sun shall no more go down, neither shall thy moon withdraw itself." Here we see the sun represents the civil, and the moon the ecclesiastical authority in Zion, before they were abolished. And, speaking of her destruction by the Chaldeans, the Spirit through Isaiah says, "Her sun is gone down while it is yet day." Her royalty was suppressed, yet her moon (ecclesiastical authority) and stars continued to shine under the Persian administration. But the prophet Joel predicts a great calamity when the earth shall quake and the heavens tremble, in other words, when the sun and moon shall be dark and the stars withdraw their shining. So we see that the sun, moon and stars are prophetic symbols taken from the natural world. "The Lord God is a sun and a shield;" he is a world's ruler, and light giver and protector. This is the significance of the "sun" as a symbol in its largest sense. But in Jeremiah it is used restrictively. In the testimony of the Spirit against Jerusalem, "Her sun is gone down while it is yet day." In this instance the "sun" symbolizes the sovereign power and glory of the commonwealth of which Jerusalem was the capital. It went down when the state was destroyed by the Chaldeans. But it shone forth again and again went down when the kingdom was taken from the Pharisees; when the "sun" was darkened and the moon gave no light, and the stars fell from heaven, and were henceforth suppressed or blinded until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in, or until he came whose right it is, even the "Sun" of righteousness. The Sun represents the King of Israel. The "Sun" is our greatest light. A righteous King is the greatest light to the nation. This greater light will eclipse the lesser and fulfill the words of Isaiah the prophet, "The sun shall be no more thy light by day, neither for brightness shall the moon give light unto thee, but Yahweh shall be unto thee an everlasting light (or sun) and thy God thy glory....." Thy sun shall no more go down (implying that their sun once went down) neither shall thy moon withdraw itself, for the Lord shall be thy everlasting light, and the days of thy mourning shall be ended." She shall no more lose her sovereignty and mourn the withdrawal of her ecclesiastical institutions and privileges. Thy people shall be all righteous. They shall inherit the land for ever, the Branch of my planting, the work of my hands that I may be glorified. Then the moon shall be confounded and the sun ashamed when the Lord of Hosts shall reign in Mount Zion and before his ancients gloriously,"—the former troubles all forgotten.

Obituary.

I would record the death of our dear brother David Shanks, who fell asleep in Jesus on the 24th of last Dec. Dying in Cincinnati, Ohio, after an operation was performed to determine the cause of his intense suffering. The supposed cause was not found to exist; but the bile duct had burst and adhesions of all the organs had taken place. He rallied from it, but the vital forces ran so low he soon sank to rest. In fact he wanted to go—his home was broken up, though with children he seemed so alone. For the dear wife and mother whom he cared for so long and patiently—and such a sufferer himself too, had to be removed to the hospital for the insane at Toledo, O. Her reason being entirely gone. Brother Shanks had everything arranged for burial of himself and also for his wife when that time shall have come. He purchased a lot in Lawrenceville, some eight miles from this city (Springfield, O.), where our Brother and Sister Overholser live, and with whom he sojourned in quietness many days with the stricken wife and mother. He had a casket selected, clothes arranged, and written farewells to absent children. Closing rather to die than to live; and in this preparedness, gave himself up to the surgeons. And in his extreme weakness cared not to live. He expressed himself to his children "as being at peace with all men." Surely our brother sleeps in Jesus. He was buried on Dec. 26th. Our Brother B. F. Howell offered words of comfort to the doubly bereaved children, and to brothers and sisters who, "mourn not as do those who have no hope." Of the eight surviving children, two of them have *this hope, that in the res*urrection their father will rise again. One of these is our dear Sister, Mrs. Grace Wissenger, who meets with us, and who through all the trials of the little ecclesia has passed in the years gone by, has never wavered, but is still pressing forward with other ones "toward the mark of our high calling which is in Christ Jesus." To these dear sisters, and to those of the household in Cleveland and Salem, O., and all sorrowing ones bereft of loved ones, I would say in the language of Jesus, "I go that I may awake him." "I am coming to awaken and to raise the sleeping dead"—"them will I bring with me." I will meet my friends and unitedly the song of victory will sing: "O grave, where is thy victory; O death, where is thy sting." Then, "Sing unto the Lord a new song." "Sing unto the Lord, bless his name." For he cometh, for he cometh to redeem and to save. I am pleased to state that several of the children of our late brother are earnestly seeking to find the path their father walked in. This will be especially gratifying to the Akron ecclesia.

Our Love Feast.

Dear Household of Faith:

I am young in the one faith, having only been a member not quite a year, though I feel it my duty to mingle a short piece with so many other dear ones. I feel very thankful to the Giver of every good and perfect gift, that we are permitted to speak in words of love to each other, testifying of the love we have for our Lord and Master. Let us ever walk worthy of the vocation wherewith we are called with all lowliness and meekness, with long-suffering, forbearing one another in love, endeavoring to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bonds of peace. Oh, let us build upon that most holy faith, and keep ourselves in the love of God. Let us work while it is called today, for the night cometh when no man can work. Dear brethren and sisters, Christ is the medium of all light and glory, and rest and peace and joy we have. Yes, every ray of joy and gladness, every blessing comes to us through him. Blessed Jesus. By divine arrangement we have obtained his name. Dear brothers and sisters, pray for me that I may hold out faithful to the end of this age of time. May the time soon come when we will be united in one grand family in the renewed earth.

Yours waiting for the Noblemen to return and take his kingdom, and reign with his saints for evermore is my praise,

ALBY UPDIKE.

Dear Restitution:

I enclose you the Lord's prayer revised not to change its meaning, but to more fully express the ideas conveyed in it. Our English version has so abridged it that its great significance is much obscured. I have submitted this to several Bible scholars, well versed in the original languages, and all say it is correct in every particular. No prayer is heard by our heavenly Father that is not in and through the name of Jesus. The Lord's prayer is a wonderful one; it shows the purpose of God and his creation, our relationship to him and one another, the kingdom to come, in fact the whole gospel system faith, practice and final glorious result. Please read it and use it at your discretion; it is far more important than many are aware of.

THE WONDERFUL PRAYER REVISED.

Our Father whose dwelling is in the midst of the heavenlies, hallowed be thy great name. Let thy kingdom come, in order that thy will may be done on this earth as in the heavenlies. Give us day by day our daily bread; forgive us our trespasses even as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us, lest we fall into temptation. Deliver us from the evil that would overcome us. For thine is the kingdom to be established. Thine is the power and thine be all the glory. Which favors we ask through the name of thy dear Son.

D. S. MORROW.

Editor Restitution:

Will you please say to the Brothers and Sisters, that on the 1st Sunday in June, if it is the Lord's will, we will have a reunion of brothers and sisters at Brother Henry Foore's residence, near Macy, Ind. There are yet five brothers of us living from the ages of about 58 to 78 years old. Wife has two sisters.

Further, on Saturday night before the 2nd Sunday in June I will begin a meeting at Macy, Ind., in the Christian Church, and continue as long as we think best.

I would love to see all, or as many of my brethren then as can come, and if any others would like my labors while I am in Indiana, and assist a little in bearing the burden of expenses, we would be glad to respond to the call. We want to have a visit with you and talk about the promises and the near coming of the kingdom of God, and exhort one another, and build one another up in God's holy faith and love.

All are invited to our Macy Meeting on the 2nd Sunday in June. Our subject will be, "God's Plan of Salvation." Our lessons will be taken from the Bible, and explained from a chart, so, all having eyes can see, and all having ears can hear. Come one and all.

JOHN FOORE.

Editor Restitution:

I thought I would write you to thank you for the dear paper which makes its weekly visits. It is a great comfort to me in my declining years to read and meditate upon its contents, and to hear of the welfare of those of like precious faith. I perceive many faiths here in this city, but the true faith is not found here that I know of. I have made inquiries concerning the Church of God, but the answer is, No, we don't know of such a church. They say, go with us, that it will never be asked what road we came when we get there. But I can't enjoy their meetings; I went twice to their revival meetings here. Of course they gave in their testimony, all had the privilege, so I gave mine, not having heard a word about the coming of the Lord, or anything good, I asked the question, Why is it we did not hear about the coming of Christ, and the establishment of his kingdom, which is the gospel hope, now, too, in these last days of Gentile rule? It put a damper on their foolishness as he had them all worked up to a sort of mesmerism. They were going forward to the anxious bench and were happy in getting religion, as they term it. He preached the next night about the coming of Christ; he had it at death. I was not there to hear him abuse God's Word we love so well, so we stay away. The preacher has proved himself an imposter, even to their faith in cheating or something. I think by the way my paper comes to me that there are others here in Waterloo, Ia., of our faith. Now, if there are, please let me know, as it would do me so much good to meet with them if they are true to their faith and hope.

Yours in hope of seeing the King in his beauty,

MRS. W. J. BEEME.

Doing nothing for others is the undoing of one's self. We must be purposely kind and generous, or we miss the best part of existence. The heart that goes out of itself gets large and full of joy. This is the great secret of the inner life. We do ourselves the best good doing something for others. —Horace Mann.

The Annual Conference of the Church of God, in Michigan, will be held (D. V.) at Dutton, Kent Co., Thursday evening June 1st, 1899, and continue over the following Sunday.

These meetings have been held so long that they have become an established fact in the minds of the brethren, and they expect the meeting as surely as the time comes. And then it seems we get so much real encouragement and enjoyment from them, it seems like a family re-union, where we can enjoy the blessed communion of those of like precious faith. We would be lost without them, for from these gatherings we derive much strength if we come in the right spirit. All who can come should make a special effort to be there—"So much the more as ye see the day drawing on."

An attractive Summer Haven For Rest, Recreation, Entertainment.

Winona Lake, Indiana, on the Pennsylvania Lines, is an attractive summer haven for persons who may desire to combine devotion, entertainment and instruction with rest and recreation. This lake is a beautiful sheet of water nearly two miles long, surrounded by romantic woodland, which has been improved into a grand summer resort with all the comforts and conveniences for a delightful sojourn. The entrance to the grounds adjoins the pretty station of Winona Lake on the Fort Wayne Route.

As the site of Winona Assembly and Summer School, this resort is visited each summer by many people who are invigorated in both mind and body by the instructive entertainment and health-giving recreation for which Winona is famous. The educational work of the Summer School is under the supervision of prominent instructors. Fine facilities for athletic pastimes are provided, and the college halls and large auditorium are amply equipped for interesting work. The boating, bathing and fishing are excellent. The permanent buildings include many cosy cottages where accommodations may be secured at reasonable rates. There is also a large hotel, and provision for camping out for those who may enjoy tent life. Supplies are obtainable at the large store on the grounds.

Works of Bro. Wiley Jones.

TWELVE WORDS, or the true meaning of Hell, Soul, Spirit, Ghost, Paradise, Incorruption, Incorruptible, Immortal, Immortality, Forever, Everlasting, Eternal, and their originals as learned by their uses in the Bible. A tract of 40 pages, sold formerly at 10 cents a copy.

THE GOSPEL OF THE KINGDOM, an 8 page, double column tract, sold formerly at 10 cents a dozen.

EARLY LESSONS, suitable for old and young, 80 pages, sold formerly for 10 cents a copy.

These works are excellent for use by those who wish to do missionary labor, and we offer them at such a low price that they should be out in a short time. Bro. Jones had large editions of these tracts printed, and by dying suddenly, and his Widow being in feeble health, we have undertaken the task of selling them. Her income is quite limited, and all that can be gotten out of the sales goes to her after expenses are paid. When you buy these tracts you get several times the worth of your money, and also aid a worthy Sister, who will thank you for it.

Assorted package 30 cents per pound. Gospel of the Kingdom, alone at 25 cents per pound.

Keep an Eye on It.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O

Important Notices.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittances should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended to.

Summer Outings.

Before deciding when and where to spend a portion of the hot season this year, lookout for the Booklet issued by the Nickel Plate Road, entitled "Summer Outings," including many picturesque points on the South Shore of Lake Erie and the classic shores of Lake Chautauqua. Remember our Low Rates.—May 31.

A WAR ATLAS.

The exact locality of many places mentioned in the news of the War between the United States and Spain is not known to the general reader, and so recourse is had to geographies. We have decided to offer our readers a complete War Atlas of sixteen pages of maps, showing all the territory where a conflict can occur, besides some valuable statistics. This will be mailed to you for 25 cts. Send orders at once, and get the position of the places named that you can better understand how the various complications will affect the nations of the world. Address,—THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Ind.

SEND THE RESTITUTION to some poor person as present for 1899. The cost is only three cents a week.

Poetry.

He Cometh Again!

He cometh again! Shout the glad strain
Till it echoes o'er mountain and valley and plain;
Till earth's weary hearted, on sea and on land,
Shall hear the glad tidings—the Lord is at hand!

He cometh again! Not to suffer, but reign.
And all the bright holy ones shine in his train;
O ye broken hearted ones sad on land,
The "day star" is dawning—the Lord is at hand!

He cometh again! And sorrow and pain
Shall vanish before him and never fall again;
While the shadows of darkness on sea and on land
Shall light up with glory—the Lord is at hand!

Judges Chapter 16.

1. And Sampsoon went his way to Gaza and saw there a woman who was a harlot and went in unto her.

2. And it was told the men of Gaza, saying, Sampsoon hath come here; and they surrounded and lay in wait for him all the night long in the gateway of the city; and kept silence all the night long, saying, Until morning dawneth and we will murder him.

3. And Sampsoon lay asleep until midnight and in the middle of the night he arose and took the doors of the gateway of the city along with the two door-posts and lifted them along with the bar and placed upon his shoulders and went up to the top of the mountain that faces Chebroon (Hebron) and placed them there.

4. And it came to pass after this event he loved a woman in Alsoruk and her name was Dalida.

5. And the rulers of the other tribesmen went up to her and said unto her, Deceive him and see in what his great strength is, and in what we shall be enabled against him and bind him to humble him; and we will give unto thee a thousand men of valor and one hundred of silver.

6. And Dalida said unto Sampsoon, Tell me forsooth in what thy great strength is, and with what thou mayest be bound to humble thee.

7. And Sampsoon said unto her, If they shall bind me with seven green sinews not decayed, I shall both be weak and like one of the ordinary men.

8. And the rulers of the other-tribesmen brought unto her seven green sinews not decayed and she bound him with them.

9. And her ambush were seated in the inner chamber, and she said unto him, Other-tribesmen are upon thee Sampsoon; and he rent asunder the sinews as one would rend off a tow-string that had smelt of fire and his strength did not become known.

10. And Dalida said unto Sampsoon, Lo, thou hast deceived me and talked lies to me; now then tell me with what thou mayest be bound. And he said unto her, If they shall bind me with new small cords that have not been used, I shall both be weak and like one of the ordinary men.

12. And Dalida took new small cords and bound him with them, and the ambush came out of the inner-chamber and she said, Other-tribesmen are upon thee Sampsoon, and he rent them asunder from his arms like a piece of twine.

13. And Dalida said unto Sampsoon, Lo, thou hast deceived me and talked lies to me, Tell me forsooth with what thou mayest be bound. And he said unto her, If thou shouldst weave the seven scalp-locks of my head with the warp of the loom and drive it with the pin into the wall, I shall be as weak as one of the ordinary men.

14. And it came to pass while he was lying asleep, Dalida took the seven scalp locks of his head and wove them with the web of the loom and pinned them with the pin into the wall, and said, Other-tribesmen are upon thee Sampsoon; and he awoke from his sleep and drew the pin of the web out of the wall.

15. And Dalida said unto Sampsoon, How dost thou say, I have loved thee and thy heart is not with me? This third time hast thou deceived me and not told me in what thy great strength is.

16. And it came to pass when she had worn him out with her words all the days and got him in a tight place and he had become discouraged unto death.

17. He even told her all his heart and said unto her, Iron hath never come upon my head, because I am God's saint (or a saint of God) from my mother's womb. If then I should have my hair cut my strength would stand away from me and I should become weak and be as all the ordinary men are.

18. And Dalida saw that he had told her all his heart, and she sent and called the rulers of the other-tribesmen, and they brought the money (silver) in their hands.

19. And Dalida got Sampsoon to sleep upon her knees, and called a man and he cut off the seven scalp-locks of his head and began to humble him, and his strength stood away from him.

20. And Dalida said, Other-tribesmen are upon thee Sampsoon, and he awoke out of his sleep and said, I will go out as once and again and shake myself out, and he knew not that the Lord had stood away from above him.

21. And the other-tribesmen seized him and cut out his eyes, and brought him down to Gaza in copper-fetters and he was grinding in a house of his prison-keeper.

22. And the hair of his head began to grow even as it had been cut.

23. And the rulers of the other-tribesmen were gathered together to sacrifice a great sacrifice unto their God Dagoon and to make merry; and they said, God hath given into our hand Sampsoon our enemy.

24. And the laity saw him and sung hymns of praise unto their god to the effect, Our God hath given our enemy into our hand, our enemy who was desolating our land and who was filling it with our wounded.

25. And when their heart had become jolly they also said, Call Sampsoon out of his prison-house, and let him make sport in our sight; and they called Sampsoon out of the house of his prison-keeper and he made sport and they beat him and they stood him between the central-roof-pillars of the house.

26. And Sampsoon said unto the young man who held his hand, Allow me also to touch the pillars upon which the house is, and I will lean upon them.

27. And the house was full of the prominent men and women, and all the other-tribesmen were there and upon the roof were about three thousand prominent men and women who were gazing at Sampsoon's sports.

28. And Sampsoon lamented unto the Lord and said, O Lord of love, O Lord, remember me forsooth and strengthen me this once for all, O God, and I will requite one requital for my two eyes on the other-tribesmen.

29. And Sampsoon embraced the two roof-pillars upon which the house stood, and leaned upon them and laid hold of one with his right hand and one with his left.

30. And Sampsoon said, Let my soul die with the other-tribesmen; and he lifted with strength, and the house fell upon the rulers and upon all the laity in it, and the dead whom Sampsoon killed in his death were more than those whom he killed in his life.

31. And his brothers and the house of his father went down and they took him and went up and buried him between Sarsa and Esthaol in the burial-place of Manoos his father; and he judged Israel twenty years.

COMMENT.

The incident leading up to the grand catastrophe in Sampsoon's life and career as narrated in this chapter is his second love affair. Whatever may have been his other relations with women we must conclude from the record that he had two genuine love experiences. The writer does not speak of them as mere sensuous or sensual relations, but treats them as affairs of the heart or experiences in "the grande passion." When he says that Sampsoon loved Dalida he uses the same word for love as Paul does in the 13th chap. of 1st Cor. and it is also evident from the general narrative that Sampsoon led on by his genuine unselfish love for this unworthy and designing woman did as so many men before and since have done, gave her his inmost heart and made her the confident of his most sacred trust—a thing that no man ever does in his relations to a harlot.

This fact is wonderfully significant when we carry the simple narrative over into its higher spiritual import. His sacrifice is a love-sacrifice and the result of a breach of trust and implicit faith on his part in the object of his love.

The meaning of Dalida is "A Little Firebrand" and is the same word used by Salomoon in his parable-teaching to the effect "that no one can take a little fire-brand into his bosom without being burned." Dalis, nominative case; dalidos, gen. c. dalida Dative case, dalida accusative case.

There is no evidence in the narrative that Dalis (or Dalida) was a prostitute; but a designing and wicked woman of influence among her own people who plays her part adroitly and successfully to the undoing of Sampsoon.

The architecture of this heathen temple that he wrecks was evidently of the seven pillar construction, the two pillars that he pulls down being the middle-front-two that formed the entrance to the temple and supported the front of the roof, there being but one corresponding pillar supporting the middle roof at the rear. There were probably no intervening nave pillars as in the later architecture of the Greeks and Romans.

The appellation by which God is addressed here in Sampsoon's prayer for help, verse 28, is the same used by his father Manoos when asking for specific instruction and guidance in the rearing of the promised son. The word is Adoondie and means "God of Love," not in the higher sense in which we now use love, but in the same sense as the heathen applied to the term when used as an epithet of Venus or Astarte. In fact Adoon's is the name that has filtered down to us in the classics and in Shakespeare "Adoni's" in "Venus and Adoni's"

How appropriate that God should be addressed in this way in this matter of "a son of their (Manoos and his wife's) love." The appellation by which the Christ addresses his Father on the cross is a similar one—that is he addresses him by the not unfamiliar name of "Eloos" which means "God of Mercy" and not merely "O my God" as rendered by the C. V. and R. V. on the authority of modern Hebraists, who with the same dense ignorance render "Adam" our great progenitor "Red Earth" when it should be perfectly evident at a glance to any thorough student of Semitic roots that it comes from "Adamaoo" and is the primitive root of this verb meaning "undeveloped" in general terms or more specially as applied to generic creation "untamed," "unbroken to the yoke," or as applied to virgin soil "untilled" or when used in the sense scientific "unevolved."

CHAS. GARDNER.

Life after Death. No. 2.

Christ dared to say in the ears of his enemies, "After three days I will rise again." "Destroy this temple and in three days I will raise it up." This was uttered, not in the air of an enthusiast, but with all the calm faith of one who knew what he was talking about; confident that time would make good his prediction. All infidels believe that Jesus is yet dead. Ingersol while according to him a character that was peerless among his countrymen; yet believes that he was an impostor, but innocent of any design to play the part of one; that he was self-deceived; aspiring to benefit his people, and the world led him to make claims to a mission of far-reaching import, and which could not in the nature of things be consummated. It is thus that an infidel views the case. Miracle of course is the infidel's stone of stumbling; the rock on which he splits. To raise a dead man to life, it must be admitted, is a stupendous miracle. No power, short of Omnipotence is equal to it. The infidel says "nothing of the kind takes place now, and therefore miracles are an impossibility; that it is more reasonable that the testimony should be false than that miracle should be true." How wise!

The infidel cannot prove that miracles are not wrought in the first century by any one, as testified by competent witnesses. He assumes that they are impossible. That the testimony borne by an eye witnesses of their occurrence is false; that they were deceived, and if not deceived they had motives for propagating a lie. The very opposite is true. They could not have been deceived; it was a fact to which they bore witness,—not a fancy or an opinion or a midnight dream. It seems impossible that these men were imposed upon by something illusory. There was no medium in sight or on the ground to bewitch them, to put them in a state of mind to see and hear and handle what had no real existence. Even the bitter and avowed enemies of Christ who brought about his execution, and who were determined to falsify his claims, felt the force of the evidence, for when some of the watch or guard came into the city and showed what had happened at the tomb, the chief priests and elders assembled, and having discussed the matter decided to bribe the soldiers to report that while they slept the disciples came by night and stole him away; promising the soldiers that in case their false report should reach the governor's ears that they would interpose in their behalf and save them from the penalty of the law. Matt. xxvii. 12.14. At the date of Matthew's writing this report was still circulated among the Jews and undoubtedly had gained credit of being true. This is where deception was practiced on the part of these high priests and elders, and not on the part of Christ's disciples.

Take the resurrection of Lazarus in connection with this. His death was an assured fact to all, to friends, and to cavilling and captious Jews alike. That decomposition had progressed to the degree of offensiveness, for he had been dead four days.

The miracle was performed in open daylight, and so palpable was the fact of the resurrection of this man that the enemies of Christ admitted it. Lazarus was a standing witness among them of the power of Jesus. This fact perplexed them. The chief priests and Pharisees gathered a council and said, "What do we? for this man doeth many miracles." They knew Lazarus was restored to life and knowing this they set about planning to put a stop to any further convincing proofs that Jesus was the Messiah predicted by their own prophets. They plainly saw the result of these miracles, and said, "If we let him alone all men will believe on him; and the Romans shall come and take away our place and nation." These men hated Cæsar, but hated Christ much more. The words of Caiaphas, "That it is expedient for us that one man should die for the people, and that the whole nation perish not; (John xi. 50) seemed to furnish them a pretext, though not intended by the high priest as such, to carry out their plot to murder the object of their spite; for it is recorded: "Then from that day forth they took council together for to put him to death." This might serve as a pretext; but back of this was their real and avowed purpose to stop the repetition of notable miracles, such as raising the dead. And this they had previously intended to do by putting to death this wonder worker, as the most effectual way of accomplishing the end in view. Even Lazarus on whom Jesus exerted his power was now exposed to their malice, for in council they had meditated putting him to death; because he as a resurrected man was attracting the attention of many Jews. John xii. 9, 10. I now ask, was Jesus deceived—thinking that he had raised Lazarus from the dead when he had done no such thing? Was it an illusion that passed for a reality before the eyes of Jesus, the sisters Martha and Mary, before their well meaning neighbors, and before the critical eyes of the cavilling Jews? Were these sisters comforted for years after with this illusion under their own roof seated at their fireside and at their daily board? Was he an illusion at the supper six days before the passover, made in honor of Jesus and at which Lazarus sat as a guest? If so, then the high priests and Pharisees with malice afore-thought, in council plotted the death of a phantom. If Jesus knew this was not a reality, but an illusion, how did he bring so many under the mysterious spell and hold them there so long—enemies and friends alike. This would be little short of a miracle! If Lazarus was not raised from the dead the enemies of Jesus could have produced the body in court, or what would have been sufficient, inspected his tomb and found him there and borne witness to the fact. This the enemies of Jesus would have done and by this means defeated his marvelous claims. Not to have done this would have placed them before the world as the most stupid set that ever lived. They had no need to visit the tomb to find the dead, for the living Lazarus was among them eating and drinking. I can not believe that Jesus himself was deluded, nor on the other hand that he willingly practiced what would delude others. The character of the man as we gather from the memoirs of his public life forbids the latter conclusion and the former was impossible under the circumstances surrounding the death and resurrection of Lazarus.

Dear Restitution:

I have received the following letter, viz:

"R. S. Dwiggins, Dear Brother:

I understand that you are a 'lawyer' and belong to the legal fraternity, and are at present engaged on 'knotty questions.' I too have a case on hand, and wish to employ you to help me out on four counts.

1st, Is our people of the "RESTITUTION" a body corporate; that is, can they sue and be sued as such?

2nd, Can they legally authorize their ministers to unite men and women in wedlock?

3rd, If they can, and they do this work, do they not then belong to Cæsar's staff?

4th, If they cannot and yet do, are they not guilty of causing men and women to commit adultery, and liable to judgment here and hereafter?

Please answer through THE RESTITUTION and oblige many readers.

Yours kindly seeking the light,

T. E. ADAMS."

In answer to the first question, I will say, primarily no. Our church organizations are congregational in form, as were the churches at Corinth, Galatia, Philipi, Jerusalem, etc., in the days of the Apostles. The legal status of a church organization is fixed by statute in the different states. To illustrate, in Indiana all churches are required by law, to elect trustees to whom the title of the church property shall be conveyed. These trustees hold the title to the property for the use and benefit of the church.

Notice of the time and place of holding such an election, is required to be given by publication. A certificate, signed by the proper officers of the church, setting forth the giving of the notice, the holding of the election and stating who were elected as such trustees, is required to be made and recorded in the Recorder's office of the county.

When this statute has been complied with and the property has been properly deeded to such trustees, the legal title vests in the trustees for the benefit of the church. In this manner a church organization obtains a legal existence. They become a quasi-corporation, and may in a few cases sue and be sued. To illustrate, they may insure their church property, and if it is destroyed by fire they may bring suit and recover insurance money. They may borrow money and mortgage their church property to secure the payment of the same. On failure to pay they may be sued to enforce the payment. But the powers of the church are very limited in this direction.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalisation of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

In contemplation of law, all lands belong to the government. In this country in all the States, except the original thirteen colonies, the title to all lands comes from the general government. Therefore a church to obtain title to a lot on which to erect a church building must comply with the laws of the country. This is no new doctrine. In the days of our Savior the Temple at Jerusalem was owned and controlled by the Sanhedrim, for the use of the Jewish church. They obtained title thereto from the Roman government, which conferred upon them the right to control and manage the same.

In answer to the second question will say, the statutes of the different States confers upon ministers of the gospel the legal authority to solemnize marriage. No matter whether the ruling officer of a church is an elder appointed as Paul directed, or a pastor, or a priest, or a bishop, the law confers upon such person the authority to solemnize marriage. One appointed and recognized by the church as an evangelist may also perform the ceremony.

The churches may appoint these proclaimers of the gospel and officers of the church in any manner they may adopt, whether by ordination, election, appointment or otherwise. When they have been regularly appointed, in the manner adopted by the several churches, the law confers on them the authority to solemnize marriage.

In answering the third question, I say no, not in the ordinary sense of becoming an officer of the government. The marriage relation is a divine institution. It is the very first institution which God wrought out, after he had created a man and a woman. The marriage of the man and the woman was the last act of creation. It was a creation, because by God's power they became "one flesh." They are no longer twain but one. Every time a man and a woman are truly married, the power of God is brought into requisition, and by it they are made one. There is no power in heaven or earth, that can, in the light of divine teaching, take the two who have been made one, and separate them and make them two, with two exceptions, viz.: death or the crime of fornication on the part of one of them. We think these are common questions on which we are all familiar. Many of us have not fully realized the full meaning of the divine teaching on this question. Read very carefully Gen. ii. 24; Matt. 3-9 inclusive; Mark x. 2-9 inclusive; Eph. v. 31.

It is God's desire that this sacred institution of marriage shall be maintained and carried out just as he instituted it. He has therefore wisely caused governments to enact and enforce stringent laws for the government of marriage.

1st, That the marriage shall be properly solemnized and a record thereof kept.

2nd, For the punishment of those who may violate their marriage vows.

3rd, That the family relation, which was the first form of civil government instituted by God, may be maintained.

Thus it will be seen, that it is not Cæsar who is controlling God, but God is using Cæsar to work out his great purposes. God has so wrought upon the people of this nation, who are the rulers, that many of the doctrines of the Bible have been enacted into laws.

"Thou shalt not kill."

"Thou shalt not commit adultery."

"Thou shalt not steal."

"Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor."

The doing of any one of these things is a crime under our laws with heavy penalties attached. Why have these laws been enacted, and why are they being enforced? It is done at the behest of the Ruler of the universe.

I might carry this argument into great detail and show that many of the laws on our statute books, for the government of the people, is simply the enactment of a thought which eminated from God, which has been enacted into law. God rules the affairs of men and nations. He rules as absolutely today, as he did in the days of Adam, Noah, Abraham, Moses, Solomon, Christ and the Apostles.

Awaiting the coming of the Master, let us be diligent, faithful, hopeful, helpful, obedient, kind, loving, considerate and charitable, patiently waiting and watching for the beloved Son of God.

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, MAY 24, 1899.

THERE being five Wednesdays in the month of May, we hereby give notice that no paper will be printed next week, but the next issue will bear date of June 7.

THE coming of the Just One seems now to be even at the door, and our whole time and energy, and might, and mind, and strength, should constantly be employed to keep our garments unspotted, so that at his coming we may not be found naked.

IT seems that the worm so often stepped upon has turned at last on the treader. Advices from the East say that Russia through her Minister to China without any intimation to the other powers of her purpose, tried to obtain a concession for a railroad from their newly acquired province, to the Capital City, but the Chinese Foreign office has notified the Russian Minister that China cannot accede to this his demand. The Northern Bear will have to wait a more opportune moment.

BRETHREN and sisters, the night of Gentile superstition being upon us, we need to watch earnestly, and look anxiously for the Lord's return. Here we have no abiding places, and no continuing city—we seek one to come. Our portion is not here in the night, but in the coming millennial day. "Therefore," says Paul, "let us not sleep as do others, but let us watch and be sober." Again he says, "But let us who are of the day, be sober, putting on the breast-plate of faith and love, and for a helmet—the hope of salvation." If we would escape the wiles of the wicked we must be completely clad, and thoroughly guarded. Though we are of the day we are in the night; and though we are sober, we are yet with the drunken, and so weak is the flesh, that we constantly need the Spirit's warning not to fall asleep. It is only by constant care, vigilant watching and earnest prayer that we can stand unscathed. It requires a constant exercise of that Word of Truth by which it becomes a living power guiding our actions,—by this means we can be guarded from every evil. Yes; it is absolutely necessary to live up to the advice of Paul in Col. ii. 6:—"As ye, therefore, have received Christ Jesus the Lord, so walk ye in him, rooted and built up in him, and established in the faith as ye have been taught, abounding therein with thanksgiving."

"I Will Come Again."

In the days of his flesh Jesus went about with his disciples preaching the glad tidings of the kingdom of God, inviting men and women to share with him its glory and honor, and to partake of the immortality associated therewith; to become joint-rulers with him of the kingdom which God intends to establish upon the earth; a kingdom which will embrace all existing dominions under the sun, and be established on their ruins, and which will extend from one end of the earth to the other.

His first coming and death was preparatory to his second appearance and glory. It was the means of opening up the way of deliverance from death and the grave; so that they which are called might receive the promise of the eternal inheritance of the land, and a means of establishing a basis of righteousness by which God might be just, and the justifier of those repentant sinners who believe in Jesus. Rom. iii. 21-26. This work concluded he went away to heaven to receive for himself a kingdom, and to return, Luke xix. 12,—the reference being to the fact that the princes of those nations subject to the Romans went up to Rome to be inaugurated and to receive the diadem, and then went back to their own country to exercise authority. So Christ has gone into the far country to receive for himself a kingdom, and to return to reign. He has not returned yet to establish that kingdom, but he will, and to redeem from the dust of the earth all those who sleep in him, and those who are alive who "look for his appearing."

This coming of Christ is the pivot upon which the salvation of individuals and the redemption of the world from all the evils under which it groans and turns. There is no hope apart from Christ's present existence in heaven, and his return to earth."

Light is Breaking.

From "Some Words of Comfort," by Bishop Exeter, it is refreshing to quote, as follows:—

"As I pondered the simple, severe statements of Scripture, I learned more and more of the error and guilt of those who, in all ages, have overlaid the Word of the living God with human tradition, and have piled up countless materialistic and mental and moral horrors, not only as existing in hell, but as multiplying themselves there without end; and this, under the government of the All-wise, All-just, the Almighty, whose name is love; horrors of which his Holy Word says nothing, but which its statements, so far as they unveil the mysteries of the ages to come, absolutely and for ever condemn and exclude."

The following paragraph furnishes additional evidence that the light of the glorious gospel has begun to shine into the bishop's heart. He says in the same work:—

"It has been too much the custom of popular theology to speak of the saints immediately after death being admitted to the full undoubted glories of heaven. How is the thought repeated in countless hymns and sermons?

'One gentle sigh the fetters breaks,
We scarce can say he's gone;
Before the willing spirit takes
Her mansion near the throne.'

And yet this entrance into the inheritance of the everlasting kingdom is reserved for those who stand approved before the Son of Man in the day of his appearing."

On reading this, one can hardly help thinking that the writer was almost ready to hear the gospel of the kingdom of God, and its obedience.

Life in Christ, vs. Death.

Wondering if we could hear any new arguments in the defence of the theology of the last times we walked into an edifice where, professedly, the gospel is preached; and to our surprise the preacher took for his text the words of Jesus found in John v. 40, "Ye will not come unto me that ye might have life;" and our curiosity was aroused to hear how, by any process of logic, he could tack the immortal soul onto so plain and positive a statement, that life was only attainable by coming to Christ for it. But logic was given to the winds, and every principle of just and Scriptural exposition violated in order to parade the Pagan dogma of natural immortality.

In one breath we were told that life eternal was only to be had in Christ, and the next moment, "that every man, woman and child in the house had within him a something that could not die; and that when the sun, moon and stars are no more, this soul would live on." What this "something" was, sometimes called soul, and sometimes Spirit by him, he did not enlighten us, nor did he take the trouble to draw a distinction between the eternal life of the saved, and that of the lost as is sometimes attempted. It never seemed to occur to the preacher that Life and Death in the Scriptures are placed in Antithesis to each other thus: "The wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life." The plain language of the preacher was a flat contradiction to these true and Scriptural statements. The one note that rings out above all others in John's gospel is "life." Life in Christ is set forth in distinct terms, and declares in the plainest possible manner "That he that hath not the Son hath not life." The alternative of this life is to perish.

The illustrations both in the Old and New Testaments declare this, thus—"The wicked shall be dashed in pieces like potter's vessel; shall be like beasts that perish; like a whirlwind that passeth away; like garments consumed by the moth; shall be silent in darkness; like a lamp put out; like a dream that flies away; consumes like smoke; melt like wax; burns like tow, and many others to the like effect.

The New Testament is equally emphatic—like a house built on the sands destroyed by the storm and flood, cast away to corruption; like natural brute beasts that perish; like the antediluvians destroyed by the flood; Sodom destroyed by fire; like chaff burnt up and tares consumed, and other illustrations too numerous to mention. These are the pictures selected by God from the world, open to our inspection in order to teach us what the end of the wicked will be.

Pulpit theology reverses these statements by saying in effect, what God declares shall not be. When for instance, Ps. xxxvii. declares "the wicked shall consume like the fat of lambs in the fire," the God dishonoring serpent lies by saying that though in the fire they shall have continuity, and shall not consume away.

The burning-bush that was not consumed, is not used by God to illustrate the punishment of sinners, but it might be more aptly used to denote the supposed fire-proof soul of pulpit theology, only that these theologians would feel they were treading on ground that is used by them to illustrate the fiery ordeal of the tempted and tried ones, and therefore would not fit both purposes. The bush was miraculously preserved: so, indeed, it would be equally miraculous to preserve that which the Scriptures declare is mortal and corruptible. John Wesle says, in sermon 78, of the wicked in hell, "That they will not be consumed."

The modern luminary above referred to affirmed the same thing; and the congregation seemed to delight in such teaching as if it was a mere virtue on the part of God to inflict upon his creatures the most monstrous cruelty it is possible for the human mind to conceive of.

As to what this life was to which the text referred, we got not the slightest gleam, except the usual up-in-the-balloon religions of kingdoms beyond the sky. The Scriptural position of the saint's reign with Christ was not even mentioned, or the life as it shall be when angelic in nature, "We shall die no more."

These advocates of eternal evil and torture, are so blind that they contradict the plain statements of Scripture. They fail to recognize the goodness and mercy in the bestowment of eternal life on the righteous and this justice in terminating sins and sinners."

Our Love Feast.

Dear Restitution:

I have been a baptized believer in the things concerning the kingdom, and name of Jesus, for a number of years, being one of the first who obeyed the gospel at the place known as the Church of God, at Coalspring, in Warren Co., near Browntown, Va. There are a few believers here, who were brought into the fold by the labors of our well beloved, but now much lamented brother, N. J. Morgan, who fell asleep in Jesus April 26, 1893. After this sad occurrence we, not having any one to labor in word and doctrine, were like sheep without a shepherd; but thank the Lord the few faithful ones have stood firm to the truth, and we are all praying to the Lord of the harvest to send forth more laborers in his vineyard. I realized that we ought to have a house of worship in order for the truth to be carried out; the Master said, "As oft as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, you show forth his death;" and is that all, no, we show his death until he comes. My husband and son have nobly undertaken the task of building us a new meeting house, and the friends of truth are helping them all they can. He says he is doing this purely for the cause, and that our children and grandchildren and neighbors may all be benefitted thereby; five of our children have been obedient to the faith; and we have one son and one daughter, yet whom we hope will soon follow their example in choosing the good part, which cannot be taken away. Oh, how it feasts my soul to see our dear children take an interest in the truth. Dear brethren and sisters, I do not know you personally, but there is a love for the truth's sake which binds us together in Christian ties, which can never be severed, thank the Lord; and now may the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all, till we meet in the kingdom is my prayer,

ELIZABETH A. UPDIKE.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

Lest you should think that Abbie Perry-Howard has given up her hope, and cast away her confidence in God and his immutable Word, I take up my pen to inform you I have not changed my faith or hope for many years, but that I am a constant reader of THE RESTITUTION, and have been since it was first published, and only wish I was able to do more for its publication, and for the cause of truth in general; but we are getting poor and old, and cannot help much financially, but I am praying the Lord to bless all who are trying to spread light and truth in the earth. I think there are many God-fearing and Christ-loving people, who are doing much good in the world, who do not see all the truth yet, but let us not forget to pray that their eyes may be opened to see the light of all truth, and do what we can to help them to see it both by doctrine and practice. We are isolated from all of like faith and hope, and feel very lonely, so that we can sympathize with all the aged and lonely ones who write for and read THE RESTITUTION, and we pray God bless and strengthen and keep them in the narrow way that leads to life eternal. How strange the times in which we live; sin and evil prevail everywhere, and unbelief is growing more bold, while the nominal church persist in believing and preaching the devil's lie, and are rejecting the truth of future life only in Christ. When we lay down this mortal (Adamic) life, if we have not "laid up in store a good foundation against the time to come," "by a patient continuance in well doing," we have no promise of future life; but will be found among those of whom the Psalmist speaks in the 49th Psalm, viz., "Man that is in honor and understandeth not, God's purpose—his Word) is like the beasts that perish." Again he says, "Man being in honor, abideth not, he is like the beasts that perish. Like sheep they are laid in the grave, death shall feed on them, but the upright shall have dominion over them in the morning, and their beauty shall consume in the grave from their dwelling. But, David exclaims, "God shall redeem, my soul from the power of the grave for he shall receive me." So as I understand him, one class will be redeemed from the grave, and the other will not, for he says of the wicked, "He shall go to the generation of his fathers, they shall never see light." Isa. xxvi. Speaking of the lords who had dominion over them, he says, "They are dead, they shall not live; they are deceased, they shall not rise. Thou hast visited and destroyed them and made all their memory to perish." But in the 19th verse he says, "Thy dead men shall live together with my dead body shall they arise. "Awake and sing ye that dwell in dust: for thy dew is as the dew of herbs, and the earth shall cast out the dead." In perfect accord with the Prophets are the words of John iii. 36, "He that believeth on the Son, hath everlasting life, and he that believeth not the Son shall not see life; but the wrath of God abideth on him." Sentence of death pronounced on Adam and all the race in him. Glory be to God for the hope and promise of eternal life in his Son Jesus Christ. I am exceedingly interested in many things I read in THE RESTITUTION, but nothing has interested me any more of late than Sister Wince's article on "Anti Semitism in America." My heart has been pained many times in the past two years by the treatment of Herman Warszawiak and his faithful wife in their work of faith and labor of love among their own kindred in New York. Not only unconverted Jews, but the Presbyterian church, to which they belonged, have many of them made themselves odious in the eyes of every lover of truth and righteousness by their treatment of that worthy man and his wife. Sister Wince has nobly defended their cause. May the God of Jacob bless her for it; and I hope many more will become interested, and so help them to live, for they are poor and needy of help. The parents of both are rich and have offered them every inducement that wealth can give, if they will come back to the religion of their fathers, and give up their work and mission, but they remain firm and unshaken, and will rather starve than give up the work of him who died to redeem them from death. O, that we may be as faithful in spreading the light of the truth God has given to us.

May the God of Jacob bless all the writers and readers of THE RESTITUTION. Pray for us, that we may be "kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation, ready to be revealed in the last time." Your Sister looking for the coming of the King,

ABBIE PERRY HOWARD.

Brother Underwood:

At last I will send you a money order for three dollars to pay on my paper, I thank you for your kindness, for your indulgence to me. I am still living in Hennessy, Oklahoma, it is a place where God's whole truth needs to be preached very much. Seven churches in the town and they only preach a little scrap of the gospel. They have got to preach some gospel in order to deceive the people. All the predictions that point forward to these very times we are in, are being fulfilled to the very letter. I feel I have a work to do, and have been doing it, and will do it as long as God gives me strength to do it. The true faith and hope of the gospel when spoken always has offended the unbelieving world, and will as long as this world lasts, but this world will pass away before long, bless God. The world that is promised the righteous will usher in and fill this his sin-cursed earth with the knowledge of our Lord as the waters cover the sea; the curse moved that was caused by the first Adam, by the second Adam the earth redeemed back to Eden beauty, and the meek will inherit the earth for ever. The only promise that God has made to the righteous for an everlasting inheritance is the earth, but they never will come in possession of it till full redemption comes, and that cannot be till the Redeemer comes with the voice of the archangel and the trump of God to wake the sleeping saints from their slumber, and it he never comes to arouse them from their slumber, we deposit our dead in old mother earth, and they will sleep a perpetual sleep. The righteous have eternal life and that life is hid with God in Christ, and when Christ appears then is the promise to appear with him in glory, and not to appear with him till he comes.

Your brother looking for the King to come in power and glory, we will soon hear the sound of the seventh angel.

It is told of Franklin that one time in Paris he was greatly ridiculed for his love of the Bible, and that he made up his mind to find out how many of the scoffers had read it. He informed one of the learned societies, of which he was a member, that he had come across a story of pastoral life in ancient times that appeared to him very beautiful, but that he would like the judgment of the society upon it. On the evening appointed, Franklin had a reader of finely modulated voice read to them the book of Ruth. They were in ecstacies over it, and one after another arose to express gratification and admiration, and the desire that the manuscript be printed. "It is printed," said Franklin, "and is a part of the Bible."—Ram's Horn.

Poetry.

"All, All for Thee!"

"All, all for Thee!" Dear Savior, may this watchward
Be thine own keynote for my life this year;
So sweetly harmonizing thought and action,
That none who list can shall a discord hear!

"All, all for thee!" Oh, take me now entirely!
Be time enclimate with thine own gentle hand;
I give myself unresh into thy keeping,
To do or suffer, as thou shalt command.

I give my heart, I long to love thee better
Than ever I have done before,
Tant all I do may be a "joy, not duty;"
Lord Jesus, grant it—nay I have thee more?

I give my will—oh, Master, do receive it!
It must be said in my entr last thing
I cannot keep it, it is so self-pleasing:
What rest to think it is no longer mine!

"All, all for thee," says I in all my weakness,
Until, alone, the feeblest chord to raise
An instrument discordant, worn, and worthless,
But ready to be used to sound thy praise.

O Master, by thine own most Holy Spirit,
Send heavenly music o'er the earth through me!
So true, so beautiful, so soul-refreshing,
That those who hear it may learn more of thee.

Oh thee, thy Savior, who for them died suffer
Oh thee, their Friend, who loves them so well;
Oh thee, their King, who soon will be returning:
Lord, may thine albums through my whole life swell!

Would Jesus do It? No. 4.

PINE WOODS BIBLE CLASS.

"He that saith he abideth in him ought himself also to walk even as he walked." 1 John, ii. 6.

Teacher. The topic for the day is: "How would Jesus conduct business were he in our place?"

It is sometimes said that as far as business is concerned, but little difference is discerned between the methods employed by professed followers of Jesus, and the men of the world. Both act on the principle of selfishness, and we all know, that the teachings of Jesus are antagonistic to selfishness. Now, as to the effect of our present method of doing business, I would call your remembrance to some incidents we noticed in our short stay at Rainsville. You will remember, we were detained there by the destruction of the railroad bridge crossing the river at that point.

Rainsville is the center of a great coal mining district. In the southeastern part of the town are found the cottages of the coal miners. These miners have been great sufferers caused by the selfish and ungodly methods of doing business, adopted by those persons and companies, who own the mines; which could have been averted, if they would only follow the method of doing business prescribed by Jesus: "Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them." Business conducted on that principle, would work no ill to his neighbor.

I will ask Albert to relate what he observed at Rainsville?

Albert. Yes, I well remember our stay at that place. It was there I learned a lesson, which I shall not soon forget. It made me sad to witness so much distress among the families of the miners, caused by the unchristian manner in which coal mine owners do business.

These rich mine proprietors organized what they call a Coal Miners' Trust. This combine would meet and adopt methods by which they could unitedly do business. Among other things, they arranged that they would pay their employees by the ton for digging their coal. The price agreed upon was so low, that the men could hardly make living wages.

They also fixed the price at which retail coal merchants should sell coal. And in order to prevent the law of supply and demand from regulating the price, they arranged that whenever a large supply was on the market, they would shut down the mines for a time, in order to prevent the market from being overstocked.

During these periods of time, the men with their families, were distressed for want of the necessaries of life.

Teacher. I feel assured that Jesus would not be so selfish, as to distress his employees, in order to further increase his own wealth, were he a mine owner. I will ask Carrie to relate a case of distress which came under our observation, while at Rainesville, which was but a sample of so many others at that place.

Carrie. The case I have in mind was called to our attention, on the first night of our stay at Rainesville. After supper, we all went out for a walk. As we passed along the street we noticed lights in a church just ahead of us, it appeared to be a Wednesday night prayer meeting. And as we drew near, we heard them singing:

"I will follow Jesus," etc.

Arloa suggested that we go in, which we did. The topic for the evening, was: "Following Jesus." The leader introduced the subject with some forcible remarks, advocating a literal following of Jesus, if we would wish to be approved by Jesus, at his second coming. Others followed, on much the same line.

But what I want to call attention to particularly was a man who sat near the center of the church. His countenance bore a troubled expression, and his clothes were somewhat shabby, by much wear. He arose and made some remarks which seemed to touch every heart. Addressing the leader, he said: "Sir, I have never made any profession of religion, yet I have read the Bible enough to know something as to what it means to follow Jesus. It says somewhere in that Book, I could not say where, something like this: "If a brother or sister be naked, and one of you say unto them, be ye warmed and filled, notwithstanding ye give them not those things which are needful to the body; what doth it profit?" I believe Jesus would go further than merely giving relief, (which is a blessed thing to do.) I am sure were he a business man, he would not, (because it would make him richer) so plan his business, in a way that would have the effect to render thousands upon thousands of people "destitute of daily food." Lots of men do this, who call themselves followers of Jesus.

I am a coal miner in the employ of L. A. Rudolph, who owns the Light House Coal Mines, located about a half a mile west of Rainesville. Mr. Rudolph is a rich man, and he also makes a profession of religion. He is also a member of the Coal Miners' Trust, and under pays his men, and along with others, he occasionally shuts down his mine, to prevent the market from being overstocked with coal.

Mr. Rudolph has in his employ, about one hundred and fifty men; and when the mine is shut down, the miners' families are made "destitute of daily food," and these rich mine owners do not "give them those things which are needful." Is this following Jesus?

Right here I will relate a personal experience, which is only one among many others. It is painful to me to do so, yet it will illustrate my ideas as to what it means to follow Jesus.

On one of these occasions of shutting down the mines, our second daughter Ruth took sick with the scarlet fever. I immediately summoned Dr. Henry to attend her. He said he was sorry, but he could not come, because he was already overrun with business. Two days later, however, he was called to a case in the family of Mr. Ellis, a wealthy resident of Rainesville, and he attended promptly, and had no excuse to make, why was this? Did he do as Jesus would do?

I next went to see Dr. Ames, and laid my case before him. I told him I was temporarily out of employment, on account of the shutting down of the mines, and it would probably be some time before I could pay him for his services.

He said to me, "Don't trouble yourself in the least about that; I will attend your daughter, and do my best for her. You can pay me a little at a time just as you can afford it."

Time rolled by, and the disease was nearing its crisis, we were so anxious, it being uncertain which way it would turn.

Being out of employment so long, our provisions run out. I was in distress. Several times I contemplated suicide, but I resisted the temptation, saying to myself, that would not relieve my family, but only add to their sorrow. I tell you, I loved my family just as much as any wealthy person could love his.

Teacher. I wish to remark right here, that wealth does not indicate the presence of love in the home. The rich are indeed poor, if they are not rich toward God. Under rough garments there beats many true, loving hearts. Pardon the interruption. Please proceed.

Carrie. At this point, the teacher called attention to a small church, located at 163 Elm street. He said: "On Elm street, there is located a small plain church, it is called the Church of God. The members are a plain, but godly people. Some say that they are peculiar people, and sometimes they call them soul sleepers. But by conversation with one of their members, I learned that they believe in eternal life only through Christ. They look for the second coming of Jesus, to reign on David's throne, over restored Israel. They immerse people like the Baptists do, but they say it is for the remission of sins. I don't know whether these doctrines are true, or not, but I do know one peculiar thing about them, and that is, they are very good to the poor. They follow Jesus where he said he was sick and in prison, and they visited him, and fed him when he was hungry, and gave him water to drink when thirsty, and clothes to wear when he needed them. They say this does not mean Jesus himself, but that that ministering done to his needy people, he regards as being done to himself, personally.

Now, I wish to tell you something about Miss Lillie Gordon, who is a member of this unpretending church. She endeavors to follow Jesus everywhere.

She read in the Bible what Jesus said about visiting him when he was sick and in prison, and giving him food and clothing when in need. She said Jesus meant that in doing all this to others, he would regard it as doing it to himself personally. She loves the Savior so much, that it is her delight to please him.

She heard that our daughter Ruth was sick. (but did not know of the poverty brought upon us by selfish methods of doing business) and on one Saturday evening she came to see her. Her visit was a bright spot in our home. It did not take her long to discover our temporal needs. On Sunday morning she laid on case before her church, and soon after one o'clock of that day, several baskets of provision were left at our door, and on Monday morning, a barrel of flour, and other necessaries were sent from the grocery near by. She thought that is what Jesus would do.

This dear Miss Gordon stood right by our daughter, and skillfully nursed her back to health. Dr. Ames told us that he had had a great deal of experience with nurses, many of them he said simply follow strictly the instructions of the physicians, which was all right as far as it went, but he said changes often take place in the patient during the absence of the doctor, of which he could know not hing about. Now, says he: "A nurse who sees this, and knows what to do in such a case, is often of more value than the doctor." Such a nurse, he had found in Miss Gordon.

The crisis passed favorably, and Ruth became convalescent. The doctor said it would be beneficial to her, if she should ride out and breathe the fresh air.

Miss Lillie (as we now call her) soon appeared at our door with a horse and carriage, which she borrowed from her uncle, and gave Ruth some delightful rides in the country, viewing the beauties of nature.

I asked Lillie, what there was about her religion, which made her church people live in such a simple, plain, and unpretending way, and always have such happy faces?

She told me it was "The Blessed Hope." I said to her, wont you please tell me about that hope? I somehow feel that the hope, which inspires good deeds, is most likely to be true. I know my boss (Mr. Rudolph,) professes to be a Christian, but his acts almost made an infidel of me, and also a suicide. She said it would be a pleasure to do so. I can only tell you a little to-night, there is so much involved in its soul inspiring promises.

You know as well as I do that when Jesus was on earth, he spent his life in dispensing good to others. Copious showers of blessings fell from his hands. Now, all who expect to share in the blessings involved in the Blessed Hope, must also spend their lives in being a blessing to others.

"I see," said Mr. Williams, the coal miner, it is now late, and it would not be right to detain you longer with my story to-night.

Several members of the prayer meeting said they would like to have Mr. Williams continue his story next Wednesday night. It was so arranged, and Mr. Williams will continue next week.

Obituary.

Fell asleep to Jesus, at Hartha, Kan., Harriet Gregg, daughter of Solomon and Sarah I. Slayback. She was born in Montgomery Co., Ill., May 23, 1839; was married to Eli Cress, and unto them was born one son. Later on her husband died. She with her father and mother moved to Vernon Co., Mo., at which place she was married to Samuel Gregg, in the year 1869, from which place they moved to Neosha Co., Kan., to them was born a son and a daughter. In 1870, Sister Gregg was baptized into the all-saving name of the Lord, in which faith she fell asleep. She was a faithful member, a good and loving wife, a good mother, and a kind friend to every one. She was a great sufferer, but she is now at rest; but her works will go on. If she had lived until the 28th day of May, she would have been 60 years old. She leaves a husband and two sons, a mother 80 years old, two brothers and a host of friends to mourn her loss. The funeral was attended by a large crowd of people. Our text was the 15th of I Cor., whole chapter. We sang at the grave.

"We may sleep, but not forever,
There will be a glorious dawn,
We shall meet to part no never,
On the resurrection morn."

Now I ask, who will be the next to follow? Is it I?

Truly as ever, yours waiting for the coming King.

Dear Restitution:

A sad circumstance happened today which caused the sudden death of the infant son of Mr. George Thomas Updike and Lela, his wife, aged nineteen months and some days. His sister gave him some dried cherries to eat, as had often been done, and from some unknown cause in a very few moments the dear little child died. Oh! how sad it was to see the heart-stricken parents, bereft of their darling babe, almost without a moment's warning of the dreadful event in store for them about their dear child.

He waked up in the early morn,
So full of life and play
And oh! to think how sad it was,
For it was his last day.

He was a bright and lovely child.
His mother loved him so.
But oh! the love his father had
None else can ever know.

Grand-Pa and Ma lived just in sight,
But oh! how sad to tell,
To see these dear old faithful souls
Bid him a last farewell.

Early Israel was his name,
The joy of all their hearts,
But oh! the time has come at last
When they and he must part.

We laid him in the silent grave
To wait the coming day,
When Christ returns to earth again
To wipe our tears away.

SARAH F. MORGAN.

Frank Lewis Townsend, son of Bro. G. M. Townsend, passed quietly away at the residence of Mr. A. V. Downs on South Main Street, Fredricktown, Mo., at 5.22 P. M. April 20. Age one year, 7 months and 19 days. His mother, Sister Laura P. Townsend, preceded him in death about a year, with that dreadful disease consumption, and little Frank has been almost a constant sufferer ever since with a similar disease. He was in the best of care, with his grandmother, Mrs. Townsend. Mrs. A. V. Downs is a sister of Bro. G. M. Townsend, and everything in the way of medical aid and comfort was done for him, as he was a great pet in the Down's family, especially with Mr. A. V. Downs. He was taken to the Nance cemetery, 7 miles west of Fredericktown, near Bush, Mo., where a large crowd of friends and relatives had gathered to look at little Frank for the last time in mortality. He was laid by the side of his mother to await the resurrection of the Just.

Dear Restitution:

It is my painful duty to write and let the readers of THE RESTITUTION know of the deaths of my sister and mother. Bertha Elma Bogarth Stacey died on the 17th of March, after a short illness caused by taking cold, having moved from her old home near Solina to Oshawa, about a month before her death. She with her husband, C. N. Stacey, and two small boys were sick at the same time, and waiting on the rest caused her death. She was the daughter of Stephen and Jane Hogarth, being the youngest of a family of three. She lacked nine days of being 34 years old at her death. She was born and raised on the old homestead near Solina, in Durham Co., Ont., and spent all her life time there, till a month before her death. From her infancy she attended the Advent Church at Solina, and was baptized by R. V. Lyon, a number of years ago. Mr. Tiddy, he Methodist minister of Oshawa, read a chapter at the house, and we laid her to rest on the hill behind the little church at Solina. In her youth she was a prominent temperance worker in the Division at Solina, being a fairly good musician and elocutionist; she was one of the chief ones in the organization. A large number of her old schoolmates congregated at the chapel to take a farewell look at one who will be missed so much. The following lines were written by her brother, John E. Hogarth, before the death of her mother.

Dearest sister, we can't wake you,
You are gone, not to return,
Till Gabriel blows his trumpet
At the resurrection morn.

Thy days were short and fleeting,
Thy sun went down at noon;
Thy heart has ceased its beating,
And rest's to thee a boon.

Thy youth was spent in pleasure,
Like sunshine without cloud
Then was thy parents' treasure,
But now their heads are bowed.

Death has come and claimed you,
And bound you for his own;
But Christ shall come and raise the dead,
And death shall be unknown.

This earth shall be transformed,
To Eden's beauty rare;
And we shall rise triumphant,
And in its pleasures share.

Then our lost sister,
We expect to meet you there;
Free from all sorrow,
And rid of worldly care.

Then haste, Lord Jesus,
Quickly come, and bring that glorious dawn:
Let sickness, death and sorrow,
Forever more be gone.

Jane Elford, wife of Stephen Hogarth, died on March 31, at her home near Solina, after a short illness caused by taking cold and the shock of the death of her daughter. She was born in Cornwall, England and emigrated to Canada with her parents when 7 years old, as I lived nearly ever since in the same neighborhood. Her father, Ambrose Elford, settled on the same farm where she died, which was at that time a forest, but is now one of the finest sections of country in America. At the time of her death, she was 73 years and 6 months old, lacking two days. At the age of 18, she was married to Stephen Hogarth. Their family consisted of three children, two of whom survive her, John E. Hogarth and Mrs. Ida L. Law, and a large circle of other relatives. She and her husband with some others, came out about the time of the 43 movement, and have continued ever since. A chapel was built at Solina about 50 years ago, which was always open to the evangelist. A few of those who have preached there are Marsh, Himes, Newman, John Stephenson, J. M. Stephenson, O. R. L. Crozier, Peter Hough and his brother, Jas. Evans, L. C. Thomas, John Thomas, Mary Ongley was located there for a short time, R. V. Lyon made this neighborhood his regular preaching station for a long time, till he was no longer able to come. All of these found a ready welcome, when they came. Stephen and Daniel Hogarth's houses were always open to them, as well as others, and the best that this world can afford was freely at their disposal. One by one they pass away and now the old home is left vacant. Stephen Hogarth having gone to live with his daughter, Ida S. Law, about a mile away. The funeral sermon of mother was preached by Elder Brookman of Toronto. He spoke to a large house full of friends and relations. First he spoke on death, which is the last economy to be destroyed; then on the state of the dead, making a number of quotations of Scripture, and lastly on the resurrection being the only hope of the believer. The funeral was on April 3rd. She sleeps by the side of her daughter. The following lines were written by her daughter Ida S. Law.

Sleep mother sleep.
Thy time of toil is o'er;
Rest till Jesus comes,
When death shall be no more.

We miss thy sunny smile,
We miss thy fervent cheer;
The days seem long and lone,
Since thou'rt no longer here.

But the morning soon will dawn,
The clouds will roll away;
And Christ to earth will come again.
To reign with endless day.

And you dear mother with the saints,
Will rise to meet our Lord;
With palm and crown and white robe wear,
As promised in his Word.

JOHN E. HOGARTH.

Susan Hamland was born in Canton, Stark Co., Ohio, Jan. 10, 1819, and died May 18, 1899, aged 80 years, 4 months, and 8 days. She was married to Michael Fetcher at Canton, Ohio, Aug. 31, 1848, who died April 22, 1871. She was the mother of three children, only one of whom, J. F. Fetcher, is now living, a girl and a boy having died in infancy.

Sister Fetcher and her husband listened to the preaching of the Word by Brother Richard Corbaley, at Old Sand Hill School House in Marshall County, Ind., and one day in the spring of 1863, they with nine others were baptized in Yellow River, near Hupp's Mill. Only two out of the eleven who were baptized that day are now living.

The last ten years of her life she suffered with an affliction that rendered her unconscious of many things, and felt her a constant care. She must be remembered as she was before her sickness, a good wife, mother, friend, neighbor, and Christian sister.

Funeral services at the home of her son in Plymouth, conducted by J. L. Wince, after which she was laid to rest in Oak Hill Cemetry to await the angel's call at the resurrection morn.

Mercyette Eldridge was born at Glen's Falls, N. Y., Dec. 25, 1820; was married to L. W. Page at Port Byron, N. Y., April 18, 1842. In 1843, she gave up her profession of Methodism, and, with other followers of William Miller, looked for the immediate appearing of Jesus. Till her death, 56 years later, she was a consistent believer in the gospel of the kingdom. For many years, in middle life, she was a member of the little band at Antioch, Ill. Eight years ago she came to make her home with her daughter at Blue Springs, Neb. Long an invalid, she bore with patience the sufferings of mortality, till finally, on May 2nd, 1899, she asleep in Jesus, hoping to awake in his likeness to the life that knows not pain. Services were conducted at the house May 4th, by Elder Bunington, after which we laid her to rest in the Blue Springs cemetery.

James S. Leland was born in Wayne Co., N. Y., Sept. 30, 1827; died at his home in Argos, Ind., May 14, 1899, aged 71 years, 8 months and 14 days. Dr. Leland was a graduate of the Cincinnati Medical College, and began the practice of medicine at Cleveland, O. After his removal to Argos continued for several years to practice in partnership with Dr. Stevens. January 6, 1850, he was married to Arletta Root. To this union, one son, Shelby J., was born, is still living. His first wife died June 9, 1862. Married Cornelia Plumb Oct. 20th, 1863. Two daughters born to this union, one is still living. Nine years ago his health failed, since which time he was a great sufferer, up to the time of his death. He was a member of the Church of God at Argos, and while well took an active part in its work, especially in that of the Sunday school. Funeral at the house, discourse by the writer.

JOHN L. WINCE.

Sister Leland desires to thank the kind friends of the Argos Church for their assistance during the illness and at the death of her husband, and for the beautiful flowers and other evidences of sympathy. Also Dr. Kendall for his kindness.—ED.

Censorious men commonly take up magnifying glasses to look at other persons' imperfections, and diminishing glasses, to look at their own enormities.

When you make a mistake don't look back at it long. Take the reason of the thing into your mind, and then look forward. Mistakes are lessons of wisdom. The past cannot be changed. The future is yet in your power.—Hugh White.

Conference Notice.

The Annual Conference of the Church of God, in Michigan, will be held (D. V.) at Dutton, Kent Co., Thursday evening June 1st, 1899, and continue over the following Sunday.

These meetings have been held so long that they have become an established fact in the minds of the brethren, and they expect the meeting as surely as the time comes. We would be lost without them, for from these gatherings we derive much strength if we come in the right spirit. All who can come should make a special effort to be there—"So much the more as ye see the day drawing on."

A clean fountain will send forth a clean stream. A clean heart will produce a clean life. This constant struggle to correct a life may lead us to question whether the heart is correct. Let the heart be so fully under divine rule as to change its relish, and there will be less trouble about faulty conduct—not that there will be no temptations, but that there will be a stronger power to control the heart and regulate its aspirations.

Religious argument oftener awakes prejudice, pride and antagonism, than it brings opponents over to our way of thinking. Logic is combative; love is persuasive.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship," "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

"Not As I Will."

Blindfolded and alone I stand,
With unknown thresholds on each hand
The darkness deepens as I grope,
Afraid to fear, afraid to hope;
Yet this one thing I learn to know
Each day more surely, as I go,
That doors are opened, ways are made,
Burdens are lifted or are laid
By some great law unseen, and still,
Unfaltering purpose to fulfil,
"Not as I will."

Blindfolded and alone I wait,
Lest sense too bitter, gain too late;
Too heavy burdens in the load,
And too few helpers in the road;
And joy is weak, and grief is strong,
And years and days so long, so long;
Yet this one thing I learn to know
Each day more surely, as I go,
That I am glad the good and ill
By changeless laws are ordered still,
"Not as I will."

"Not as I will"—the sound grows sweet
Each time my lips the words repeat;
"Not as I will"—the darkness feels
More safe than light, when this thought steals
Like whispered voice to calm and bless,
All unrest and all loneliness;
"Not as I will"—because the One
Who loved us first and best, has gone
Before us on the road, and still
For us must all his love fulfil.
"Not as I will."

PINE WOODS BIBLE CLASS.

"If any man serve me, let him follow me."

Teacher. When we dismissed last week, Carrie was giving us a recital of what Mr. Williams, (the coal miner) said at a prayer meeting: we will now listen to the remainder of her story.

Carrie. When we dismissed I was about to tell what Mrs. Williams said about Miss Gordon's answer to his his question, What is there about the blessed hope which makes its believers so happy, and so ready to relieve the needy. It being too late for him to continue further that evening, he was invited to speak next Wednesday night.

Having occasion to still remain at Rainesville, I went to hear him.

He said: Miss Gordon's answer to my question, impressed me. You know as well as I do, that every effect must have a cause, and that the effect will be like its cause. The effect in my own family has been blessed, therefore the cause must be good.

Now, if the Blessed Hope as a cause, brings joy and happiness in the life as effect, what value must we place upon the hope as a cause?

Miss Gordon said to me, the things promised in the Blessed Hope are exceedingly joyous, but before the things promised can light up a person's life, faith as a base, must exist in the one promising. Now, faith is not blind credulity, but the evidence of things not seen. These promises she said are recorded in the Bible, which claims to be God's revealed will to man.

She said, now we, as a people have made a thorough examination of the evidence which proves the Bible to be God's Word, and find them to be satisfactory, and hence receive the Bible without any misgiving, as the Word of God.

Now, in this Blessed Book, we find God has sworn with an oath that he will perform the things promised in this precious hope.

He promised Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, David and Christ, a certain land to which he named the boundary lines. In this land, he said he would set up an everlasting kingdom, and that when set up he would gather out of the kingdom everything of an offensive nature.

He will crush out all oppressive trusts and also wicked men, who oppress the poor. He will so ordain things, that men will be happy, and love each other. There will be no more bloodshed by war, for he says men shall not learn war any more.

Measures tending to elevate, refine, and make pure the people, will be introduced, and enforced, until at the end of a thousand years, a state of perfection will ensue.

There will be no more scarlet fever, or any other disease; the people will be healthy. The Bible says, the inhabitant shall not say, I am sick, as they do now.

Finally there will be no more sorrow. We will have no more distressing funerals, because there will be more death, when that perfect state comes. Whenever you want it, I can furnish you with plain Bible proof to sustain all I have said.

Is not this blessed enough to make believers happy?

All these blessed things are involved in the promises made to Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, David and Christ. What I wish to specially invite your attention to, is God's sworn oath that he will bring them all to pass, and upon this oath we can surely build.

See Heb. vi. 17: "God willing more abundantly to show unto the heirs of promise the immutability of his counsel, confirmed it by an oath; that by two immutable things, in which it was impossible for God to lie, we might have strong consolation, who have fled for refuge, to lay hold upon the hope set before us."

Again, "Thou wilt perform the truth to Jacob, and the mercy to Abraham, which thou hast sworn unto our fathers from the days of old." Micah vii. 20.

See also Psa. lxxxix. 13: "My covenant will I not break, nor alter the thing which has gone out of my lips. Once have I sworn by my holiness that I will not lie unto David. His seed shall endure forever, and his throne as the sun before me."

Do not men consider it insulting to say that you cannot believe them under oath? It seems to me it must certainly be unpardonable to not believe the Great Eternal under oath. Does it not appear so to you, Mr. Williams?

Yes, I replied, but Miss Lillie, what I want to know, is what interest have we in promises made to others?

She replied, your question is a proper one, Mr. Williams. For an answer, I would refer you to Gal. iii. 16, 27, 29: "Now to Abraham and his seed were the promises made. He saith not and to seeds as of many; but as of one, and to thy seed, which is Christ. * * * For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ, have put on Christ. * * * And if ye be Christ's then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise."

You see the title is in Christ, and also that we become united to Christ through baptism, and if Christ's, consequently heirs to the good things promised. So you see we have a clear title from the Fountain head.

Yes, I said, what a wonderful knowledge you have. You seem ready to answer all questions. She replied, that is our business, the Bible says that we must be ready at all times to give a reason of the hope that is within us, with meekness and fear.

Now, Miss Lillie, I said, I observe a material difference between your hope, and Christian life, and that of Rudolph, the man I work for. He claimed to be a Christian, and I concluded if he was a true specimen of a Christian, I did not want anything to do with it. I began to doubt both God and the Bible.

She said to me, you erred in not considering Jesus' words, "By their fruits ye shall know them. Don't judge both God and the Bible, because men fail to live up to their professions.

The Blessed Hope, she said, is a much greater incentive to induce walking in the footsteps of Jesus, than the religion which has come down to us from heathen tradition.

Mr. Williams, addressing the prayer meeting said: Last week I told you, that as yet, I have made no profession of religion, but the light from God's Word I have received by the aid of Miss Gordon, together with the beauty of her Christ-like life, inclines me to do so. I thank you for the privilege of relating my experience.

The leader of the prayer meeting then arose and said. While I don't know very much about the religious belief of the Church of God people, yet I have to admit that from what I have personally observed, and from general reputation, that they are a respectable and god-like people, and although very strange and peculiar in their doctrinal belief. It makes them somewhat exclusive, they won't unite with other churches in union revivals, and they don't recognize anything but immersion as baptism. They are very peculiar.

Mr. Williams then arose, and said, please excuse me, may I speak a moment about the word peculiar?

The leader said, yes, but please be brief.

Mr. Williams then said, I asked Miss Lillie Gordon about the reputation they have of being a peculiar people, and said, God's true people are peculiar, and she said let me read to you 1 Pet. ii. 9, which is as follows: "Ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, an holy nation, a peculiar people: that ye should show forth the praises of him who called you out of darkness into his marvelous light: which in time past were not a people, but now are a people of God: which had not obtained mercy, but now have obtained mercy." Their peculiarity consisted:

1. In being a chosen generation.
2. A royal priesthood.
3. A peculiar people, being God's royalty.
4. They show forth God's praises.
5. They have been called out of darkness, they no longer believe human tradition.
7. They have received marvelous light, which dispells the darkness of pagan theology.
7. They are the people of God, because they do the will of God.
8. On this account they have received mercy.

Now, Mr. Williams, she said, would not such a people be "peculiar," when contrasted with the popular fashionable professions of our day?

The leader then said: Now, Mr. Williams, I can appreciate the showing forth of God's praises, but I don't understand about this royal priesthood, do you?

Mr. Williams then said, Miss Gordon showed me that. She read Rev. v. 9, 10, to me, I will give it to you: "They sung a new song saying, thou art worthy to take the book and to open the seals thereof: for thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood, out of every kindred and tongue and people, and nation; and hast made us unto our God kings and priests; and we shall reign ON THE EARTH." Now this royal priesthood, have:

1. Been redeemed by the slain Lamb.
2. They have been selected from all nations.
3. Have been made kings and priests.
4. They shall reign on the earth, and not in heaven, as those teach who call them "peculiar."

Miss Lillie further said, that before any one can attain the above exalted position, they must be overcomers. See Rev. iii. 21: "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame, and am set down with my Father in his throne." Jesus, himself, is the standard overcomers must copy.

Again Rev. xiv. 5: "These are they which follow the Lamb whithersoever he goeth. These were redeemed from among men, being the firstfruits unto God and to the Lamb."

Yes, Mr. Williams, she said, it means something more than profession, to be an accepted and successful follower of the Lamb.

Mr. Rudolph may profess to be a Christian all he likes, yet he never can belong to the royal priesthood, the "peculiar people," "the first fruits unto God and to the Lamb," unless he shall first, "follow the Lamb whithersoever he goeth."

At this point the leader of the prayer meeting dismissed the people saying, as for himself he felt both benefitted and confused, but he hoped to see clearer in the future.

Teacher. I feel that we have all been benefitted by Carrie's story of what occurred at Rainesville. But one of our most interesting features as an outgrowth of Mr. William's talk, is yet to come, and will be introduced next week.

W. H. WILSON.

Rev. xv. 2.

In Rev. xv. 2, we have four things mentioned that the victorious servants of the Deity had to overcome, namely, the beast, his image, his mark, and the number of his name. And inasmuch as God by his Spirit has pointed out these four things, as the things the victors had to overcome, they must be of great importance, far reaching, and in direct opposition to the truth, and of almost universal application to the worshipers of those that worship his image. The beast is the last phase of the Roman Empire, as may be learned by a reference to Dan. vii. 8, described there as a little horn that came up among the ten; therefore he had his rise after the division of the Roman Empire, symbolized by the ten horns on the head of Daniel's fourth beast. And it is a fact undisputed in history that the empire was divided in the fourth century, by the incursions of the northern tribes of Germany and Russia. Another fact is that the papacy arose in that empire after the said division; and this fact points to the papacy as the power symbolized by the beast.

By a comparison of the actions, and the great speeches of the little horn, compared with the leopard beast of Rev. xiii. 1, it will be easy to see that they are the same. Rome in the 12th chapter of Revelation is symbolized by the dragon, but a change in the religion of the empire made a new symbol necessary: therefore we have the leopard beast. chap. xiii. 1. And partaking of the racial elements of the Grecian leopard, the feet of the Medo-Persian bear, and the mouth of the Babylonian lion. See verse 2. In Rev. xi. 7, we have a reference to this beast, the point I want to make is that he comes up, or ascends out of the bottomless pit. In a pit the sun does not shine, there is no light: bottomless, nothing to stand on; what better description could be given in a few words of the rise of papacy, founded on superstition, darkness and lying wonders.

One testimony from the Apostle John identifies it as the antichrist. See 1 John iv. 1-3. Verse 3, and every spirit that confesseth not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is not of God; and this is that spirit of antichrist. What is it to confess that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh? In Matt. i. 21, the angel names him Jesus, for the reason that he shall save his people from their sins. Now this Jesus born of the virgin is the Savior, and by the divine test given by John, he came in the flesh, and is the Christ, the Lord's anointed; and to prove that we are here on the Rock of truth, it is only necessary to refer to the words of Jesus Christ, in John vi. 51, it reads, "I am the living bread which came down from heaven; if any man eat of this bread, he shall live forever: and the bread that I shall give is my flesh, which I will give for the life of the world. This should settle the question as to what constituted the Christ, the Son of the living God. The Seed of the woman, the Prophet like Moses, made of a woman, made under the law. Gal. iv. 4. And again Paul says, "Remember that Jesus Christ of the Seed of David was raised from the dead according to my gospel." Keeping this foundation truth in the mind we can readily understand the meaning of what John says to the church of Ephesus. Rev. ii. 2. "Thou hast tried them which say they are Apostles, and are not, and hast found them liars." Doubtless the church at Ephesus tried those claiming to be apostles, by the rule given by John in his epistle already referred to; and found that they were (false apostles, deceitful workers, transforming themselves into the Apostles of Christ.) 2 Cor. xi. 13. Here we find the working of the apostasy in the days of the Apostles. Hence Paul warns the church at Thessalonica of the man of sin; "Who opposeth and exalteth himself above all that is called God, or that is worshiped; so that he as God sitteth in the temple of God; showing himself that he is God." 2 Thes. ii. 4.

All three specifications are met in the bishop of Rome: he had to wait until the superstition and darkness consequent upon the departure from the true faith, had formed the abyss, or bottomless pit out of which he did ascend. Rev. xi. 7. Also the pagan abomination had to be taken away before he could be revealed. 2 Thes ii. 7-8.

I will now give an extract from Dr. John Thomas. "The Pope and Christ make one consistory. He can make justice of injustice. He can change the substance of things, and make a thing out of nothing. He can make squares into circles, Febronii de statu Eccl. lib. i. c. p. 527. Such was the Ironic scan in the noonday of his existence, the number of whose name is 666. Is not this the antichrist? Could any power arise in the world more deserving of the name? Is not this the..... the Lawless one, whose coming Paul predicted would be after the working of the Satan with all power and signs and lying wonders, and with all deceivableness of unrighteousness in them that perish? It can be no other than the man of sin, the son of perdition: who opposeth and exalteth himself above all that is called God,.....so that he in the temple of God sits as a god, publicly exhibiting himself that he is a god. And yet in view of all the record extant concerning this man of sin, there are Protestants who affirm that the papal dynasty is not the antichrist, and that his revelation is still in the future. Can blindness be more complete than that which cannot see the Lawless One in him whose worshipers declare to be superior to law and above right? If the antichrist has has not been in full manifestation before the world for the past six hundred years, there need be no apprehension of his future advent." Eureka Vol. 3, p. 341.

The servants of the Deity must steadfastly reject the claims of this man of sin, as being the vicegerent of the Son of God. In my next article I will give an exposition of the number of his name, and as far as I know, it will be original, as there is nothing in Eureka, nor in Barnes's notes to give any light on the number of his name.

GEORGE FRANCIS.

Sowing.—An Exhortation.

If we can all be sowers; if we can all scatter the precious seed; what does it matter about the strength of the vessel in which the seed is carried? It is the precious seed all the same. God's strength is made perfect in weakness. The grasp of an Almighty hand can bring into tune the feeblest instrument. The child, the fisherman, the herdsman, the gatherer of sycamore fruit, can all be made subservient to his glory. The colored Anna can sing the Word of the kingdom, the Cingalese tell of the love of Jesus. He who has found the rich treasure, can tell how he found it; he who has been to the feast can tell others how good it is to sit at the table of the King. He who knows for himself in his own mind, and heart and life, the worth of the gospel will not hold back the story. In some way the blessed truth will burn its way out in some way; it will come to the ears of men, of what God has done for him in the taking away of his sins.

"He has taken them all away, away
He has taken them all away" will be the burden of his song.

But we must have proved God ourselves, or we can never touch the hearts of men. We must have believed and obeyed, and have felt the grace of pardon, before we can go "weeping to our toil, and sow the seed "that is to bring forth abundantly for the harvest days."

We may not shirk the work that God has put upon us. We are "to sow beside all waters." From us, the lay members of the church, as well as from the ministry, must the good news of life through Christ, and an everlasting inheritance in the kingdom of God, be sounded out. In whatever way he calls us to work, we must obey; whether it be in scattering tracts, papers and books: in writing private letters and papers for the press; in daily conversation: in giving Bible lessons and in reading the Bible.

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME XLVIII. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, JUNE 7, 1899. NUMBER 21.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations: the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

in reaching the young: in speaking in social meeting; in consecrating our means to the cause, or in all of these, and in other lines. We must not tire, though we see no results. Judson did not have the outcome of some of his labors revealed to him, until he was upon his dying bed. We may never know what our God has wrought through us, until beyond the toil and tears, we meet those whom he has seen fit to bring us into the fold through our instrumentality; "Our Leader never lost a battle."

The message that we bear is his; we carry it not in vain. The seed that we sow will sometime and somewhere on earth's wilderness-wastes, bear fruit unto life eternal.

Then stand ready to do God's bidding, let the flesh be crucified, the will subdued. Ears will be found to listen; hearts will be made to feel; tongues will proclaim through your means the unsearchable riches of Christ.

It is truth that saves; unbelief can never come into the rest of God; theories and systems and creeds and traditions of men, have in them no power to heal. Teach men to build upon the living Rock; sow the truth, and nothing but the truth. "The day of the Lord is near, it hasteth greatly." Let "the foolish things of God confound the wise;" labor on, keep at your post until the morning breaks!

Love.

Well has it been said, that the most powerful things are "Faith and Love." Our faith should work by love. Love is a proof that we have passed from death unto life.

"By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another." Love must be added to faith. It is the firstfruit of the Spirit.

How strange with all the instruction of the dear Savior and the inspired apostles to guide us, that there is such a lack of love, among people professing godliness; even toward such as have come to God in his appointed way. When we find this true, is there not a wrong somewhere? Then Matt. xviii. 15; v. 23, 24, sets the way of reconciliation, if the cause of grievance be from any one who is a brother, or toward any one who is a brother. Remember! my brother, my sister, to live after this reconciliation as though the wrong had never been, requires a forgiving spirit. And should we not have this toward one whom we are commanded to love? The Savior taught us to love our enemies, to do good to them that hate us, and pray for them that despitefully use us and persecute us. See Matt. v. 44; Luke vi. 27, 35. And when Peter asked the Savior concerning forgiving his brother, he answered: "Not seven times but seventy times seven." When we cannot do this we have lost our first love, and have need to repent like them of Sardis, and are forgetting to provoke (urge), unto love and good works, as we are taught in Heb. x. Surely the Lord would have his people a glorious church, without spot or wrinkle, or any such thing. Yes, holy, and without blemish. To be thus pure, we must love our brethren; we must nourish and cherish them. Even so the Lord loves the church.

O, may we ever remember that the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance: against such there is no law." Love is the fulfilling of law. "Love suffereth long, and is kind; envieth not; vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up, doth not behave itself unseemly, seeketh not her own, is not easily provoked, thinketh no evil, rejoiceth not in iniquity, but rejoiceth in the truth: beareth all things, believeth all things, endureth all things. Truly we need to cultivate this grace. Is not our heavenly Father love? and to be fit for this kingdom must we not be like him? Surely we must live according to his Word and will. The beloved apostle confirms this, when he says, "Hereby we know that we know him when we keep his commandments." Now, I beseech you read 1 John ii. 5-11, 28, 29, and third chapter entire, also James i. 18 to close, an array of convincing evidence of our duty to our brother, if we would live in the love of the Lord; if we, like the Captain of our salvation overcome the world PRISCA.

"When a cloud has been dissolved into a shower, there presently follows a glorious sunshine."

"The more the stone is wounded by the hand of the engraver, the greater beauty is superinduced thereon."

We often omit the good we might do in consequence of thinking about what it is not in our power to do."

Hard as it is to understand the difficult parts of the Bible, it is a great deal harder to practice the simple parts."

"Is it not often a wonder that a child of God should have a sad heart, considering what the Lord is preparing for him?"

"A white garment appears worse with slight soiling than do colored garments much soiled, so a little fault in a good man attracts more attention than do great offences in bad men."

Luther said that he who says "a theologian unacquainted with logic is a heretic and empiric, makes an heretical and empirical assertion. There is no form of reasoning, or sylogism, suited to the things of God."

Men who have the root of the matter in them have no relish for those who are never more than half-hearted for the truth, and who in the understanding of the consequences of error, are nevertheless full of allowances for those who propagate it.

A scotch blacksmith being asked the meaning of metaphysics, explained it as follows,—"When the party who listens dinna ken what the party who speaks means, and the party who speaks dinna ken what he means himsel"—that is metaphysics."

Whenever we get angry we are pretty certain to do foolish things and give our opponents the advantage over us. We can do mischief in one fit of anger that may follow us all through life. Those who witness it will never forget it; and their love for us must be very deep and strong to overlook it and love us as much as before."

"The most common error of men and women is that of looking for happiness outside of useful work. It has never yet been found there, and never will be while the world stands. Of all the miserable human beings it has been our lot to know, they were the most wretched who had retired from actual employments to enjoy themselves."

A good anecdote is told of an English minister, who on being visited in his study by a friend, who asked, "Doctor, why do you sit in such a little place as this? You have not room to swing a cat." "I do not want to swing a cat, sir," was the reply. What volumes of philosophy are comprehended in this answer? The true secret of happiness lies, after all, not so much in gratifying our desires, as in conforming them to our actual situation. It is the longing, restless desire to attain something out of reach that makes so many lives miserable. It is said of an ancient philosopher that on beholding the splendors of a great palace, he cried out, "How few persons distinguish between the desirable things of life and its actual needs."

Theodore Parker once wrote: "We live in the midst of religious machinery. Many mechanics at piety, often only apprentices, and slow to learn, are turning the various ecclesiastical mills, and the creak of motion is thought to be the voice of God. You put into the hopper a crowd of persons, young and old, and soon they are ground into the common run of Christians, sacked up and stowed away for safe-keeping in the appropriate bins of the great ecclesiastal establishments, labeled with their party names. You look about in what is drily called 'the religious world!' What a mass of machinery is there, and of dead timber, not green wood! What a jar and discord of iron clattering upon iron!"

It is over forty years ago since the above was written and it is just as true today as it was then. The machinery is still running with the same results,—which to all appearance are the communities long ago predicted for the last day, having a form of godliness while denying its power or influence.

Christ is Surely Coming!

And everything seems to say to the earnest watcher, that he is coming soon. Reader, are you ready to meet him? If not, what excuse have you? Have you not had ample time to prepare? If opportunities already enjoyed have not been improved, where is the evidence that any additional light would receive more attention? There is great danger that you will be found at last with no oil in your lamp when the Bridegroom cometh. This is a perilous time for careless souls. Many seem to be sleeping at ease, unaware of the dangers surrounding them. Wide awake ones, cry aloud and spare not. It is too late to make a compromise with the world, either religious or secular, and this means that there is work for you to do—and as the present is the only time you can devote to it, the injunction to redeem the time should come home to you with great power—does it?"

Milton on Christian Doctrine.

"If then, the Scriptures be in themselves so perspicuous and sufficient of themselves to make men wise unto salvation through faith, and that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works, through what infatuation is it that Protestant Divines (?) persist in darkening the most momentuous truths of religion by intricate comments on the plea that such an explanation is necessary; stringing together all the useless technicalities and empty distinctinctions of scholastic barbarism for the purpose of elucidating those Scriptures which they continually extol as models of plainness? As if Scripture which possesses in itself the clearest light and is sufficient for its own explanation, especially in matters of faith and holiness required to be placed in a more distinct view by illustrations drawn from the abstract of human science, falsely socalled."

The Flora of Immanuel's Land.

"All travelers in Palestine grow eloquent in their allusions to it. Testimonies like the following might be multiplied:

Dr. Morris, Secretary of the Scholars' Holy Land Exploration, says,—"The sacred fields of Canaan are emblazoned with botanical glories second to none on the earth. The richness and variety of the flowers upon the hill sides and plains of Bible sites are almost without parallel; not less than twenty-five hundred species of plants may be classified along the paths of Abraham, Elijah and Jesus. Every sacred association is painted with flowers—the punctuation of the language of beauty."

Dr. Robinson says.—"The path of usual travel, on which one enters immediately after leaving Jaffa, passes through a positive parterre of flowers, millions of anemones mingled with familiar asphodels and tulips, together with an illimitable variety of other natural and unfamiliar plants of every description whose faces are strange to your experience, and whose very names are unknown. No one can help growing enthusiastic as he enters Palestine from this direction. You are filled with exceeding delight and surprise at the exuberant profusion of these spring blossoms on tree and shrub and grass. A wide plain spreads out in every phase of variegated loveliness to the southernmost end of the Ancient Sharon."

Dr. Bellown says,—"We gathered bouquets in a few moments by the path, which I defy any London or New York conservatory to equal in beauty and freshness, in variety, or in rarity. Such feathery things, such fairy shapes, such delicate colors, such exquisite contrasts, were never, it seems to me, combined in any nosegay, and I felt then as I feel now, ashamed that I could not name and place them; but I make the amende of a most honorable mention."

Objects of Christ's Coming.

Were not made known in the Scriptures for the purpose of gratifying our curiosity, but as constituting the very essence of the gospel, and the subject matter of that great salvation towards which we are required to exercise enlightened and patient hope. For a long time the belief has been almost general that Christ was coming to reduce this planet to a state of annihilation. Poets have done a great deal to foster this conviction by their graphic description of the earth's finale. The mountains were to melt, and the solid ground was to dissolve into liquid air. But would it not be difficult to ascribe wisdom to the author of such a catastrophe! When we think of the vast expenditure of power and skill in the earth's formation, are we not compelled to regard its destruction as a very miserable culmination? Does not that theory regard God as a mere experimentor in world-making, who, having failed to satisfy himself, decides to utterly destroy it? It looks just that way to us.

But is it not the height of folly to entertain such a theory? How can theorists who believe in God at all,—yes, how can they forget that we only know of God's purpose what he has been pleased to reveal concerning it? How dare they too practically arrange this matter for the Almighty and then publish it for God's truth? Having espoused the cause of truth it becomes our duty to both proclaim it, and expose the errors calculated to nullify it.

It is our duty to tell our fellows that God has revealed his purpose in creation and redemption; and that the theory of earth's destruction is diametrically opposed to that revealed purpose. We know from his unmistakable declarations that no such destiny has been planned for old Mother Earth. Ages after it was pronounced very good, we have word direct from him through Isaiah that his original purpose will be carried out. He tells us that he had not created it in vain, that he had formed it to be inhabited, and it would be. Isa. xlv. 18.

Had the Almighty formed it for the behoof of proud aristocrats or haughty peers, or ambitious princes, or avaricious merchants, or unscrupulous tradesmen, or degraded multitudes whose highest gratifications were less respectable than the brutes that perish,—then most assuredly he had created it in vain. He formed it, however, for no such purpose. He formed it to be peopled with a race of immortals, every one of whom should respect his authority, and have an inalienable inheritance in its soil, and be permanently and unspeakably blessed. This was an issue sufficient to justify the exercise of the divine volition by which the earth had been called into existence."

Our Visit to Washington.

Rather a hard trip on my wife, has not been well since our return (one week ago). Our sojourn and labor was mostly with the Church at Wenatchee—a small town in the Wenatchee Valley, quite narrow, and snuggled in between mountains on either side, through which runs the Columbia River. The town is immediately on the banks thereof. Unpleasantly situated on account of the drifting sand. The new-comer, on a windy day, would feel like hastening onward, or backward without delay. But going back in the valley a mile or two, the scene is changed; out of the sand, land very fertile. Rapidly building up with nice orchards and pleasant homes. Being irrigated, there is an abundance of the finest of fruits. Apples unequalled so far as our knowledge goes.

The foundation of the Church here was laid by Bro. Richard Corbaley, so well and favorably known throughout Indiana, years ago. Afterwards watered and developed by the labors of A. J. Eychaner of Iowa, and later by the labors of F. L. Austin (last winter). Both of whom are held in high esteem for their successful labor.

Bro. Corbaley lives some 25 miles distant at Waterville—off the railroad—a mountainous road to travel, yet he frequently visited them up to the latter part of the winter, when he was prostrated with pneumonia; confined to his bed for nine weeks. His hosts of friends mostly despairing of his recovery. We visited him just before leaving; found him convalescing and rejoicing in the hope. Our visit with them was very enjoyable to us, and seemed to be to him. It is his meat and drink to converse on the things of the kingdom. He has labored much and with good success in sowing the seed in that new field. He is highly esteemed as an able and devoted workman. He has two sons intelligent and earnest workers in the truth—one publicly proclaiming and the other should be. The Church at Wenatchee are truly "a peculiar people, zealous of good works," nonconformed to the world, plain and simple in manner of life. Paying heed to the words of the Spirit through Peter, "Whose adorning, not outward, putting on apparel, etc. But the hidden man of the heart (Christ in the heart by faith) an ornament of great price in the sight of God." Their social converse is not about worldly style and fashion, so common in these days. They are awake to the signs of the times—will not be found sleeping. They are truly a light in a dark place. They were very solicitous that we should remain with them, having done, and offering to do everything we could ask and even more. They seemed satisfied with my labor. Being so easily satisfied reminded me of the proverb, "Nothing gives better relish to food than good appetite." I was indeed sorry that circumstances and conditions seemed to forbid my remaining with them. They are very desirous to secure the labors of some one. This is a good field. Some one should occupy it. One going there from the east might not at first like the rustling ways of the west, which would seem rough yet they would soon learn that in point of intelligence, and open hearted honesty, a comparison would be favorable to the east. Any one wishing to occupy this field, having physical strength to adapt themselves, and having an intellectual understanding of the gospel, and requirements, coupled with a devotional Christian spirit, with aptness to teach the same (minus human speculation) will find open hearts, and ready hands to aid and support them in the work.

Any of the household going to Seattle via Great Northern R. R. stopping off here will find a hearty welcome. Enquire for H. W. Patterson, (elder of the church) whose whole soul is in the cause.

Mountain Peaks.

When the Christian Church, that new creation, new nation, commenced her voyage, her Lord gave her by the mouth of James in the council at Jerusalem, a chart of her course. He pointed out the events in their order, which were to be her landmarks. Acts xv. These events stand out like mountain peaks against the clear sky.

Peak first, God was visiting the Gentiles "to take out of them a people for his name." Deut. xxxii. 22; Isa. lxi. 1.

Peak second, "After this I will return." This statement James, seems to quote from Deut. xxx. 3, and Jer. xii. 15, both prophets like James linking the Lord's return with the repentance, pardon and restoration of Israel, as do Isa. lix. 20, Ezek. xliii. 1-9, Hosea v. 15, Zech. xii. 10; Matt. xxiii. 39, Acts iii. 19-21.

Peak third, "And will build again the tabernacle of David." Sam. xxxii.

Peak fourth, "That the residue of men might seek after the Lord, and all the Gentiles upon whom my name is called." Psa. xxii. 11; lxxii. 11; xcvi. 10-13, Isa. xi. 2, lxvi. 23, Jer. xvi. 19, Ez. xxxvi. 36, Dan. vii. 14, Zech. xiv. 16, John iii. 16, Eph. i. 10, Rev. v. 13.

There they stand, the clouds of sophistry cannot obscure them, or the waves of infidelity move them, it is God's plan of the ages to put all things under Christ "that the world through him might be saved." This is the burden of prophetic song, whether in plaintive cry or mighty thunders, from Eden to Patmos.

Our Love Feast.

Dear Restitution:

The paper is a most welcome visitor, as we too are among the isolated ones. There are no preachers in this part of the country who seem to know anything concerning the coming kingdom, and The Restitution is all the preaching we have and we look forward every week for its coming. Summer is here, yes, summer is here, and how glad we are when summer comes with the life-giving sunshine, bringing the birds and flowers. Every man, woman and child should thank God daily for giving us homes in so beautiful, pleasant and productive a country as we have here in southern Iowa. How very few of us realize the blessing we enjoy, especially us who are full of health and vigor. We may have health and the comforts of life, daily food, raiment and shelter, and still we complain and think we have a hard time, in fact we know not what hard times are. I heard a man say not long ago, that he had nothing to be thankful for, he looked so strong and hearty. It was at the dinner table of one of the best restaurants in the city of Des Moines. Afterwards I learned he lived in Kansas, and well dressed, and intelligent; still he had nothing to be thankful for. I thought poor, unwise man, if we would only learn to think how many are crippled, some blind, some deaf, others never free from pain, and many of those are patient and uncomplaining; then some of us who are blessed with the proper use of all our limbs and other faculties, still complain how full of mercy and love God is, to suffer such of us to live, but rather let us be thankful for the blessings we receive, for they are gifts from God's loving hand, and be ever ready to extend a helping hand to all who may be less fortunate than ourselves; be full of charity to all, and especially to any who may be weaker than ourselves. If we could only be strong enough to lay aside all feeling of envy and jealousy, and give more earnest thought to charity, and remember charity is pure love. It is not charity to think evil of our neighbors. Let us be slow to think evil; if others seem to be foolish and unwise do not be quick to condemn, but rather think if it were you placed in their circumstances, you might have done the same as they; but let us be thankful that we are favored by better circumstances, and then we will try to do and say pleasant things and thereby scatter seeds of kindness and sunshine, all of which will bear good fruit for the loving Master, when he comes to claim his own. From one who is looking for our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

Mrs. Rhoda Fisher.

To the Household of Faith:

So many times I have thought I would write a few lines for our good paper, especially since the death of my dear mother, who was taken from us by the enemy, death, the 16th of last January. Oh, how hard it is to give up one who is so near and dear to us. She was sick only a few days with la-grippe, but was so very sick right from the beginning, but yet we did not give up hopes until a day before her death, and O, the patience she displayed during all that suffering, expressing but one wish and that was that she might be able to see her only son, and my brother, Edgar Hatch, but our efforts to reach him with a telegram were of no avail, until it was too late. We felt so bad to think we could not grant her dying wish, but oh, I trust that his face will be the first she will meet in the kingdom, as it was the last she craved here in this life. She sleeps in Jesus. We are sad and bereft ones, note the time, but she can not. It will be just a refreshing sleep until the Master calls her. Father is so lonely since her death, pray for him and all of us, that we may be ready at all times to meet our Master, and see the loved one who sleeps, and be with her once more. I see a letter from Sister Merem of St. Joseph, Mich. She remembers my dear mother, as we were very near neighbors a few years ago. I am always so glad to see names in our paper that are so familiar to me, and to know that the enemy death has no claim on that one yet. Oh, that we might be spared to see the Master and not have to go down under the power of the enemy. Come Lord Jesus, and come quickly, for the world is so full of sin.

Ever your Sister looking for the No. Iceman.

Azubah M. Simmons.

Dear Brother Underwood

With your permission I would like to put a few thoughts in our dear paper, which have come to me from the twelfth chapter of Hebrews. After the Apostle has recorded all the worthies who died in the faith, he says in the first verse. "Wherefore are ye compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses." Let us lay aside every weight. Dear brothers and sisters, weights have to be stripped off, when we are running this race. John in his epistle says. "Love not the world nor the things in the world, for the world passeth away, all that is in the world: the lust of the eye, the pride of life and the lust of the flesh, which are not of the faith, but of the world and the world passeth away. But he that doeth the will of God abides forever, and the sin which doth so easily beset us passeth away." The question may be asked, what is sin? The blessed Apostle answers the question, "That whatsoever is not faith is sin." So it is for you and I to determine if our actions are in harmony with the faith that works by love, and purifies our affections. This will take in our relations at home as well as in the church. "Let us run with patience the race set before us, looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith." Dear ones in the Lord, when you and I presented ourselves for baptism, we then said we were through with the old man of sin. To quote the words of our dear Bro. Joblin in an address before baptism, "Be sure you bury the old man." How is it with you and I today? Is he being put to death or is he as alive as he ever was?

Following along in the twelfth chapter the fifth verse—the relations of those who come to God. The sixth verse—"For whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth." The eleventh verse tells us the object of God's chastening hand. "Praise God for the Word, nevertheless, it afterward yieldeth to the peaceable fruit of righteousness unto them who are exercised thereby." Here is another important word, "Wherefore, lift up the hands which hang down and the feeble knees."

The thirteenth is a wonderful verse. "Make straight paths for your feet, lest that which is lame be increased and turned out of the way; but let it rather be healed." The path which leads to eternal life and fellowship in the kingdom of God is a straight one. There is no room for the old Adam.

The fourteenth verse. "Follow peace with all. If our feet are shod with the gospel of peace, then we will be able to make peace with all. There will be peace in our homes, peace in the assembly of God, and we will be called the children of God. Holiness without which no man shall see the Lord will be ours.

Another wonderful word, diligently, in the fifteenth verse: "Looking diligently lest any man fail of the grace of God: lest any root of bitterness spring up trouble and thereby many be defiled. How evil this root of bitterness has wrought among the Church of God and how many have been defiled by it, God alone knows.

Brethren and sisters, if we were so zealous for the injunctions given in the epistles, by the Spirit of God through his apostles, as we are for the covenants of promise, what a mighty assembly God would have today. You and I can believe the promises of God, without suffering any persecution, but the moment we begin to live in harmony with God's truth, or rather his truth begins to live in us, then the trials will come.

The sixteenth verse when Esau is held up as an example of selling his birthright for a morsel of meat, is important.

I exhort you to read this chapter carefully. May the Father of mercy consolation and comfort help you and me to make straight paths for our feet.

I remain yours in the hope of his coming,

Looking for Our King.

We are looking for the Savior to shortly appear,
In glory and grandeur. Oh, be of good cheer.

He is coming, he is coming, God's own beloved Son,
He is coming, he is coming, to sit upon his throne.

Our feet must be shod with the gospel of peace,
Take the Sword of the Spirit, and the shield of faith.

He is coming, he is coming, be ye ready him to greet,
He is coming, he is coming, let us all our Savior meet.

Will you play then, will you dally, until it is too late,
To the Bride-room who is calling, Oh, come, do not wait.

She is calling now for soldiers, to battle for the Lord,
Will you gird on the armor, and fight for the reward?

Let all the power within you for the truth's sake go on,
Strike, let every nerve and sinew join in the rare song:

He is coming, he is coming, let us shout and gladly sing,
He is coming, he is coming, let us crown him as our King.

Life—How to Win.

Life is the boon that mortals crave;
This can the Savior give.
To all who walk in God's dear way—
In Jesus' steps do live.

'Tis he that set the way of life,
And overcame all sin;
To follow in his footsteps all,
Immortal life you'll win.

Our Father by the Spirit said,
"This my beloved Son,
Hear you him," Ah, thus he led,
Pray him, who life hath won.

'Tis thus—aye, thus he said, "Go teach,"
Believing my gospel true
Repent you then,—yes, turn to God,
Like one in grace to grow.

Then be you washed—yes, born again,
Thus put the Savior on;
Now, walk in him; obey his will,
And gladly journey home.

Each precept note, your brother love,
For enemies must pray;
For others care—like Jesus pure,
Sin overcome—each day.

"A crown of righteousness I've won"
With Paul, you may exclaim;
"He laid up for each faithful one,
When Jesus comes again."

"What Think Ye of Christ? Whose Son is He?"

This question of the Master to the envious Pharisees, has long puzzled the world. Many solutions have been given, but the end is not yet. The Pharisees promptly answer, "The son of David." Matt. xxii. 42. They did not take him to be the direct son of David, who had long been dead and buried; but they knew their prophets had spoken of a promised son to David, this might be theirs, yet they doubted. Let their faith be as it may, the Master did not see fit to answer his own question at that time, but did proceed to wind them up in short order, so that they were not able to answer him a word. It was but natural that the impression should go out, that this Jesus was the literal son of Joseph, or (was supposed to be) yet it was not Luke that supposed it, by any means, but it was his own brothers and neighbors who did not believe in him." The natural man receives not the things of the Spirit of God; for they are foolishness unto him; neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned." The Master and his Apostles, in their teaching, never came down on a level with "doubting critics," who chop out chapters, throw dust, and try to destroy the foundation and faith in the Bible, but with them it was far more honorable and God-like to seek a harmony between God's former prophets, his Son and his teaching, and thus give light to the world, instead of darkness. Let the angel Gabriel who stands in the presence of God fly swifter to our aid, and help us to answer our Master's foundation question. To this Virgin Mary, he says, "Fear not, for thou hast found favor with God." And he goes on to tell her that her Son shall be called Jesus. "He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest—shall be called the Son of God." Read God's record of his Son as given by Luke, and doubt not. This Son was literally born in Bethlehem of Judea, as God's prophet had long foretold. Micah v. 2. This inspires faith and hope that God will yet give him David's throne, and he will reign over the house of Jacob forever, and of his kingdom there shall be no end. One class doubt the angel's word and figure it away, and have him to reign in the heart, and in heaven, while others run to the other extreme and try to figure away most all the angel has said about this wonderful Son of God. Which is the worst doubter? Which is the most fatal? The character of this wonderful Son fully vindicates the record as given by Matthew and Luke. Read carefully what they have to say about this wonderful Son, Isa. ix. 6, 7, and you will be surprised to find the harmony between them and the former Scriptures, so much so, that to doubt one is to doubt it all. If you doubt Jonah, you must doubt Jesus, and doubt it all, as Jesus has spoken well of Jonah. Why doubt the angel's testimony about this Son, when at his baptism. "Lo, the heavens were opened unto him, and he saw the Spirit of God descending like a dove, and lighting upon him; And lo, a voice from heaven, saying, This is my beloved Son in whom I am well pleased." In this testimony all heaven seems deeply moved over this wonderful Son, and confirms and bears witnesses to his claim, and to the story of the angel Gabriel. If John was struck dumb for a season, because he doubted the angel's word, which was fulfilled in its season, how will it be with those who doubt the angelic story about Jesus when he comes to be glorified in his saints? Hear the testimony of the Father once more. When Jesus was on the Mount receiving a foretaste of his future glory as an evidence to his fidelity to his Father in heaven: "Behold a bright cloud overshadowed them: and behold a voice out of the cloud, which said, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased; hear ye him." Now hear and hearken to the testimony of this beloved Son on this all important question. "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life. For God sent not his Son into the world to condemn the world; but that the world through him might be saved."

Note, this was God's only begotten Son when sent into the world, none others begotten as he was, and to believe in and receive him as such a Son, is to come in touch with the love of God and his Son, who is the way, the truth, and the life. Paul when converted deposes on this question in harmony with his Master. Hear Luke, "And straightway he preached Christ in the synagogues, that he is the Son of God." Brother Paul, have you any more to say on this question? Yes indeed. What is it? Listen, "But when the fulness of the time was come, God sent forth his Son, made of a woman, made under the law, to redeem them that were under the law, that we might receive the adoption of the Son." Paul will hear the "well done," for his faithful testimony to his Master's divine paternity. For he was not ashamed of him or his gospel, God's power to salvation to every one that believes and obeys it. Jesus evidently knew that men had and would still go astray on this question, so he throws a guard around his disciples then, and for all time. When the disciples told him what the people said about him, he was not satisfied to let it drop, but comes direct to them and says, "But whom say ye that I am?" Now listen to Peter, and do not try to dodge and quibble around his faithful testimony. "And Simon Peter answered and said, Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God. Jesus blesses Peter for his straightforward testimony and tells him that his Father in heaven had revealed it to him. And Peter tells the people years afterwards that it was when with him in the holy Mount they heard the voice, "This is my beloved Son in whom I am well pleased." This is the grand foundation truth on which Jesus has built his church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it, so beware who you confess, and how you build, and who you build upon, lest you build upon other foundations—upon the sand, and your house will fall, and great will be the fall.

When Jesus was on earth teaching, many of his disciples went back and walked no more with him. Then said Jesus unto the twelve, "Will ye also go away? Then Simon Peter answered him, Lord, to whom shall we go? Thou hast the words of eternal life. And we believe and are sure that thou art that Christ, the Son of the living God." To barter away the Son of the living God in this noble confession for which he lost his life for one of the sons of Joseph, begotten and born of flesh and the will of the flesh as all other children are, is to say the least to deny "the record God has given of his son," and to "deny the Lord that bought them."

Now, hear the beloved John depose on this all important question. "And many other signs truly did Jesus in the presence of his disciples, which are not written in this book. But these are written, that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; and that believing ye might have life through his name." God the Father, the angels of heaven, and Jesus the Son of God and his apostles all unite in positive testimony that Jesus Christ is the Son of God, and our question is answered without a hint of his being the Son of Joseph. And to ignore all this line of positive testimony is to set the Bible aside, and virtually pace along behind the noted colonel, who chuckles over his wonderful success. And now to cap the climax, this new-fangled heresy is about to take another leap off in the dark, in trying to explain and account for the resurrection of the dead, on some human scientific principles, leaving God and his power in the background. Brethren, can you look upon this Josephite doctrine as a harmless thing, and treat it with indifference and say let us alone? I cannot, as such a fatal false doctrine is more dangerous in the church than out. "A little leaven leavens the whole lump." Then, brethren, take off your gloves and give it a "black eye." Hew to the line. And as old brother Hornaday used to say, "I wouldn't fodder a man for preaching such a doctrine." "Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you, that God should raise the dead?"

Life after Death. No. 3.

JOB'S QUESTION.

Ever since Job asked the momentous question, "If a man die shall he live again; the whole world has been trying to solve the mystery of life after death, and unless spiritualists have, or can demonstrate it by actual proof, it is no nearer a solution now than it was when propounded thousands of years ago." This quotation shows the mental state of many intelligent people who do not wished to be classed with infidels, but who in fact have no faith in the Old Book, such as the Christian feels bound to exercise in deciding the question of his own salvation—a full and cheerful assent of the mind to all the facts and promises of the gospel. If we are, after thousands of years, no nearer the solution of the problem of life after death than when the patriarch of Uz propounded the question, we and all the world are in a hopeless condition. If the Bible counts for nothing in the settlement of this question, to what shall we appeal for proof? If God has left the human family for nearly six thousand years plying its heartfelt quest, and no echo has yet come back in answer; what assurance can any one have that the answer will in the world's to-morrow come in the form of a scientific demonstration? Will the fact of "after life" be fully proven by the actual return of one dead man's spirit from the "bourne whence no traveler" up to date "has returned?" Very strange that the God of nature should leave man to his conjectures about a future life and suffer him to be tantalized by a hope that up to this time is unsupported by any proof—if the Bible does not furnish it. How modern spiritualism answered Job's question! The spiritualist says, yes. The man not quite a spiritualist says no, but the answer will come in the world's tomorrow by actual fact of a spirit returned to earth—scientifically demonstrated to be what it shall claim to be, the spirit of some dead man, and no room for doubt. Spiritualists have not answered the patriarch's question, nor can they; for the very good reason that they do not know what it is. Job did not expect his question to be answered by the return of a human spirit entity. He did not believe the modern doctrine of spirit survival. Had he believed this he would have shaped his question very differently. It is not whether the soul or spirit lives on independent of the body, from the hour of apparent death. It is not a question concerning the immortality of the soul; but one concerning man: "If a man die, shall he live again?" Dropping the subjunctive form of the question we have the affirmation, "man dies," and the question, "shall he live again?" Job xiv. 14. There was, with Job, no question as to man's death. He affirms that "Man dieth and wasteth away: (returns to dust) yea, man expires, and where is he?" v. 10. Job answers his own question as to how utterly man dies, by an analogy drawn from nature, and adds that "Man lieth down: and riseth not till the heavens be no more." (behold number) He prays to be "hid in the grave and kept secret till God's wrath is past." In this condition man is so completely dead that if "his sons come to honor he knoweth it not, or be brought low, he perceiveth it not of them." v. 22. All this and much more is contained in this 14th chapter. The answer to the question, "Shall man live again?" is found here, as well as in writings not so ancient. In the 12 v. man's resurrection is implied; in 13, 14, 15 vs. it is more clearly revealed. "O * * * that thou wouldst appoint me a set time and remember me." "All the days of my appointed time will I wait, till my change come. Thou shalt call, and I will answer thee: thou wilt have a desire to the work of thy hands." Job did not leave this momentous question unanswered, and tabled till modern spirits in ethereal and vanishing forms should give the answer at variance with the teachings of God's authoritative Word. Life after death has been shown in the person of Christ raised from the dead—the fact fully attested by competent witnesses to whom he was shown without the intervention of spiritualistic mediums in proper person, flesh and bones—a real man. If Christ was not raised from the dead the third day according to the scriptures, and in verification of his own words the whole system of Christianity must be groundless and the Christian church all along the weary centuries has been indulging a hope that is as baseless as the fabric of a vision or dream; and we of today may as well put in practice the epicurean motto "eat and drink for to-morrow we die;" enjoying the present life and looking as calmly as we can into the eternal blank in front of us. The Old Testament prophets must suffer immeasurably in their veracity, and New Testament apostles and biographers be regarded as wicked forges and propagators of a lie; or, being innocent of this were deceived by some strange and unaccountable illusion that proved too much for eye and ear and hand to detect the fraud. In this sad view of the case all who have fallen asleep in Christ have perished utterly so. 1 Cor. xv. 18. Spiritualism is powerless to help us; for if the foundation fact of Christianity was an illusion and the witnesses were deceived,—in case they were not forgers—how can spirit manifestations and materializations help us in our trouble and ground our faith in things future; seeing that these things are a thousand times more liable to be illusions of some sort than was Christ's resurrection back yonder in the year 20 A. D., when all the circumstances surrounding the case were overwhelmingly against imposture. To not believe this great fact is to set aside all the laws of evidence in matters of fact. Then where are we landed? The whole world of mankind, on this hypothesis, would be converted into agnostics in a broader sense than that in which Mr. Robert G. Ingersol is regarded as such. This apostle of infidelity rejects Christ's resurrection on the same ground that he rejects all miracles, namely that the testimony of eye witnesses cannot establish a miracle. His notion is that to prove a miracle requires another miracle and so on ad infinitum. But this is a shallow and unsupported assertion of Mr. Ingersol and absurd upon the very face of it. Miracles, though differing immensely from common facts, rank as facts nevertheless. The many who indulge sentiments of skepticism will hardly adopt the law of Ingersol and reject in toto Bible miracles. Yet many today who are not avowedly infidel are saying that they are not sure that the Apostles did not labor under a delusion. This doubt effectually shuts them away from the benefit of a Divine Revelation. It closes the mind against the light that flows from no other source. Those who indulge this doubt are without hope, again and case indeed. Perhaps they never studied the laws of evidence or having studied them, never sought to apply them in this important case. The very thing they ought to do to cure their skepticism and put them on solid ground. How unhappy must men be who are always floundering in doubt

"What They Say"

Some Mysteries.

Because Paul says, "Great is the mystery of godliness," the present day theologians take the privilege of trying to mystify almost every plain statement in God's Word. Let us suppose for a moment popular theology to be the standard, and compare God's Word as spoken by prophets and apostles, with that standard, and see what a bewildering lot of mysteries we will find.

Ezekiel xviii. 4, 20, says, "The soul that sinneth it shall die." seems like a mystery when theology says, "The soul is as immortal as God and cannot die." If the soul of man is immortal, 1 Tim. vi. 15, 16, is another mystery, for it says the "Lord only hath immortality." They say we are a part of God. If that be so, we are overwhelmed by mysteries. Does a part of God commit sin? Will God destroy a part of himself? 1 Cor. iii. 17. Solomon doesn't talk much like we are a part of the eternal Father when he says, "Man hath no pre-eminence above the beast, as one dies so dieth the other, and all go to one place." Eccl. iii. 18, 19, 20. They say the "the righteous dead are continually praising God in heaven." Granting that to be the truth, David does some mysterious talking, when he says, "The dead praise not the Lord." Psa. vi. 5; cxv. 17. They say the wicked are not destroyed, but banished from the presence of the Lord." Which causes more of David's writings to appear mysterious where he says, "Yet a little while and the wicked shall not be, yea, thou shalt diligently consider his place and it shall not be." Psa. xxxvii. 10. According to David there is but one way to flee from God's presence and that is not to be." Psa. cxxxix. 7, 8, 9, 10. They say, "When the righteous die they go direct to heaven." If that be so, John iii. 13, is a mystery for it reads, "No man hath ascended up to heaven, but he who came down from heaven." And Peter's discourse would seem a little misty too, for he says, "David is not ascended into the heavens." Acts ii. 34. If Jesus went to heaven the day he died, its a mystery why he told Mary three days after, "I have not yet ascended to the Father." John xx. 17. And if the righteous go to heaven to dwell, Solomon and David both do some incomprehensible writing on the subject. Solomon says, "The righteous shall never be removed from the earth." Prov. x. 30. David says, "The righteous shall inherit the earth and dwell therein forever." Psa. xxxvii.

They say "death is the gate to endless joy." If that be the truth it is a mystery why when God comforted Rachel instead of telling her that her lost children were rejoicing around the throne in glory; he promised to bring them again from the land of the enemy." Jer. xxxi. 15, 16. Neither does Paul comfort the Thessalonians by telling them their dead were in heaven, but by the promise that the Lord will raise them from the dead. 1 Thes. iv. 13 to last verse. If death really is the gate to glory it is a mystery why Paul should say, "The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death." 1 Cor. xv. 27. And again it is a mystery why the devil has power over that gate. Heb. ii. 14. If as they say we enter into glory before the resurrection from the dead, there are fifty-eight mysterious verses written by Paul in the fifteenth chapter of 1 Corinthians, where he says, "If there be no resurrection of the dead, faith is vain, preaching is vain, and they that have fallen asleep in Christ are perished. "He absolutely gives us no hope of any future life outside of the resurrection from the dead. It we find that popular theology and the Bible are at variance, is it not time to heed the cry "Choose this day whom ye will serve; if God be God, serve him, if Baal be God serve him." The Lord tells us, "If they speak not according to this Word, it is because there is no light in them." Isa. viii. 18 to last. The Savior says, "If the blind lead the blind both shall fall into the ditch." Matt. xv. 14.

Editor Restitution:

There will be a meeting of the Church of God held at Gordon, Sheridan Co., Neb., commencing June 16 and continuing over two weeks. As there will be some business to attend to we wish all the brethren that possibly can to be there. The meeting will be held in the Christian Church. Brothers A. J. Eychaner, of Gladbrook, Ia., C. Shultz, of Bassit, and J. D. Herriman, of Ainsworth, Neb., have agreed to be with us, the Lord willing, to do the preaching and all other preaching brethren are cordially invited to come and help us in the Master's cause; come one and all, and let us have one of the grandest meetings ever held in this town. By order of committee.

Editor Restitution:

When the Lord says Jacob, Israel, Jerusalem, etc., if he really means so: when he says, days, months, years, if he means just that, like an honest business man; if we may not "add to his words," and if "the Scriptures cannot be broken," then what becomes of the "historical" system of interpreting prophecy, and of the year-day theory which seems to have been invented to conform the Scriptures to that system, and is used for nothing else? Also Seventh Day Adventism and other isms built on perversions of Scriptures: isms that like jack o' lanterns have all led their followers into the swamp. They must become as obsolete as the "Prophetic Charts," constructed on the year-day theory in the last sixty years. People are saying that the prophecies are too deep for them, it is the swamps that are too deep for them.

A. S. CROCAN.

Jesus has said, "Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world." But how can he be with those who have no desire to be with him? We must be more than mere hangers-on. Our lives must be hid with Christ in God. When we can say with Paul, "for me to live is Christ," our souls are anchored and are safe.

VISIT WINONA LAKE.

An attractive Summer Haven For Rest, Recreation, Entertainment.

Winona Lake, Indiana, on the Pennsylvania Lines, is an attractive summer haven for persons who may desire to combine devotion, entertainment and instruction with rest and recreation. This lake is a beautiful sheet of water nearly two miles long, surrounded by romantic woodland, which has been improved into a grand summer resort with all the comforts and conveniences for a delightful sojourn. The entrance to the grounds adjoins the pretty station of Winona Lake on the Fort Wayne Route.

As the site of Winona Assembly and Summer School, this resort is visited each summer by many people who are invigorated in both mind and body by the instructive entertainment and health-giving recreation for which Winona is famous. The educational work of the Summer School is under the supervision of prominent instructors. Fine facilities for athletic pastimes are provided, and the college halls and large auditorium are amply equipped for interesting work. The boating, bathing and fishing are excellent. The permanent buildings include many cosy cottages where accommodations may be secured at reasonable rates. There is also a large hotel, and provision for camping out for those who may enjoy tent life. Supplies are obtainable at the large store on the grounds.

The season of 1899 will open May 15th. Commencing on that date excursion tickets with fifteen day limit will be on sale via Pennsylvania Lines. They may be obtained during May, June, July and August. The sale of season excursion tickets will also begin May 15th, and continue daily until September 15th. Excursion tickets will be good returning until September 15th.

Works of Bro. Wiley Jones.

TWELVE WORDS, or the true meaning of Hell, Soul, Spirit, Ghost, Paradise, Incorruption, Incorruptible, Immortal, Immortality, Forever, Everlasting, Eternal, and their originals as learned by their uses in the Bible. A tract of 40 pages, sold formerly at 10 cents a copy.

THE GOSPEL OF THE KINGDOM, an 8 page double column tract, sold formerly at 10 cents a dozen.

EARLY LESSONS, suitable for old and young, 30 pages, sold formerly for 10 cents a copy

These works are excellent for use by those who wish to do missionary labor, and we offer them at such a low price that they should be out in a short time. Bro. Jones had large editions of these tracts printed, and by dying suddenly, and his Widow being in feeble health, we have undertaken the task of selling them. Her income is quite limited, and all that can be gotten out of the sale more than her after expenses are paid. When you buy these tracts you get several times the worth of your money, and also aid a worthy Sister, who will thank you for it.

Assorted package 30 cents per pound. Gospel of the Kingdom, alone at 25 cents per pound.

The Gospel of the Kingdom.

Advocated in a series of Ten Discourses. A Volume of 288 pages, cloth 25 cents, leather bound, embossed, and gilt edges, $1.00. By Wiley Jones. This book is so well known that it is only necessary to announce that it is for sale, to insure a market for it. We have undertaken to dispose of these books for the Widow of our lamented Brother Jones, and while getting them at this low price, you at the same time will help Sister Jones to much-needed money.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Important Notices.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended to.

A WAR ATLAS.

The exact locality of many places mentioned in the news of the War between the United States and Spain is not known to the general reader, and so recourse is had to geographies. We have decided to offer our readers a complete War Atlas of sixteen pages of maps, showing all the territory where a conflict can occur, besides some valuable statistics. This will be mailed to you for 25 cts. Send orders at once, and get the position of the places named that you can better understand how the various complications will affect the nations of the world. Address,—THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Ind.

Nothing to Fear.

Our waiting souls have naught to fear
Though dark the way before us;
The loving Christ is ever near
And leader watch keeps o'er us.

"The loving Christ"—oh men forget
What wondrous love he gave us;
A matchless life, so pure, and yet
He suffered sin to save us.

He knows the heart, this blessed thought
No mortal judge can move us;
In pathways drear, with sadness fraught,
Christ ever true doth love us.

Park Hill Pulpit Echoes.

"And Jesus said unto them, I am the bread of life: he that cometh to me shall never hunger, and he that believeth on me shall never thirst." John vi. 35.

The subject this morning will be the Bread of Life. Jesus had crossed the Sea of Galilee and a great multitude had followed him to hear the wonderful story of coming glory and redemption through a Divine government which he talked so much about. As the hours wore away the people grew weary and hungry. It was a desert place. The kind heart of Jesus pitied the people as they wandered like sheep with no kind shepherd to lead them to green pastures. Then by a wonderful power from five barley loaves and two small fishes he fed the thousands until they were all filled, and twelve baskets full of the fragments remain.

Selfishness in the human heart is always present. Many of those who ate of that meal saw only in this wonder-worker a means of supplying their present wants. To those Jesus now had an opportunity to reveal a higher life sustained by a bread whose properties perpetuated existence; so he said to them, "Ye seek me, not because ye saw the miracles, but because ye did eat of the loaves, and were filled." They lived upon the plane of sense, and desired only the natural food. But Jesus had a lesson for them to learn which while it may have been new to them, it was necessary for their good. The Jews were obliged to confess the miracle of feeding the 5,000, but they were ready to belittle it by comparing it with the feeding of the millions of Israelites with manna in the wilderness under Moses. So they said, "Our fathers did eat manna in the desert as it is written he (Moses) gave them bread from heaven to eat." To which Jesus replied "Moses gave you not that bread from heaven, but my Father giveth you the true bread from heaven."

The word bread comes to us from an old Saxon word meaning "to break," or food that is broken; probably from the ancient custom of breaking bread instead of cutting it, and is in general used to designate that which supports life.

Food is necessary to support the physical man. We are born into the world with a desire for food. The physical is the foundation of this many-sided being. The emotional, intellectual, moral and spiritual natures rest upon this basis.

Man is said to be a microcosm, or a world in himself; and while each individual is "fearfully and wonderfully made," there are also a variety of temperaments in the same race. But however they may differ in temperaments, the material man is the foundation, whether that temperament may be vital, mental or motive, or whether the emotional, intellectual, moral or spiritual natures are most prominent.

As the physical man thrives best upon a variety of food, and indeed is necessary to life, so too our complex nature must have a variety of mental food. I take it that the bread Jesus is discussing is not wheat bread, or rye bread or corn bread, or any other article of physical food, but a bread adapted to the higher nature. A bread upon which the spiritual nature must feed.

THE EMOTIONAL NATURE.

Let us consider man in his lowest nature first—that part of his nature which lies within the domain of sense. Every one possesses this nature, and those of the vital temperament have the most of it.

This nature has a food—a bread—that feeds it, and it drifts with the current. It is easy to find food for this nature. Children live in this nature almost wholly at first, and even children of a larger growth often fail to develop a higher nature. This nature is fed by stories, by fiction, by sensational reading, by the novel or marvelous in the natural world, or in the world of letters. That church will be best attended whose preacher is a good story-teller, who can use sensational material in his addresses. But remember the audience remains upon the plane of the flesh. The bread they get is not adapted to Spiritual life.

If I were to tell an interesting and sensational story every boy and girl in my audience would appreciate it and all eyes and ears would be open. Even the older members of the congregation would cease to snore, because it would be easy to keep them awake upon good stories.

The question then comes naturally why not tell stories, incidents and use illustrations. Our answer is, it is well to use them when they contain a spiritual truth, or in other words, when the bread they contain will feed the spiritual nature. While we may use food for the growth of this nature we should avoid an abnormal development of it. Too many, alas, never reach a higher nature. Their whole life is along this line.

THE INTELLECTUAL NATURE.

The next higher step is the intellect. The mental temperament asserts itself here. The food or bread is knowledge. Peter in his second letter makes knowledge the first step toward the Divine life. As we travel along we will find fewer who thirst for knowledge. The great mass of mankind are fed upon the bread of sense. There are many who desire to know and to search out a matter and find real food to nourish their nature; yet they are fewer than those of the first class.

There are men and women who as individuals are abnormally developed in knowledge. They measure everything by what they know or think they know. They talk more about "a knowledge of the truth" than they do about the life of the Spirit. They think everybody ought to be measured by their pint cup. The moral distinctions between right and wrong they seldom weigh. The spiritual enjoyment of the Christ life they cannot understand.

Sensation and intelligence are both necessary to the perfect man, and yet there are other states of the physical man which must be reached. Higher still is and this too must have bread. This part of our being will starve upon sensation. This will not thrive upon stories alone. Knowledge cannot be its food. It weighs actions. It decides upon the right and wrong. It takes cognizance of moral bearings. It does not ask for the novel or ludicrous; it is not influenced by the high intelligence of an act. It only asks, Is it right? And yet there are those who become only developed in the moral nature to the exclusion of all the others. If not that, the moral decisions are so unduly brought out as to show their one-sided tendency. Every action of their fellowmen falls under their especial province of judgment. And their fallable decisions, impugn even the purest motives. Thus their special error in the realm of morals is the unchecked, overfed tendency of this kind of food.

There is an old Quaker living in the State of Maine who is the owner of a cow, which will illustrate this point. She is a perfect cow in every respect, save one. She gives milk which is both good in quantity and quality. She is peaceable and gentle and is all right except her hind feet. Here she is unduly developed. Her toes are eighteen inches long and have grown out like ram's horns. When she is seen coming down the road in her effort to lift her toes she presents a curious spectacle, her action being similar to a horse having the stringhalt, bringing down her hind feet with a thump, so they have named her "Old Clumpers," because of the abnormal development. So those who develop a one-sided nature are in reality "Old Clumpers" in the world.

Some feed upon the sensational alone, and develop the lowest part of our nature, and they become old clumpers. Others feed the intellect alone. They are big-headed clumpers. What they don't know would fill a good sized book, but what of that? Even the tenderness of the finest emotion is measured by the size and weight of their brain. The highest spiritual conception and the evenest moral balance are nothing to them. They are intellectual clumpers as too those who feed and rest upon the moral nature alone.

As you look up and reach

THE SPIRITUAL NATURE

you will find but few companions on your side. The preacher whose spiritual mindedness leads him often to talk of heavenly things will find three-fourths of his pews empty. "Strait is the gate and narrow is the way that leadeth unto life, and few there be who find it." There are two reasons why it is so. First our tastes are not normal in the spiritual line and second we have been fed so little of this kind of bread that we are not accustomed to it and do not relish it. And yet there are some, who like Elijah and Enoch and Noah and David and Daniel and others, have dwelt and walked with God. This nature is fed by the Word of God. It is the bread that endureth unto everlasting life. If any man eat of this bread he shall live forever.

The bread furnished by the world only nourishes the things of time, while the bread which Christ gives reaches a step higher and confers everlasting life. There are no clumpers in the spiritual realm. Each one becomes a perfect man or woman in Christ Jesus. This nature lays hold of God's promises. It exercises love. It cultivates faith. It builds up a hope for the future. Christ is the bread of a new life. We are fed by the Holy Spirit. The spiritual nature holds converse with God's Spirit and we are fed by that bread as Jesus was in the wilderness. Man shall not live by bread alone but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God. The Christian's aim should be to grow to perfect manhood. To develop the sensational, intellectual, moral and spiritual alike, and to make the lower and animal, subject to the higher and God like.

The food that Christ gives contains in it all the elements designed to build up each nature in the desired ratio. Do you want the sensational? Find it in the wonderful history of the man of Nazareth. Walking on the sea! Stilling the tempest! Feeding the thousands! Raising the dead! was there ever anything which appealed to man's senses like the story of Jesus? Do you want intellectual bread? Find it in his doctrines and teachings as he went from city to city preaching the kingdom of God hath by direct discourse and by parable. Do you want moral food? Find it in the sermon on the Mount and in the farewell address to the disciples in that upper room. Do you want the highest, best, richest spiritual food? Find it in the clean, pure life of the Nazarine. Find it in his promises. Find it in his devotion to God in Pilate's hall before the jeering multitude, in the garden and upon the cross.

This bread fills every want of nature, of grace and of spirit. The truth sanctifies wholly with Jesus. I pray sanctify us through the truth—thy Word is truth. His words are Spirit and they feed and nourish and keep the spiritual life unto life eternal. It is impossible for those who feed upon this bread to remain hungry, or to grow thirsty, for it is both a bread and a water of life. Let me place before you the words of Jesus once more, and let us remember the promise: "He that cometh to me shall never hunger and he that believeth on me shall never thirst." And the reason given is because he is the bread of life. May we pray with the Jews, "Lord, evermore give us this bread."

A. J. EYCHANER.

Dear Restitution:

I wish to call the attention of our readers to what some are in doubt about, viz., the teaching of Jesus in Luke xx. 35, those who are worthy of a resurrection from among the dead, as being equal to the angels. Here the Master affirms the angels are a deathless race. Luke xx. 36. Again we are informed in various portions of the Scripture that the Satan or devil (Diabol) was cast out of heaven and there are so many passages which speak of him in a personal sense and as a personality that there can hardly be any doubt of a personal being who is engaged in an open antagonism to God and all that is good. And yet when one thinks of the nature of angels as being deathless, it is hardly expected we can be brought to believe the devil was once an angel, as we know by the Scripture evidence that the devil will be and must be destroyed. See Heb. ii. 14. Now then, how are you going to destroy a being whose nature is like the angels? It would be an impossibility, yet the above Scriptures plainly teach both antagonizing features. Manifestly here is a conflict in the Word of God through the Spirit. I don't think the Spirit deals in clashing theories. Hence, we must take nothing for granted without searching the Scriptures, Jesus spoke it.

Now, listen to Jude, 6 ver. Herein are told there were angels who kept not their first estate or goodness or angelic nature, (yes, rebelled against God, and even left their habitations). Hence, you see they are reserved for [illegible] and Paul has said the saints shall judge angels. What angels? See Jude 6 ver., also Jude 9 ver. Here's a contending devil. Now Paul says, we (Christians) do not contend with the flesh and blood (that is with mortal man) but with wicked spirits in high places. See Rev. xii. 7, 8, 9, and in fact there are lots of texts that go to show the devil was of the order of angels.

Now, some one will squirm and doubt and finally conclude that the devil is an imaginary being and is in us all and only wants encouragement to develop and grow. Yet this is not consistent with the great and good God in the creation of anything animate. See Gen. i. 25 for proof. Now, dear ones, there is just this about it. God a long time, ere we had any record, created the heavenlies and their hosts, and among them the angels. And as God requires all intelligent beings to prove their worth, he of course placed those angels on probation just the same as he did Adam and Eve, as also us in this day of faith, we are on probation, and who will abide his judgment. Oh, that it will be you and me and all the dear ones, who have acknowledged the faith.

Well now, the angels were subject to trial, and some were puffed up and ambitious to excel, yes, and to grow wise above what was required, did not obey God, left or fell, or kept not their estate. Yes, and left their habitation, and were cast out just as Adam and Eve were, and the antediluvians were. Yes, and as only the faithful children entered the promised land, so will it be in the coming age. All who are accountable up to the time the Christ comes and did not hear that Prophet will live on until their alloted time, and finally return to dust, whilst the faithful and the children who are not responsible will live on, the saints in an undying state (or condition) and the unaccountables of probation under the third angel's call. Rev. xiv. 6, 7. Well now, how is it the angels can't die and yet the devil was one, and we are positively informed that he shall die? In [illegible] this way, at the time of the Savior, those angels had proven themselves worthy of eternal, never ending life, how? By obedience to God. Yes, had passed into an immortal state just as the nations will do in the coming age. As it is impossible for mortals to perpetuate their lives they must become deathless, and the end to be a time when there will be no more sorrow or pain or death, can't be any eternal burning hell then can there? For that would cause pain. And this is how the devil could be an angel and yet not be immortal. Yet be of supernatural acumen and nature. Now, look up all Scripture and contexts.

Again, Jesus said in John iii. 13, "No man had ascended up to heaven." Now then, in the case of Elijah that he was taken up to heaven in a chariot of fire. Again, here appears to be a conflict in the Spirit's Word. See 2 Kings ii 11. Now, there is a region around, above us, and heavenly as well as Satanic beings dwelling therein, and this is the region to which Elijah was taken as Jesus, the Christ, ascended above all heavens. There is no conflict. See 2 Kings vi. 16, 17, for proof of this assertion. And it is evident that the people of the place did not believe Elijah had gone to God's throne or heaven, else 'twas only for fifty of them to hunt for Elijah three days. In looking up the texts, look also at all contextual Scripture. And bless you, there are a great many things that to you are doubtful, will clear away like the morning fog as the sun rises higher and higher until every vestige of obscurity disappears.

I want to say right here, I believe the Scriptures although they may condemn me, and if there are some things I do not understand I know God makes no mistakes. Man may pervert, misinterpret, misconstrue, yet they have sufficient self-evident facts plainly set forth to guide us into the Anointed One, and constitute us a ruler in his glorious, never-ending kingdom. Although he will deliver it up to the Father it will never end. [illegible]

Now, dear ones of the Church of God of the Abrahamic faith, search out those things and do not doubt, for to doubt is to be lost. I want to tell you I sent for fifty of Bro. Joblin's "Law or Gospel," and handed them out, they are good, not only refuting this Seventh Day error, but showing clearly God's plan for establishing his kingdom on this earth, and how he proposes to bless all nations through Abraham and his seed. I will say also the book written by Bro. Wiley Jones is good. I have distributed several of them, also Twelve Words will give you a decided advantage in expounding the gospel. I do hope all who can will send for some of them. I am not rich. I work for my living, am 62 years old, been through the war of the rebellion, and yet I manage to send out some Restitutions and tracts each year, you can also, if you try, I mean all abled-bodied brothers. The Lord will help you, try it.

Now, good bye, dear ones of the true faith, and I pray God to sustain all in whatever circumstances their lot may be cast, and don't forget to write to us through THE RESTITUTION. May God bless you is my hearty prayer. Yours striving for eternal life through a resurrection from among the dead ones at the coming of the One who is the life (zoe).

Who Will Triumph?

Who will triumph? Who will regain the lost Eden extending from the River Nile and the Mediterranean Sea on the west, to the Euphrates on the east, and from cedar-crowned Lebanon on the north, to the furthest confines of Arabia on the south?

"Palestine, Syria, Assyria, part of Persia," Mesopotamia, the land of the Chaldees, Ishmael's land, and perhaps Armenia, with all the countries from the source of the Nile to its mouth? For all this region seems in early times to have been called Eden, and the kings who ruled within it, "the trees of Eden," because somewhere in its limits was the paradise, or orchard, where God placed the first man.

Look at it on the map, see how central it is. Notice the great seas that lie around it; how important for purposes of commerce, and for reaching the nations with religious instruction, and righteous law. It is not all included in the original deed made to Abraham, but it is said of Jesus that, "he shall reign from sea to sea," would not that include all these seas? But who will get the garden of the earth, and getting the garden, get the dominion of the whole?

The first man to whom it was given, and to whom therefore the dominion of earth belonged, was deceived and lost it, his first-born son, went with the lost dominion, into the hands of the power of darkness—to be the tool, and the head, or founder of an idolatrous system of religion, that was to be anti-peace, anti-good, and anti-God, to in that day, until when?

Adam's son, being on the side of God, and against the evil, fell a martyr, and the curse seemed lost. But Seth took the place of Abel, and the strife began as to which should ultimately fall heir to that glorious land, the seed of Cain, or the seed of Seth.

Time and again, the hosts of God have seemed to be utterly defeated; time and again have Satan's missions exulted in the thought, that every soldier of the Holy Book had been put to death, and that the vineyard of the Lord, with all the royalties that went with it was theirs. It is still in the hands of the sons of Cain, (if not sons by descent, yet sons by creed and by character.) But these have no deed from the rightful owner. They can be dispossessed at any time when it shall please him. It belongs to his own dear Son, and to the obedient ones of all times.

They will triumph in the end, and have the garden of all the earth, and with the garden, the thrones and the glory and the power. The race of Cain must lay down the usurped crown, give up the usurped [illegible] to be dispossessed no more, forever. Then blessing will take the place of cursing; joy come in the room of mourning; freedom in the place of slavery; peace in the place of war; and perfect rectitude in the place of vice and crime. Who will share in the triumph, be on the side of Christ, and be a victor—crowned for eternity?

Editor Restitution:

There will be a meeting of the Church of God held at Gordon, Sheridan Co., Neb., commencing June 16 and continuing over two weeks. As there will be some business to attend to we wish all the brethren that possibly can to be there. The meeting will be held in the Christian Church. Brethren A. J. Eychaner, of Gladbrook, Ia., C. Shultz, of Bassit, and J. D. Herriman, of Ainsworth, Neb., have agreed to be with us, the Lord willing, to do the preaching and all other preaching brethren are cordially invited to come and help us in the Master's cause; come one and all, and let us have one of the grandest meetings ever held in this town. By order of committee.

If you are going to say anything, by voice or pen, you must know beforehand what point you are to aim at. What you need at the start is not ideas, but an idea. If one thing possesses you, and you want to convey it to others, words will be at your call to express it. But if you have words in abundance, and try to think of ideas which can be expressed in those words, neither words nor ideas will be worth much either to you or to your hearers. If the best navigator in the world starts out on a voyage, he must decide, to begin with, where he wants to go. Otherwise his charts, his compass, the tides, the currents, the winds, and his nautical knowledge will be of little use to him. Your first need in speaking is to be possessed of an idea and a purpose.—S. S. Times.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations, the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, prerequisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, JUNE 14, 1899.

THE report of the Michigan Conference is at hand, and will appear next week.

OLIVER Wendell Holmes compares the mind of a bigot to the pupil of the eye—the more light you pour upon it the more it contracts.

QUAINT but true was the saying of Billings, that "success didn't consist in never making blunders, but in never making the same ones the second time."

IF the heart is not right, no ordinance, however Scriptural, is of any benefit. If the heart is right it will give to every ordinance of divine appointment.

WE have enjoyed a visit with Bro. and Sister E. Leaf of Salamanca, N. Y., this week. They attended the Conference at Antioch, and visited friends and relatives in the neighborhood for a few days. They are good earnest people, and we are glad to be personally acquainted with them, and say, come again.

"OLD Antioch" as it is called had another big meeting this year, seemingly everybody was there on Sunday. A movement was started to repair the house somewhat, and we trust it will be accomplished. Several papers of interest that were read will be given in future issues, and report will be made by secretary. Two made the start for the kingdom of God, and we pray they will be faithful and gain a place there.

Born of Water,

WAS Bro. Buell Nutt, on Sunday, the 28th of May, 1899, in the 17th year of his natural life. It was a joyful time for the Church in Cleveland, for it had long looked tenderly and hopefully on him, being convinced that the transforming power of the truth was working in him. They were not mistaken. After some six months of serious consideration, and counting the cost of the important step contemplated, he came forward without personal solicitation, made confession of his faith, and expressed it as his firm purpose to obey the glorious gospel of the grace of God he had fallen in love with. It is always a special source of joy to the household, when the home influence of its members so recommend the religion of Jesus that their children are induced to place themselves in the same fold, and under the care of the same great Shepherd. It is also very cheering to the teachers in that splendid nursery of the Church,—the Sunday school, who have had the privilege to both sow and water the precious seed, to add another name to the long list of those who have come from their classes into the Body of Christ. A number of excellent addresses of congratulation and exhortation were made while gathered around the table of the Lord, which helped to make the occasion one long to be remembered; and then fervent prayers to God in his behalf, that he may retain his confidence through all the changing scenes of life, and at last share the great salvation, closed the exercises.

How to Know a Good Tree.

After a powerful warning against false teachers who come to us as pretending sheep while in truth they are ravaging wolves, and after telling us how to identify them, viz., by their fruits, and after pressing home this instruction by an illustration from nature—reminding them that grapes do not grow on thorns, nor figs on thistles, he proceeds to say that every good tree bringeth forth good fruit, but a corrupt tree bringeth forth evil fruit; and that a good tree can only yield fruit, and a corrupt tree can only bear evil fruit. He then tells us what the end of the corrupt tree is,—it is hewn down, and cast into the fire. And then, as if to show the importance of this instruction and leave no stone unturned to fasten it upon the minds of his disciples, he repeats the distinguishing marks of false teachers, —as follows:—"Wherefore by their fruits ye shall know them." The original term used here signifies "to know thoroughly," or "to know through and through." This is therefore an unfailing, infallible test.

The Homiletic Review says The Indian, published at Calcutta, the very centre of the principal achievements of heathenism, applies the test and finds such results as the following:—

"The Hindu shastras have given us India; the Koran has given us Arabia, Turkey, and North and Central Africa; the doctrine of the Gautama Buddha has given us Burma, Tibet and Siam, the teachings of Confucius have given us enfeebled, distracted China. The Bible has given us Britain, Germany, the United States—nations which, though unhappily afflicted with numberless evils because the Bible is not yet allowed full supremacy in the individual and national life, are in the van of human progress, enlightenment and civilization. In five hundred years no really useful invention or valuable discovery has originated in any land outside the pale of Christendom. Neither Asia nor Africa for twenty years has contributed a single idea from which the world is reaping comfort, environment or uplifting impulse. How is this? Are men blind that they fail to perceive the philosophy of such a state of things? Truly the light shineth in the darkness, and the darkness comprehendeth it not."

Duty of Sons and Servants.

As Jesus taught his disciples in his day, to address God as their Father, it is evident that the record of that fact was made for all who may believe on him through their Word; and it would be profitable for all who consider themselves children of God, to learn a thing or two about his fatherhood, from Mal i. 6, 7, 8. It says of the relationship of Master and servant, and Father and Son:—

"A Son honoreth his father, and a servant his Master. If, then I be a Father, where is mine honor? And if I be a Master, where is my fear? Saith the Lord of hosts unto you, O priests that despise my name? And ye say, Wherein have we despised thy name?"

The Lord of Hosts then replies:—

"Ye offered polluted bread upon mine altar; and ye say, Wherein have we polluted thee?"

Again the Lord of Hosts replies:—

"In that ye say, The table of the Lord is contemptible. And if ye offer the blind for sacrifice, is it not evil? And if ye offer the lame and sick, is it not evil? Offer it now unto thy Governor; will he be pleased with thee, or accept thy person? Saith the Lord of Hosts."

This is where we can learn whether or not it is safe to conclude that any thing will do for the Lord. It should remind us that Cain tested that principle long ago, and what the outcome was. It should also bring to mind what Samuel said to Saul, "To obey is better than sacrifice (even) and to hearken than the fat of lambs."

Of course the same derelictions are not chargeable to us, but the same principle applies to us. To offer polluted bread upon the altar was a very practical way of saying the table of the Lord was contemptible. And there are many ways of saying the table of the Lord is contemptible now; but most of them are manifested by absenting one's self from it.

To all intents and purposes the Lord's supper is the memorial funeral service of our Lord; a funeral service compared with which that of the dearest earthly friend is insignificant indeed. If one who has taken the name of Jesus absents himself from the Lord's table when it is spread to his honor, for reasons too trivial to keep him away from a memorial funeral service in honor of some one dear only by the ties of nature, the two events are brought into competition, as it were, and the Lord's table, is least esteemed, and contemptible in comparison with the other.

Reader, do not allow your moral perception to become so blunted; or your conscience so seared as that you can pursue such a course or make such a choice without compunction, or you will certainly land outside of the kingdom. If you have already unhappily arrived at the stage where you in this way, or any other, call the table of the Lord contemptible, we pray you call a halt, and consider God's loving purpose rich on the one hand, and the deceitfulness of sin and its wages on the other, that the things remaining may be revived before the day of awards come.

Paul Was a True Prophet.

He said perilous times would come in the last days, and then went on to describe the nature of the perils. His description shows that it is to the household of faith that have to keep their garments unspotted from the world that will be in peril from the evil of their surroundings. Self-love, and covetousness, boasting, pride, blasphemy, disobedience, unholiness, want of natural affection, fierceness, incontinence, love of pleasure more than lovers of God, having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof, would characterize the people who had enjoyed the greatest privileges ever enjoyed. They had free access to the Word, the entrance of which giveth light, besides the benefit arising from the running to and fro of men of varied learning. We may say the picture drawn by Paul is a picture of what is called Christendom, —not of heathendom, because the 8th verse of 2 Tim. 3rd chapter proves that he has been speaking of vast communities who were nominal Christians—They had the form of godliness, notwithstanding the dark colors in which he had painted them, but the form alone would not transform their lives. When there is no heart belief of the gospel, its obedience is wanting, and so, while professing to be walking in the narrow way, are really walking in the broad way. In order to give another solemn word of warning that the last days have come with all the gospel nullifying characteristics catalogued, we append a news item that demonstrates that Paul was verily a prophet of the Lord.

A dispatch to our daily papers, dated New York, May 29 says:

"The idea of special features to attract young people to church, which has gone as far as dancing classes in several places, has gone a step further in the Protestant Episcopal pro-cathedral at No. 130 Stanton street, of which the Rev. Dr. Charles Briggs is to have charge.

Boxing matches and a wrestling bout were introduced with the approval of the authorities of the pro-cathedral and under the eye of the Rev. Mr. Paddock, the vicar, who seemed to enjoy them. The contests were held in the basement for the Young Men's club, one of the many organizations of the pro-cathedral. There was a smoker, music and recitations. Then a ring was improvised.

At the opening Kid Rowling of Buffalo and Kid Floss of Avenue A boxed three fair rounds, and a draw was the decision. The boys carried out the custom of the ringside, and vociferous cheers, hisses and catcalls filled the large room.

Then came the real event of the evening. 'Fellows,' said Announcer Gambert, 'I now introduce to you with great pleasure Dick Wunderlich, ex-champion welter-weight, and Phil Kelly, the coming welter-weight. They will box three rounds, and in the last introduce their original 'knock-out,' which has been imitated by many, but successfully copied by none.' Three strictly professional rounds followed, and in the last round, Kelly delivered the realistic 'knockout' blow.

The wrestling match was between Mike Zimmer and George Burke, the instructor of the gymnasium attached to the church.

The Rev. Mr. Paddock said that doubtless many people would not approve of such amusements in such a place, but he said the aim was to hold the young men's interest and keep them off the street."

We do not see how it improves matters any to engage in the very lowest-down sports in the world, in a church gymnasium, under the eye and patronage of the pastor. We do not see how the young men could be under a more brutalizing influence on the street than they were in the church gymnasium; and we would like to know if they would be apt to lose any of their taste for such evil practices in other places, after the sanction of their spiritual guide has been given to them under a dedicated roof? Imagine Paul or Peter attending with pleasure a church prize-fight or wrestling-match.

The Rev. (?) Paddock excused the brutal sport in such a place because the aim was to hold the young men's interest and keep them off the street. To what interest does he aim to hold them? Is it possible that he believed he was speaking the truth when he said this to the reporter? Did he not know that he was sanctioning their sowing to the flesh? Did he not know that the harvest they were preparing for was corruption? Ought he not to be ashamed of himself not to know that carnal food will not promote spiritual growth? If intelligent and honest would he not admit that by licensing such practices, in the nature of things, only helps him to hold their interest in such things. Why does he not see that he has virtually confessed that he has given them no message from God that is capable of holding their interest in it. "Keep them off the street," indeed! Have they not been on the street or some places worse than the street? If not, how is it the reporter could say they "carried out the custom of the ring-side, and vociferous cheers, hisses and catcalls.' We need not say these customs were not learned on the street. We hardly need say, they have been on the street and at the debasing ringside, and brought both street and ring-side into the Church. And it is our solemn conviction that the Protestant Episcopal Church at the pro-cathedral at No. 130 Stanton street will largely help to make every prize fight in the vicinity of New York a financial success.

After reading the item from New York it was refreshing to read that the Catholic Bishop Hortsman of Cleveland, in the interest of morality has called attention to the diocesan cannon which forbids moonlight excursions, picnics after nightfall, all kinds of round dancing in public halls and ball rooms, whether for church, society or charitable purposes, without a written permission from the ordinary.

But while everything transpiring in the world religiously goes to prove Paul a prophet of the Lord by universal and complete departure from the faith and the practice of the precepts of the religion of Jesus, not a week passes without Talmage and others of the same stripe appearing under flaming headlines with vivid pictures of the world's regeneration under human agencies. The last outburst from Talmage tells us that America by control in Cuba, Porto Rico and the Philippines hold the key to the world's redemption. All this in the face of abounding iniquity in and out of the so-called church.—and the positive announcement that worse and worse instead of better and better is to be the order of things in these last days.

The only cause for thankfulness under these circumstances, is, that they tell us the Lord is at hand to come. May the writer and reader be able to hail him with joy.

For Our Children.

Wisdom is Gain.

It were a blessed thing to learn,
While youth's bright hours are here;
The wisdom that like lamp will light,
Our feet o'er desert drear.

One precious Book has this in store,
Go there, nor seek in vain;
When found, count all earth's vanities dross,
And this, eternal gain.

"The Nillennium."

Dilly communicated the story confidently to Freddie Burr.

"See here!" she said, pushing the toes of a pair of stout new shoes through the fence.

"Where did you get 'em?" asked Freddie.

"And see here!" continued Dilly, bobbing up for an instant to show the pretty hood that covered her yellow hair, and touching it significantly with her finger.

"Where did you get 'em?" repeated Freddie.

"My pa worked and bought 'em an' brought 'em home: and they didn't get into nobody's barrel either," explained Dilly with great pride and little regard for grammar, pressing her face close against the fence for a prolonged interview. "You see, Freddie Burr," began Dilly, "the Nillennium has come to our house."

"The what?" said Freddie in bewilderment.

"The Nillennium. It's a pretty long word," explained Dilly, complacently, "but it means good times. Anyhow, that's what ma called it, and I guess she knows. It was just this way, Freddie Burr: When you told me Mr. Barney had all our good things down to his store in rum barrels, I just went down there right off and asked him for 'em—me and Toddles."

"You didn't," exclaimed horrified Freddie.

"Did too!" declared Dilly with an emphatic nod. "Well, he wouldn't give us one of 'em, and he was just as cross as anything. So then my pa got up from behind the stove and walked home with us. He didn't scold a bit; but he just sat down before the fire, this way, and thinked and thinked. At last he put his hand in one pocket, but there wasn't nothing there; then he put it in his other pocket and found ten cents, and he went out and bought some meat for supper. When ma got home he talked to her and they both cried. I don't know what for, 'less it was 'cause we didn't get the things out of the barrels. And ma hugged me most to death that night, and kissed me lots, she did. Well, my pa got some work the next day, and brought some money, and now he has found a place where he works every day. He bought all these things, and he says his little boy and girl shall have things like other boys and girls. So now you know what the Nillennium means, Freddie Burr, when anybody asks you; and you can tell them that Dilly Keene splained it to you."

The Story of Israel. No. 91.

THE PLAGUE AMONG THE PEOPLE.

What do you think happens on the very next day after Korah, Dathan and Abiram go down in the earthquake? The Israelites "Murmur against Moses and against Aaron, and say, Ye have killed the people of the Lord." What rebels they are! The trouble is they do not believe the Word of the Lord and so when any evil comes on them, they think Moses and Aaron are at the bottom of it, and that the Lord has nothing to do with it. They are just like our own people in this country, who see the cyclones and the fires and the floods taking people away, and yet say, "it is not because of our sins," and "God has nothing to do with any of these things." Yet he has and he will keep on sending such things till they acknowledge that his hand is doing it all and turn from their evil ways.

This time as before, when the children of Israel gather against Moses and against Aaron, the glory of the Lord appears, and again Moses and Aaron are told to walk away from the people, that the Lord "may consume them in a moment." They fall on their faces again, but the dear Lord does not see fit to listen wholly to their prayer, for the plague begins.

Moses tells Aaron to prepare his censer, and go in great haste to the congregation and make atonement for them, and he did so and the plague was stopped, but not until 14,700 had died!

Do you know what the plague is? It is a dreadful fever that is catching. The eyes sink into the head, the skin inflames as if with erysipelas, great boils break out, and in a very short time, the poor victim is dead. They fall over one another while walking along the streets. The people of India had the plague last year; I think they have it still. They also have it in Russia, sometimes nearly all the people in a country die with it. But this plague may be different from that which the Israelites had.

There isn't much fun in being naughty is there! Boys and girls think there is lots of fun in doing wicked things, disobeying their fathers and mothers, sneaking off from church to the theater, telling falsehoods, meeting bad companions on street corners in the evening, reading unholy books, playing games of chance, using profane words, tasting wine and cider and beer, but the end always comes, and it brings pain remorse, useless longings and bitter tears. We cannot go back and live our lives over again. We had better take the straight road in the beginning.

I know a bright and intelligent boy who thought it was "fun" to do some naughty things. He was the playmate of my brothers, and they went to the same school together. His father kept a tavern, and he learned to like the cider and beer and whiskey that was kept for the travelers, who stopped to stay over night. He tried to get my little brother Johnny to drink some too, but he said "no" and ran away. The boy grew to be a man; he made a great deal of money, for he had good business talents. He married one of my little friends, and built him a beautiful home. Two lovely children were given him. But he drank, he kept drinking. His wife grew sad and sick. The whiskey made the blood vessels in the man's head thin and weak. One day some of the little ones broke. It made the man blind. Then more broke and he had to lie in bed; his sweet wife died while he lay there. He lost his mind, and had to go to an asylum to stay till he dies. His pretty boy learned to drink too. He gets so sick sometimes, that he wants to kill himself, and has to be watched. Isn't it "fun" to take the bad man's road? It seems as if people could never learn that it is not; that it always gets them into trouble. The Israelites showed by the way they talked in the close of the seventh chapter, that they had not learned the lesson, for they mourned only over the punishment that had come upon them, and not over the wrong things they had done. They said, "We die, we perish; we all perish, whosoever cometh anything near unto the tabernacle of the Lord shall die: shall we be consumed with dying?" But if they had come to the tabernacle in the right way, would they have died? Did they die when they came as the Lord bade them? Lev. ix.

You little folks may go to meeting every Sunday that you live, but if you do not go as God tells you to go, you will die, just as surely as the Israelites died. It does us no good to go to the house of God, if we keep right on doing as we please. We must go having faith in God, and with our hearts full of thanksgiving and praise to him, for his love and kindness to us. We must go in humble submission to his law, because we love him and want to please him. You do not want to be shut out of the beautiful promised land, do you? If not, believe the Lord is able to lead you there, and let him lead you! Begin today!

That the people might be convinced who it was that God had chosen, among all the great men of the tribes to be his high priest, a man from each tribe was to bring a rod, and the rods were to be laid in the most holy place. On the rods the men's names were to be written, they were to write Aaron's name on the rod of Levi. "And every one of the princes gave Moses a rod a piece * * * even twelve rods, and the rod of Aaron was among their rods." "And Moses laid up the rods before the Lord in the tabernacle of witness."

A wonderful thing happened in the night. What do you think? When Moses went in in the morning, "Behold the rod of Aaron for the house of Levi was budded, and brought forth buds and bloomed blossoms, and yielded almonds." "And Moses brought out all the rods from before the Lord, unto the children of Israel; and they looked and took every man his rod." They could not help knowing them, which of them the Lord had chosen, could they?

Aaron's rod was to be laid up and kept, so there could never any more be a dispute as to who should be the high-priest. Our next lesson will be the 20th chapter of Numbers.

"Sich Truck."

Bob Ingersoll recently was talking with an old colored woman in Washington upon religious matters. "Do you really believe, Aunty," said he, "that people are made out of dust?" "Yes, sah; the Bible says dey is, an' so I believes it." "But what is done in wet weather, when there's nothing but mud?" "Den I s'pects dey make ineffduls an' sich truck."—Life.

Editor Restitution:

Just home from Prescott, Linn Co., Kan., where I was called by a letter from Joseph Williams, to teach him and others, the way of life more perfect, and to assist him in being buried into the all-saving name of Jesus Christ, the Son of God, or the Anointed of God, the only name that saves. I preached three sermons in the Methodist Church, had the Methodist preacher and his wife with us two nights, but they could stand no more. On Sunday 21st, moved to old Fairfield school house, preached two discourses, one at 11 A. M., and one at 3 P. M, then we went to the water. There was a quite a good little crowd out to attend the burial of the old Adam with his deeds, and to witness the new man to rise, in figure of the death, burial and the resurrection of our blessed Savior, to walk in newness of life. And my prayer is that young Bro. Williams may ever be a bright and shining light, and may some, yea, many of his young associates take lessons from him, and follow "the Master's step.

Yours in hope of life when Jesus comes,

JOHN FOORE.

Dear Restitution:

I am left to mourn the loss of my dear companion since I last wrote to you. Oh, it is so hard to part with one that we have lived with for forty-one years, but such is this life. I do not mourn as those that have no hope, and my prayer is that it may not be long before we can meet to part no more. May God bless all that are trying to serve him.

With love to all the weary ones,

MRS. EMILY GILLETT.

Man of Macedonia. Acts xvi.

Oh, for a vision, or a voice to lead me;
To show me plainly where my work should be!
Look where I may, fresh hindrances impede me.
Vain, and unanswered, seems my earnest cry.

Hush unbelieving one; but for thy blindness,
But for thine own impatience and self-will,
Thou wouldst see thy Master's loving kindness
Who, by these hindrances, is leading still.

He who of old, through Phrygia and Galatia
Led the apostle Paul, and forbad him there
If he forbid to "preach the Word in Asia,"
Must have prepared a work for Macedonia.

Courage and patience! 'tis the Master who pays!
Has he no plan, no purpose of love?
What though awhile his counsel he is keeping?
Is nurturing in the world above.

Wait on the Lord—in his right hand he bideth:
And go not forth in "zeal to strive alone:
Shun—like a sin!—the tempting work "forbidden,"
God's love for souls, he sure, exceeds this own.

The Master cares! why feel or seem so lonely?
Nothing can intercept real work for God!
Work may be changed; it cannot cease, if only,
We are resolved to obey and to fulfil.

None are good works for those but works appointed,
Ask to be filled with knowledge of his will.
Count what it may! Why live a life disjointed?
One work throughout—God's pleasure to fulfil.

But if indeed some special work awaits thee,
Can't thou afford this waiting time to know?
By such oppressive task God educates thee!
What if the iron be too blunt to use?

Can walls be built of untempered mortar?
Or fish be caught in the unmended snare?
Must not the metal pass through fire and water,
If for the battle-field it would prepare?

Oh! thou unpolished shaft, why leave the quiver?
Oh! thou blunt ax, what forest can'st thou hew?
Unsharpened sword, can'st thou the oppressed deliver?
Go back to thine own maker's forge anew!

Submit thyself to God for preparation!
Seek not to teach thy Master and thy Lord!
Call it not zeal! 'tis in a base temptation!
Satan is pleased when man dictates to God!

Down with thy pride! with holy vengeance trample,
Oh such self-flattering fancy that appears!
Did not the Lord himself, for our example,
Lie hid in Nazareth for thirty years?

Wait the appointed time for work appointed,
Lest by the tempter's wiles thou be ensnared!
Fresh be the oil wherewith thou art anointed!
Let God prepare thee for the work prepared.

The Promise of Future Life.

In regard to life, human, animal and vegetable, there are some mysteries or secrets that at present remain unsolved. For instance, how the seed produces its kind—the same kind, the same characteristic as the progenitor in form of leaves, habit of growth and plant—how all is dormant "inpotentiality" in the little particle we take between finger and thumb is one of the deepest mysteries of nature. It is more wonderful than a fairy tale; stranger than any fiction the mind can frame. Only the profuseness of its manifestation has made it common, and the lily of the field, in all its mysterious resurrectional gorgeousness, that out-glories Solomon, is passed unheeded.

So much for mystery. Some folks seem always to associate the word with ghosts, haunts, bogies, or "the terrors of the unseen world;" but all mysteries are like the lily, half in the seen world, and half in the unseen world, and by what we know of the seen we may judge of the unseen and our judgment may be correct. The agriculturist, the florist, the stock-raiser, and those who deal with the manifestations of nature in its annual or continuous productions, the chemist among the "elements," the physicians aiding the latent recuperative powers of nature, these are all students, more or less, of "the deep things of God," and co-workers with him, for the Father of all has reduced his work to the understandable, so that the children of the Father may commune in common language and work.

Now, in ascending to spiritual things the same general plan of thought can be depended on. There is the seen, the open and manifest; there is also the unseen, the motive, the power behind. There is nothing mysterious in human life and intelligence more than in "the grass that groweth up." There is no manifestation of human existence that cannot be judged of, understood, and manipulated by human knowledge and skill. Physical deformity or defect may often be corrected, so may also mental and moral deficiency. All the efforts of medical science is bent to the former, the vast organized effort for education for the latter, because we know that the spiritual and intangible is certainly and surely founded on the bodily and tangible. By the development of the muscles (the tangible) we develop the strength (the intangible); by the development of the brain and its convolutions (the bodily) we develop the mind (the moral and spiritual).

It has always been a whim of some so-called religions to assume a high superiority to their "material frames." Their "vile bodies" (mistranslated, by the way). They affect to be quite independent of anything in the way of "mortal coils," which they fain would have us believe are a real detriment to their better interests, and their main desire, so they say, is to be rid of them. Moreover, they condescend to pity the poor, grovelling materialist, who depends on his brains for his wits, and pose as those who have reached an altogether higher plane of spirituality in which time, space and sense have no existence. An article on this subject in a recent magazine, says: "They must rid themselves of the encumbrance of what is called common sense." By the way such people talk on paper and "in meeting" one would imagine that they would treat the carcasses they despise as the "mire of the street" and take delight in shuffling them by all means; but in the event of a mad dog or a wild steer on the rampage they will drag their animated corpses out of the way with a celerity that equals, or excels even, the activity of the poor materialist who believes that his "body is the temple of the living God."

There is nothing novel about this superstitious infatuation. Some of the modern religious fads, that pose as bran new, are really only the reductio ad absurdum of an error, that for extreme venerableness, reaches back through every known heathenism, and almost all creeds, to Rome, Greece, Egypt and Babylon and, in fact, for that matter, to Mother Eve's pet snake who, unfortunately, for her at least, gave her the impression that she couldn't die at all. Modern science—experimental science—has negatived the continuance of human life, the Bible has emphatically denied it, except by means and processes that it claims to show. But some want a religion that makes them pleased with themselves and "happy," and study is a difficult and laborious task in which one has to add "line upon line precept upon precept," fact upon fact, and even then, after much toil, sometimes the whole thing goes wrong or cross, and comes to pieces and it is so much easier to sit and be told something nice, that you have heard before, that you don't understand, and it might hurt you to try, so you can lean prayerfully on the pew in front and take a doze.

In regard to the promise of future life in the Bible there is no uncertain sound. The "spirit" of the future is "the body that God giveth," "like unto Christ's glorious body." Ghosts and haunts have no place in the theology of Moses and the Prophets, Christ or the Apostles. Nothing could be plainer than the story of the resurrection of Jesus. Nothing more convincing than the "handle me, and see," to doubting Thomas.

Modern science has once for all solved the problem of the manifestation of human action and intelligence, and has proved it, beyond a doubt, to be based on material structure. The Bible is the only source of information that bases our hope of future life in a material structure also, and has given us a pledge and a specimen in the person of "that man whom he hath ordained, whereof he hath given assurance unto all men in that he hath raised him from the dead." Modern science is a negative and the Bible is a positive, but they are a unit in this regard: Bible doctrine is that "there shall be a resurrection of the dead" not a change of the modus vivendi of the living. "If a man die, shall he live again?" was Job's query. If a man doesn't really die he never ceases to live, so that speaking of "living again," in such a case, is neither grammar nor sense. Moreover, what would one want with his old "coil" tacked on again after it has been once safely "shuffled," and so a celebrated Baltimore preacher, (Rev. R. Harcourt, D. D.) has informed us in a recent sermon that bodily resurrection is no longer to be preached as tenable, and that even a Bishop of the Methodist Church has come out in open denial thereof. "Consistency is a jewel."

J. F. GELLETLY.

The old query, What's in a name? has a peculiar significance to a man who has just put all his property in his wife's name to keep it from his creditors.

The Bible.

The Bible is one of the oldest books in existence. It has been translated from one language to another, it was finally translated into the English language by John Wycliffe about 1380.

The Bible is one of the greatest of all books, and it never becomes old from too much reading. Besides being the grandest and oldest of all books, it is one of the most abused of all books ever published. It has been the object of attack by infidels, such as Ingersol, Voltaire, Paine, Plato and many others, yet it still stands forth like a Gibraltar against opposition and will so long as time lasts.

From the Bible we learn about the creation of the world and of man, of his temptation by the devil, and on account of his disobedience was expelled from the garden of Eden and its fair bowers, nevermore to partake of its beauties and joys. But, he was told by the Creator, as a result of his disobedience, "Dust thou art and unto dust shalt thou return," and that he should earn his bread by the sweat of his brow.

Passing on from the scenes enacted in the Garden of Eden, which brought death, sickness and pain on all the human race, we go on to the history of the flood, as recorded in the 7th of Genesis. This is a sad account of the state of things that existed at that time. The wickedness of the people was so great that it repented God that he had made man, so, he made preparations and told Noah to build him an ark: for he alone was righteous before God. The record says, "And the Lord said, I will destroy man whom I have created from the face of the earth, both man and beast." Gen. vi 7. This was an unbelieving age. Noah pleaded with the people 120 years, and told them of a coming flood, but they would not believe him. We see a striking resemblance between the days of Noah and the present time. In the days before the flood they were eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage until Noah entered into the ark, and knew not until the flood came and took them all away, so shall also the coming of the Son of Man be." Matt. xxiv. 37, 38, 39.

Again, passing down the line from the flood we come to the book of Revelations where we read of a new heaven and a new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness, and we also read of the Garden of Eden which was forfeited by the disobedience of Adam, being restored and the blessed assurance that there shall be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying for all the former things have passed away.

Come, oh thou mighty Conqueror, and banish sin and death from our world.

JOHN A. DICKINSON.

Dear Restitution:

Reading in your columns of dear Brother Joslin's long illness, and knowing of a surety how feeble the dear wife and sister is: also knowing of the afflictions, sicknesses, severe trials and perplexities of other dear ones of the household, my heart was touched with a chord of sympathy to that degree I sat down and hastily penned the following. Letting my thoughts run at random, What a blessing and relief to know there is "no thought or device in the grave," whither we are all tending; and where the weary cease from troubling and are at rest. That "this life" (the promised life hoped for through faith) is "hid with Christ in God." And is not bestowed until he who is our life appears—making it so sure and certain. This "changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye" to the life eternal. To know sorrow no more; to die no more; no more cognizant of the things of this life. What a contrast, surely the "dead are blessed who die in the Lord." We cannot but cry out, Come Lord Jesus, come quickly. Only to be ready (the living ones) when he comes. To faithfully believe in the true God, for there is One who sits as God, saying that "he is God." He is worshiped too; his name is Leo—meaning "Lion" too. But he, who is the "Lion of the tribe of Judah," is coming, "For he that shall come, will come, and will not tarry." He is coming, "conquering and to conquer. It will then be proven that it is eternal life to know thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou has sent." "Then the five brethren who would not believe though one rose from the dead," and who have continued foolish; believing not, hence having no oil (knowledge) will go out to meet the Bridegroom, for the Messenger is to be sent to "prepare them for Shiloh." But before they can go and learn the "things concerning the name of Jesus, the door is shut." "O Virgin of Israel, turn again to these thy cities." How long wilt thou go about, O thou backsliding daughter? Behold! "For the Lord hath created a new thing in the earth." It was "necessary that the Word of God be first preached to thee;" but, Jehovah, hath chosen another virgin, who shall through the Holy Spirit power bring forth "One who will redeem thee." One who shall cause thee to confess that "I am the Lord who brought thee up out of Egypt." Who will again build thee, and thou shalt be built." O Virgin of Israel, thou shalt again be adorned with thy tabrets, and shalt go forth in the dances of them that make merry." Jer. xxxi. 1, 23. "Then will I make a new covenant with thee, through my Holy One: and through the Virgin Israel that I have adopted as my first-born, even Ephraim, my dear son. Then the stick of Japeth in the hand of Ephraim, and the stick of Judah (greatest) shall become one stick on the mountains of Israel, they shall no more be two nations (Jew and Gentile), neither shall they be divided into two separate kingdoms, any more at all. But the kingdom first offered to thee will then be restored to thee. Through him who was a stumbling stone and a Rock of offence. All honors and blessings through the first covenant will be granted unto thee, the new covenant in thy blood, is for all, for Jesus died "once for all." New to thee, because rejected when offered. Hence when the Messiah comes, thou wilt be found "O back-sliding daughter, foolish virgins," not to have believed all that is written in the Prophets and in the Psalms concerning me." Luke xxiv. 25; Matt. xxiii. 39. Oh! household of faith, rejoice in that ye have not believed in his name, have put him on, and all the wise virgins, and of them who shall have overcome all things, a crown will be bestowed entitling such to be rulers and reign with him, even Jesus Anointed. Who says he is coming quickly, he will not be afraid to come in haste, for his Bride, he says, "Will have made herself ready." "I will," he says, "meet her and take her to a place of safety." My waiting, loving bride, she hath loved me long and patiently, "because I first loved her." Dear sick, distressed ones (my husband and brother included—for since penning these lines, he was taken ill, and is now quite feeble, 24th ult) hold fast till he comes. May-haps you will needs not taste death. But whether sleeping or still waiting and watching, he knoweth and loveth thee. Let no man, let nothing take thy crown.

With love I am your Sister in the one hope of our calling,

MATILDA WOODBURY.

Dear Brother Underwood:

I would like to have you place this before your readers. If it is considered worthy a place in THE RESTITUTION, please insert it. "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of truth." 2 Tim. ii. 15. Now, we as teachers or preachers believe what is plainly spoken in the Bible, as coming from God, is the truth, and revealed truth, so belongs to us and our children. In the revelation which God gave to Jesus Christ we find these words. "These things saith the Amen, the faithful and true Witness, the beginning of the creation of God." Now, let us see if we can prove it by other Scriptures. "In the mouth of two or three witnesses every word will be established." so says the Word. "In whom we have redemption through his blood, the forgiveness of our sins: who is the image of the invisible God, the first-born of every creature, for by him were all things created, that are in heaven and that are in the earth, visible and invisible whether thrones, or dominions or principalities or powers, all things were created by him, and for him: and he is before all things, and by him all things consist, (arranged by his power)." Col. i. 14-19. And the Father says, "Thou Lord, in the beginning, hast laid down the foundation of the earth, and the heavens are the works of thine hands. They shall perish but thou remainest: and they all shall wax old as doth a garment; and as a vesture shalt thou fold them up and they shall be changed: but thou art the same and thy years shall not fail, but to which of the angels said he at any time, sit on my right hand until I make thine enemies thy footstool." Heb. i. 10-14. Again John says, "In the beginning was the Word and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. the same was in the beginning with God." Some object to this because he calls him God. Heb. i. 8. The Father calls him God; unto the Son he saith, "Thy throne, O God, is forever and ever, a sceptre of righteousness is the sceptre of thy kingdom, thou hast loved righteousness and hated iniquity, therefore God, even thy God, hath anointed thee with the oil of gladness above thy fellows." John says, "He was in the world: and the world was made by him, and the world did not know him." Jesus says, "Father glorify thou me with thine own self with the glory which I had with thee before the world was. When Jesus sent out his disciples to preach, when they came back, they told Him that even the devils were subject to them in his name, his answer was, "I saw Satan as lightning fall from heaven." In Rev. xii. 7-10, when there was war in heaven. Well, Christ I understand to be Michael; well, he might have seen him fall, no doubt he did, I firmly believe it. Paul to Cor. viii. 56, says there are many that are called gods, but to us there is but one God, the Father, of whom are all things, and we in him, and one Lord Jesus Christ, by whom are all things, and we by him. The Father originates or plans all things, Christ executes it: God's will. "My meat is to do my Father's will." The Apostle Paul writing to Timothy, says, "All Scripture given by inspiration to God, is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction," etc. I think the texts I have cited truly grand and glorious and are an honor to God, the Father and to his Son Jesus Christ. Paul puts them in the 1st chap. Col. Also, 1st of Heb. John the beloved disciples begins his gospel with the grandeur of Christ at the beginning of the world. When political men choose a man to elect to some important office, they look for one that has done some great deeds of importance and their great acts are heralded far and wide, why may not we speak of the great acts of our blessed Savior before he came born of Mary? Why not say and do as the Word says, "He was the first-born of every creature."

Submitted in love of the truth, the glorious gospel of Christ,

MRS. H. ISHAM.

Editor Restitution:

When we examine any "harmony of the gospels," we notice that some things are recorded by one writer, some by another, a full record seldom being given by either, or perhaps by all combined. This seems to be the case in Matthew, Mark and Luke's record of the prophecy on the Mount of Olives. Matt. xxiv., Mark xiii., Lu. xxi. Matthew records two distinct questions, 1st, "When shall these things be?" Namely, the destruction of the temple. 2nd, "What shall be the sign of thy coming and the end of the world?" The "coming" is doubtless that of Matt. xxiii. 39. The first question each writer records, and Luke gives the answer thus, "When ye shall see Jerusalem compassed with armies, then know that the desolation thereof is nigh." But Matthew and Mark seem to omit the answer to this question, they do not mention the destruction of the city, or the captivity into nations. If they wrote after the destruction, this might explain the omission. Luke also omits Matt. xxiv. 21, 28. Mark xiii. 19-22. After stating many things which are not signs, Matt. xxiv. 4-8. Mark xiii. 5-8, and foretelling the persecutions of Christians, Matt. xxiv. 9-13, Mark xiii. 9-13. Matthew and Mark proceed to answer the 2nd question, "What shall be the sign of thy coming?" Giving a series of signs which should all occur in one generation. The first sign being the preaching of the gospel in all the world. Matt. xxiv. 14; Mark xiii. 10. Then follows the "abomination of desolation spoken of by Daniel the prophet." Now, the abomination of desolation cannot be the event of Luke xxi. 20, for it is one of the signs of his coming, and it is an act of the little horn, a power whom Daniel by direct statement and by contemporary events more than twenty times locates at the time of the end, also by more than one hundred statements Daniel draws a picture of the little horn, which will not fit any king or power in the past, much less the "people," Dan. ix. 26, Deut. xxviii. 49-68, who destroyed the city with whom there was no king or prince. Luke does not mention the abomination of desolation by that name, but after foretelling the captivity of all nations, he refers to this event as the treading down of Jerusalem during the "times of the Gentiles." I believe this "times of the Gentiles" is not the "Christian dispensation," but a definite period during which the "sanctuary and host" will be "trodden under foot" by the little horn. Dan. vii. 25; viii. 9-13; xi. 31; xii. 6-13; 2 Thes. ii. 3, etc., etc. 2. Which precedes Israel's deliverance, when "the Lord will repent himself for his servants." The "great tribulation" of Matt. xxiv. 21, was not, I believe, the destruction of Jerusalem awful as that was, but is the "Jacob's trouble," Jer. xxx. 1-9; the "time of trouble," Dan. xii. 1; Rev. xii. 14, from which danger Christians were directed to flee to the mountains, but with far more haste and caution.

The above is offered for the consideration of any who, like the writer, have been unable to harmonize these records with themselves and with other Scripture.

A. S. CLOUGH.

A General Meeting.

We expect to pitch the Missouri and Kansas tent at Glen Elder, in Mitchell County, Kansas, July 22nd and remain there over three Sundays, and longer if necessary. It is desired and expected this will be made a general meeting for the brethren in Northern Central Kansas, not a State Conference, but a meeting for general consultation as to faith and interests. Preaching will be arranged for in the day and evening, and a program arranged for Bible readings and other exercises at other hours during the day. Bros. Oram, Kiggins, Thompson, Owens and others will be in attendance for speaking, and to add interest to the meetings. Brethren in reach of this meeting should prepare for it by arranging their worldly cares so that they can attend. Those who come to remain several days should bring some bedding with them, and if any have small living teats should bring them. Pasturage will be arranged free for all teams of those who drive through to the meeting.

G. M. MYERS.

I will be at Huron, Kansas, June 2 to 20; at Sycamore Springs, Kansas, June 20 to July 10.

Sin is selfishness boiled down. An ounce of it in heaven would corrupt the whole city. A little of it in a Christian will effect the whole character. It is the meanest kind of meanness. It is found in large quantities among Christian critics. Some churches need fifty-two consecutive sermons on this one theme.

These works are excellent for use by those who wish to do missionary labor, and we offer them at such a low price that they should be out in a short time. Bro. Jones had large editions of these tracts printed, and by dying suddenly, and his Widow being in feeble health, we have undertaken the task of selling them. Her income is quite limited, and all that can be given out of the sales goes to her after expenses are paid. When you buy these tracts you get a real thing the worth of your money, and also aid a worthy Sister, who will thank you for it.

Assorted package 30 cents per hundred Gospel of The Kingdom, alone 25 cents per hundred.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for consecration.

Called Aside.

"I have somewhat to say unto thee."

Called aside:
From the glad work of thy busy life,
From the world's ceaseless stir of care and strife,
Into the shadows by thy heavenly Guide.
For a brief space thou hast been called aside.

Lonely hours
Thou hast spent, weary, on a couch of pain,
Watching golden sunshine, fitful rain,
Hours whose end length only to him was known,
Who trod a sadder pathway, dark and lone.

Lord, said I
May not the little cup of suffering be
A loving one of blessing given to me?
The cup of chastening sent me from above
By Him who bore the cross whose name is Love?

Called aside!
Hast thou no memories of that "little while?"
No sweet remembrance of thy Father's smile?
No broken thoughts that wrapt thee in their hold,
Of him who did such grace and light unfold?

Called aside!
Perhaps into a desert garden dim,
Yet not alone, when thou hast been with him,
And heard his voice in sweetest accents say,
"Child, will thou not with me thus still hour stay?"

Called aside,
In hidden paths with Christ thy Lord to tread;
Deeper to drink of the sweet Fountain-head;
Closer to follow up with him to roam,
Nearer, perchance, to feel thy heavenly home.

Called aside!
Oh, know to be deeper grows with him alone,
In secret oft his deeper love is shown,
And learnt, in many an hour of dark distress,
Some rare, sweet lesson of his tenderness.

Called aside!
We thank thee for the stillness and the shade;
Thank thee for hidden paths thy love hath made;
And so that we have wept and watched with thee,
We thank thee for our dark Gethsemane.

Called aside!
Oh, restful thought—he doeth all things well.
Oh, blessed sense with Christ alone to dwell.
So, in the shadow of thy cross to hide,
We thank thee, Lord, to have been called aside.

What Was the World Created For?

We want to view Scripture in a literal sense in the discussion of our subject today. When couched in parabolic language, it is generally so stated, and we so understand it, but when given as a plain statement of facts we interpret it literally.

Were the popular theology of the day correct, the earth would seem to be designed as a sort of human incubator, so to speak, in which souls were born to be transported to fields of felicity in some "far away clime," or to eternal misery and woe in some locality, they know not where, as neither of the places have been discovered in earth's geography. But does the Bible support, or even hint at such an idea? Let us see. There does occur to our mind one expression that might seem a little in support of that theory; it is found in the 90th Psalm 10th verse. "The days of our years are three score years and ten; and if by reason of strength they be four score years, yet, is there strength, labor and sorrow; for it is soon cut off and we fly away."

We believe that God's Word is infallible, and in order for it to be so it must harmonize, and as this one passage stands alone in the sense in which it reads, and directly arrayed against a long list in the other line, we pause to consider if it cannot be harmonized, —if there might not be some error in the translation, which in a few instances does occur.

Let us look at the passage once more, and substitute the word pass for fly. "For it is soon cut off and we pass away." We think this no violence to God's Word, as it harmonizes beautifully with, or at least does not conflict with other positive declarations. As for instance Exodus xxxii. 13, "Remember Abraham, Isaac, and Israel, thy servants, to whom thou swearest by thine own self, and saidst unto them, I will multiply your seed as the stars of heaven, and all this land that I have spoken of will I give unto your seed, and they shall inherit it forever." "Shall inherit it forever," inherit what? The land be (God) had spoken of: could they, then inherit the land if they had flown away? Remember land is a part of this earth, not any other planet; true there may be, —and doubtless is—land on other planets beside the one called earth, but the earth is the one under consideration, and the one promised to the saints, as we shall see farther on. "What man is he that feareth the Lord? him shall he teach in the way that he shall choose. His soul shall dwell at ease; and his seed shall inherit the earth." Psa. xxv. 12, 13. Here we have a promise still broader than the one to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, theirs as quoted from Exodus, was land, a particular portion of earth's geography, but here the faithful are to inherit the whole earth. "Cease from anger, and forsake wrath: fret not thyself in any wise to do evil. For evildoers shall be cut off: but those that wait upon the Lord, they shall inherit the earth. For yet a little while, and the wicked shall not be: yea, thou shalt diligently consider his place, and it shall not be. But the meek shall inherit the earth; and shall delight themselves in the abundance of peace." Psa. xxxvii. 8-11. Here we see, then, that the earth is to be inherited by those that wait upon the Lord,—that is—by God's faithful servants, and that the place where wickedness now holds high carnival, will be thoroughly purged of evildoers.

In Matt. v. 5, Jesus, in his sermon on the Mount, repeats the expression of the Psalmist, and says, "The meek shall inherit the earth," and not only that, "but shall delight themselves in the abundance of peace." The same localities and the same peoples, who have suffered from the ravages of war, and evil-doers, shall delight themselves in the abundance of peace. Many more passages might be cited to substantiate the doctrine of earth's inheritance, and indeed it will crop out in the references I shall give in support of other phases of my subject.

In Isaiah xlv. 18, we have a direct and positive declaration, "For thus saith the Lord that created the heavens; God himself that formed the earth and made it; he hath established it, he created it not in vain, he formed it to be inhabited: I am the Lord; and there is none else."

In Genesis first and second chapters we have the account of the creation of the earth with its animal and vegetable kingdoms. In the first chapter, commencing with the 26th verse we read, "And God said, Let us make man in our image, after our likeness: and let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over the cattle, and over all the earth, and over every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth. So God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him; male and female created he them. And God blessed them, and God said unto them, Be fruitful, and multiply, and replenish the earth, and subdue it: and have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over every living thing that moveth upon the earth. And God said, Behold, I have given you every herb bearing seed, which is upon the face of all the earth, and every tree, in the which is the fruit of a tree yielding seed; to you it shall be for meat. And to every beast of the earth, and to every fowl of the air, and to every thing that creepeth upon the earth, wherein there is life, I have given every green herb for meat: and it was so. And God saw every thing that he had made, and, behold, it was very good. And the evening and the morning were the sixth day." Here we learn that man is given dominion over the earth and all the animal creation. And is instructed to multiply and replenish the earth and subdue it, cultivate and work out the wild nature in it, as you would subdue any wild, unruly animal; bring the whole earth into the same high state of cultivation, as the garden in which he was placed. In the second chapter we have a more detailed account of creation. And in the 8th verse it says, "And the Lord God planted a garden eastward in Eden, and there he put the man whom he had formed."

It does not follow in our subject to give a detailed account of the transgression. We will endeavor to show the design of God in the creation. In the food for both man and beast it was purely vegetable, no flesh food is mentioned. See first chapter 29th and 30th verses. "And God said, Behold I have given you every herb bearing seed which is upon the face of all the earth, and every tree in which is the fruit of a tree yielding seed; to you it shall be for meat. And to every beast of the earth, and to every fowl of the air, and to every thing that creepeth upon the earth, wherein there is life, I have given every green herb for meat: and it was so."

As God then has created the earth with its vegetable creation to support the animal and the human, has given man,—the crowning work of creation, —dominion over all the works of his hands, so far as pertains to the earth, without a promise or even a hint of ever removing him to any other clime, at any time or in any condition, but instructs him in his control of his earthly creation, and his obedience and consequence of disobedience, is it not fair to presume that it was the design of the all-wise Creator that this earth should be his everlasting abode? He was created in connection with his other works of creation; he was created from the elements of which the earth is composed; he was created and constituted to live off the products of the earth, and by the composition of the air and the elements surrounding it. But we do not have to rely upon inference. The basis of our subject is, he created it to be inhabited, without any promise or reference to its inhabitants ever being removed.

Besides the quotations already cited, we find that all the promises to God's faithful ones, of all ages, find their fulfillment here on the earth. The land of Canaan was promised to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, not for a brief period, but for an everlasting possession. The term land, as mentioned in the Bible, is not used in connection with any planet but earth, and beside, if it were, the promise to Abraham was the land which he beheld. Gen. 14-15, "And the Lord said unto Abram, after that Lot was separated from him, Lift up thine eyes, and look from the place where thou art northward, and southward, and eastward, and westward. For all the land which thou seest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed forever." Also in Gen. xv. 18, its boundaries are given. "In the same day the Lord made a covenant with Abram, saying, Unto thy seed have I given this land, from the river of Egypt unto the great river, the river Euphrates."

The eleventh chapter of Hebrews is a beautiful lesson on faith, showing how Abel, Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, and all the ancient worthies possessed great faith, but died without receiving the things promised, verse 13, "These all died in faith, not having received the promises, but having seen them afar off, and were persuaded of them, and embraced them, and confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims on the earth." Verses 29-30, "And these all having obtained a good report through faith, received not the the promise: God having provided some better thing for us, that they without us should not be made perfect."

What will be the situation when these promises are fulfilled, let us turn to Isaiah 60th chapter and read, "Arise, shine; for thy light is come, and the glory of the Lord is risen upon thee. For, behold, the darkness shall cover the earth, and gross darkness the people: but the Lord shall arise upon thee, and his glory shall be seen upon thee. And the Gentiles shall come to thy light, and kings to the brightness of thy rising. Lift up thine eyes round about, and see: all they gather themselves together, they come to thee: thy sons shall come from far, and thy daughters shall be nursed at thy side. Then thou shalt see, and flow together, and thine heart shall fear, and be enlarged; because the abundance of the sea shall be converted unto thee, the forces of the Gentiles shall come unto thee. The multitude of camels shall cover thee, the dromedaries of Midian and Ephah; all they from Sheba shall come: they shall bring gold and incense; and they shall shew forth the praises of the Lord. All the flocks of Kedar shall be gathered together unto thee, the rams of Nebaioth shall minister unto thee: they shall come up with acceptance on mine altar, and I will glory the house of my glory. Who are these that fly as a cloud, and as the doves to their windows? Surely the isles shall wait for me, and the ships of Tarshish first, to bring thy sons from far, their silver and their gold with them, unto the name of the Lord thy God, and to the Holy One of Israel, because he hath glorified thee. And the sons of strangers shall build up thy walls, and their kings shall minister unto thee: for in my wrath I smote thee, but in my favor have I had mercy on thee. Therefore thy gates shall be open continually; they shall not be shut day nor night; that men may bring unto thee the forces of the Gentiles, and that their kings may be brought. For the nation and kingdom that will not serve thee shall perish; yea, those nations shall be utterly wasted. The glory of Lebanon shall come unto thee, the pine tree, and the box together, to beautify the place of my sanctuary; and I will make the place of my feet glorious. The sons also of them that afflicted thee shall come bending unto thee; and all they that despised thee shall bow down at the soles of thy feet: and they shall call thee, The City of the Lord, The Zion of the Holy One of Israel. Whereas thou hast been forsaken and hated, so that no man went through thee, I will make thee an eternal excellency, a joy of many generations. Thou shalt also suck the milk of the Gentiles, and suck the breast of kings: and thou shalt know that I the Lord am thy Savior and thy Redeemer, the Mighty One of Jacob. For brass I will bring gold, and for iron I will bring silver, and for wood brass, and for stones iron: I will also make thy officers peace, and thine exactors righteousness. Violence shall no more be heard in thy land, wasting nor destruction within thy borders; but thou shalt call thy walls Salvation, and thy gates Praise. The sun shall be no more thy light by day; neither for brightness shall the moon give light unto thee: but the Lord shall be unto thee an everlasting light, and thy God thy glory. Thy sun shall no more go down; neither shall thy moon withdraw itself: for the Lord shall be thine everlasting light, and the days of thy mourning shall be ended. Thy people also shall be all righteous: they shall inherit the land for ever, the branch of my planting, the work of my hands, that I may be glorified. A little one shall become a thousand, and a small one a strong nation: I thee Lord will hasten it in his time."

Also Micah iv. 1 to 7, "But in the last days it shall come to pass, that the mountain of the house of the Lord shall be established in the top of the mountains, and it shall be exalted above the hills; and people shall flow unto it. And many nations shall come, and say, Come, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, and to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths; for the law shall go forth of Zion, and the Word of the Lord from Jerusalem. And he shall judge among many people, and rebuke strong nations afar off; and they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruninghooks: nation shall not lift up a sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more. But they shall sit every man under his own vine and under his fig tree; and none shall make them afraid: for the mouth of the Lord of hosts hath spoken it. For all people will walk every one in the name of his God, and we will walk in the name of the Lord our God for ever and ever. In that day, saith the Lord, will I assemble her that halteth, and I will gather her that is driven out, and her that I have afflicted. And I will make her that halted a remnant, and her that was cast far off a strong nation: and the Lord shall reign over them in Mount Zion from henceforth, even forever." When is this prophecy to be fulfilled? In the last days.

Also Isaiah lxv. 17-25, "For, behold, I create new heavens and a new earth: and the former shall not be remembered, nor come into mind. But be ye glad and rejoice for ever in that which I create: for, behold, I create Jerusalem a rejoicing, and her people a joy. And I will rejoice in Jerusalem, and joy in my people: and the voice of weeping shall be no more heard in her, nor the voice of crying. There shall be no more thence an infant of days, nor an old man that hath not filled his days: for the child shall die an hundred years old; but the sinner being an hundred years old shall be accursed. And they shall build houses, and inhabit them; and they shall plant vineyards, and eat the fruit of them. They shall not build, and another inhabit; they shall not plant, and another eat: for as the days of a tree are the days of my people, and mine elect shall long enjoy the work of their hands. They shall not labor in vain, nor bring forth for trouble; for they are the seed of the blessed of the Lord, and their offspring with them. And it shall come to pass, that before they call, I will answer; and while they are yet speaking, I will hear. The wolf and the lamb shall feed together, and the lion shall eat straw like the bullock; and dust shall be the serpent's meat. They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain, saith the Lord."

These prophecies, we believe, were intended to be understood in a literal sense, there is no figurative expression about them, earth means just what its name implies, land means a portion of earth, sorrow and mourning, desolation and death have been, and are in the earth and land, but they shall be forever removed and in their stead shall be joy and peace, eternal life and everlasting possessions.

We have referred in our remarks, to the first two chapters of the Bible, and will now conclude with the last two, beginning at the 23rd verse of the 21st chapter. The Revelator has been describing the Holy City, the New Jerusalem, as to the manner of its appearance, its size and the material of which it was composed, and adds, "And the city had no need of the sun, neither of the moon to shine in it: for the glory of God did lighten it, and the Lamb is the light thereof. And the nations of them which are saved shall walk in the light of it: and the kings of the earth do bring their glory and honor into it, and the gates of it shall not be shut at all by day; for there shall be no night there. And they shall bring the glory and honor of the nations into it. And there shall in no wise enter into it anything that defileth, neither whatsoever worketh abomination, or maketh a lie; but they which are written in the Lamb's Book of Life. And he showed me a pure river of water of life, clear as crystal, proceeding out of the throne of God and of the Lamb. In the midst of the street of it, and on either side of the river, was there the tree of life, which bare twelve manner of fruits, and yielded her fruit every month; and the leaves of the tree were for the healing of the nations. And there shall be no more curse; but the throne of God and of the Lamb shall be in it; and his servants shall serve him; and they shall see his face; and his name shall be in their foreheads. And there shall be no night there: and they need no candle, neither light of the sun; for the Lord God giveth them light: and they shall reign forever and ever. And he said unto me, These sayings are faithful and true; and the Lord God of the holy prophets sent his angel to show unto his servants the things which must shortly be done. Behold, I come quickly; blessed is he that keepeth the sayings of the prophecy of this book. And I John saw these things, and heard them, and when I had heard and seen, I fell down to worship before the feet of the angel which showed me these things. Then saith he unto me, See thou do it not; for I am thy fellowservant, and of thy brethren the prophets, and of them which keep the sayings of this book: worship God. And he saith unto me, Seal not the sayings of the prophecy of this book; for the time is at hand. He that is unjust, let him be unjust still: and he which is filthy, let him be filthy still: and he that is righteous, let him be righteous still; and he that is holy, let him be holy still. And, behold, I come quickly; and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be. I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end, the first and the last. Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city. For without are dogs, and sorcerers, and whoremongers, and murderers, and idolaters, and whosoever loveth and maketh a lie. I Jesus have sent mine angel to testify these things in the churches. I am the root and the offspring of David, and the bright and morning star. And the Spirit and the bride say Come. And let him that heareth say Come. And let him that is athirst come. And whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely. For I testify unto every man that heareth the words of the prophecy of this book, If any man shall add unto these things, God shall add unto him the plagues that are written in this book: and if any man shall take away from the words of the book of this prophecy, God shall take away his part out of the book of life, and out of the holy city, and from the things which are written in this book. He which testifieth these things saith, Surely, I come quickly. Amen. Even so, come, Lord Jesus. The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Amen."

When these things shall have come then will the prayer Jesus taught his disciples to pray, have been realized, "Thy Kingdom Come, Thy will be done in earth as in heaven." Then will the kingdom of God have come.

The Discipline of Life.

Sooner or later we find out that life is not a holiday, but a discipline. Earlier or later we all discover that the world is not a playground. It is quite clear God means it for a school. The moment we forget that the puzzle of life begins. We try to play in school; the Master does not mind that so much for his own sake, for he likes to see his children happy, but in our playing we neglect our lessons. We do not see how much there is to learn, and we do not care. But our Master cares. He has a perfectly overpowering and inexplicable solicitude for our education; and because he loves us, he comes into the school sometimes and speaks to us. He may speak very softly and gently, or very loudly. Sometimes a look is enough, and we understand it, like Peter, and go at once and weep bitterly. Sometimes the voice is like a thunder-clap startling a summer night. But one thing we may be sure of, the task he sets us in is never measured by our delinquency. The discipline may seem far less than our desert, or even to our eye ten times more. But it is not measured by these—it is measured by God's solicitude for our progress; measured solely by God's love; measured solely that the scholar may be better educated when he arrives at his Father. The discipline of life is a preparation for meeting the Father. When we arrive there to behold his beauty, we must have the educated eye, and that must be trained here. We must become so pure in heart—and it needs much practice—that we shall see God. That explains life—God puts man in the crucible and makes him pure by fire.—Henry Drummond.

Notwithstanding the great sale of Bibles, tracts, and other Christian literature during the past years in China, running up to hundreds of thousands, and even millions, the sale is constantly increasing. China is open to the gospel, and the great want now, is money to send the many who are waiting to enter this great open field.

"The Age to Come."

The editor of a western magazine, who was years ago prominently connected with the Martyrian, published by H. H. Hacking, of Ontario, if our memory serves us correctly, and who advocated the "Age to Come," recently said that:—

"There was no Israel of Promise outside of the Children of Promise in Christ; no arrangement for a yet future national restoration of the fleshly house of Israel and calling beyond the second advent. In short, that all the preachings of a future dispensation of grace after the Lord comes, in what is called "The to Come," is only another gospel, a delusion, a snare, and contrary to the whole apostolic arrangement....."

In a private letter to us Brother C. W. Tompkins comments upon the above as follows In the next paragraph, which we take the liberty of publishing for the benefit of our readers. He says:—

"How is that for one who considers himself a Royal Ambassador? He paved the way for this reckless assertion by saying that 'the new covenant has been made and written in the minds and hearts of all those under its provisions! This statement is designedly indefinite in order to obscure the thought of the revealer. The Record affirms who are to be under its provisions, namely, The House of Israel and the House of Judah. Then why does not the editor abide by the prophetic utterances?

The terms of the covenant teach that a system of instruction will be necessary in order to a knowledge of the divine will on the part of Israel and Judah. Then, all shall know the Lord, and hence the exercise of mind and heart of a people all righteous, destined to inherit the land in the age to the glory of Yahweh. Who will affirm that the House of Israel is other than the ten tribes who revolted from Rehoboam, son of Solomon, and continued a separate nation until the siege of Samaria, when they were carried away in the 9th year of Hoseah's reign?

The records affirm that the House of Judah is none other than that tribe with whom the Sceptre was to continue, as it had been written: "The Sceptre shall not depart from Judah nor a Law-Giver from between his feet forever, because Shiloh will come, and to him will the people be gathered." Isa. xl. 10, 12. The Sceptre did depart from Judah in the 11th year of Zedekiah—consult Ezek. xxi. 25-27. The thrice repeated overthrow is found only here. It is an intensive noun, meaning "complete" or "utter overthrow. The succeeding context of Jer. xxxi. 31, is very strongly put, and no possible contingency can prevent the fulfillment of the provisions of this covenant. The comparison is made with the fixed, permanent things of nature—the sun, the moon and stars of light; the earth whose foundations hath been the succession of the seasons; the alternations of day and night, and the unchangeableness of the divine purpose, all, all combine to fortify the statement that the nation of Israel will continue forever. It is not forever in a limited sense, or an age with defined limitations, but it is, always, "All the days," while the ordinances of heaven and earth continue. The perpetuity of the throne of David. The synchronism is indisputable when alongside of these we place the testimony on record with reference to the holy priesthood of Aaron, Phinees and Zadok, generation after generation for a perpetual anointing of priesthood. To speak disparagingly of the fleshly House of Israel is to in truth and in fact there is no other, not ever was and as far as the records affirm, there never will be.

DISPARAGE THE DIVINE TESTIMONY;

And, although "the children of Israel shall abide many days without a king and without a prince and without a sacrifice, and without an altar and without a priesthood, and without Urim and Thummim afterwards (after the 2400 days of Dan. viii. 14) they shall return and shall seek the Lord their God and David their king," etc Hos. iii. 4, 5. And compare Ez. xxxvii. 24, 26.

3rd Assertion: "That there was no Israel of promise outside of the children of promise in Christ." No proof is offered, so I may offset this by asserting that there is no Israel of promise but that which is outside the children of promise in Christ. Besides the proof for the assertion will be forthcoming.

The children of promise are the Isaacs, having Sarah the Royal princess for their mother, all "to the manor born" "heirs of God and joint-heirs with Christ"—"we, as Isaac was are children of the promise" "Begotten not according to the flesh, but according to the Spirit." Having which was counted to him for justification—"Elect according to the foreknowledge of God through sanctification of spirit and belief of truth." "If you belong to Christ, then you are Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise." Isreal has Hagar for their mother, the covenant from Sinai—children born into servitude, and outside of the heirship inhering in Isaac, inherited from his mother. They are all children of Abraham, but not all children of the promise. The Divine utterance is "In Isaac shall thy seed be called." whose "polity is from heaven—"The upper Jerusalem." The Isaacs as the lords of the realm: The Hagarites being related to the Isaacs as the Servant Hagar was related to Sarah. Inferior in nature in rank and standing in the divine polity. To discredit the records, or disparage them in any way by any system of interpretation, or spiritualize them so as to subvert the teaching by any man or set of men is very inexcusable in this day of enlightened opportunities.

THERE IS NO UNCERTAINTY,

as to what the Word of God teaches, provided we comply with the apostolic injunction, to "rightly divide the Word of truth."

4th, it requires but little skill, and less intelligence to affirm that the preaching of a future dispensation of grace after the Lord comes....."is a delusion, a snare, and contrary to the apostolic arrangement."

It would be well for self-constituted religious teachers who go forth before they are sent, to find out exactly what the "apostolic arrangement" was and is. Neither less nor more than the Divine arrangement, as proclaimed, authorized and commanded by before and after his ascension. This, in order to the separation of a people from the mass of mankind for the name of Deity, and an heirship to all the things which this name represents. And of the Anointed Jesus it is affirmed," He hath by inheritance obtained a more excellent name than the Elohim.

This "Apostolic arrangement" produces the Isaacs. The rulers of the "habitable about to come," whether thrones, lordships or governments. This arrangement does not produce, or cause to spring forth in this age, subject peoples, nations and tongues. We have apostolic authority, and apostolic application of prophecy with reference to the matter under consideration, and denied by this self-appointed "Ambassador." It seems as if Acts xv. 15, 16, 17, was placed on record on purpose to confound and condemn such men; it does that directly and effectually, and not only so, but also in the plainest terms announces a dispensation of grace, embracing all nations to the utmost boundaries of earth, taking humanity as it finds them. "After these things and I will build again "the tabernacle of David which has fallen down: and "I will build again its ruins and set it up" for a purpose: "So that the rest or residue of the men might seek the Lord"—as it is written Zech. viii. 21, 22. Companies will be formed in different places to go up to Jerusalem to conciliate the face of the Lord; and so it is affirmed of foreign nations—"Let us go speedily to pray before the Lord and to seek the Lord of hosts: I will go also," says this one and that one. "Yea, many peoples and powerful nations shall come to seek the Lord of hosts in Jerusalem, and to pray before the Lord," Zech. ii. 11, and compare references. And this too after the "return." This arrangement is a large affair, a gracious provision of the merciful and long-suffering heavenly Father, in the unfolding process of the dispensation of the fulness of times, the completion of which will have brought all the things under one head—Christ, by whom all will be finally placed together. Eph. i. 10; Col. i. 17 Compare Is. lxvi, 19. Return to our proof passage: verse 17 affirms the end in view, "So that the residue of the men may seek the Lord," after the returning. Or to use his own terms, "After the Advent," yes, after the rebuilding of the tabernacle of David. Is. xv. 5. Here is where and when and none need be misled. An opportunity is offered these men to obtain the Divine favor, by "turning to the Lord, and seeking his face," or favor. It is for this, for so the testimony affirms. And further: "And all the Gentiles upon my name hath been called." Another reading is

I WILL RETURN,

"WHO CALL MY NAME UPON THEMSELVES."

These statements are emphasized by a "Thus saith the Lord," "Who hath magnified his Word and his name above all things." Psa. cxxxviii. 2. The writer of "Acts" quotes from the lxx. which differs in one particular from the Hebrew text according to the Massoretic pointing of the vowel sounds in modern copies of the Hebrew Bible. Therefore we accept the apostolic quotation from Amos ix. 12, and give him credit for knowing exactly what the true reading was, and the object he had in view in making the quotation. And if any one deny the certainty of a future dispensation of grace for a purpose, in the face of these Scripture statements the sooner such an one changes his way of thinking the sooner he will think in harmony with the testimony of the records. Again: The proclamation of the Messenger in

MID-HEAVEN

Apocalypse xiv. 6—what is it, if not a message of grace to the nations, in full view of the approaching "hour of judgment?" And what, if they, or, any of them obey the command to worship God? A message peculiar to this age, then read chap. xv. 4, "Because thy judgments are made manifest."

The Bond of Completeness.

The bond of completeness divine,
With its centre of infinite love
Never faileth: Pure, holy its shrine—
God's compact of love from above.
The bond of completeness was ratified,
With the blood that flowed from the Crucified.

The bond of completeness, entwine
Its leaflets of love round each soul
Of those who abide in the Vine:
Love's heaven nebuing the whole.
The bond of completeness was ratified,
With the blood that flowed from the Crucified.

The bond of completeness, unite
"The sheep in the fold" in one fold:
Though diverse in language and rite
The links of love bind new pure gold.
The bond of completeness was ratified,
With the blood that flowed from the Crucified.

The bond of completeness, infold
The chosen, beloved of God
In realms of heavenly mold.
Safe under love's sceptre and rod.
The bond of completeness was ratified,
With the blood that flowed from the Crucified.

The bond of completeness, diffuse
Love's fragrance; God's holy perfume:
Its salute with love's fullness infuse,
Their hearts with sacred bath at thine.
The bond of completeness was ratified
With the blood that flowed from the Crucified.

The bond of completeness, put on;
Love's gracious affections esteem,
Above all things, ever, anon:
Then brightly love's jewels will gleam:
The bond of completeness was ratified,
With the blood that flowed from the Crucified.

In the bonds of completeness abide,
Till love's glorious goal is won;
Let peace of the Anointed preside.
Abide in the Father and Son.
The bond of completeness was ratified,
With the blood that flowed from the Crucified.

Conference Report.

The Annual Conference of the Church of God in Michigan convened as per announcement. Every officer except one was present. Elder L. C. Chase came Thursday evening. A good interest was manifested from the first, although the weather was very warm and oppressive, still it did not prevent the dear ones from coming, and each came not only to get good, but to give of their abundance spiritually.

The plan laid down by the programme was followed as near as possible, all with few exceptions taking the parts assigned them. Ministers present were Elder L. C. Chase, Robbin, Mich., Brother F. L. Austin, Rensselaer, Ind., O. R. L. Crozier, Ann Arbor, Mich., Bro. F. Barton, Battle Creek, Mich., B. W. and M. A. Woodward, Dutton, Mich.

Saturday 10.00 A. M. business meeting. Minutes of the last meeting read and accepted. The following were elected as officers for the ensuing year: President, H. C. Hammond. Vice President L. C. Chase, Secretary E. Jackman, Treasurer, A. K. Richardson, Evangelist, B. W. and M. A. Woodward.

Evangelist's report: B. W. Woodward preached 71 sermons and 3 funerals, married 3 couples. M. A. Woodwood preached 68 sermons. Evangelist work, Millbrook, 21 days, Watson 9 days, preached 3 funeral sermons, married one couple.

The treasurer reported that after paying all expenses for the year that there is now in the treasury $162.81 cents. Moved and carried that the treasurer's report be accepted. Money received for the year (with what was on hand) from the "Ladies' Tithing Society" $94.92. The following solicitors were appointed from each church: Dutton and Fisher, Sister Brewer, Watson, Sister Grant, Brady, Bro. Worthington, Grand Rapids, Sister Jackman, Millbrook, Sister Lake, Raisin, Sister West, Coats Grove, Sister Nona Coats, Byron Center, Sister Moses. O. R. L. Crozier was appointed Bible Missionary for the State of Michigan. Elder L. C. Chase did the most of the speaking, presenting the Bible truths in language that completely entranced the audience. After the Sunday morning service the Lord's Supper was administered by Brothers Chase and Crozier.

There were no additions, but some were almost persuaded to come, and we who had were strengthened and encouraged to press toward the high calling of God in Christ Jesus. The attendance was good all through and all seemed to be benefitted by this gathering together. The meeting came to a close by singing those beautiful words, "God be with you till we meet again."

May God bless you all, is my prayer,

REPORT OF LADIES' TITHING SOCIETY.

We are very much encouraged with the quarter's work of the society. The meeting was called to order by our President Sister Emily Barnum; she had provided several selections from religious literature, with Bible texts which were passed around, each member at roll call responding to name by reading the slip they held, and those who were not members read the texts as they were called by number. Sister Nichols, of Minneapolis, Minn., read "The Deacon's Tenth" which was not only well rendered, but very convincing. Six new names were added to our list, and $56.40 were paid into the treasury. Since last October Bro. O. R. L. Crozier, of Ann Arbor, was engaged by the society to hold gospel Bible readings in the city of Grand Rapids. $6.00 was appropriated to send THE RESTITUTION to four different names. The good work is prospering, and from a small beginning much good has and will be accomplished, and we would recommend this system to our sisters in other states. There are eleven names on our roll who did not respond at this meeting, either in person or by letter, to those let me say you can send your offerings to either the secretary or treasurer.—which will answer the question often asked, "How shall we get our money to the Conference if we cannot attend?" If you have not been able to save more than 25 cents, remember it is the Lord's work and he will give you credit for every penny you willingly gave him. We have not long to work, let us be earnest in this matter. A call has come for Bible reading in Kalamazoo. It would be a desirable location, and if all do what they can we may yet see many more coming to the Lord. Let us double our efforts this year, we can do more than we think. Every dollar you receive, sisters, drop ten cents into the Lord's cup or box, and see how fast it counts up. Then when there is a call for help in gospel work any where, you can have the pleasure of responding.

May God help us to be willing to sacrifice something for him,

M. A. WOODWARD, Sec.

THE DUTIES OF PARENTS TO THEIR CHILDREN IN TEACHING THEM THE TRUTH.

I thought when Sister Woodward assigned me this subject,—Alas! how can I write on it? I, who have no children of my own, and who knows so little of the methods adopted at the present time in the homes of our brethren, as to the training of their children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord." Then I thought of the little ones who have at different times come under our roof-tree, some of whom have obeyed the Lord, and are earnest workers for the Master, and of the loved and loving band, who used together, Bibles in hand, around my father's fireside in the mornings long ago, and I felt that perhaps after all, I could say something that might be helpful.

Over and over from Genesis to Revelations, we read the Holy Book, and kneeling, were taught to lift our young hearts in prayer to God. We did not skip the hard words, nor the genealogical tables. We learned that God was the Creator and Upholder of all things, and that wherever we went, his eyes were upon us, beholding our ways.

There was no studied effort made, or set lessons given, but it all came in naturally, as if it were a matter of course; a part and parcel of life, that it was impossible to leave out, other things might be omitted, but this never. If the dear father was gone, then the praying mother took the lead, and if both were away the reading and prayer went on. And I—where would I be now, if in early years, those precious hours had not been set apart to teach me the literature of heaven? Where would I be? God only knows. A godless unbeliever may-hap, ruining, instead of saving souls! How thankful I am that God in his great goodness gave me a truly Christian father and mother! For I cannot believe that the parents of children, who set apart no time, and make no effort to teach them the inestimable truths of the gospel, care much about these truths themselves, no matter how loud a profession they may make. If the secular education is allowed to monopolize all the time and take precedence of the schooling in morality, and virtue, and tender reverence for the Book of books, with a faith "grounded and settled" in the gospel of repentance, reformation, obedience, and hope in a coming kingdom, then, is there more love for the opinion and ways of the world, than there is for God, or else a dangerous state of carelessness and indifference as to the well-being of their children and their duty toward them.

Did I not read somewhere not long ago, that there were two hundred and fifty or more, deserted churches in the State of Maine alone? And among these, several Advent churches? And are not complaints constantly coming to our ears, that just such a state of affairs exists all over the country—that churches in city and in the rural districts have for the most part, either slim or no attendance? This is a dreadful state of affairs, in a land whose people profess that the God of the Bible is their God. What is the cause of this wholesale desertion of the altars of the Lord?

Does not the sin lie in great part at the doors of the fathers and mothers, who have not taught their children to love the Bible and to abide by its teachings? Most certainly it does. In the desire to give their offspring beautiful clothes, a good education and a stylish setting out, there is no time left to especial training of the little ones, in the wisdom wherein lies the secret spring to all of life's true happiness,—the peace and greatness of our country,—and the coming glories of an everlasting kingdom. "Better than rubies," I should think it was! There is nothing that is at all comparable in worth to a knowledge of the truth of God.

I saw a young bride moving to her new home the other day, and noted with what pride and pleasure she gathered together the beautiful treasures that were to adorn it, and I thought, "these things are lovely, and my dear Mary will enjoy them, but if she but knew it, she is taking a more priceless jewel with her, than any or all of these, and that is her Christian character and faith in the Father above."

Do you love the Bible, my brother, my sister? Then will you set apart some portion of each day's time to teach its truths to your children? If you do not, just as certain as you live, will they or their descendants, forsake the house of prayer and, joining the great army of unbelievers and anarchists, will seek to blot the Book and its teachings from the face of the earth, and to destroy all true political and religious freedom. It is not enough that you send or take your children to Sunday school, and go with them to church, though this may result in their conversion, they need more than this; they need to feel that father and mother have an affectionate interest in their spiritual welfare,—an interest that is constant and deathless, and that father and mother care more about having them win citizenship in Abraham's country, and a station of honor in the cabinet of Jesus, than to have them graduate from the highest schools of the land, the sons to become judges and senators; the daughters, the wives of governors, presidents and foreign ministers. They need to be shown by interested and loving teaching from day to day the importance of the special truths that we hold in relation to the nature and destiny of man, the resurrection of the dead, the coming of Jesus; the renewing of the earth, the blessed reign of peace, and the extinction of evil: and how, by believing these things and by coming into relationship with Jesus, through the ordinance of baptism, and by living thereafter a pure and holy life, they may lay hold of everlasting existence.

It is false doctrine, that has brought into the world, its long array of suffering and crime and death. The doctrine of immortal being, independent of God, taught by Satan in the garden of Eden lies at the foundation of it all. We want our little ones to be sure of this.

Let us go to Genesis and see how it was. Listen, you dear boys and girls! The beautiful woman that God had made, and given to Adam to help him in all the work of life, was walking in their pretty garden-home one day, when who met the chief of the fallen angels. He had sinned, and had, with his companions, lost the world that was once his own. He knows he can never have it again, but he thinks if he can but get these new people to believe and mind him, he can be the head-ruler here, just as he wanted to be in the far-off planet he came from.

He intends to deceive the woman by leaving out just a little bit from the commandment of the Lord. Read it all over, children, will you? See, this is what God said, "And the Lord God commanded the man, saying of every tree of the garden, thou mayest freely eat! But of the tree of knowledge of good and evil, Thou shalt not eat of it: for in the day thou eatest thereof, thou shalt surely (certainly, wholly) die!" Satan takes up the first verse; he says nothing about the second one. Do you little people ever do that way; tell mamma and papa part of the truth, but not the whole? Do you know of anybody who does that way?

But we will go on, "And he said unto the woman, Yea, hath God said, Ye shall not eat of every tree of the garden?" which would be the same as saying, taking off the interrogatory form, "Yea, God hath said, Ye shall eat of every tree of the garden," that is, he has not only given you permission to eat of the fruit of them all, but has commanded you to do so! Was not that an awful thing for Satan to do, children? It was "taking from the Word of the Lord," and we know what will become of those who do this, whether they be angels or men. But Eve knew he was misquoting, for she replied.

"We may eat of the fruit of the trees of the garden, but of the fruit of the tree that is in the midst of the garden, God hath said, Ye shall not eat of it, neither shall ye touch it, lest ye die." Then what do you suppose Satan did? He said flatly, "This is not true, and God know - it is not true!" "For God doth know that in the day ye eat thereof then, your eyes shall be opened and ye shall be as gods, knowing good and evil." "Ye shall not surely (certainly or wholly) die!" "For God doth know, ye shall be as gods." and "therefore it is not true that every whit that makes you what you are, will die."—is what deceived Eve, she knew that the great Creator, and the pure, high angels who lived with him and helped him carry on the work of the universe, were deathless beings and Satan, said if she ate of the mysterious tree, she would be "as the gods" and this meant of course that she would become deathless like them. If God knew this, it must be so, and it was not therefore true, that she would surely die, though sheets of the tree some way of escape would be made, there was promise of this in the words of her new acquaintance. And Eve was curious, she was not satisfied with the great knowledge that God was giving her and her husband through his angelic teachers,—letters and writing and book-making—astronomy, picture-making in the heavens, geography, geometry, botany, zoology etc., she wanted to know more she wanted to have her eyes opened to know the good and the evil beings, just as God did. She wanted to become acquainted with these evil angels, and get messages from them, and she never could do this, unless she ate of the forbidden tree.

Alas for Eve, and alas for the world! what woe has the desire to know and communicate with wicked angels, brought upon the human race! For Eve believing Satan's lie, that even in disobedience she would be made immortal, took of the forbidden fruit and "gave also to her husband and he did eat."

After a time Cain was born and I think he must have believed that wicked story of Satan's, and offered sacrifices to him, for he made a martyr of his brother Abel, who was a worshiper of God; and his children seemed to think they could disobey God, and be just as wicked as they pleased, worshiping and talking with demons, as all heathen people and spiritualists do now, and yet be saved.

They held false doctrine, and false doctrine made them bad: it made them the servants of the bad man, and because of this, the whole world except Noah and his family had to be drowned. They believed that men lived on, even when they seemed to die, and that they "became as gods;" so, they made gods, out of dead men, and prayed to them as we pray to God. They did this a little after the flood, and that makes us think they did the same thing before. And it was not long until they made up their minds that every body else must believe that men are immortal by birth, and must worship at the altars of the demons, or be "cast into the burning fiery furnace," "be sawn asunder," or be drowned!

All the wicked nations of the world from that day to this, have believed that their dead were alive, and that they could talk with them and with the good and bad spirits. No nations are good that are without the Bible. So it is false doctrine God has set us against. And we are to "come off more than conquerors, through him that hath loved us and hath washed us in his own blood!" Think of it, my brother, my sister! We are but a feeble band, and the hosts of Satan are counted by the million, yet with the trumpets of God in our hands, marching around the strong Jericho walls of evil, the allotted number of times, they are by and by to fall. The worship of demons is to go, the character of the modern is to be sheathed, the arm of the oppressor is to be broken, the work of the evil ones is to be undone. Fighting against intemperance, fraud, gambling, profanity, uncleanness, and all manner of wickedness, we are to win at last. For all that offends is to be gathered out of our Father's kingdom. The offense and the offenders alike must go, for "the knowledge and glory of the Lord are to cover the earth as the waters cover the sea."

You want your children to do their part in bringing about this mighty result; you want them to stand with the conquerors when the battle is won. You want them to be crowned by the hands of Jesus. Then do your duty at once. Do not let the little ones think "it makes no difference what they believe." Do not leave them to go to Ingersoll, or "Confucius, or Buddha," or to the Spiritualism of Heathendom. "Put the Bible into the characters of your children, while they are plastic."

Religion can be made "an heir-loom from generation to generation" if you go at it right. God insists that you teach the children his Word; can aught but blessing come from doing as he says? Then let the children "with open face, behold as in a glass, the glory of the Lord, and be changed into the same image from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord!" And may God "count you worthy of this calling and fulfill all the good pleasure of his goodness, and the work of faith with power." That the name of our Lord Jesus Christ may be glorified in you, and ye in him. Amen!

THE USE AND ABUSE OF OUR RELIGIOUS LITERATURE.

To the dear ones of like precious faith at Dutton Conference, greeting:

While visiting one day, a few weeks ago, with Sister Woodward and telling her some of my experiences and disappointments in giving out RESTITUTIONS and works of faith, such as Wiley Jones' "Ten Sermons on the Gospel of the Kingdom," etc., she said to me "can't you write a paper to be read at the Conference, On the use and abuse of our Religious Literature?" I told her no; that I did not know enough, and surely she ought to have known that, without my telling her. I gave no serious thought to the matter, and was simply horrified on reading the programme. At first I thought, I can't write anything, then I said I will just write and tell them, that nine times out of ten, we might as well put papers and tracts in the fire as to give them to people who believe in natural immortality. It is just "casting pearls before swine." But a voice seemed to speak to me, Careful, careful, my child, how can you, who were so slow to accept the truth, be so impatient with the same fault in others, and quickly like a panoramic view, the year that I so defiantly and persistently fought against accepting these precious truths, and clung so tenaciously to the traditions of men arose before me, and with shame and confusion I cried, Father, forgive me, I will humbly confess my own treatment of these dear silent teachers, hoping and praying that it will help to encourage some brother or sister, who like myself had become discouraged at the slowness of the seed sown to take root.

Until coming to Millbrook about 15 years ago, I had never heard of such a thing as conditional immortality, and supposed of course we all had immortal souls. From my earliest recollection I had been taught, that my dear mother, who died at my birth, was my guardian angel, and that she constantly watched over me. But one day, while calling at Sister West's, I mentioned the fact that most of my dearest relatives and friends were in heaven, little dreaming that she would doubt my assertion. But she very politely informed me that people did not go to heaven when they died, and quoted several passages of Scripture in proof that the dead know not anything. Oh, wasn't I disgusted, the very idea that she should think she could make me believe such stuff. Wasn't my father a Baptist minister, and didn't he know what he was talking about? The friends here were very patient with me, and would bring me RESTITUTIONS and books and tracts on the faith once delivered to the saints. I always tried to accept them politely, but do you think I read them, not a bit of it, unless they would ask me to read some special article, then I just read that one thing, and nothing more. How well I remember the first sermon I heard Bro. Woodward preach. His text was, "God hath chosen the poor of this world, rich in faith, heirs of the kingdom." Well, I didn't know or understand a thing he was talking about, and didn't believe he knew himself, and I thought, I won't go to hear him again. The next day he preached a funeral sermon. Mother Becker called for me to go, so I went, and I thought that sermon was worse yet. But as the months grew into years, my heart grew troubled and doubts would arise, and sometimes I would think, can it be possible that these loved ones who gave me my early training and whose daily lives were patterns of Christian integrity, and who so fearlessly entered the valley of the shadow of death, could have been in error?

You dear ones, who have never had a struggle with that monstrous Satanic lie, know nothing how hard it is to give up. One day, as I sat down to rock my baby to sleep, I took up a RESTITUTION just because there was nothing else at hand to read, and my eyes fell on an article addressed to the lonely, weary ones and signed Mary A. Woodward, and as I read those sweet, soothing words, they seemed like a direct message from the "Father of light in whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning." From that time, I became an earnest searcher for the truth, and with the help and teaching of Brother and Sister Woodward, and the friends here, I at last saw the light of divine truth, and realized that my faith and baptism were as filthy rags, and Brother Woodward gladly helped me to take on the all-saving name since then I have tried to do what I could to bring others to a saving knowledge of the truth; so dear ones, although we can not all, "speak like angels or preach like Paul," there are none of us so poor that we can not send out a few of these silent yet eloquent preachers such as the books and tracts from the pens of Bros. Joblin, and Wiley Jones, and many others, and the dear RESTITUTION. It seems to me we can't do them a greater wrong or treat them in a more abusive way than to carefully fold them, to become moth-eaten, is it not hiding a light under a bushel? Oh, let us much rather promiscuously distribute them, breathing a prayer that the seed sown may not fall on barren ground, and dear ones, let us not get discouraged, although we do not see any immediate good coming from our efforts, let us still continue to cast our bread upon the waters and leaving the finding again to the Master's own good time.

Your Sister in Christ,
MARGUERITE HOLLEY.

MEMORIAL SERVICE FOR SISTER MARGARET WOODWORD.

A long life well lived is a contribution of great value to mankind. With rare exceptions it implies good mental and physical vigor, and illustrates and recommends those principles and habits on which health and longevity depend. It is, as a rule, an object lesson of steady, patient, intelligent, useful, long-continued and successful industry. Such was the life of Sister Margaret Woodward. Her 91 years were built along Christian lines. She was of good parentage. Several generations before her were well educated and intensely Christian. Her father was for many years a devoted and successful Methodist preacher. She was about 40 years a member of the Methodist Church and 45 years an Adventist. Looking through the vista of 45 past years I see across the way, crowning that beautiful home site, a halo of glory, the residence of consecrated lives, consecrated to Jesus Christ, and re-consecrated to his soon coming in the effective and glorious splendor of his kingly power. It was an intelligent hope, a family hope—they were united in it—parents and children studied the sacred oracles together. They studied them in the simplicity of earnest faith. They had volunteered into the great and brilliant cloud of witnesses whose lives have built a broad and bright pathway of light all the way down (or up) from the closed portals of Eden.

The wholesome influences of good sense and safe judgment went forth thence spontaneously, not obtrusively, a blessing to the neighborhood and to the causes and enterprises embraced in abroad Christian sympathy. She became a member and stockholder in the association that publishes THE RESTITUTION, and used to attend the general meetings of the Church in Indiana. Everywhere she was a leader among leaders, of ripe opinions in advance thought, and "ready to give a reason" in good language and a modest spirit.

When the need came she was among the first to advise the building of a church here and put about six hundred dollars into the very appropriate edifice we now occupy, besides repainting it about two years ago.

A mother in Israel, we mourn her loss. Yet we are grateful for so many years of duty faithfully done; for her prudent counsels; for her noble courage; for the steady, even temper of an unwavering trust in God; for the even fresh and glowing interest in the study of his Word; for her clear perception that the Church is under the direct government of Jesus Christ through his Word; for her constant refusal to recognize any intermediate authority limiting freedom to study the Scriptures and believe, confess, publish and enjoy the truth therein found; for her hearty fellowship for all who love our Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity; for her tender sympathy, wise advice and helpful prayers for the weak and erring; for the faithfulness of her warnings and reproofs; for her generous encouragement and aid of the gospel work in all its branches; and that her Christian life has been so public and so many have been inspired by her godly example.

If not the first, she was among the first—and the most active and successful of them—to break the Judaizing spell that settled upon and handicapped the gospel of the kingdom in this neighborhood. It was her family—and she was the Christian mainspring in the family (as every mother ought to be, and generally is)—it was her family (chiefly herself and her sons Benjamin and Albura) that brought me here about 40 years ago with a free Bible, with the New Testament as the law of the Christian Church, to preach Christ as the Christian Lawgiver, to defend his supreme authority, to declare and prove the Sinai law fulfilled and ended by limitation, that the "like" but greater than Moses had come and "must be heard in all things whatsoever he shall say," and to maintain his higher "law of liberty." It was the intelligent fidelity to Christ of Sister Woodward and her family through many years of arduous struggle and patient teaching that brought deliverance from that iron rule and pious sophistry and fanaticism that thought it owned everything in Gaines and the towns adjoining. We thank God that the truth has prevailed, and that Sister Woodward lived to enjoy the glorious triumph many years. She rests from her labors. We are reaping their fruits. The victories won by the grace of God in the old school house across the road, in and near the school house east, and in the school house west, broke the power of the Battle Creek Vision tyranny. Its Almoners have followed the Mormons westward. We hold the field. The gravity of the stake was understood. It was not a neighborhood, or a township, or a state; it was Christian liberty, the free Bible, the gospel of the kingdom in all lands—truth against fraud. The master of the visions commanded in person and summoned unconditionally in his own tent, in the presence of his chief lieutenants. The battle can never be renewed on the old issues.

In my wide acquaintance with earnest Bible students I have found none more carefully progressive and consistent than was Sister Woodward or more tactful in contending for the faith, or more skilful in seasoning knowledge with charity. She has fought a good fight, she has finished her course, she has kept the faith; henceforth there is laid up for her a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge, shall give her at his appearing and his kingdom.

O. R. L. CROZIER.

Almost the nineteenth century long was Grandma Woodward's life. While there may be mourning for the death that needs must be, at evening time it is still light; like the setting of the sun she has left a trail of glory on our clouds, for hers was a life of confidence in the living God, and of hope for immortality.

The vicissitudes of her life were many. In early girlhood a trusting wife, in her ninety-second year she lay down to await the resurrection of the just. Who shall write the record of the time between? There are so many beautiful things going on in this world of which the public, which responds so nobly to what it sees as great deeds knows so little, and so many of these beautiful things are the loving work of woman's hands. What knows the great world of the life of the pioneer? What knows it of the loneliness, the weary waitings, the hard work, the brave holding on to duty, of the woman, who, like Margaret Woodward, stands by her husband struggling to build up a home and free institutions in the wilderness? She toiled, but there was love to make toil a pleasure. She sorrowed, and O, what sorrow was that of the motherhood that gave her children's lives to a country struggling for existence and freedom? The shadows and trials of a long widowhood were hers. And O, what memories, during those years after she had laid away her loved ones, and waited the coming of the King! But over the storms of life the rainbow of Christian faith shone, promise of blessed re-unions, promise of glories which "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard," and which have not "entered into the heart of man."

Calm, strong, courageous was the trust in everlasting truth, which illuminated her life: her religion was of the sturdy, steady, rock-built stamp. One may imagine her heart-language to have been,

Nothing shall we reap my soul to save;
Firm as the hills my faith shall be.
For truth I have I have sought in prayer,
The Christ I love hath forgiven my sin;
I have built on the Rock and have housed me there,
And the winds may storm and the tides roll in.
Rains may dash from the darkened skies,
Lightnings flash to blind my eyes;
The earth beneath my feet may quake,
Mountains may threaten destruction dire;
But naught shall my foundation shake,
And my house is safe from floods and fire.

Grandma Woodward was a good woman, and to be a good woman in God's estimate of human character is a great attainment. It is not alone in the glare of publicity that heroism is born. Few are the opportunities for what the world calls great deeds. It is largely in quiet lives that God builds his heroes; those who by faithful living, without a thought of what the world thinks develops within themselves, by God's grace, and live out the "beauty of holiness."

Difficulties overcome create strength. A woman's sorrows borne silently, in the trust that clings to the kind hand of eternal God, uplifts all womankind, and it is even glorified by one true, faithful woman's life lived in the lowliest vale. Success in the highest degree, is the making the most possible of one's self, and doing in the best way the work which God has given one to do; and in this light, it was a successful life which has closed.

Brother, sister,
Toiler, lift up thine eyes to see
The heavy heads of golden grain,
Which, on the white hills, wait for thee;
In tears go forth to reap again.

Put in thy sickle; gather truth
From every harvest-field that waves;
Or glean thy sheaves like gentle Ruth,
Though weeping over new-made graves.

For truth is good. Though strange and dim
May be the ways of God to man,
The Bethlehem gleaners work for him,
In carrying out his mighty plan.

MRS. M. P. A. CROZIER.

"I Am With You Alway."

'Tis sweet to read the promise he hath given
To cheer our hearts along the pilgrim way.
But sweeter far to know it—blest infulment.
And humbly walk with Jesus day by day.

To walk with Jesus! who shall tell the gladness
Of those whose daily life the Master shares?
Whose every path is full of heavenly grace
And rest within their burdens and their cares.

And this is mine—the joy of knowing Jesus,
And walking in the sunlight of his smile;
Mine is the peace that floweth like a river,
Deeper and broader growing all the while.

No more a wayfaring guest my Savior cometh,
To bless me but awhile and then depart;
But with me now he evermore abideth,
And with his own abiding presence fills my heart.

Sometimes, when busy with my daily labor,
Yet thinking of the nightly love he bears,
Some precious promise unto me giveth,
Outread, perhaps, but never mine before.

I know not why he gives his choicest blessings
To one so undeserving of his love;
But, since he calls, with willing feet I hasten,
Content and glad to hear him say, "Well done."

Content to walk in paths of his own choosing,
Since he will hold my hand along the way;
Content to know that I am journeying homeward,
And brighter grows the pilgrim's path each day.

Home Missions.

Home Missions were the subject of report and discussion in the General Assembly yesterday, and in the Free Church Assembly on Monday. The existence of Home Missions is an acknowledgement of the failure of the Church. The classes who are now outside of the Church are the very classes for whom Christianity was originally intended. At least the majority of them are of "the poor;" and it was the distinctive mark of the new gospel that it was to them that it was preached. According to certain old records it was preached to them on the hillsides, by the seaside, or wherever they were to be found. They did not get it in the synagogue. When the Preacher preached there, the authorities of the Church wanted to hurl him down from a hill-top. The modern Church is grown effete like the ancient synagogue. It has ceased, at any rate in this country, to preach the gospel to the poor, if indeed it has any longer a gospel to preach, which becomes every day more doubtful. It preaches or performs "services" to well-dressed people, the majority of whom belong to the thriving middle classes. It cannot say in proof of the origin which it claims that "to the poor the gospel is preached." Dr. Donald Macleod and Dr. Marshall Lang are men of the highest excellence in the Church, and they are among the earnest advocates of Home Missions; but they do not preach the gospel to the poor. They preach admirable sermons to the well-to-do. The Church, it must be admitted, is making efforts of a kind to reach the poor; but Lord Balfour of Burleigh, looking at the matter with his practical business eye, seems to have seen at least one wrong way in which it goes to work. It sends to the poor, not its men of great gifts and power, but raw youths, divinity students, inferior agents called city missionaries, Bible-women, parish sisters, and the like. Lord Balfour suggests that the Church should set apart for this work men whose gifts have been proved by their services, such men, let us say, as Dr. Marshall and Dr. Donald Macleod in the Church of Scotland, and Dr. Whyte and Dr. Ross Taylor in the Free Church. We do not know what the Assembly thought of the suggestion, but this may be said—that till the foremost men in our churches set themselves personally to the work of carrying the gospel to the poor, all their talk about Home Missions, all their missionary machinery, all the Rev. Robert Howie's statistics, and even his new churches will be utterly ineffectual.

Much is said about the tremendous difficulty of getting back the multitude who have lapsed from church attendance. It is not very likely that the Church that was not able to keep them will be able to bring them back. Much is said also about the changed conditions of life, especially the great concentration of population in our large towns. It is undeniable that the massing of these vast multitudes in the cities creates the difficult task for the Church, but if it is put for word exceptionally great excusing the loss by the Church of its hold upon these people, how does the Church explain the equally complete loss of its hold upon the ploughmen and other working men in the country? The fact is that the Church is failing alike both where the country is being depopulated and where the city is being overcrowded. No change in our social conditions will explain the failure. Most of the devices for reaching those who are called the lapsed masses are mere symptoms of helplessness. The new churches which Dr. Story and Dr. Howie are getting up at great expense will be just as useless as the half-filled old ones. If they cannot get the people to walk a mile to an old church, they will not entice them into a new one at their doors. Mission halls and missionaries and Bible-women and all the machinery of Home Missions are but contrivances for beating the air. What our churches will not see is that there is something radically wrong with themselves. They say the fault is with the people, with their conditions of life, their poverty, their drinking habits, their amusements—with anything, in short, except with the Churches and their clergy. It may be suggested that there are reasons on the side of the Church why it is losing its hold on the poor. One is that church-going is too expensive for a great many people. Another is that inferior agents are employed to reach the poor. Another seems to be that the Church has no longer a gospel for the poor. Dr. Macleod has observed that the things the Church has to say to working men are not the things they care to hear about. Time was when they would discuss predestination and other religious doctrines; now they discuss social questions. If we are not mistaken, social questions have more affinity with the original gospel than some weighty doctrines of so-called theology. The Church might as well talk to working men about Old Age Pensions as about some of the things it does talk about. But the change noted by Dr. Macleod is a real and important change, and the cause of it might be worth searching out. The doctrine of predestination has lost its charm; so have Bunyan and Baxter, except for the student of pure literature. Many old things seem to have lost their meaning for the people of these days, but it is a question whether it is not the Church that has lost the power of interpreting them. Be that as it may, the Church may take it as truth that if it would discover the reason why it is losing its hold on the people it need not look outside itself. —*Selected from Edinburgh Scotsman by J. Family Reunion.

One of the largest and most pleasant family re-unions ever held in Miami County was that which was held at the farm home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Foore, in Allen township, Sunday. It was a re-uniting for a day of the Foore and Friend families, and four generations were represented, eighty persons in all. The relatives present from a distance were John Foore, wife and daughter, Mrs. Herod, of Parsons, Kansas; Edward Crist, wife, daughter and two sons, of Rawson, O.; Mr. and Mrs. Will Crist, of Lima, O.; Isaiah Foore and wife, of Napoleon, O.; Mrs. Sawyers and sister, of Columbus, O.; Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Crist, of Tipton, Ind.; Ambrose Alspach and family, of Rochester, and Mr. and Mrs. B. E. Huffman and two daughters, of Peru, Ind.

It was a most happy time in the lives of the members of this large family circle to be thus privilged to assemble together once more and hold communion with one another, and to recall pleasant memories of the long ago. When all had arrived and before dinner was announced Rev. Foore, of Kansas, delivered a touching sermon to his relatives who were seated in the shade in the yard near the house. When the time for the great feast arrived as many of the relatives as could be accommodated at one time were invited into the large basement of the house. There they beheld two long tables upon which were spread such a dinner as only farmers' wives know how to prepare. The tables were spread for the third time before all were regaled with what they pronounced one of the best dinners they ever sat down to. Mr. and Mrs. Henry Foore are noted for their hospitality and they fairly outdid themselves on this occasion.

In the afternoon the relatives grouped themselves in the yard and had their pictures taken. This being done the older Foores, consisting of five brothers, John, Henry, David, Isaiah and William and their wives formed a group and had their pictures taken. The third group was composed of the three Friend sisters, Mrs. John Foore, Mrs. Henry Foore and Mrs. Edward Crist. It was late in the day when the guests began to depart for their respective homes, many of them residing in the vicinity of the place where the re-union was held. It was a day never to be forgotten by those who were there. Other re-unions have been held by the Foore and Friend families, but this is said to be the best of them all.

Among those present was W. A. Woodring, of the Peru Evening Journal. Mr. Woodring's parents were special friends of the Foores, and about thirty years ago moved to Kansas in wagons with John Foore and family. Mr. Woodring was then a boy and accompanied his parents to the west. Rev. Foore and family have lived in Kansas ever since their removal from Miami County, with the exception of three years, which they spent in Arizona and California.—Peru Sentinel.

Obituary.

L. H. Dolph died at McBride, Mich., on May 16th, 1899. Brother Dolph learned the truth from the lips of Sister Levi Boice, now of Champlain, Ill. My husband and myself had been at McBride holding meetings and he merely became inquisitive about the differences in religious belief at first, and coming frequently to Brother Boice's home, they began at the foundation and taught him, and when at last he saw the truth it was like a great burst of glory to him. We all sat talking together in the spring of 1892, when he burst into tears, for some time he wept, at last exclaiming, "Sister Woodward, is it possible 'Old Dolph' (as he was in the habit of calling himself,) can be saved? can God love me?" We assured him of the promise of "Whosoever will," might receive that blessed life, and he exclaimed "I will," and the following Sunday the Elder helped him to put on Christ.

We clipped the following from the local paper:—"Mr. Dolph was a member of the Second Advent Church, experiencing religion in 1892 at a series of meeting conducted by Elder Woodward, of Dutton, Mich. Mr. Dolph has been a patient sufferer for years and uncomplainingly bore his sufferings from the dread disease consumption, nothing but an iron constitution has kept him with us so long. In more ways than one Mr. Dolph's life should prove an inspiration to the young men of today. True as steel to his friends, fearless in speaking for justice and humanity, aiding in every way the downcast and afflicted, he has always tried to make others happy by whom he was surrounded. His sun has not set in clouds of darkness, but gone down cheerfully in a clear firmament, lighted by the glory of God. The funeral was held Friday from the M. E. Church, and was largely attended. Rev. A. C. Parsons of Stanton, preached an eloquent sermon his text being from 2 Tim. "I have fought a good fight; I have finished my course, I have kept the faith. Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness which the Lord the righteous Judge shall give me at that day." It was his last wish that some of our brethren might attend his funeral services, and sing at least one sentiment of his heart; but [illegible] He also yet will. God grant we may meet him in the Sweet Bye-and-Bye.

M. A. WOODWARD.

Mary A. Boice was born March 23, 1833, in Windham, Ohio. Was married to Judson Boice, Oct. 20, 1853. Brother Boice fell asleep in May 1879. For twenty years Sister Boice has remained a widow, living and dying in the same house where they had reared their children, and enjoyed each others society, bid a God-speed to each of the children in turn, as they had gone out into the world to make for themselves a home. Five little ones came into the home nest, all growing into manhood and womanhood. The only daughter, Ida, sleeps with her father and mother. The sons, James C. Clinton S. Levi A. and William N. were all permitted to gather in their Mother's room and hear her parting words. When she knew that her days were numbered, she said, "I have only one desire now, and I am all ready to sleep. I wish to live to see all my boys once more." Her wish was granted, she remarked so many times, "It seems so good to see you all again."

Sister Boice was baptised May 23, 1858, at Jamestown, Mich. She lived a consistent Christian life, clinging to the blessed promises of God. So patient, so quiet, so long. She folded her hands for her sweet sleep, May 20th, 1899. Leaving besides her five sons, twelve grand-children, two great-grand-children, with many other relatives and friends to think of her patient, suffering life: for she died with consumption, and emulate her sweet Christian character. The following verses were found among her papers, evidently written by and for herself.

Fold the hands on the pulseless bosom,
That in life was rarely still,
And with fragrant bud and blossom
Light the gloom, death is so chill.

Hopeful, firm and persevering,
All her pilgrim journey through,
Never care nor danger fearing,
Doing what she found to do.

Christ will open death's dark portal
That holds her like a captive bound,
Then all glorious and immortal
With the saints shall she be found.

We spoke to a full house, from Psa. cxvi. 15. Expecting to meet dear Sister Boice at the resurrection morn, we committed her sacred dust to the Lords keeping; for she sleeps in Jesus.

M. A. WOODWARD.

Ira L. Lanphear went to sleep in Jesus, at his home, near Azusa, Cal., on the 20th of April 1899, after a long illness of bladder trouble. He was born in St. Lawrence Co., New York., and when quite young his father died, and his mother and family moved to Illinois where she soon died. He then lived with an older brother. In 1868 he married Miss Sarah F. Jennings of Delaware, Ohio. They remained in Illinois for a few years and then moved to Sedgwick Co., Kansas, and from there they moved to Los Angeles, Cal. and lived there until a little over a year ago, when they moved to Azusa, where he died. He had been a Christian for many years but had not seen the fulness of God's plan of salvation in the restitution of all things, and the conditional immortality of the soul until about ten or eleven years ago, and ever since that time I do not think there are many who were greater students of the Bible than he was. After he lost his health he was not confined to his bed but very little, and he was always studying to learn for himself, and trying to get some one out of error, into the truth, by writing letters to them. He did not seem to care to converse about much else except the gospel, and his hope was bright until the last. He said, "I will not have to be in the grave long," and the last words he said were, "Jesus, blessed Jesus." He was a very kind and loving husband and father. His wife, two daughters and two sons are still living. He took THE RESTITUTION, for many years and liked it very much.

Brother Willoughby and Brother Gibson spoke a few words of comfort to the family and many friends that were gathered there, a few appropriate songs were selected, and he was laid to rest in Azusa Valley Cemetery until Jesus comes to call his own from the grave.

His sorrowing daughter.

MRS. MARY L. BAILIE.

DEDICATED TO MRS. S. J. LANPHEAR, ON THE DEATH OF HER HUSBAND, BY MRS. L. H. VROMAN.

"But I would not have you to be ignorant brethren, concerning them which are asleep, that ye sorrow not, as others which have no hope for if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him." 1 Thess. iv. 13, 14.

Blessed words to you my Sister,
In this hour of direst grief;
Surely they will give you comfort,
In them you will find relief.

Though your loved one now is resting,
Jesus came his life to save;
Angels have him in their keeping;
He'll be summoned from the grave.

Long you've trod life's path together;
Each the other's burden bore;
Now he's calmly, sweetly sleeping;
You will hear his voice no more

Till God's voice shall pierce the caverns,
In the sea and in the land,
And the dead shall hear the summons,
And before the Lord shall stand.

Then you'll grasp his hand in gladness,
On that bright, eternal shore,
And you'll roam the fields Elysian,
To be parted never more.

"I come quickly," Jesus said it,
And behold I make things new;
Lift your head, look up, dear sister,
For the time is almost due.

Death itself will then be vanquished,
And its author shall be slain.
Sound it out, ye nations hear it!
Jesus, Conqueror, comes to reign!

I record the death of our sister, Jennie Hodg, who fell asleep on June 3, 1899, at her home in Hot Springs Co., Ark., surrounded by her husband, children and friends. She was taken first with la grippe, which terminated in pneumonia, which after a long and serious illness, resulted in her death. Sister Hodg was a loving wife, a devoted mother, a kind friend, and a consistent Christian, always ready to give an answer for the hope that was in her. She was a constant reader of God's Word, and came to a knowledge of the truth by diligent study, embracing the truth as it is in Christ Jesus. She united with the Church of God at Mount Pleasant, about twenty years ago, and lived in triumph of a living faith, died believing in the promises made to the fathers, that the Seed of David should sit upon his throne and rule the world in righteousness. Believing these things she fell asleep in Christ to await the first resurrection, earnestly looking for the blessed hope of his appearing. How can we mourn for such an one? But, oh, how we miss her loving words and Christian council, how we sympathize with her dear family. Children, there will be a grand re-union if you will only follow her example by walking in the footsteps of our Lord and Master, and when the earth is restored to its Edenic state, we shall meet our loved ones, where all these pangs of sorrow and heartaches are forgotten, and we shall live forever in the presence of the Lord, enjoying the full and delightful fruit of our labor, immortality without sickness, sorrow, pain or death. Oh, what a glorious hope. Then sorrow not husband, children, friends, it is only a little while until we shall meet our Sister.

Sleep on Sister, take thy rest,
Until the Lord calls for the blest;
It is a sorrowful thing to part,
Yes, it almost breaks the heart;
But we know the Lord will come,
And take his faithful servants home.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Report.

Editor Restitution:

Following is a report of the work that has been going on in Oregon, Ill., since the purchase of the church here in the early part of the year. Early in May Bro. D. M. Hudler came to preach for us and we held a series of meetings lasting through two weeks and over three Sundays. Considering the bad weather (rain nearly every Sunday of the time) the attendance was all that we could desire. On one occasion there was not room to seat all that came. The doctrines of the kingdom were new to many who heard and the truth was listened to eagerly by them. Bro. Hudler has sown the seed. We now wait for the harvest. O may we find many honest hearts! By a certain class, ridiculous seems to be the worst weapon they can use against us. To such conduct we can only say "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do." Meetings have not been held regularly up to the present time and we hope to have preaching service frequently. A Sunday school has been organized and we hope to build up a good work by means of it. There are several earnest workers and it is the experience of the writer that service conscientously performed by those who are armed with the Sword of the Spirit must count for the Master. As a result of the work done, three were baptized into the faith once delivered to the saints, for the remission of sins. These were Mrs. Nellie Lindsay, Claude T. Morris and Mrs. Lizzie Moore. There have been other results which human minds cannot measure.

I wish to speak at this time of the expressions of brotherly love that have come particularly from the churches at Antioch, Adeline, Lanark and Dixon. Many of the brethren at these places have aided us financially. Without this aid we could not at this time have instituted a church here. Our numbers are few and none of us wealthy, but we had faith to believe that if the brethren knew the conditions existing here, help would be forth-coming. The brethren from Antioch and Adeline attended services frequently during the meetings and did much to encourage us. It is our desire to have a band of watchers here all of which shall have their lamps trimmed and burning with plenty of oil in the lamps. Keep us in mind in your prayers. No one knows better what we will have to pass through with than those of you who have passed through it. We look forward with joy to the soon coming of the King. Let our works be in accordance with our faith.

Your Brother in the one faith,

S. J. LINDSAY.

Chovevi Zion Association.

The central committee of Chovevi Zion Associations, at Paris, have laid before them the claims to support of the colony of Machanopim in Galilee.

The colonists already on the land are experienced agriculturists from Galicia, and to these are to be added colonists from Jerusalem and Safed. The Galician Jews have bought this land from Baron Edmond de Rothschild, and have themselves provided 40,000 francs towards the purchase and installation. A further sum of 40,000 francs is now required to provide suitable stables, houses, etc. The advantage of having Jews as agriculturalists in Palestine is now universally accepted, and the results of the prudent and gradual development of the country as carried on up to the present, have been such as to encourage a further extension of the work."

An earnest appeal is made to all who take an interest in the welfare of the land and people of Israel, to contribute towards this work. Donations may be sent to the officers of the association, 11 Bevis Marks, London, E. C. and will be thankfully acknowledged. There is evidently a great shaking up of the dry bones, and our readers know what this portends.

The Peace Conference.

The assembling of the Peace Conference is said by the Jewish Chronicle to be "probably the greatest event in contemporary European history," and the editor of Glad Tidings, commenting upon the same says the proceedings, which are being conducted in private, are expected to be of a very protracted nature. To facilitate the work, three committees have been formed of the delegates, two of which are divided into two sections. The first committee is considering the question of disarmament; the second the laws of warfare; and the third mediation and arbitration.

"It is useless to speculate as to what the result may be, but students of prophecy will await it with interest. It is clear from even the human standpoint that there are too many conflicting interests among the nations to expect a lasting peace. It would not be surprising, however, if as a result, a world-wide "peace and safety," cry should arise; but that would not deceive those who understand what is revealed in the Scriptures regarding God's purpose with the nations. The pride of man must be humbled and the nations purified by the storm of divine judgment to fit them for being subjects of the Prince of Peace. After they acknowledge that God is supreme, and must be obeyed, they will learn of him from his appointed King; then peace will flow like a river and righteousness like a mighty stream, when God's way is known upon earth, his saving health among all nations."

The Lord's Supper.

AN ANSWER FOR R. W. C.

We are in receipt of your favor and haste to reply, realizing as we do the gravity of the situation, and at the same time sympathizing with your longings for religious association and fellowship.

The last line of your letter: "Yours in the Abrahamic faith," inspires me with hope that we shall not write in vain. It rings of the true metal, and we pray the God of Abraham to give us clear perceptions of the truth, that we may write only as the oracles of God speak.

You say that at the present time, you are the only baptized believer in the county, the only other one being temporarily absent. This means, among other things, that God for the time has but one witness in all that county. It means in connection with other statements you make, that there are BAPTIZED UNBELIEVERS in your county, which is, if possible, a more melancholy fact than that there is but one witness for God there. It also means that there are communities there which call themselves churches, of various denominations. As one having the faith of Abraham, and, in the nature of things, also the hope of Abraham, you also know that there is absolutely

NO OTHER FAITH OR HOPE.

All having that faith and hope belong to the Church which is the Body, or the Congregation which belongs to the Anointed Jesus. Each member of that Body has been called out of Gentile darkness into the marvelous light of the glad tidings from God. And, negatively, those not having been thus called, and not having the One faith and hope of Abraham, and therefore not members of the One Body are in darkness, "God who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, has not by his Word shined into their hearts to give the light of the knowledge of

THE GLORY OF GOD

in the face of Jesus Christ." the trouble being that they will not receive it. With the covenants of promise in their hands, they are utter strangers to them, and hence, like the Ephesians they are without God, except that they live and move and have their being in him naturally,—they have not been the subjects of a spiritual begettal with the Word of truth (Jas. i. 18) for the very ground work of Divine Revelation is they are strangers to. And as the Anointed Jesus is the heir of all things covenanted, it would be ridiculous to think he would take them into partnership in a kingdom and dominion that they will not believe a word about, so that leaves them Christless as well as Godless notwithstanding a great show of wisdom in that is, worship on a traditional basis,—worship with great zeal but little or no truth; this being exactly the worship characterized by Jesus as vain. And inasmuch as the exceeding great and precious promises styled "The Covenants of Promise are not believed in, they are not hoped for, because one must hope for what he believes in. Plainly, then, as they do not hope for what is promised, they have no hope. We do not mean that they think they are without hope. They have buoyant hopes, but they are baseless. It is the divine estimate of their hope that it is NO HOPE. Eph. ii. 12. That means that it is false, delusive, and will never be realized.

THE COVENANTS OF PROMISE

WILL-WORSHIP AND HUMILITY;

We come now to consider your question:—

"Would it be right for me to partake of the Lord's Supper at their meetings? I have never done so here, nor at other places where I could have done so. I, however, sometimes, and very often feel like doing so. These are not my brethren in the faith, I am aware, but would I not commune with my Lord, instead of my neighbor, and thus show forth his death and keep his sufferings in memory?" I could not unite with the Church as they believe too many things that are errors to me. And the gospel to them is the death, burial and resurrection of Christ."

We will consider the above briefly in its own order, but without repeating each sentence,—and

First. Is it possible that the New Testament, so-called, or rather the words of Jesus by himself and his Apostles, (for they are all his) is it possible, we say that the words of Jesus in all their completeness have left this an open question? We must faithfully say to you that your question shows you are nearing the danger line. Your own practice hitherto intimates the same. Evidently your understanding of the truth, and its effects corresponded well with the words of Jesus in John xv. 19, where he says to his disciples, out of the world," and also in John xvii. 14 in prayer in their behalf he says, "I have given them thy Word, and the world hath hated them," we understand that you received the same Word Jesus gave them, and that up to the present time his prayer for them, that they be separated, set apart, sanctified—(remain separated, that is) through the Father's Truth has been answered in your case, which comes under the provision made for those who believe on him through their Word. From the beginning you have acted as one taken out of the world by the Word, but confess that you now feel inclined to return to the world—

"I HAVE CHOSEN YOU

THE RELIGIOUS WORLD—

which has not the Word; and what, for salvation purposes, is the religious world without the gospel of the kingdom which is in the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth,—Yes, what better is that kind of a world than the non-religious world?

Secondly, Do you think the Lord's table is spread where not one drop of the water of life is dealt out to perishing mortals, or one crumb of the bread of life? We have not so learned Christ! Neither did you! Your conduct proves it. We appeal to you whether there would be a solitary in your county if you partook with them? Would you not nullify the gospel of the kingdom which Jesus said should be preached for a witness, if you recognized that as the Lord's table, when they are just as ignorant of the gospel of the kingdom as if Jesus and the Apostles had never preached it, and God's Book had never reached us? To all intents and purposes would you not be saying to them. "To me the same as to Paul there is one God, and to you thereas three in one: to me there is no immortality out of Christ who brought it to light,—you hold that is part of man's natural outfit,—I believe in the gospel of the kingdom of God on earth,—you believe the church is the kingdom and heaven your home, but all the same, you are sincere, and so the table you spread is the Lord's table, and just what we believe is after all is not of much importance. We are certain you would not give expression to these ideas: but we stoutly maintain that that is what it would mean to any community of baptized unbelievers of the gospel. It would effectually shut off every note of warning it is your duty to sound out. We were about to pass on, but pause to take another look or two,—it may be the last time we may travel this road.

WITNESS FOR GOD

A TABLE IS SPREAD,

a company gathers,—what does it mean? Well, the Spirit in Paul said to his brethren at Corinth, "For as often as ye eat this bread and drink this cup, ye do show the Lord's death till he come." But the company referred to do not believe the Lord died, only his tenement, and as to his coming, although the same Apostle styles the hope of his coming

THAT BLESSED HOPE,

they do not hope for it,—they hope to go rather, where he is, above, at death. They do not wait for him to come, they do not want him to come, because they do not know he is coming for; and this results from not believing the things promised by God and re-iterated by all the prophets, and which is in fact the subject matter of the gospel,—the beatowment of which was only made possible by the offices and work of Christ at his first coming. Can you think of a

MORE SOLEMN MOCKERY

than that table? When we came to Cleveland to preach the gospel of the kingdom in 1863 we found just two who every first day partook of the emblems of Christ's broken body and shed blood, and why have you been unmindful of the gracious provision for you and your brother to do the same, where two or three shall meet in his name,—yes, he has promised to be with them, and his Word was never known to fail. And as those only have his name who have been baptized into it after a heart-belief of the gospel of the kingdom and the name of Jesus Christ, you can see for yourself that a company of sinners do not spread the Lord's table. We say this solemnly and most regretfully, in view of the fact that no quantity of water, or number of dippings will rid men of their sin while ignorant, and therefore faithless, of the gospel of the kingdom Jesus preached.

IN HIS NAME,

We understand that you DO UNITE with the church when you partake with them, as suggested, more essentially than you could by any other act. You say they are not your brethren in the faith,—the table is not for the Adamic brotherhood. Jesus said to his little flock, "all ye are brethren." You speak of a certain man who is a live, able man, and preaches some excellent practical sermons and is quite a Bible student and a genial Christian gentleman. Of course this may be true amongst aliens, but how can those of the Abrahamic faith speak thus, of one who neither believes nor teaches the doctrine of the Anointed; except by force of habit, or common usage?

We do not think there can be much bigger religious fraud than preaching to sinners what is intended for saints. After sinners have become saints through belief of the gospel, repentance toward God and baptism into the name of Jesus for remission of past sin then are in order and in the order required by Jesus. That is the time to teach them to observe all things whatsoever he has commanded, this is living Godly. People in their sins cannot live Godly, and by your statements the gentleman you speak of cannot tell them how to get rid of them. Here is where the fraud comes in. Ignorant of first principles he begins in the middle and tries to make them good in conduct and this has to a certain extent taken the place of God's published terms of pardon.—viz, faith, repentance and baptism; and this, we repeat most emphatically, is an awful religious fraud.

You say he is also quite a Bible student and a genial gentleman. You must admit that his study of the Bible has not amounted to much when he is not able to tell his fellow-mortals either how to be saved or what it is to be saved. We do not doubt his geniality. Doubtless this is largely the secret of his influence. The will be satisfied with zeal and geniality and the faculty of exciting the religious part of our make-up. Children of Abraham even, are in danger of lowering the gospel standard by listening to such men. Constant dropping of water will in time wear away a stone.

In conclusion we would say, by all the love of God and of Christ we plead with you not to put out the one light in your county. If you realize the vanity of worship based on the traditions of men, enter into the path of the wicked, or go in the way of evildoers. No matter about social estimates of evildoers, unbelievers are classed by God with the vilest of the vile. Show by your absence from heathen temples that you are a Christian and that the Christian's only hope is that of life and glory in the kingdom of God under the whole heavens, and not in some imaginary and impossible sphere beyond time and space. Religious associates are worse than none, unless Christ is revealed to you in them; and to us it is harrowing in the extreme to hear and see such fervor and eloquence poured out by those who have no part nor lot with Christ because they reject the glad tidings of the kingdom he is heir to, and think they have now the life he came to procure for them, as if they were of those given over for that reason to believe a lie that they might be condemned. This is the apostolic way of putting it. 2 Thess. ii. 11. As the Seed of Abraham and an heir according to the promise, you have need to lean on no such arm of flesh. You have an Advocate with the Father because of your covenant relation; they have not for want of that relationship. You have access to the family throne of favor, having been adopted, and accorded all the rights and immunities of a begotten one, they are aliens from the commonwealth of Israel because strangers to the covenants of promise. And besides, you have the positive assurance of help for every time of need,—that you shall not be excessively tried,—that your strength shall be in proportion to your day of trial. We are afraid you have not realized as you should your duty as a witness for the true witness. We have all to be tested in some way,—this isolation and office of a witness is doubtless of this character, and we trust you will reach out the arm of faith and take hold of God's proffered strength so that at last you may meet the approving smile of him who has done, is doing, and will do so much more for you by and by—wrap you all about with his own divine nature of existence. Amen.

YOU WILL NOT

It is the glory of Christianity that makes its votaries superior to circumstances. Paul could say, "I have learned in whatsoever state I am therewith to be content." The touch of faith can transmute the baset metals of life into gold. Our Lord addressing an ancient church said: "I know.....thy poverty, but thou art rich." A poor man rich in faith has a higher satisfaction than a rich man destitute of faith. Those who possess only the wealth of this world may become poor, but the Christian has durable riches.

Conference Report.

The third quarterly session of the Indiana State Conference of the Church of God of the Abrahamic faith, was held at Antioch Meeting house, commencing Friday, June 9, 1899, continuing over the following Sunday. The weather was pleasant throughout the session. It being a very busy time of the season the attendance was up to Sunday not so large as it otherwise would have been. The plan of the programme was followed as nearly as possible, most of those took the parts assigned them. Bro. Bwiggins being sick was unable to attend and the vacancy was filled by Bro. Austin.

At the business meeting Saturday the tent question was brought up for consideration and it was thought best to discontinue any further efforts to raise means for that purpose and furthermore as the Evangelist's funds were getting low it was ordered that the Secretary ascertain who of those that subscribed to the fund were willing to turn their subscription into the evangelist fund. Any opposed who have paid, the money will be refunded. In accordance with the request of the Michigan Conference, Bro. Zilmer was chosen to act as delegate to the national committee to act in accordance with the resolutions adopted by that Conference. It was also ordered that the delegated defray the expenses and present the bill to the next Conference.

At the time of the Conference there was $02 in the treasury; paid to preaching brethren $18, to Bro. Zilmer $35, balance in treasury $39.

Bro. G. W. Smith handed me a report of his labor since Nov. 12, 1898. Preached 130 discourses, baptized 9, reclaimed 3, organized 1 Sunday school, traveled 1265 miles by rail, received $74.05, paid out for car fare $20.25.

The preaching was good and was listened to attentively, and we hope the good seed fell into some good and honest hearts that it may bring forth fruit in due time.

A part of Sunday evening service was, in accordance with the request of Sister Mary A. Shirley, devoted to a memorial service, in remembrance of the many devout ones who in times past worshiped at old Antioch, but who are now resting awaiting the coming of him who has power to call them forth from the grave unto victory and eternal life, where all the faithful will meet to part no more.

A number were there from a distance, among who were Bro. and Sister E. Lent, of Sabnaaca, N. Y., Bro. Austin, Rensselaer, Ind., and Sister Evans of Hedrick, Warren Co., Ind.

On Sunday evening two came forward for baptism. May they ever prove true to their confession and finally win the reward.

Papers Read at the Indiana Conference.

REVERENCE FOR SACRED THINGS.

With the reading of this paper begins the solemn half hour that precedes the communion service. This suggests the bringing before you for your thoughtful consideration a most solemn theme:—that of "Reverence for Sacred Things," for the name, the worship, the house, the ministers and the ordinances of the Lord. I do not know of any other subject that in these follyloving, flippant days, more needs discussion than this. We are living in an age when there is "a decline of old time piety," when conversions are few; when family prayer is neglected; the prayer-meeting deserted; churches left tenantless; faith in God's Word dying out. From the highest pulpits in the land are proclaimed the identical teachings of Tom Paine, in the shape of Higher Criticism, teachings that even he was ashamed of and renounced before he died! Fables are put in place of the Immutable Word of truth; evolution is substituted for the Bible account of the origin of man. One says, "He is glad to be an evolutionist;" another, that "the fall of man is a parable:" and still others, that "half the books of the Old Testament are of unknown authorship," and that "The New Testament contains innumerable contradictions." They have "turned away their ears from the truth and have turned unto fables." Husks are so much better food, than the rich viands that are spread on our Father's table! The vile gospel of infidelity, so much more precious than the words of eternal life.

I have read somewhere that a Buddhist father, offered an almost fabulous sum if his son would renounce his newly embraced Christianity and come back to the pagan fold; how few of our people would care if their children all embraced Buddhism? For the past twenty-five years or more, there has been a persistent repeating of the lesson, "It makes no difference what a man believes so his heart is right," that "it is right living, and not faith in immutible truth that saves." There is irreverence in this teaching. It makes little account of the Word of the Lord, and sets God himself far in the background, as if he were one whose voice was as changeable as the wind. It not only does this, but it also undoes the work of the Reformation. It was not alone for the sake of the morals of his time that Luther escaped from the net of Rome; it was because of corrupt doctrines. It was because of buried truth. He stood forth as the champion of an open Bible; he defied Rome and death, that truth might live.

Long and bloody wars have been fought, starvation and banishment endured; poverty, the stake, the prison, the rack have been met, rather than give up positive faith, founded upon the positive statements of God's Word, for the cheating falsehoods of man's devising. It made a difference with those Christians what they believed; they thought the heart not right that accepted the foolish traditions of men in place of the blessed gospel of God; and that right living could not be the result of silly faith in the pardoning power of priest or pope. To them it was the height of treason to the great God of the universe to worship the Virgin Mary and saints and unseen spirits, beads and candles, pictures and images. It was idolatry, and the curse of God rested upon it, and upon its devotees. Has time so changed the nature of truth that it is worth nothing? If it made a difference to the martyrs what they believed, why does it make no difference now? They lost their eyes for Christ's sake. Was it not by reverently and steadfastly asserting that they believed so and so, and by refusing to recant? even to save their lives? You know this is so, and that our great danger from Romanism, and all other dreadful isms, lies in the fact that we, as a Protestant nation, have not clung reverently to the Bible. We have been letting its truths slip away from our lives, until now the masses have come to think, they might as well be Romanists and Buddhists, and agnostics, as anything else. They call Romanists Christians, and affiliate with them; send their dear children to Romanist schools to be educated (?) pay for the building of their great heathen churches and "houses of refuge (?) their hospitals, their colleges, and for the living of employees for the hospitals, and often of the schools. Never would our fathers have done such a thing. By no stretch of the imagination can we conceive of their paying for the re-establishment of that idolatry in their midst, that they had fought and bled to have overthrown.

Has idolatry ceased to be a sin? Is it something different from what it was in the days of Jeroboam, the son of Nebat? It is not the sin of idolatry that has changed; it is not Romanism that has changed, but it is Protestantism that has changed in its relation to these. The old Roman harlot is the same as she ever was, and whoever reverences God and his truth will stand far off from her, for fear of her torment. This saying, "It makes no difference what we believe." This irreverent treatment of the Word of the Lord in the pulpit is bearing its legitimate fruit outside, in a terrible crop of weeds,—infidels, Spiritualists, Buddhists, or Christian Scientists, socialists and anarchists. If our clergymen like the looks of the field, let them go ahead with their sowing. God will recompense, and that right speedily. The arrows that have been sent forth from the pulpit to kill the truth, will come back like a boomerang to slay those who bent the bow. What wonder that prominent secular men become Spiritualists, or modern idolators when nothing satisfying is given them from the lips of the professed ministers of Christ? They must turn somewhere for a solution of man's origin and destiny, and, if the preachers say they "are profoundly ignorant on all questions of eschatology," or, that "they find nothing in divine revelation, directly touching upon these subjects," or else, "constantly preaching Spiritualism, by affirming that "Death is resurrection, rising, standing up in the new life," that man, just as Satan says, does "not surely die," but that he has been made "as the gods," and knows all that is going on in the world of good and of evil—they will turn to these spirits and have "the vexed question solved," though under the Mosaic dispensation, the doing of such a thing was forbidden under penalty of death, because of the terrible consequences that would follow such idolatrous practices.

Granting that the dead are alive, to seek to them for the light that it belongs alone to God to give, is a species of idolatry. But they are not alive, and the answers that come, are from fallen beings or demons. It is by means of these beings that the evil one keeps up the deception begun in the garden of Eden, that man by eating of the tree of knowledge, could "become as the gods," or attain unto deathlessness, even in apparent dying. From calling upon the dead, as men call upon God, came worship of the dead, then of demons, and finally of images in which the spirits of the dead and of demons were supposed to reside. The rest was easy; self-inflicted tortures, the burning of the dear little babes, the holocausts of older victims, the obscene rites, the blunting of all moral faculties, the debasing of intellect, and the trampling under foot of all human rights. If idolatry, even under its covert name of Spiritualism, were universal in the world, "there is no crime, no species of cruelty, no abomination within the compass of the human heart to devise, but would soon be perpetrated without a blush in the open face of day." Why should not our statesmen be alarmed, upon noting that the sweet Sabbath bells are unrung in many a pleasant village and quiet country precinct and make proclamation, that the people return to God? Governor Rollins of New Hampshire, and others know what is meant by the silent bells; that it reveals a state of ignorance, unbelief, irreverence and godlessness in the land, that is appallingly ominous of awful imminent danger. But will the people heed the warning? Will the mad procession stop for a single moment? Well would it be for them to listen to their wise statesmen and journalists, and to turn right about face in genuine repentance and reformation. But who can expect the masses to repent, when Dr. Shields forsakes his church to gratify his worldly taste. Dr. Briggs, because he no longer believes "in the infallible authority of the Bible, which is its sole foundation," and when Dr. Van Dyke preaches the salvation of "culture," Dr. Rainsford, that of Sunday amusements, Dr. Scudder, that of the dancing-hall, and Dr. Hillis, that of fiction? "The rejection of the supernatural" is the natural consequence of loving self and the world with an idolatrous affection. Such a love wants God and his Word out of the way, so illicit pleasure can drink to the full with no fear of the consequences. Look at the Illinois legislature; when the secretary of the Christian Citizenship league approached one of its committees, "with the intention of bringing a bill before that body they poked fun at him, and began to make jokes on the name 'Christian,' one member proposed that the meeting of the committee be opened with prayer, and another member responded with mock prayer! Then it was proposed that a psalm be sung, and the man indicated to sing the psalm declining, he was chased around the room by the chairman till he consented, and instead of a psalm, sang an obscene song!" The petitioning secretary of the Christian Citizenship league "left in disgust, seeing it was utterly useless to ask such a set of men to do anything for him." Do not laugh, do not even smile over this, for here is agnosticism "gone to seed;" weep bitter tears instead over this horrible irreverence, for infidel France in the days that followed Voltaire, could show no more shocking scene. "Lift up thy voice like a trumpet and show my people their transgressions and the House of Israel their sins."

What shall be done to such a people as this? What will become of the great State of Illinois? It will be desolated by cyclones, drowned by floods, swept by pestilence, devoured by the Hessian fly, the canker-worm and the caterpillar, and shaken by earthquakes until it remembers and turns unto the Lord; and other states, just as wicked, will share in its woes. Men may say that God has nothing to do with the flood, the storm and the pestilence, but he has and he will keep on sending them, until it is known and acknowledged, that the Lord hath done it. Surely this people "hath a revolting and a rebellious heart; they are revolted and gone." "Neither say they in their heart, Let us now fear the Lord our God, that giveth rain, both the former and the latter, in his season; he reserveth unto us the appointed weeks of the harvest. "Your iniquities have turned away these things, and your sins have withholden good things from you." "For among my people are found wicked men:  they judge not the cause, the cause of the fatherless, yet they prosper; and the right of the needy do they not judge." "Shall I not visit for these things? saith the Lord: shall not my soul be avenged on such a nation as this?"

We choose men for our law-makers, who care no more for God and his righteousness than they do for a ribbon on a ten year old hat, and we are receiving the reward of our doings. We have called this government, Cæsar's government, but it is not, and God never intended it to be. The Censors were the High Priests of Paganism,—our rulers ought to be the Savior's living exemplars. The sturry flag will never go down, but the people over whom it floats will go through a redder sea than did Israel of old, unless they change their ways and become patriots in deed and in truth. For the only true patriotism is that which is loyal to God: which looks upon this world as his world, its people as his people, and all as subservient to him, and responsible to him for his right use of talents, time and means.

The Bible is the foundation of all the liberty and happiness there is in the world. If it had not been for the Bible, there had been no great British Empire, nor happy and prosperous United States, carrying the knowledge of Jesus into far lands, causing the proud Brahmin girl to give up her lovely home, her silks and jewels and friends, to wear poor cotton clothes; to do the most menial work; and go to her baptism, singing in the Tamil tongue,

> "Jesus! I my cross have taken.
> All to leave and follow thee;
> Naked, poor, despised, forsaken,
> Thou from hence my all shalt be."

Rushing into awed silence the mob that had gathered by hundreds to lay violent hands upon herself and upon her Christian protectors. The once heathen of Northern China to come with generous measures of grain for the missions, though their lands are so poor they will not grow weeds without tending, and their only food is millet and raw, salt turnip. The Siamese to build Christian chapels. Darkest Africa to support schools, to love God and to meet together for his worship. The islands of the sea to stretch out their hands to God." And the Jew to come to Jesus begging that his eyes may be opened and he too be made to see.

We have glanced hastily at the state of the world, and have seen what irreverence for the Word of the Lord is doing in our own country, even while we, in connection with Great Britain, are distributing Bibles by the million in foreign lands, and are bringing the heathen knee to bow to that God from whom we are turning away.

What shall be done? It is plainly evident that we are in the days that just precede the coming of our Lord, for never before since Christ left the earth did men substitute fables for truth, as they are substituting them now; never in the darkest days of the history of the church, was there a more marked declension in faith. We are to do all in our power to stem the overwhelming tide of evil. God has set us in the world for this very purpose. To us does it belong to inculcate reverence for the sacred things, our hearts have been kept tender, we are shocked beyond measure when we hear an oath. The flings of the wicked at the name of our King, make us tremble. Indescribable anguish takes hold of us, when we see how the masses are forsaking God. Are we guiltless? Reverence for the name of the dear heavenly Father ought to be the first thing taught to the children. Jehovah! how frequently, carelessly, thoughtlessly it is uttered, under its unhappily translated form of Lord, in our Common Version! Yet it is a name that none dare take in vain, without incurring guilt. And so fearful were the Israelites "of its irreverent use, that from a time too early to be traced, they abstained from pronouncing it at all," and called it "the unutterable word," "the name of four letters," "the great and terrible name," "the separate name."

"In reading the Scriptures they substituted for it, the word Adonai, (Lord), and this translated into the Greek, and from thence into our language, has given us the word Lord, that we use. But this word does not convey to our minds the true meaning of the name of the great Creator of all worlds. It does not fill us with the reverential feelings that the phrase, "I am, that I am," awakens. The idea intended to be conveyed to our consciousness by the word Jehovah, is that of the Self-existent One,—from eternity to eternity. I am God, and there is none else, no God beside me! And that this is the God, "who in his essential, eternal, unchangeable Being" has revealed himself to his chosen people through his Word, as being related to them by an everlasting, unchangeable covenant.

It is he who has stooped to us in his great love, and brought us near to himself, by the blood of the sinless One. He it is who has marked out a way, whereby the perfect good, the perfect holiness of lost and ruined man can be attained: what a fool is he who takes another road and thereby misses the very things he is seeking; finding harrowing discontent and cruel misery instead, with loss of eternal life and glory at the end!

But how shall we reverence the name of the great and glorious Creator, at whose works, Job when glancing said, "Lo, these are only the outlying borders of his works. What a whisper of a word we hear of him! The thunder of his power who can comprehend?" By learning all that is possible to learn of him from his Word and works: by getting acquainted with the perfections of his mind and character, and by renting ourselves to him in the bonds of the covenant he has provided.

We cannot reverence a mind in which we have no faith: a Being whose very existence we doubt. "He who cometh to God must believe that He is, and that he is the rewarder of all them that diligently seek him." And this brings us to the Bible; we cannot reverence God and treat his Word with lightness and disrespect, as if it were untrue, and had no virtue: no binding power over us, or as if we may evolve from it, by dishonest dealing, any theory or doctrine we please.

It makes no difference what the creeds say, or what the most learned of the clergymen in the pulpits say; it is our business to study the Bible for ourselves, and to throw away that which is not plainly taught therein. It is belief of truth and not belief of error that saves. "I don't know," "no one knows," "we can't know," won't save you. God has given you his Word, so you may be able to affirm the you do know; that you "have learned and been assured of" the truth of the things that have been "freely given us of him;" that the light that "God commanded to shine out of darkness, hath shined into your heart, to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ." And we who are here today, do affirm, in spite of the boasted sufficiency of agnosticism, and skeptical assurances of such a thing being impossible, that "we have had an experience with Jesus, which to us is positive knowledge." "We know that the Son of Man is come, and hath given us an understanding, that we know him that is true, and we are in him that is true, even in his Son, Jesus Christ." We know that Jesus is coming again, that the dead are to be raised, the earth renewed, the wicked judged and condemned, the saints to reign with Christ, Israel to be restored, the whole earth to be blessed. We reverence the Bible because God has given it to us to know these things from its pages and to rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory, because of the near approach of the time of their fulfilment. We reverence the Bible because it has proved itself true in a thousand battles. We reverence it because God has set it above all his name, and because of what it has done for us in cleansing us from sin.

The higher critics and agnostics reverence it not, and yet all that they enjoy, exists only because of the Book! If the Bible is not true, there is no standard whereby to measure conduct; no God, and we are responsible to no one. It is only the teaching of the Bible that gives us the right to censure others, or to enact laws for their restraint, when they commit all manner of crimes against individuals, or the community. It is a pity these people could not be deported in chains to Babylon for a time! as the Jews were of old, "slow of heart" as they are "to believe all that the prophets have spoken," when so much has already been fulfilled, and when the very stones are crying out that "the Lord is a God that keepeth truth forever," when the tombs of Queen Esther and of Mordicai have been found, the flood-story unearthed, the circle of our sun in the heavens discovered, the paths of the winds and of the seas made out. And if the name and the Word of the Lord ought to be reverenced, what shall we say of the worship of his appointment? Shall we come bowing before him with indifferent and faithless hearts? With thoughts fixed upon our business, and our pleasures? Shall we come worshiping him and yet "teaching for doctrines the commandments of men?" Doing this, it is vain that we worship. We want to be sure that every article of our faith can be given in the language of the Lord, and that the ordinances to which we yield ourselves in obedience, are in all their outlines, ordinances of his ordaining and not the worthless substitutes of poor fallible man.

We cannot worship God "without worshiping him in truth," or as we may be pardoned for saying "in the truth," that is, we must have the truth, have faith in the truth, and worship in the truth, by having the faith in it, that brings us unto Christ, through obedience in baptism. All those things are related, reverence for one brings reverence for all. Reverence for God assures reverence for his Book, for his commands, his worship, his ordinances, and for his dear Son. And who having proper reverence for these, will come to his house in light and trifling mood? Who will make it the scene of mad revelry, feasting and pleasure?—a place of money-changing and merchandise? A word to the wise is sufficient. We know where the foolish virgins are found when the Lord comes: let us not be found among them, saying, "My Lord delayeth his coming," and "eating and drinking with the drunken."

I do not know that we ought to go back to the old time reverence for the ministers of the gospel, but I do know that we are commanded "to esteem them for their works' sake," and I think that something approaching to reverence ought to be felt for their sacred calling. Angry with them? How dare we be, when they are servants of the Lord? Impatient at their slow stammering speech, or plainness of rebuke, when they are the servants of the Lord, and it is him, speaking to us through them? Then are we impatient with him! then do we not reverence him!

We have already spoken of reverence for the ordinances, but we have more to say. No flippant remark ought ever to be made of baptism, or of the communion service. Whoever sneers at these sacred things, sneers at the High and Holy Beings, who gave command for their observance, and who made our salvation hinge in part upon the keeping of them. Holy, HOLY, HOLY is the name, and Holy, HOLY, HOLY is the Word of the Lord, the worship, the house, the ministers and the ordinances of our God! He whose name is Holy, the High and Lofty One who inhabiteth eternity, whose dwelling is in the high and holy place, dwells also with him that is of a humble and contrite spirit, to revive the spirit of the humble and to revive the heart of the contrite ones. May such a reviving be yours, dear ones of the household of faith, as in humble reverence today, you look upward, unitedly to him! "His salvation is near come, his righteousness near to be revealed." "I know that my Redeemer liveth and that he shall stand in the latter day upon the earth," "we know in whom we have believed," we "know that the petitions we ask we shall receive of him," we "know that we have passed from death unto life," we "know that Jesus was manifested to take away our sins," "we know that when he shall appear, we shall be like him for we shall see him as he is."

O what comfort to know the certainty of these things, to have the hope of inheritance confirmed to us by the promise and the oath of God! Well may we reverence him, and the name of that dear Savior, who gave himself to die on our behalf. Cultivate reverence, act reverently, think reverently. "Watch unto prayer." "The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Amen!"

Report of Meeting.

The readers of THE RESTITUTION will, no doubt, be pleased to hear the result of Eld. W. L. Skeels' visit to Roque River Valley. Bro. Merritt Elliott being anxious that the people of Central Point should hear the gospel of the kingdom preached in its purity and beauty, made arrangements with Eld. Skeels to come and hold a series of meetings. Securing the Baptist Church, our brother commenced speaking May 18 and closed May 28; giving nineteen discourses. The weather was rather unfavorable, being unusually cold and rainy, yet there was a fair audience all the time and excellent interest was manifested throughout. Much credit is due the members of the Christian church for the aid in singing as well as the interest shown. To many the precious promises that nature and destiny of man, was news, yet we know the Scriptures are full of it. The earnest and sincere people set to work to search the Scriptures to see if things were really so. We were pleased with Bro Skeels' manner in presenting the truth. He is an earnest worker in the Master's vineyard; ever ready to do all he can to serve his Lord and Master. Being exceedingly patient and kind, full of charity for all, he won the confidence and respect of his hearers. Five were buried in baptism and we hope, rose to walk in newness of life, among whom was Bro. Elliott's wife.

May 29th, Bro. Skeels went to Eagle Point, eight miles from here, at the request of Bro. A. J. Daley. Here he was threatened with paralysis in tongue, so it was very difficult for him to speak. He remained until Sunday afternoon, June 4th, delivering seven discourses. From all appearances a number were greatly interested. One became obedient. We think this valley is a field in which much good can be accomplished in the future. At the present time the people were somewhat astonished at the doctrine taught, but the impressions made cannot help but be lasting, and those who are sincere will gradually grow to disbelieve the fables that are being taught in the world. We must remember, dear brethren, that the people must be redeemed into the truth. It is hard to eradicate errors you have learned from your youth upward. Bro. Skeels returned to Central Point and rested two days as he was very tired. By request he gave a discourse on the Transfiguration scene, June 6. June 7 he left for the north expecting to hold discourses near Eugene for an indefinite length of time.

We enjoyed Bro. Skeels' visit among us immensely. He gave us so much encouragement and strengthened us in the one faith. We wished he could have remained with us longer, as we know it will be a long time before we will hear as instructive sermons. We trust that the seed sown will yet bring forth more fruit. We hope to see him with us again. May God bless his work at all times. As there are fifteen or more believing brethren scattered around in this immediate vicinity and realizing that more effectual work be accomplished in unity: we decided ere Bro. Skeels left us to form a congregation known as the Church of God at Central Point. Bro. A. J. Daley was elected elder, Bros. Elliott and Bursell deacons. If at any time brethren with proper recommendations should be passing this way, we would be pleased to have you stop and help the work along. By writing to our Sec'y Bro. Merritt Elliott any question pertaining thereto will be gladly answered.

Yours in hope of eternal life,

ELLEN BURSELL.

The river that is to bring freshness to many a league of plain must have its rise in the solitary cleft of the lonely hills, and draw its waters from the snows that sparkle on their tops; and the minister to be a power must live alone with God. Character—that is the thing that wins after all.—Dr. A. Maclaren.

SEEKING AND FINDING, a 4 page tract, sold formerly at 25 cents a hundred.

EARLY LESSONS, suitable for old and young. 30 pages, sold formerly for 10 cents a copy.

These works are excellent for use by those who wish to do missionary labor, and we offer them at such a low price that they should be out in a short time. Bro. Jones had large editions of these tracts printed, and by dying suddenly, and his Widow being in feeble health, we have undertaken the task of selling them. Her income is quite limited, and all that can be gotten out of the sales goes to her after expenses are paid. When you buy these tracts you get several times the worth of your money, and also aid a worthy Sister, who will thank you for it.

Assorted package 30 cents per pound. Gospel of the Kingdom, alone at 25 cents per pound.

The Gospel of the Kingdom.

Advocated in a series of Ten Discourses. A Volume of 283 pages, cloth 25 cents, leather bound, embossed, and gilt edges, $1.00. By Wiley Jones. This book is so well known that it is only necessary to announce that it is for sale, to insure a market for it. We have undertaken to dispose of these books for the Widow of our lamented Brother Jones, and while getting them at this low price, you at the same time will help Sister Jones to much-needed money.

Poetry.

"Lo, I am with Thee."

The "Lord of the harvest" be near thee,
To comfort, and strengthen, and aid;
His "presence" be with thee to cheer thee,
In sickness, and sorrow, and shade!

May he lead thee to heights of ambition:
To service for great and for small;
The "fire" of the Christ-life within thee
Consuming the sacrifice all.

The Foolish Virgins.

Dear Restitution:

How I love the name "Restitution." It means that there is a time coming, in the history of the world, when old mother earth shall no longer groan under the curse of sin.

It means that there is a time coming when the wild and ferocious animals and the poisonous and venomous reptiles will again become our pets, and will not only be tame and gentle, but will be useful and helpful.

It means that the time is approaching when there shall be no more war or strife of any kind.

It means that ere long the mighty angel will come down and lay hold on Satan and bind him and cast him into the pit and set a seal on him so that he shall not be able to trouble the nations any more until the end of the thousand years and after that for only a short time.

It means that ere long God will so lavish his blessings upon the whole human family, that it will no longer be said, "Know ye the Lord, for all shall know him from the least even unto the greatest.

It means that the time is not far in the future when "the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea."

It means that soon "the eye of the blind shall be opened, and the ears of the deaf shall be unstopped, the lame man shall leap as an hart and the tongue of the dumb shall sing."

It means that we are approaching in time when "instead of the thorn shall come up the fir tree, and instead of the brier shall come up the myrtle tree."

It means that Jesus has gone to heaven to remain "until the times of the restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began."

Within the last few months I have been giving much thought to the question, as to who will get their reward at the first resurrection and who will have to wait until the general resurrection. I am inclined to think that only those who have studied God's Word and become obedient thereto, and who have so thoroughly studied God's plans as to understand what is to take place when Christ comes, and know something of his plans, which are to be carried into effect during the millennial age, and who have formed habits which fit them for the work assigned to Christ and his Bride, will have part in the first resurrection. The number may be smaller than we anticipate.

In the parable of the ten virgins, the wise and the foolish ones are exactly alike, with one single exception, viz: They were all Adventist, they all believed in his second coming, they were all waiting for his coming, they had therefore got ready for his coming, they were all expecting the midnight cry "Behold the Bridegroom cometh, go ye out to meet him." They had all spent their lives in working up to this point, but alas five of them were not ready. They lacked light, which being interpreted means, a thorough knowledge of the prophecies relating to God's plans which are to be carried out during the millennial age. The thought has occurred to me that possibly the foolish virgins represent that class of Adventists who do not believe in the restitution.

One of the things recorded in the Bible, is the failure of the foolish virgins to get into the marriage. They had labored long in the Master's vineyard. They knew that Jesus had suffered and died for the human family. They knew that he had been resurrected and is now at the right hand of the Father. They knew that he was coming back, and that when he came he would bring the blessing to his faithful ones. As they lay down to sleep, to await his coming, I can hear them singing

"Then we go to Dull Times,
And will be gathered home."

How acute will be the disappointment when their lamps cease to burn and they are not admitted to the marriage.

After God had completed the creation of the world and all living things, he created Adam. But when that was done creation was incomplete and had he stopped at that point, the whole plan would have been an utter failure. Adam alone could not have peopled the world. God knew this and therefore created Eve. Adam was a perfect man, but alone he was helpless and powerless. Jesus is a perfect second Adam, but without his bride he can never convert the world and bring it into subjection to himself. God has in the person of Jesus secured a perfect bridegroom, but how about the bride? God is now engaged, and has been for a very long time, in making or creating the second Eve. When this creation is completed the marriage will take place. The very last act in creation was the marriage of Adam and Eve, whereby they became and were one. They were no longer twain but one. Was it not God's purpose in uniting them in marriage that they should people the earth with their posterity? Suppose Eve had said to Adam, I do not believe it is God's will that we should have children. I do not want to have any children. Let us keep all the world, all the animals, all the fish in the sea and all the birds, for ourselves. We do not want to be bothered with children. Suppose she had been perfectly sincere in this belief and acted upon it, what would have been the result? Would the world ever have been peopled? How would such a belief have effected God's plans? The asking of these questions answers them. Such a condition would have completely defeated God's plans with reference to the human family and with reference to this world.

Suppose when Jesus comes and the Bride is called, and the Bridegroom and Bride are united in marriage and thus made one, that Jesus should say to his Bride, Go into all the world and preach the gospel of the kingdom and the everlasting gospel, to all nations, kindred and tongues, and thus bring them into subjection to me. Suppose the Bride should say, We do not believe in the restitution, neither do we believe in preaching the gospel to all nations. According to our views, the time for the preaching of the gospel has passed. The world is to be destroyed by fire and become desolate, and so remain for a thousand years. We are to go to heaven and remain there until the end of the thousand years, when you are to bring us back, and the earth is to be restored, so that we may occupy it. But there is never to be any increase in our numbers. I think I can hear Jesus say, I have married a wife, who by reason of her wilful ignorance is barren. Of what possible use would such a wife be to Jesus. Ready to oppose him in everything with the absolute power to defeat all his plans. Is Jesus to be "unequally yoked with unbelievers?" Christ's bride after the marriage ceases to be his bride. She becomes his wife, with all the obligations and duties of a true helpmeet.

Jesus was pure and spotless, with no bad habits, no evil thoughts, and no ill will toward any one. With prayers on his lips for his enemies and love in his heart for all. What must his bride be?

The marriage relation is a sacred relation. God has made it so. The world is full of women, but the loving father who goes forth to choose a bride for his only and well beloved son, is not likely to take the first maiden he meets. Well, why not, if he simply wants a woman she would fill the bill. But he wants much more than that. He wants one who will meet all the requirements of a wife, properly fitted for his son in the relations of life in which his son will live. If his son is a farmer, he wants a woman who will make a good farmer's wife. If his son is to be a preacher, a doctor or a lawyer, then his wife must be a woman, not partially fitted for such a position, but fully and completely fitted for the position's wife to such a man. Anything short of this would fall short of an ideal wife. Will our heavenly Father act with less judgment, with less zeal and with less good sense in selecting a bride for his only Begotten Son, than a human father would exercise? Jesus must have a bride that is in perfect harmony with himself in sentiment, in belief, in desire, in disposition and in every thing which he is to do and perform. Less than that cannot and will not, meet the requirements.

Moses was a type of Christ. The Israelites were the chosen and favored people of God. When Jesus came, he came to his own favored people. The twelve apostles were all descendants of Jacob. The gospel was first preached to the Jews. "Go not into the way of the Gentiles, but go rather to the lost sheep of the house of Israel." These chosen people were a type of the bride. Had the Israelites fulfilled their mission they would have accepted Jesus as their Messiah. They would have stood by him and aided him in his ministry, both as an organization and as individuals. But instead of that, they rejected him and brought all the power of their well organized nation to bear against the work which he came to do, and finally succeeded in having him put to death. Instead of being a helpmeet, they were his bitterest enemy.

Why did the Jewish nation reject their Messiah? Because they did not correctly understand the prophecies relating to the work which he was to do at his first advent.

In view of all this is it likely that God, in his wisdom, will select a bride for his Son, who is not acquainted with the prophecies which foretell and explain the work which he set apart to be accomplished by Jesus and his bride in the ages to come? Most assuredly not. There will be no mistake made and no failure. Those who are raised up at the first resurrection, for the express purpose of bringing all the people and all the animals, and all creeping things into subjection to God, will be thoroughly fitted and prepared for the work. They will be so fully equipped, that their light (knowledge of the prophecies) will never go out.

It will not be necessary to leave those whom God shall select for the bride of Christ, forty years in the wilderness and feed them on manna, in order to drill them and prepare them for the work set apart for them to do.

When John, on the lonely isle of Patmos, was nearing the end of that great "Revelation of Jesus, which God gave unto him, to show unto his servants things which must shortly come to pass," "he heard, as it were, the voice of a great multitude and as the voice of many waters, and as the voice of mighty thunderings, saying Alleluia, for the Lord God omnipotent reigneth. Let us be glad and rejoice, and give honor to him: for the marriage of the Lamb is come, and his wife hath made herself ready." Yes, his wife shall have made herself ready. There will not be any time then to go and buy oil. All who are not ready will be left behind. No matter how long and patiently we may have waited for the appearing of our Lord and Master, if we are not ready we cannot become his bride. Let us have these words, "HIS WIFE HATH MADE HERSELF READY," engraven upon the tablets of our memories, never to be erased and never to be forgotten. There are at least three things required of those who would be members of the bride of Christ, viz:

First, They must hear the gospel, believe it, repent of their sins and be baptized, and thus get their names written in the Book of Life. The bride is selected, or elected, from among those whose names are written in the Lamb's Book of Life. They are taken from those who are members of God's family. They are the second Eve and have become the wife of God's only begotten Son.

Second. They must have a wedding garment on. What is the wedding garment? "To her was granted that she should be arrayed in fine linen, clean and white: for the linen is the righteousness of saints." Rev. xix. 8. How can we obtain this wedding garment? By living righteous lives. The foolish virgins had both the foregoing qualifications, but they lacked the third, which consists in a thorough knowledge of the prophecies which foretell the work to be accomplished, by Christ and his bride when he comes, and during the ages beyond. To enable us to prepare for the duties that await those who shall be called to the marriage, we must know what the work is which they, who are chosen, will be called upon to perform. There is only one possible source of information, from which we can draw light on this important question. It must come from the prophecies. The work to be accomplished is in the future.

If it is conceded that there will be a restitution, then the bride will have no work to perform. Hence every one who had heard the gospel, believed it, repented of their sins and been baptized would possess the necessary qualifications to fit them to become members of the bride. If the whole duty of the bride simply consisted in accepting eternal life, at the hands of our Creator, and then to be taken away to meet the Lord in the air, and go with him to heaven, and remain there a thousand years, singing hallelujahs, with nothing to do, no duty to perform, no obligation resting upon them, then truly all preparation would be useless. ARE WE RELYING ON SUCH A CONDITION OF THINGS? NO. A THOUSAND TIMES NO. We know full well that there is a great work to be accomplished, and that Jesus and his bride must perform that work, if it is ever done. All nations are to be brought into subjection to the King of kings. The gospel is to be preached to all nations, kindred and tongues, and the wild animals are to be made tame and gentle. Jesus cannot become the universal Monarch of the world, without bringing the nations into subjection to himself. God called the prophet Daniel to the witness stand, no less than three times, to testify of the setting up of Christ's kingdom and of the four universal empires which should precede it. First, when he told the dream of Nebuchadnezzar, and the interpretation of it. Second, eight years later when he caused Daniel to have a dream relating to the same matter. Third, still two years later, when he caused Daniel to have another dream relating thereto. Then God waited six hundred and forty-nine years, studying the matter over, and fearing that there might be one or more who would not be informed upon this very important matter, therefore he called to John when he was on that lonely Isle of Patmos, and had him repeat the same matter again. If this matter is of no importance, WHY OH, WHY! has our heavenly Father taken so much trouble, and such care, to have it put down in the Divine Record no less than four times?

"In the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed, and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand forever." Dan. ii. 44.

All the kingdoms and governments in the world are to be brought into subjection to the kingdom of King Immanuel, whose queen will be the saints. "Behold one like the Son of Man came, and there was given him dominion and glory and a kingdom, that all people, nations and languages should serve him." Dan. vii. 13. Jesus is King, but the saints, who constitute his wife and queen, are to share in his glory and responsibility. The prophet says of them, "But the saints of the Most High shall take the kingdom and possess the kingdom forever, even forever and ever." Dan. vii 18.

Why does Jesus and the saints take the kingdom? The prophet will answer. "That all people, nations and languages should serve him."

When will all the people of every nation and of every language serve him? After he takes the kingdom.

When is it that Jesus will take the kingdom? "In the days of these kings."

What is God's object and purpose in causing all people, and all nations, and all persons speaking all the different languages in the world, to serve and obey the King of kings and Lord of lords? Let us go to the Book of the testimony. There is no other source of information. "James answered saying, Simeon hath declared how God at the first, did visit the Gentiles, to take out a people for his name; and to this agree the words of the prophet, as it is written, after this I will return and will build again the tabernacle of David that the residue of men might seek after the Lord." Acts xv. 13-17. It has been God's purpose from the beginning, and it will continue to be his purpose, down to the end, to bring persons into the world, present to them his plan of salvation, and confer eternal life on all who obey and comply with the conditions.

Prior to the time of Christ's return, a certain number will have been taken out, who will be made immortal at the appearing of the Savior and who will then become his bride and be united with him in marriage, and will assist him in carrying out and discharging all the duties assigned to the second Adam and the second Eve.

Among these duties will be the rebuilding of the tabernacle of David, that the residue of men may seek after the Lord.

Who are the residue? During the ages that have passed, part of the human family have had the gospel, and those who were disposed so to do have sought after the Lord. Subtract those who have had the gospel, from the whole number of Adam's descendants and those who are left, as the remainder, will constitute the residue. "Known unto God are all his works from the beginning of the world" Acts xv. 18. Yes, God understands his plans. He knows how it is all to be brought about and how it will all end. "That was the true light that lighteth every man that cometh into the world." John i. 9.

Will this "true light" shine into the heart of "every man that cometh into the world?" The only answer that I can give is to say that the divine record says it will. Bless God for such a Savior. "I am not ashamed of the Gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God unto salvation, to every one that believeth." Rom. i. 16. Yes, it is the POWER OF GOD to salvation to every one that believeth."

Why is Christ waiting at the right hand of the Father all these years? It is that his bride may be prepared. He is waiting for "his wife to make herself ready."

Why is it that the great multitude are heard to rejoice? It is because the time for "the marriage of the Lamb is come."

Why is it that the multitude is interested in this marriage? It is because the great work of converting the world, as foretold in the prophecies, cannot be entered upon until after this marriage. But immediately after the marriage this great work will be proceeded with. "All the ends of the world shall remember and turn unto the Lord and all kindreds of the nations shall worship before thee; for the kingdom is the Lord's and he is the governor among the nations." Psa. xxii. 27. "And the spirit and the bride say come." Yes, the bride is aiding and assisting in the great work.

Oh what a blessed thing it will be to have part in the first resurrection and assist Christ in the glorious work of bringing the world to God and in removing the curse from old mother earth so that she shall no longer give nourishment to thorns, thistles and noxious weeds.

What a great and good plan is God's plan. What a glorious world this will be, when all sin and sorrow, pain and death shall be removed, and when King Jesus shall reign not only from "sea to sea, and from the river to the end of the earth" but shall be the Supreme Ruler of the whole habitable globe. "Come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly." Amen.

R. S. DARNELL.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Report of Labor.

At the invitation of the brethren in Southern Kansas, I started on the 10th of May for that section, where I had spent a month in preaching the gospel during October and November, 1898. I was met at the train at Arkansas City, by Bro. Wm. Hadicke, the President of the Conference, and after spending a day of rest at his hospitable home, I began a meeting at the village of Geuda, formerly known as Geuda Springs, so-called because of the mineral springs—seven in number—located here. At this place I delivered 17 discourses at different times, and also baptized a lady, who expressed faith in the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ. In her case was true pre-eminently what Paul declared to the Romans: "Faith comes by hearing, and hearing by the Word of God." I also delivered a number of discourses at the Crescent school house, where we had good attendance and great interest was manifested. The pity is that so often we either can not, or do not remain long enough at one place to accomplish the good we might do. But judging from the appearance of our audience, it is my impression some seed has been sown and has reached good ground, where it will produce fruit unto everlasting life. Sometimes we are too anxious to induce our hearers to submit to baptism, when we ought to heed the injunction in the commission, "Go, teach all nations," etc. In this way many are baptized who really do not know what they are baptized for. Of course, we cannot hope to teach them everything concerning the plan of salvation prior to baptism, but they ought to understand the first principles sufficiently well to be able to give intelligent reason of the hope that is within them. Those who are thus instructed, and continue to grow in grace and knowledge of Jesus Christ, will be able to stand when others will fall. I also delivered several discourses at the Pleasant Valley school house in "the strip"—Oklahoma, to attentive audiences, speaking in all 25 times. I consider it my work to sow the seed, "preach the Word," and this I have faithfully endeavored to do. I wish also again to acknowledge my appreciation of the kindness the brethren and sisters so generously extended to me. May

"He who in his righteous balance
Doth each human action weigh," also reward the kindness of the friends to me.

I improved this trip to visit some of my former friends and relatives in Nebraska; and on Sunday June 18 spoke twice at the United Brethren church, at the request of the pastor. I eagerly seized this opportunity of presenting "the truth as it is in Jesus." What a delight it is to present to dying humanity the good news of life in Christ—yea, interminable existence and joint-rulership with him in his kingdom. What a mercy it was that the writer, who for fifteen years associated with a popular organization and preached so-called orthodox teaching for six years, should have come to the knowledge of truth in a way altogether unsought. But I must bring this report to a close. More later.

A. H. ZULMER.

A soft answer turneth away wrath; what a grand and practical thought it is! We are all willing to acknowledge the beauty and the force of it, but do we make it practical? There is no one other thing that affords no opportunities. Every day, almost every hour, we have the opportunity of giving a soft answer and turning a rough one away.

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, JULY 5. 1899.

ONE of the best ways to avoid being angry with your servant is to wait as much as possible upon yourself.

WE often hear people talking about chances, as if they were a real thing.—and if it be, why may it not be used for Providential purposes?

"PRIDE like the magnet, constantly points to one object, self; but unlike the magnet, it has no attractive pole, but at all points repels."

"THE water that flows from a spring does not congeal in winter; and those sentiments of friendship which flow from the heart cannot be frozen by adversity."

REVELATION does not need the help of reason, but man does, even when in possession of revelation. When reason is used as candle set all aflame with revelation then it proves effective.

"To think without a purpose, is to baffle the will, which is the soul both of purpose and performance. Without an object, the intellect is imbecile in execution. The ablest minds think during action."

THE great work of life laid out for those who have taken upon them the name of Christ, is to bring their will into complete subjection to God's will, and to make his revealed will known, believed and obeyed by others.

THE garden of the heart is capable of producing under culture, everything beautiful in humanity, but when neglected it is choked up with every kind of rank and poisonous weeds. The gentle hand of woman is best adapted to the task of sowing good seed and rearing beautiful flowers.

THE bond which holds wicked men and parties together is one liable to rupture at any time. The very principle which brings them together for co-operation, is one which constantly prompts each of them to make a prey of the other. What is that? It is SPOILS.

"THERE is many a Christian who feels the irksomeness of the duties of life, and feels his spirit revolting from them. To get up every morning with a firm resolve to find pleasure in those duties, and to do them well, and finish the work which God has given us to do, that is to drink Christ's cup."

"RELIGION is no value to a merchant unless it keeps him from putting false labels on his goods; or to a plasterer unless it keeps him from putting up a ceiling that he knows will crack in six months; or to a farmer unless it keeps him from putting the only sound pippins on top of the barrel."—Talmage.

AMIABILITY is certainly a duty, but it is especially difficult for some people to exercise it at the expense of some virtue. To be always amiable, is to be amiable at the expense of both manhood and Christian duty. If we would discountenance insolence or other offences we must discriminate in the indulgence of the amiable.

GILMORE Simms said:—"He who would acquire fame, must not show himself afraid of censure. The dread of censure is the dread of genius. He who falters in apprehension of the opinion of his neighbor, has already put himself in the harness of a master. To put one's wings into the keeping of another who has no wings, is certainly to have them clipped close to the shoulders. How should he approve of journeys with eagles in the air, who has always pursued his own way on the ground with snails? Audacity is one of the essentials of genius, and it laughs at what the conventional call decorum. Genius is discovery! How should it submit the training of its eyes to those by whom no discoveries have been made?"

Multitudes of men wish to be rich, but they do not choose to be. To choose to be rich means the pursuit of the means by which riches are acquired. Also multitudes wish to be Christians, but they do not choose to be Christians. Herein lies the rub; wishing and choosing are two different things.

One thing, and only one, in this world has eternity stamped upon it. Feelings pass, opinions change: what you have done lasts.—Robertson.

The Church Walking with the World.

The church and the world walked far apart
On the changing shores of time,
The world was singing a giddy song,
And the church a hymn sublime.
"Come give me your hand," said the merry world,
And walk with me this way;
But the good church hid her snowy hands
And solemnly answered, "Nay,
I will not give you my hands at all,
And I will not walk with you;
Your way is the way that leads to death,
Your words are all untrue."

"Nay, walk with me but a little space,"
Said the world with a kindly air,
"The road I walk is a pleasant road,
And the sun shines always there;
Your path is thorny, rough and rude,
But mine is broad and plain;
My way is paved with flowers and dews,
And yours with tears and pain;
The sky to me is always blue,
No want, no toil I know;
The sky above you is always dark,
Your lot is a lot of woe;
There's room enough for you and me
To travel side by side."

Half sighing the church approached the world,
And gave him her hand of snow;
And the old world grasped it and walked along,
Saying in accents low,
"Your dress is too simple to please my taste;
I will give you pearls to wear.
Rich velvets and silks for your graceful form,
And diamonds to deck your hair."
The church looked down at her plain white robes,
And then at the dazzling world,
And blushed as she saw his handsome lips
With a smile contemptuous curled;
"I will change my dress for a costlier one,"
Said the church with a smile of grace.
Then her pure white garments drifted away,
And the world gave in their place,
Ermine and satins and shining silks,
Roses and gems and costly pearls;
While over her forehead her bright hair fell
Crisped in a thousand curls.

"Your house is too plain," said the proud old world,
"I'll build you one like mine;
Carpets of brussels and curtains of lace,
And furniture rare and fine."
So she built her a costly and beautiful house;
Most splendid it was to behold:
Her sons and her beautiful daughters dwelt there
Gleaming in purple and gold;
Rich feasts and shows in the halls were held,
And the world and his children were there,
Laughter and music and feasts were heard,
In the place that was meant for prayer,
There were cushioned pews for the rich and the gay,
To sit in their pomp and their pride;
But the poor, who were clad in shabby array,
Sat meekly down outside.

"You give too much to the poor," said the world,
"Far more than you ought to do:
If they are in need of shelter and food,
Why need it trouble you?
Go take your money and buy rich robes,
Buy horses and carriages fine,
Fly pearls and jewels and dainty food;
Buy the rarest and costliest wines;
My children they dote on all these things,
And if you their love would win,
You must do as they do, and walk in the ways
That they are walking in."

Then the church held fast the things of her purse,
And modestly lowered her head,
And simpered, "Without doubt, you are right, sir,
Henceforth I will do as you have said."
So the poor were turned from her door in scorn,
And she heard not the orphan's cry;
But she drew her beautiful robes aside,
As the widows went weeping by.
Then the sons of the world and the sons of the church,
Walked closely hand and heart,
And only the Master, who knoweth all,
Could tell the two apart.

Then the church sat down at her ease and said,
"I am rich and my goods increase;
I have need of nothing, or ought to do,
But to laugh and dance and feast."
The sly world heard and laughed in his sleeve,
And mocking said, aside—
"The church is fallen, the beautiful church,
And her shame is her boast and her pride."

The angel drew near to the mercy seat,
And whispered in sighs her name,
Then the loud anthems of rapture were hushed,
And heads were covered with shame,
And a voice was heard at last by the church,
From him who sat on the throne,
I know thy works, and how thou hast said,
I am rich, and hast not known
That thou art naked, poor and blind,
And wretched before my face;
Therefore from my presence, I cast thee out,
And blot thy name from its place."

HOME SWEET HOME.

Home is the refuge of life, to which the wearied heart flees from the temptations, the embitterments and disappointments of the world. Where the fevered brain is cooled, the throbbing heart allayed, and the purturbed feelings soothed. Where the wrinkles of care are smoothed out by the downy hands of children, and the crushed spirit of the child by contact with the world is healed by the love of parents. Where heart beats in unison with heart, and every pulsation of mind meets a sympathetic response. Where love unrestrained by fear of taunt or jeer unfolds itself in its own confidence to cheer and bless. Where the roughest characteristics of sturdy manhood are softened into deepest sympathy and tenderest care for the dependent. It is where the hardy plowman turns in from his plodding march all conscious of the work he has wrought on the bosom of old earth, and that his honest toil has bought for him a sweet repose to where the good housewife, ever prompted by devotion on her eternal rounds on the treadmill of life, has swept the hearth clean and smoothed out his clothes with greatest care. Here it is that the haunted tradesman with aching, head and exhausting limbs, burdened with a thousand perplexities seeks escape from the annoyances of life to recuperate his wasted powers and get a sustaining impulse from congenial hearts whose lives are his.

Here it is that the professional man worried by questions of church or state, by medicine or law, often piercing the mysteries of heaven and scanning the wisdom of man, must turn to escape insanity, and receive the healing balm of Home Sweet Home—where truth reigns in simplicity and dull care is laughed away by the gentle breezes tuned to the eternal lyre that vibrates in harmonious touch with the throbs and beats of God's expansive universe. Within its sacred precincts are planned the onward march, the skirmish, the pitched battle of the future against every opposing environment: fear is chained by love; faint hearts made strong; and hope leaps exultant, confident of victory. Here the family counsels are held in which are decided the destiny of nations in the education of a son, or the freedom of a people by that of a daughter, or perhaps all unconscious of its powers the slumbering symphonies of all nature may be touched, and the halls of time be filled with sweetest music, reverberating between the mighty hillsides of the eternal past and that of the eternal future only being the reflection of the harmony existing around that family altar. At this counsel bar is decided the course to be pursued in the moral and religious training of children upon which impinges the destiny of future generations over which the angels of heaven are made to weep for joy, or the Christ to lament with sorrow.

In the family assembly are recounted all the achievements of the past as fond recollections pass on memory's canvas, and every virtue is brought out by magnifying love, and faults go unhinted until every member touched by its charity ceases to be a transgressor. Here it is in the eventide when the day's labor is done, and the twilight purple hills enrich the western sky that parents relate to the children, who are enraptured in profound interest, the scenes and doings of their own childhood, and live again the morning of life all recalled by the unfolding life before them.

We see reproduced the fears, the intense anxiety, the overwhelming emotion that swayed our feelings in fits of anguish or bursts of joy, as the tide of fortune ebbed or flowed for weal or woe, until age is forgotten, the bent form is straightened, the step becomes elastic and youth again mantles the parental brow. But the revery is broken, and the flood gates of time swing open and all the changes wrought by years o'er shadow us again, and the memories of home become sweet, not all from the joys it gave, but from the sorrows and burdens bourne and shared as well. We who have reached or passed the meridian of life have said good bye to the old home, have bid adieu to father and mother, to brother and sister, to go out into the world to re-enact what generations before have done. And perhaps those memories dear have been forever sealed to our heart by the little mound in yonder cemetry, beyond whose gates we cannot go. But of all the memories that linger from the past, the fondest and the best are those of mother. When all other earthly friends forsook she was constant to the extreme. Her love knew no limits. Her heart sank beneath no burden. But though weary with the drudgery of the day, she was never too tired to see her children safe at rest and perchance the over heated scenes of day disturbed their peaceful slumber in vivid dreams; or an excited imagination haunted their visions with ghosts and phantasies until they cried out in fear; she was ever on the alert and silently to their bedside crept to see the angel of peace abide their again. Or when a fever burned their cheek, and parched their lips, the loss of sleep was sought for their recovery. She toils for love, and not for pay, and her richest recompense is love returned. 'Tis the mother's love that reflects the love divine that prompted God, the Father, to give his Son to rescue fallen man, and is the nearest pattern of heaven's gift, and the moving motive of the future paradise restored, where the loving, sympathetic Christ shall dwell and rule and reign in righteousness, bringing peace and harmony in our eternal round. And when one has sipped the dews of childhood's morning and run the race of youth in mad haste to overtake maturity, and there has stopped to rest and reach all its ambitions, (whether success or defeat crowns the effort) the scene is changed for by the survey of the heights attained, the bubble of the fancy bursts: and man's desires unsatisfied, the longings of the soul unsatiated, the home of earth encroached and broken, by the palsying hand of death, the things of fleeting time lose their charms, and the heart of man longs for a home eternal where no stilling death shall blast the hopes, nor pain, nor sickness come its pleasure to allay. Shall this inmost vacuum of the heart find its counter-part in God's eternal plan? The book of books says, yes, and more, for eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither hath it entered the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him. So that aching void shall be filled, and the tender heart cords rent asunder here, shall be fused by love divine in that Eden home where sighs shall never be, and tears shall flow.

In that home beyond the tomb, which the Savior is preparing with the tenderest care to receive his bride pure and chaste, wooed and won from Satan's snares, the sons of God shall outshine the stars and form an army about his throne singing, "Alleluia, Alleluia for the Lord God omnipotent reigneth." "Let us be glad and rejoice and give honor to him: for the marriage of the Lamb is come and his wife hath made herself ready." The husband of that home shall be the Christ, the Counselor of the mighty God. His wife shall be the elect church, the redeemed of every age arrayed in fine linen, clean and white, which is the righteousness of saints. The marriage supper comes, the ceremonies are completed and heaven's family founded on earth, to which must be born the myriad souls that sleep in dust.

The finite mind of mortal man cannot conceive the beauties of that home, but the eye of faith sees grand and glories things and waits with patience to realize and see in the full day, what the fore gleams faintly paints. In that future home a pure river of the water of life shall flow and the tree of life shall bloom and yield its fruit, the panacea for old age, the fabled fountain of eternal youth, to which the blessed inhabitants of that land shall have right that they may enter in through the gates into the city, for God shall dwell with men, and they shall be his people. He shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain, for the former things are passed away, and behold all things are made new. Oh! what will be better. The heart is made to leap with exultant joy in the fond anticipation of dwelling throughout the eternity of the future in that "Home Sweet Home."

LOYALTY TO CHRIST.

In the 100th Psalm and 4th verse we read: "Enter into his gates with thanksgiving and into his courts with praise; be thankful unto him and bless his name." Enter into his gates with what? With thanksgiving. For what? For our lives, for all blessings we receive from him through life, and for the blessed promise, that those who do the Lord's work and believe in him shall have eternal life. Dear sister, dear brother, you who have stood by the graves of your loved ones, what does this mean to you? Are you not longing for the time when you can be with the dear ones again? Are we thankful unto the Lord for the blessings we receive from him in our every day lives? "For the Lord is good, his mercy is everlasting: and his truth endureth to all generations." Psa. c. 5. Do we realize the Lord's goodness? Are we striving to be loyal to one who gave his life for us? What do you say, that you have worked ten, fifteen, or perhaps fifty years? That is well, but have you been and are you now working with gratitude to Christ? Are you keeping his commands? No one keeps his commands if he does so with any other motive than that of loyalty to Christ; motives of self-interest; worldly advancement, or spiritual prominence utterly rob even a good act of its true spirit. Gratitude is a self-rewarding virtue; it makes those who have it far happier than those who have it not. As we have received mercy from God, we are encouraged to labor in his service from love and gratitude, God's mercy ever coming first not simply to reward work done, but exciting us to work to come." And this is so in the great matter of our whole lives; we are forgiven freely, and then are called upon to live as those who are forgiven, as children whom God loves; and it is true also of many particular points and events in our lives. Here God's mercies wholly undeserved are poured upon us to quicken us to love him in return. We know this indeed, and have all heard it many times over, but the state of the world clearly shows that we do not feel it, or as Scripture language, do not really believe it. Oh that our faith might be stronger. Are we trusting in the Lord when we worry over the cares of our daily lives? We are exhorted to trust in the Lord forever, and the reason assigned is that the "Lord is the Rock of Ages." He is immovable, unchangeable. Our circumstances and our feelings may change, but God is immutable. When poverty lays its hands upon us, when dear ones are snatched away, when temptations assail us, when perplexities bewilder us, it is comforting to remember that firm and unmoved in sympathy, in helpfulness, standeth the Rock of Ages. Then why not take Christ at his Word and be content. Impossible, do you say? Paul did not think so. "I have learned in whatsoever state I am, therewith to be content." Phil. iv. 11. Was his labor easy, his path filled with sunshine, and his life full of good cheer? No, no. He had many dark skys. He was often in hunger, deceived by his brethren, confined in prisons and suffered as few men have suffered. How could he then utter such a testimony? Perhaps Paul murmured at first, but he learned to be content. It has been said, "that after years of discipline and struggle, he learned to say, that whosoever crossed his pathway was all right." All who desire to grow in spiritual strength should learn this lesson. Some one has said: "Discontent is a miserable fault." It sours the disposition. It blights the buds of peace. It puts the temper awry. It hangs gloom upon the face. It starts fretful words to the lips. It shadows the lives of others, and it greatly displeases God." Can we not learn abiding contentment by appreciating what we have? I believe there is some sunshine and gladness in every life. All clouds have silver linings. Mr. N. says that one night he slept in a shanty on a bare floor with Mr. W. About three o'clock Mr. W. sang out to him, "Bro. N., let us be of good cheer; I have one whole side yet, for the skin is rubbed off but one side." We actually see people who worry because it does not rain, and then when it rains they worry because it does not stop. Are we showing our love to Christ by so doing? Has there ever been a day in your life that you have not had something to be thankful for? Then, do not keep it to yourself, tell it to your heavenly Father, let the little ones know it; trials and troubles will come to them soon enough, so let them know there is one they can put their trust in by going to him yourself. I must say, God bless the boys and girls who can scarcely hear any thing from their parents but worry from year to the other; and oft times when children have done their best, no words of praise come for what they have done, perhaps so from negligence or for fear of "spoiling the child." Oh, that the children may put their trust in God, for how their hearts must ache, and how little they must feel like trying again. Speak kindly to them. If they have done very good, or well, do not be afraid to tell them, and by so doing it will strengthen and encourage them, they may do better the next time. Teach them to trust in Christ by your every day life. The man who leaves his home with a scowl on his brow, and a snap at his children, and a tart speech to his wife is not likely to be pleasant company for any body during the day; he will probably return home with the temper of a porcupine. And when the wife begins early in the day to gather up all the little troubles and get them in shape by sun-down that her faithful husband must shoulder them. We do not doubt the old saying: "Misery likes company;" but we would hope that—such company is never found.

Then again, dear children, never forget the love of mother, the love of father, and if after a time they grow impatient and say not loving words, love them just the same; think of the years they have toiled, think of the years they have watched you, then love them with all your heart, and when they are laid in the cold silent grave, never forget their love, their kindly advice. Then do not think you are safe if you do not follow their good teachings. Do not think father's goodness, mother's goodness was so much that there is no doubt of your relationship with Christ. Your parents may help you through life in many difficulties, but it is Christ that will judge you at the last day. Oh, that we might put more trust in Christ, for in him only can the earnest desire of the human soul be fully satisfied. Christ can comfort his disciples in the surest trials. Then "Look to Jesus, weary ones," help those around you to look to him also. Be kind to them. Be kind to the stumbling disciple, help him to his feet again; he is worth saving, he may do better next time. God loves him, you love him and see what influence you can have over him. Pray for him, pray with him. Tell him of God's love, not to tell him so much your idea about it, but just to give the message as God gives it. Speak not evil of him. The evil thoughts that come flashing into our minds we must fight off; we cannot harbor them, we cannot entertain them and be children of God.

"He that would live in peace and rest,
Must see and hear and say the best."

We are not to cultivate the things which arouse jealousies and suspicions, but things which make for peace. To think the best of each other, to put the kindest construction on every word and deed, that is the way to make home happy, and to fill every corner of our lives with peace and good will. "What a beautiful, Christ-like thing might be done for this world, if all such should right-about-face and follow the example of the kindly moss in the parable, which is an illustration of the love that is divine because it is of God, the love that is the strong essence of "pure religion and undefiled." "Dear moss," said the old thatch, "I am so old, so patched, so ragged, really I am quite unsightly. I wish you would come and cheer me up a little. You will hide my infirmities, and through your love and sympathy no finger of contempt or dislike will be pointed at me." "I come," said the moss. And it crept up and over, and in and out, till every flaw is hidden, and all was smooth and fair. Presently the sun shone out, and the old thatch looked glorious in its golden rays. "How beautiful the thatch looks!" cried one; "How beautiful the thatch looks" cried another. "Ah!" said the old thatch," rather let them say, "How beautiful is the love of the moss, which spreads itself and covers all my faults, and keeps the knowledge of them all to herself, by her own grace casting over us a beautiful garb of freshness and verdure."

Oh, that we might trust God more. Many turn their backs upon God and then wonder that they do not enjoy his richest blessings. I believe God should become a part of every life. God will graciously receive all those who turn to him, then why not come, plead your case with him. What, do we hear you say that you do not think your prayer would be answered? Do you think he who has power to rule the nations, has not the power to answer our prayers? I would say, try him with faith and love. But I can not think a single trial a fair test. What would we think of a merchant who should declare business a failure after trying it a single day at a new stand, or of a farmer who a week after he has sown his seed, should give up farming because he had failed to get a return. Time is a factor in business, so it is in successful prayer. And if the wish is not granted just as you have desired it, remember it is not always our wishes, but our needs that God will eternally satisfy. Then why not turn to him? This does not mean simply attending prayer-meeting once a week, or living away from him six days in the week and turning to him on the seventh, but go to him each day with gratitude for what he has done. Christ in his busiest moments made time for prayer, and we have no record of work neglected or poorly done. "When a boy," said a prominent member of a church, "I was much helped by Bishop H. who visited a house where I was. Taking me aside, he said: "When in trouble, my boy, kneel down and ask God's help; but never climb over the fence into the devil's ground, and then kneel down and ask help. Pray from God's side of the fence." "Of that," said he, "I have thought every day of my life since." Continuing, he remarked, "A missionary to Persia, helped me in another way." Said he: "Do you ever feel thankful when God blesses you." Always. "Did you ever tell him so?" "Well, I don't know that I have." "Well, try it, my young friend; try it, try it. Tell him so; tell him aloud; tell him so that you will hear it yourself." That was new revelation. I feel that I have only been glad not grateful. I have been telling him with grateful feelings ever since—to my soul's help and comfort." Oh, that we may learn to turn to him more and more. Alone with God, the soul has its sweetest communion. But, dear ones, never turn to him without love and faith. "Stand fast in the faith." I Cor. xvi. 13. God never believes for us, he gives the object, and the materials of faith and incites us to believe. He who has faith has a treasure. He who has it knows it, and finds in it light, peace, and joy. Oh, that the Holy Spirit may kindle love in our hearts, that we may be loyal to Christ. The fruit of the Spirit as we find it in Galatians begins with love. "There is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit." Rom. viii. 1. "The Spirit itself beareth witness with our spirit, that we are the children of God." Rom. viii. 16. Then may our hearts be filled with love, patience, gentleness of spirit, always showing loyalty to Christ, and by so doing we will enjoy Christ's richest blessings.

LIFE'S SWEET THINGS.

The sweet things of life are around us
Do we see those which lie in our way,
O why are we struggling and sighing
Do we taste of the things every day.
When the sweetness of tenderness tells us,
That we should be patient and true,
And the sweetness of patience reminds us,
That our hearts have a great work to do:
The sweetness of helpfulness comes out,
Shines out from Christ's mist of life's way,
And teaches us how to be helpful,
To those whom we meet every day.
The sweetness of comfort is given
That we, too, may comfort a soul;
And the bitter taste of life's sorrow
May be lost in the grand sweet whole
Of a life filled with beautiful lessons,
Of pity and love to mankind:
If our best thought we give to the service
Of helping each other in mind
In each day, what is sweet in life's duty;
In each hour, what is ours to enjoy,
And the shadows of life will be sunstone,
We'll have sunshine without the alloy.
Do we think of the sweetness of living
In a world so full of sweet things?
Do we listen and profit by hearing
The songs which the sweet bird sings?
Do we find sweetest rest and contentment
In knowing our lives are a song,
Which as song to the key noted sweetness,
If we strive it with faith that is strong?
And the bells in life's tower will be ringing
In tones sweet and clear to the soul,
And we learn that our own hearts are singing
The notes of the grand sweet whole.

MRS. ELLA ROBERTS.

A PLEA FOR SYSTEMATIC GIVING.

Duty is, or at least ought to be, a pleasure. We all have our daily work to perform. Is it not a pleasure? It ought to be, but some say, many things have to be done that are neither agreeable nor pleasant to do. But, is it not more agreeable and pleasant to have those things done than it is to let them go undone? Then that duty becomes a pleasure, not so much in the doing of it, but as a result of its being done. Results are the things for which we are working.

A few days ago I picked up a report of an annual convention of the Young Women's Christian Association. I thought, what a great work is being done by the young women of our land. But is it a duty for one girl to help another in this way? It is not only a duty, but it becomes a great pleasure in seeing the results of their work. Many girls, by this work, are brought much nearer their blessed Savior than they had ever been before, or possibly ever would have been, had it not been for the association, but as much is not done as could be for these dear girls. Many girls never know of these associations for the want of means to establish them everywhere.

Some may say, but there are churches everywhere. I doubt it. But even if there are, the association is a help, and not a hindrance to it. How many girls, women and children are not permitted to enter a church on account of the clothes they have to wear, or because they do not know the meaning of such an organization. How are these things to be bettered? The answer is, by systematic giving.

Every person that has a work to do does that work in some kind of order. He has a certain time, or a certain way of doing it so that he may accomplish most in a stated time, then why not deal with the money we have in the same way? Use it systematically, that is, lay aside a certain portion of all we have to be used in the Master's vineyard. We will have our share left for our own comforts. If we lay aside that portion as we receive it, we will not miss it, and it will be given cheerfully to go where it is most needed. Will it be a pleasure to give in this way? It certainly is.

Were the girls of this association all systematic givers, much more money would be had to carry on the work of the association and many more girls would be helped by it. If every church in the land were systematic givers, what a great work could be done in the church. Churches and Sunday School could be established where now such things are unknown. Many children and other poor persons could be helped to enter places of worship, whose doors are now constantly closed on them. Many ministers could be sent to places where the name of God and Christ are unheard unless in some blasphemous way. Many teachers could be supplied to visit homes, the inmates of which are unable to by disease to meet with others to learn of Jesus. Many good books could be placed in homes where nothing or worse than nothing has been read. Many church could be taught to read the Word of God, where now one letter is not known from another. Yes, many, many things could and would be done, which we now think it impossible to accomplish.

Jacob says, in Gen. xxviii. 22, "And this stone, which I have set for a pillar, shall be God's house: and of all that thou shalt give me I will surely give the tenth unto thee." Now Jacob was no more able to give a tenth of what he had than we are to give a like sum of what we have. He was simply doing what he knew to be right. Shall we do likewise?

Leviticus xxvii. 30, says, "And all the tithe of the land, whether of the seed of the land, or of the fruit of the tree, is the Lord's: it is holy unto the Lord." If the tithe of the land, that is the tenth of it, is the Lord's shall we give it to him, or, shall we withhold it from him, and use it for our own selfish purposes? Truly, have we a right to use it or put it where it does not belong? Not one of us would be so base as to take a neighbor's money and use it, much less then, should we keep and use our Lord's money.

Malachi iii. 8, says, "Will a man rob God? Yet ye have robbed me." Will that be said of us? Listen again. The same verse says, "But ye say, Wherein have we robbed thee?" The answer is this, "In tithes and offerings." How many of us are robbing today in tithes and in offerings? I do not believe that one of us would do such a thing intentionally, then we should read, and read carefully, and act accordingly.

That same third chapter says, in the 9th verse, "Ye are cursed with a curse; for ye have robbed me even this whole nation." But the 10th verse says, "Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of Hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it."

How many hungry souls are starving for the meat of the gospel? Much, if not all, of this meat can be supplied by bringing the tithes into the storehouse, so that it may be dealt out to the needy ones. Some may say that we make our money, and we are the ones to use it, and receive the benefit therefrom. All this is true. But we are using it and getting the benefit from it, when we bring it into the storehouse for the Lord's work. For God's Word is sure. The blessing is promised. It is sure to come.

The parable of the talents teaches quite an important lesson in the use of what is given us. And all that we have is given us. True we work for it, but we cannot make a single seed grow, no, not one. If it were not for the sunshine and the rain, our efforts would all be fruitless. Then let us use what is given us so that it will be acceptable in our Lord's sight. It certainly will be with us as it was with the ones who received the talents. We must use, and use to a purpose, or we must hide away. The reward will come to each kind. It may not be in money. But there is something much greater than money. By using as we ought, we certainly will gain in something. By hiding away, or using the Lord's portion for our own selfish pleasures we certainly will lose much more than we gain from the pleasure gotten thereby.

We need not be afraid of our Lord reaping where he has not sown, nor gathering where he has not strewn. Let it not be said of us, "thou wicked and slothful servant," but let us be the ones of which it may be said, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant; thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things: enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

2 Cor. ix. 6, 7, says, "But this I say, He which soweth sparingly, shall reap also sparingly; and he which soweth bountifully shall also reap bountifully. Every man according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give; not grudgingly, nor of necessity: for God loveth a cheerful giver."

If we will withhold the portion of our money that belongs to our Lord, will we be sowing bountifully, or bountifully? We certainly will not. But if we give what belongs to him, we surely will be on the right side. Remember the King shall answer and say unto them, "Verily I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." That is surely just what we would be doing when we bring our tithes into the storehouse to supply the needy ones, whether those needs be temporal or spiritual.

I John iii. 17 says, "But whoso hath this world's goods, and seeth his brother hath need, and shutteth up his bowels of compassion from him, how dwelleth the love of God in him?" Hardly a day passes by, but what we see some one that is in need, yes, they need the Word of God placed before them. Then if we have the love of God in us, we will not close our eyes on them, but will do all we can to relieve their wants.

As we have a system in all other work, so ought we to have in God's work. Surely we are taught in his word to give a stated portion of our income. So far as I know, Christ said nothing about giving a tenth or any other stated portion, but it is so clearly set forth in the Old Testament Scriptures, that we ought to think and think soberly on the subject.

One thing certain, Christ commended the action of the poor widow and she gave even much more than a tenth. Perhaps it is for us also to give more than a tenth. As the Jews gave a tenth, and we have as great or even greater work to do, should we not give equal to or greater than they did?

The more work there is to be done, the greater the means required to do it. If the money is supplied, workers can be had to enter the field and perform the labor. But when no pay is received, workers are hard to be found. How many, many workers could be put into the field, if every Christian all over this land of ours, would bring his tithes into the treasury and say, take and use in my Master's vineyard. The harvest is ready, let us begin our work at once. Let us, each one, if possible, be a tithe-giver, and let us do all we can to persuade others to do.

Let us also teach the children to give and give freely of their little earnings. Why not all of us lay aside the first tenth for our Lord and then save the other nine for ourselves. We perhaps will have to sacrifice some to do so, but that will only help us in our Christian warfare.

Nothing great is accomplished without a sacrifice. Christ's love for us caused him to die on the cross. Can we not let our love be strong enough to make some sacrifice for him? We need not give our lives as he gave his, but we can give our tenth to supply the workers, so that all the work be left for us to do may be accomplished.

Now, whether we give a tenth or all of our money, or whether we give more or less, let us all lay aside a certain portion of our income, as we receive it, to be used in the Master's vineyard. It is for each one to say for himself, how much shall be given to home work, how much to evangelistic work and how much to charitable institutions. These and some other things are without a doubt included in the Master's vineyard and our Lord's money should be used for them. Let us give freely, cheerfully and systematically. I am sure we will soon know it to be right, a duty and a pleasure. Let us give so that as much work can be done as possible, and so that when the King shall come in his glory we may not be weighed in the balance and found wanting. But let us so live and use our means so that we may be prepared to enter into that glorious kingdom with our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ.

LYDIA A. EVANS.

BRIEF MEMORIAL SERVICE HELD AT ANTIOCH, JUNE 14, 1899.

Since the request has been read that we hold tonight a brief memorial service as a humble tribute to the memory of the loved ones who worshiped within these walls, but whose resting places are the silent cemeteries, a tinge of sadness strangely mingled with joy has pervaded our minds. Sadness for the loss of the loved ones, but joy in the belief that they are awaiting the roll call of the Master to come forth robed in the garments of eternal life. A third of a century has passed since this nation called to its service a vast army to repel a foe that threatened the destruction of government. Throughout the land came a response to the call of the nation for help. The hardy sons of toil left the field, the merchant left his desk, the manufacturer his plant, the artist his studio, the teacher his pupils, these all offered themselves a willing sacrifice upon the country's altar. When the fearful struggle had passed and the smoke of battle had rolled from many a gorely fought field and the earth had drunken the blood of thousands. The survivors returned to the peaceful pursuits of industry. The memory of these defenders of the nation's honor is perpetuated by the annual custom of a memorial service, in which the graves of fallen ones are made brilliant with flowers and evergreens, and reminiscences of the dead and incidents of the struggle form topics of conversation. We, too, dear friends, have met tonight to offer tribute to the memory of brave soldiers of the cross of Christ, who have fallen not upon the gory field of battle, but at the post of duty assigned them by the Master. The victories they gained were not won where shot and shell plowed their way through quivering flesh and shattered bones, but they were victories none the less. They were the bloodless victories of the overcomer in bringing into subjection to the divine law the stubborn, rebellious Adamic nature. They too responded cheerfully to the call of duty, they too left all at the Master's call. How often have I wished that the wonderful invention of the phonograph could have been placed within these walls to receive the stirring addresses and earnest exhortations, and could tonight reproduce them. You would not expect me to refer to all whose names are given in the "silent roll," in a brief address, but as I speak I seem to stand in the very presence of our beloved Bro. Chaplin, I see his earnest dignified manner, I hear the impressive voice that once thrilled us with joy as he dwelt upon the glorious theme of God's love to a dying race. I look over to the place to my left where the familiar face of that "mother of Israel," Sister Taylor could be seen if health permitted, and of whom it has been said "a social meeting not addressed by Sister Taylor was incomplete." And who else shall I personally mention, for time would fail me to speak of Barnhill, and of Father Logan, and of Bro. Taber, and of Bro. Railsback, and of Father Railsback, and of Sister Roberts, and of Mother Railsback, and Sister Barnhill, who with the others of the list of names wrought righteousness through faith, received exceeding great and precious promises, and let us reverently hope "these all died in faith," and when the last roll is called they may become partakers of the Divine nature. Amen.

Our Love Feast.

Dear Restitution:

I will write for my father (J. S. Hatch) and endeavor to give you an account of his travels during the past twenty-six days. He left home the first day of June, the first place he visited was Champaign, Ill., where live our esteemed Bro. and Sister Gardener and Sister Coffin, the dear aged mother of Sister Gardener, all so zealous in the cause of our blessed Master. Remained there twelve days, only delivered two public discourses, but most of his labor was in private talk. Dr. W. Frank Ross, of Champaign, came and was very anxious to have the Scriptures explained to him, which father did, occupying five hours in all and he was very much interested and built up over it; he is a Christian preacher. We trust he will yet see and learn the truth as it is in Jesus, and be a light to the glorious cause. From Champaign he went to Bloomington, Ill., to visit his sister five days, where he also talked the blessed truths to them during his stay, and they were much interested. From that point he went to Hayworth, Ill., in the neighborhood of C. P. Graham, making his home mostly with our dear and esteemed Sister Geisthorpe; he preached three discourses in the Columbia school house, and one in the Rockford meeting house to large and attentive audiences. I visited that point once myself in company with father, and I remember with much pleasure the kind treatment, the many friends and good meetings. They went to Wapella the last night of his stay in the neighborhood, expecting to hold meeting there, but the meeting houses were closed. Then he went to Campaign and remained there from Thursday until Monday, when he started home. He reached home feeling as well as usual, but that not very well, and that is why I am writing this for him. When he reads or writes it causes his head and eyes to hurt so badly. Father expects to return to Champaign some time this fall.

Yours in the one faith,

AZORIAH M. SCHOONS.

Dear Restitution:

I for the first time mingle my voice in praising and glorifying our heavenly Father with all those of like precious faith once delivered to the saints. In thanking him for the goodness and mercy during the past year, and I ask of him to continue to bestow upon all his people goodness and mercy for all power is in his hands in heaven and in earth. So dear brothers and sisters, let us abide in him, that when he shall appear we may have confidence and not be ashamed before him at his coming, and dear brothers and sisters, I ask your prayers that I may hold out and prove faithful. I feel encouraged to read so many good letters from those of the one and only true faith, and feel like pressing to the mark of the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus. We are a little band near Brownstown, Va. We are trying to do that which is good and pleasing in the sight of our Lord, so that we may be able to enter into the straight and narrow gate leading to life eternal, and be among the number when he comes, that are watching and waiting for him to come and take away the curse from off the earth and make it an Eden home for the righteous to live in. I am fully persuaded that the Lord will come without a sin-offering unto salvation to every one that believes. O soon may that day come, is my prayer.

Submitted in love,

LAURA E. SPAID.

Dear Restitution:

Good news for the children of the kingdom, we had another good meeting on the second Sunday in May, preaching by Bro. B. F. Boyer. One more obedient believer put on Christ by baptism in his all-saving name, Sister Carrie Updike, whose letter no doubt you have read in THE RESTITUTION of April 12th. She is going on her way rejoicing, ever looking unto Jesus, who is the author and finisher of our faith. On Friday after this meeting I left for Winchester, Va., accompanied by my sister, Mrs. Updike and her husband, who was going there to visit her daughter Mrs. Dunlap. I made a short visit with my husband's nephew, Mr. A. J. Miller, who is also a brother in the faith once delivered to the saints, and is ever ready to give a reason for the hope that is within him, with meekness and fear. From there I went to Haverstown, Md., to visit relations with natural and spiritual ... enjoyed quite a refreshing season among them, and while there I received a letter informing me of the dedication of a new house built by the Church of God in the great valley of Va., near a railroad station called Mowerrytown. I then resolved to attend this dedication on my return. I came back by way of Winchester, and was met at the train by Bro. Miller and conveyed to his home. I there met Bro. Berklite, of Waynesborro, Pa., on his way to the meeting. I then hastened to notify Mrs. Dunlap, who willingly joined our little band to go too. We took the train at Waynesborro, on changing at Strattsburg we there met Sister Cook, of Bentonville, Va., and Bro. Samuel Wilson of New York, and after Christian greeting we soon reached our destination, and was met there with conveyances and carried to a good sister's house, and after we rested and had refreshments, we were soon conveyed to the new house of worship, where we met a goodly number of our brethren and sisters from different places. This was a very enjoyable meeting, the house though large was filled to overflowing. The attention was very good, and the house was dedicated by Bro. Samuel Wilson. His services rendered perfect satisfaction, and the preaching was all that we could desire. Brothers B. F. and John D. Boyer were also with us. This house of worship is convenient to all, being situated on the Baltimore and Ohio railway, running from Harper's Ferry to Stanton. Trusting that much good may be accomplished at this place by those noble brethren, who have so faithfully builded themselves a new house of worship out of their own means. May they ever be faithful in holding forth the Word of faith to a dying world, until the last Gentile believer is brought into the fold.

Your Sister waiting for the kingdom of God,

SARAH P. MORGAN.

Affliction's Work.

Many of the beauties of the character are touches given by the Divine Spirit in the hours of affliction. Griefs, sanctified, soften the asperities of life; they tame the wilderness of nature; they burn out the dross of selfishness and worldliness; they humble pride; they reveal to us our own weakness, faults and perils; they deepen and enrich our experiences. It has been said that "the last best fruit which comes to late perfection, even in the kindest soul, is tenderness toward the hard forbearance toward the unforbearing and warmth of heart towards the cold. But there is no influence under which these late fruits ripen so quickly as under the power of sorrow. It makes us gentle towards all. Many a home is saved from wreck by sorrow that comes and draws estranged hearts together again.—Miller.

Praise.

Praise is the only part of duty in which we at present engage which is lasting. We pray, but there shall be a time when prayer shall offer its last petition; we believe, but there shall be a time when faith shall be lost in sight; we hope, and hope maketh not ashamed; but there shall be a time when hope lies down and dies, lost in the splendor of the fruition that God shall reveal; but praise goes singing into heaven, and is ready, without a teacher, to strike the harp that is waiting for it to transmit along the shores of eternity the song of the Lamb.

The essence of true nobility is neglect of self. Let the thought of self pass in, and the beauty of great action is gone, like the bloom from a solid flower.—Froude.

Heaven! O, blessed day, that shall have no night!—the sunlight of glory shall rise upon the soul, and never set. O, blessed spring, that shall have no autumn or fall of the leaf!

Our faith is, if I must so say, like a burning glass, which concentrates the rays of the divine love upon our hearts, and focuses them into a point that kindles our hearts into flames. If we have the confidence that God loves us, in any real depth, we shall answer by the gush of our love to him.—Dr. Alexander McLaren.

Sorrow is not an accident occurring now and then—it is the very woof which is woven into the warp of life, and he who has not discerned the divine sacredness of sorrow, and the profound meaning which is concealed in pain, has yet to learn what life is. The cross, manifested as the necessity of the highest life, alone interests it.—F. W. Robertson.

Wisdom.

The highest wisdom is manifest in living a good life. He who is wisest and knows the most will not think that he knows it all, but will rather be meek. Some one has defined meekness as "love at school;" here it is wisdom that is the pupil. Meekness will hold its tongue and keep its temper when others differ. It can carry on a friendly argument without personalities. There is great danger in one's zeal for his opinion that he will become bitter towards his opponent, and that the heart will engage in the conflict as well as the head. This induces jealousy and faction until one is bound to win at all hazards. He glories in his own view and argues for it at last without respect to the truth.

Nothing could please Satan better than to have good men loose their temper and become unreasonable and factious. And one needs to guard the beginning of this evil. The steps are zeal without knowledge, or envy, strife, vain glory, evil works, all of which are foolish. When once the door is open to strife, no one can tell when it will be closed again; the wise man will therefore avoid opening it.

Love.

Love to the unlovely is a characteristic of true, godlike love. Loving the lovely is not unknown among the heathen, and even the godless may practice it. "But God commendeth his love toward us, in that, while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us." "Herein is love, not that we loved God, but that he loved us." "Every one that loveth" with this godlike love "is born of God, and knoweth God." In the measure that we love the unlovely as God loves them, and because God loves them, we show our godlikeness, and give evidence that we are begotten of God. It is in our bearing and in our feelings toward those who are yet sinners, that we manifest our Christlikeness, and that we so far represent God before believers, and show to those who are without what manner of spirit we are of.—S. S. Times.

Without the Camp.

Let us go forth unto him. Heb. xiii. 13.

"Let us go forth" and leave the world behind us.
And meet the perils of the pilgrim way.
Where Jesus walked let mocking scoffers find us.
Still hastening onward, as they bid us stay.

"Let us go forth" and tell the same sweet story,
How Christ a helpless babe became;
Point to the dying Lamb, the Lord of glory,
Strong in the might that lives in Jesus' name.

"Let us go forth" The pilgrim and the stranger
Owns not the earth his weary feet must tread;
God's sinless Son, once pillowed in the manger,
Had not house wherein to rest his head.

"Let us go forth" Where Jesus walked before us,
Unmoved by praise or censure's fleeting breath;
God's eye of love is fondly watching o'er us,
The arms eternal stretching underneath.

"Let us go forth" Without the camp there liveth
The strength of Israel. Ye of heavenly birth,
Look in the smile the loving Master giveth
To them that follow him. "Let us go forth"

PINE WOODS BIBLE CLASS.

Teacher. Last week Carrie ended her recital of Mr. William's talk at the prayer meeting. She related how Miss Gordon's following in the footsteps of Jesus, had changed the whole course of his life, and her statement that the Blessed Hope had so captivated her heart as to lead her to a very close following of Jesus, had given him an earnest desire to learn what the hope is, which has such an influence for good on the life of the believer of it.

In the investigation which followed, the following conversation ensued between Mr. Williams and Miss Gordon, which I will give as related to me.

Mr. Williams. Now, Miss Gordon, I read in my Bible lately, that the name of Jesus was the only name given among men, whereby we must be saved. Now, it puzzles me to know what there is in a name to save anyone, and how can I be saved in that name?

Miss Gordon. You must recollect, Mr. Williams, the efficacy of a name consists in the power and authority with which the name is invested. To illustrate, the United States selects an ambassador to go to a foreign nation to transact some international business. His name carries with it the power and authority of the United States. No other name would answer.

See Phil. ii. 8-10, and you will learn about Jesus being invested with power and authority to command submission: "Being found in fashion as a man he humbled himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross. Wherefore God hath highly exalted him, and given him a name which is above every name: That at the name of Jesus, every knee shall bow, of those in heaven, and those in earth, and those under the earth."

Mr. Williams. Yes, I perceive the authority of the name, but I am particularly interested just now as to how am I to be saved, by that name?

Miss Gordon. Its personal application, is of course, of vital interest to us all. In Luke xxiv. 45-47, we have a thought in that line: Thus it is written, and thus it behooved Christ to suffer, and to rise from the dead the third day: and that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name, among all nations beginning at Jerusalem."

No one can be saved in sin, and the way for their remission is "in his name." The name given him at birth indicated this purpose was in view. "Thou shalt call his name Jesus: For he shall save his people from their sins."

Peter began to preach this message at Jerusalem, according to the prophecy, and showed how remission of sins could be secured in his name.

See Acts ii. 37, 38: "Repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins." You will observe that after believing the message Peter preached to them on that occasion that they must repent, and be baptized "in his name," and then remission of sins could be secured. Hence we see how it is there is no other name given among men whereby we must be saved. It must be in his name, no other name will answer.

Mr. Williams. Repentance, that means to be sorry for the sins of our past life, does it not?

Miss Gordon. Why no, it signifies a change of life, a ceasing to do evil, in other words to walk after the Spirit in the place of the flesh. Sorrow for sin may lead to repentance. See 2 Cor. vii. 9, 10: "Now I rejoice, not that ye were made sorry, but that ye sorrowed to repentance; for ye were made sorry after a godly manner, that ye might receive damage by us in nothing. For godly sorrow WORKETH REPENTANCE to salvation, not to be repented of: but the sorrow of the world worketh death."

Mr. Williams. In the passage above quoted, we are told to be baptized in Jesus' name for the remission of sins, and in another portion, "he hath washed us from our sins in his own blood." There are two washings presented to us the "washing of water," "washed us from our sins in his own blood." Both are said to cleanse from sin. I can perceive of the washing of water, but how can we be washed in his blood?"

Miss Gordon. In the matter of repentance we die to sin. In Rom. vi., sin is personified as "our old man," this "old man" must be crucified with Christ, put to death, and being dead, must be buried and left in the grave, and woe be to us if we resurrect him again. But the new man comes forth to a new life, being a new creature in Christ. In Col. ii. 12, we read: "Buried with him in baptism, wherein also ye are risen with him through the faith of the operation of God, who hath raised him from the dead. And you, being dead in your sins, and the uncircumcision of your flesh, hath he quickened together with him, having forgiven you all trespasses." How are we washed from sin? Ans. In his blood. How? Symbolically. It was in his death his blood was shed; and if we are ever washed from sin, we must (symbolically) come in contact with HIS DEATH. Rom. vi. 3, 4, shows the way to become so related. "We are buried with him by baptism INTO DEATH * * * For if we have been planted together in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection."

The blood is applied only by being "buried with him by baptism INTO DEATH." The blood then sanctifies, sets apart and cleanses. Now after this cleansing if we go back to the vile haunts of sin, it is counted as trampling cleansing blood under foot, not literally, but just as literal as the washing. See Heb. x. 29: "Of how much sorer punishment, suppose ye, shall he be thought worthy who hath trodden under foot the Son of God, and counted the blood of the covenant, wherewith he was sanctified an unholy thing, and hath done despite unto the spirit of grace."

Much is involved in being properly washed in the blood of the Lamb. It is the most important step in a person's life. Our eternal destiny is involved in it.

If there is no washing there can be no cleansing, and none but the blood-washed can reign with Jesus in glory. And having been washed, a condition of purity and cleanliness must be maintained, if we would be numbered with the unsullied virgins who are found without fault before the throne of God. To be a mere professor of Christianity and not live it out is of no avail whatever. To make a success, we must do as Jesus would do, were he in our place.

Mr. Williams. I thank you kindly, Miss Gordon, your explanations rejoice my heart, I feel immediately like plunging into the cleansing stream, but I must go home and tell my wife and Ruth all about what I have learned, I want the family as a unit to become followers in the footsteps of Jesus. I will see you again, later on.

Teacher. I must say I rather like Mr. Williams' close way in examining every detail. I have noticed that people who investigate closely can be relied upon. They are also more apt to follow the Lamb closely in their daily walk in life. Now, Arlon, I want to ask you, if you were called upon to name some one sin which hinders the close following of Jesus, more than any other, which would you select?

Arlon. I should name selfishness. To speak more plainly, I would say, the sin of covetousness.

Teacher. Can you give a Bible example?

Arlon. You remember the case of Ananias and Sapphira whose selfishness, or covetousness led them to lie concerning the sale of their possessions, and the serious consequence of their lie. If the same penalty were to be visited upon those who commit the same sin in a multitude of forms and ways of the present time, the majority of those engaged in the marts of trade and commerce would be swept from the earth with a sweep of destruction. I know not a single line of business, but what a deception and cunning device and intrigue is practiced that their goods, merchandise, real estate, etc., may be disposed of to greater profit.

The manufacturer, or those who prepare eatable goods for the trade, adulterate those goods with some cheaper material, which may resemble those of the genuine, that they may be sold to the consumer as genuine, when a large percentage of the article the consumer buys is something else.

The deception is just as much a lie, as that of Ananias and Sapphira. Selfishness or covetousness is the motive which prompts the deception.

The cloth manufacturer does the same thing, he will put a cotton mixture in that which may be sold for all wool goods.

Clerks who are employed by the retail merchant are obliged to practice deception in order to sell those goods. A conscientious and truthful salesman can be of but little profit to his employer, and could not hold his position.

The business of this age is based upon the principle of competition, in place of co-operation; and competition begets selfishness, or every man for himself, regardless of his neighbor, or truth.

Teacher. Covetousness seems to be the prevailing sin of our age, underlying nearly all business transaction, and of course covetous practices cannot be indulged in without lying. We must also remember that our Savior says, they who do such things shall never inherit God's kingdom. Now, Albert, can you give another Bible example, in which the selfish love of earthly goods hindered following the Savior.

Albert. Yes, my mind recalls the rich young ruler who asked the Savior what good thing he should do, that he may inherit eternal life? Among other good things he was told to sell his earthly possessions and relieve the distress of the poor, and come and follow him. Selfishness led him to go away sorrowful, and is never heard of again. The deceitfulness of riches is a noxious weed which will choke the Word every time.

Teacher. Next week we hope to learn something of the result of the Williams' family so thoroughly investigating the foundation for the Blessed Hope.

W. H. WILSON.

Judges Chapter 19.

1. And it came to pass that a man of influence, a Levite, was sojourning in the thighs of Mount Ehraim; and he took unto him a concubine wife from Bethlehem of Jouda.

2. And his concubine went her way from him, and went from him to the house of her father in Bethlehem of Jouda, and had been remaining four days.

3. And her husband arose and went his way after her to talk to her heart, to induce her to return, and his young man was with him and a yoke of asses: and she brought him into the house of her father; and the father of the young woman saw him and was rejoiced to meet him.

4. And his relative by marriage, the father of the young woman, constrained him, and he put up with him for three days, and they ate and drank and stayed there.

5. And it came to pass on the fourth day that they arose at dawn, and he arose to go his way; and the father of the young woman said to his son-in-law, stay up thy heart with a morsel of food and after that ye shall go your way.

6. And the two sat down and ate and drank together. And the father of the young woman said unto the husband, Be seated and put up here, and thy heart will have felt good.

7. And the man arose to go his way and his father-in-law constrained him and he sat and down and he stayed there that night.

8. And he arose at dawn on the fifth day to go his way, and the father of the young woman said, Stay up thy heart and camp till the day declineth; and they two ate.

9. And the man arose, he and his concubine and his young man, and his father-in-law, the father of the young woman said, Lo, the day hath declined unto evening; Put up here and thy heart will have been gladdened, and do ye arise tomorrow at dawn for your journey, and thou shalt go thy way to thy tent-home.

10. And the man became satisfied to put up, and he arose and departed. and went as far as over opposite Jebous—this is Hierousalem; and with him was there a yoke of asses saddled and his concubine with him.

11. And they had got as far as Jebous, and the day was very far advanced; and the young man said to his lord. Here, let us incline out into this city of Jebousites and let us put up therein.

12. And his Lord said unto him, We will not incline out into an alien city wherein there is no one from the sons of Israel here, and we will pass by unto Gabaa.

13. And he said unto his young man, Come along and let us draw nigh to one of the places, and will put up in Gabaa or in Hrama.

14. And they passed by and went their way, and the sun set for them next to Gabaa, which is in Beniamin.

15. And they inclined out there and entered in to put up in Gabaa; and they went in and sat down in the public-square of the city, and there was no man of mark gathering them together to have them put up in a house.

16. And lo, a man of mark, an elder was coming from his employment from out a field at evening, and the man was from Mount Ephraim, and he was sojourning in Gabaa, and the men of the place were sons of Beniamin.

17. And he lifted up his eyes and saw the wayfarer in the public-square of the city; and the man, the elder said, Where art thou journeying and whence comest thou?

18. And he said unto him, We are going our way from Beethleem of Jouda, unto the thighs of Mount Ephraim; I am from there, and I went my way unto Beethleem of Jouda, and I am going my way to my own house, and there is no man of mark who gathereth me into his house.

19. And we have chaff and fodder for our asses, and there is bread and wine forme, and the house-maid and the young man with thy servants. There is no lack of anything.

20. And the man, the elder said, Peace be with thee. However any lack of thine is upon me; furthermore thou shalt spend the night in the public-square.

21. And he brought them into his house and made a place for the asses, and they washed their feet and ate and drank.

22. And they were gladdening their heart, and lo, men of the city, sons of evaders of the law encompassed the house, knocking at the door, and they spake unto the man, the lord of the house, the elder saying, Bring out the man who went into thy house, that we may know him.

23. And the man, the lord of the house, went out unto them and said. Brethren, no, Do not do evil to this after he hath entered into my house, do not do this act of folly.

24. See there is my daughter the virgin, and his concubine; I will lead them out and do ye humiliate them, and do to them that which is good in your eyes, and do not this act of folly to this man.

25. And the men were not satisfied to hearken to him, and the man took his concubine and led her out unto them; and they knew her and sported at her all the night long until dawn and they sent her away when the dawn arose.

26. And the woman came at dawn, and fell beside the door where her husband was until daylight.

27. And her husband arose at dawn and opened the door of the house, and went out to go on his journey, and lo, the woman, his concubine, fallen beside the door of the house, and her hands upon the door-sill.

28. And he said unto her, Arise and let us depart: and she did not answer because she was dead, and he took her upon the ass, and went his way into his place.

29. And he took his sword and laid hold of his concubine and divided her into twelve parts and sent them into every boundary of Israel.

30. And it came to pass that every one who saw said, It hath not occurred, nor hath there been seen from the day that the sons of Israel went up out of Egypt unto this day like this. Do ye take your own counsel in respect to her and talk.

COMMENT.

The event related in this chapter proved to be a very important incident in the intertribal relations of Israel and resulted in all but utterly wiping out the tribe of Beniamin whose city Gabaa had been guilty of this atrocious act. The tribe was judicially and rightly too, held responsible for the atrocity of its tribesmen, and when called upon and found unwilling to surrender to a judgment of death the perpetrators of this villainy, internecine war occurred all the other tribes of Israel arraying themselves against Beniamin. The events leading up to and the war itself being given in the next and the concluding chapter of this book of Judges.

The whole thing illustrates how God deals providentially with individual and national sins. We see idolatry demoralizing and debauching the nation tribe by tribe, and individual by individual, even to the priesthood until we find it possible for a whole tribe to condone and rush to arms to defend an atrocity which according to the record had been an unheard of one up to this time since the day the Lord had led them up out of the bond-service of Egypt. And what a requital! It vividly recalls the Lord's requital on us in this land for the sin of slavery through our four years internecine war for the integrity of the nation and the union. How it emphasizes moreover the importance of judicial procedure and a willingness on the part of all right-minded people to abide by it and its verdicts, rather than to submit to such questions to the gauge of battle and the barbarism of war with all its accompanying atrocities of blood and pillage.

Baptism.

The nature and object of baptism are so plainly stated in the Scriptures, and the Greek terms are so decisive in their primary use, as to lead all careful minds, who prefer the Word of God to vain tradition, to a correct conclusion. The multitudes who embraced Christianity in Apostolic times became converts on the evidence of Christ's resurrection. They considered baptism as an emblem of their natural death, and resurrection. This doctrine Paul most pointedly teaches in Rom. vi. It is evident from this that all who died in the faith of Christ died in the faith of the resurrection, and so they were baptized in the same faith. They received baptism as an emblem of death and burial, in voluntarily going under the water. They also received it as an emblem of the resurrection to eternal life in coming out of the water. Thus they were baptized for the dead, or in perfect faith in the resurrection of the dead. The Scriptures are to be obeyed in this ordinance, as in all the ordinances of the gospel by every one who accepts Christ as his Savior. The words of Jesus, we all admit, are clothed with power, because he is the great Teacher sent from God the Father, and whom we are "commanded to hear in all things, and obey. He spake with authority. "He spoke as never man spake." He is declared to be the wisdom and power of God to those who believe. Christ declares "the Word which ye hear is not mine, but the Father's which sent me." Then it follows that it is the duty of all who hear the gospel, to believe in Christ; this must be admitted by all. We ask you, is it their duty to be baptized also? Ans. it is your duty. But many hesitate to decide,—doubting the importance of baptism,—questioning why it should be required and what good it can do to be baptized. But why should they cavil thus in the face of the testimony of the dear Savior? His very last words (if I may so speak) before he ascended to the right hand of the Father, were, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature; he that believeth and is baptized, shall be saved".....Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you." From these words, falling from the lips of the Son of God, and in the ears of candid and thoughtful persons who believe Scriptures to be the Word of God, it would seem that no objections could possibly be made. In the apostolic times it was an ordinance which they gladly obeyed. "Then they that gladly received the Word were baptized." If we disregard the teaching of Christ and the Apostles concerning the ordinance of baptism, we have the same right to disregard their teachings concerning faith and repentance. God has coupled them altogether. "As the body without the spirit (breath) is dead, so faith without works is dead also." Baptism into Christ is called the obedience of faith; or, in other words, the first overt act of faith;—a sealing of our covenant relationship to God. "If we be planted together in the likeness of his death, we shall also be in the likeness of his resurrection." We always consider the four steps in attaining the sonship as inseparably connected, viz., first, faith; second, repentance; third, baptism; fourth, walking in a new life, or continuing in well-doing. We can not exalt one of these steps above another, therefore the accusation that we believe baptism, without qualification, is a saving ordinance, is false. But we say the duty to be immersed is as clearly and definitely stated, as the duty to believe and repent,—and no caviling, doubting or reasoning can evade it. We may think it foolish and unnecessary,—but so did Naaman, the Syrian captain. He thought it a foolish act to go and dip himself seven times in pardon for the cure of his leprosy.

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME XLVIII. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, JULY 12, 1899. NUMBER 25.

Entered at the Postoffice at Plymouth, Ind., as second class matter.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

CEASE to do evil is the first step in the way of reform. Learn to do well is the second.

WHEN one can give as good as he gets, it is very easy to forgive an injury,—it is when such ability is lacking that a greater effort is required.

IT is one of the heaviest penalties of wrong thinking and wrong living that they blur, if they do not obliterate, the very perceptions of good and evil.

DOCTOR Pierson says five words describe the biography of women in Eastern lands: "Unwelcome," at birth; "untaught" in childhood," uncherished" in widowhood, "unprotected" in old age, "unlamented" when dead.

THERE cannot be invented; it may be discovered, that is, uncovered. All so-called discoveries are but the result of the mind of man coming into greater harmony with the Divine mind. As in the natural order, all so-called inventions are but adaptations of existing material to eternally existing principles in nature, which is God under another aspect than we find him revealed in Christ. In the sphere of principles what a man invents cannot be truth; it is a lie, and the man is the father of it.

EVERY one really begotten of God through the Word of truth, knows by a thousand signs, that constrains him to love and come into fellowship and service with him, he means for them a clean, unselfish, unworldly life. One cannot love the things God loves and walk in his ways, without an inward propulsion in this direction. The truth of is this is demonstrated whenever we see a person lagging behind, and expecting to be carried pickn-back, or dragged along."

MORAL insensibility is reached gradually. It is a disease whose beginnings stretch back into the past. So imperceptibly does it steal on that the victim is seldom apprehensive of danger. It may manifest no alarming symptoms, while even working towards a fatal crisis. Jesus, on one occasion, when reasoning with the Pharisees, is said to have been grieved at the hardness of their hearts. He saw the hardening process going on as his Word was withstood, and knew what the result would be.

IT was a pathetic confession of Darwin "that spiritual apprehensions and sensibilities had died out of him." They had been starved to death, attenuated, or otherwise, but surely starved. We thank him for this confession, because it conflicts with much of his theory. He unwittingly undermines his foundation work. And his statement to a Bible believer, means that he had no eye to see or ear to hear spiritual things. Poor Darwin, he rightly diagnosed the case, and told the truth about it.

Married.

ANYONE of the mystical system of interpretation can be literal enough sometimes;—by far too literal as the following sentences prove:—"Moral rewards consist in the perpetuation of character: men receive the very things done in the body. Whatsoever they sow, that they also reap. The reward of holiness is more holiness. The reward of sin is more sin. So long as a soul by continuing to sin adds fresh fuel to the fire, hell can never burn itself out. The redeemed in heaven do not lose their liberty of choice.....Sin and righteousness needs to be continuously chosen." These sentences quoted from Campbell's much lauded work, "Unto the uttermost,"—could hardly be farther from the truth; the foundation of them being the murderous lie,—"Thou shalt not surely die."

WE clip the following from one of the Chicago papers:—"Under the title, 'What Jesus Would Not Do,' a few brief paragraphs frequently published in the London Independent, are going the rounds of the English religious press.

Jesus would not make 'getting rich' or 'getting on' the goal of his existence.

He would not wish to enjoy anything which was neither the result of his own labor nor the joyful gift of love.

He would not wear gold nor ornaments which had cost painful and degrading human labor. Nor would he allow the little birds and beasts that his Father cares for to be recklessly slaughtered to deck him with ruthless and furs.

He would not seek immunity from peril or pain by voluntarily inflicting tortures or diseases on innocent and healthy animals.

He would not be present at amusements which profane the bodies and pollute the souls of those who gain their bread by providing them.

He would not waste food or fuel while others are perishing for need of them. He would not trail yards of costly fabrics along the ground behind him while others lack proper and decent garments.

Jesus would not earn his bread by following any employment or producing any material injurious to the moral or physical well-being of the community.

He would not seek to secure for relatives 'after the flesh' any appointment or honor of which they were not worthy, or of which others were more worthy.

Jesus would not underpay or overwork strangers in order to provide for the idleness or luxury of kinsmen or descendants.

He would not condone faults or vices in the wealthy and powerful.

Jesus would not, in times of popular excitement, write false and fiery articles to the papers, by which passions are fanned into fury and wars are promoted.

He would not lend armies into other men's countries. Nor would he invent scientific means for the wholesale destruction of human lives. He would not fill children's story books with scenes of battle, murder, and violent death.

He would not demand celibacy where he could not secure chastity.

He would not violate the sanctities of womanhood in hope of saving men from the consequences of their sins.

Jesus, seeing his Father's image in all men, would not describe people by vulgar epithets derived from the color of their skins.

Having no spiteful prejudices or jealousies against any class or race of human beings, he would not invent slanderous fiction to try to justify such prejudices.

He would not hinder a man having a darker shade of skin from sitting in a railway carriage by his side.

Jesus would not refrain from telling those who do such things that they are not yet Christians, and should never so describe themselves.

Jesus would not despise a woman because she earned her bread by doing those household duties without which homes cannot exist.

He would never use the words "menial duties," because whatever is duty is glorious.

Jesus would not despise the mistakes of the poor and ignorant, the futile aspirations of the suppressed, for the despair of the wronged.

Jesus would not rashly destroy any beauty which had come from the hand of his Father.

Jesus would never do a deed in itself evil, on the plea that it might lead to good.

Jesus would never sacrifice others to himself on the score of his own superiority.

Immortality and the Kingdom of God.

"SO deeply has the dogma of the immortality of the soul taken root in the minds of men, and so tenaciously is it held by the professing Christian Church of to-day that it becomes necessary to continually reiterate the revealed truth-attested fact that everlasting life is not an attribute of

HUMAN NATURE,

that it is not derived from our parents by natural birth, but is the gift of God through Jesus Christ his Son. Consequently it is to any man as yet only a matter of hope. It is promised, and he who promised is faithful to fulfill his Word. Men will receive it if he accepts it with the conditions. But as it is it cannot be a present possession. Paul distinctly says that the possession of eternal life was as yet but one of hope. It is his, but for the present it is hid with Christ in God for him against that day when the Life-giver shall appear."

A SUBJECT OF FAITH,

The tremendous lie above referred to beclouds the mental vision of all who believe it. It throws the whole truth of God out of place. It ought to be known that everything pertaining to the redemption of the world by God's love, is intimately connected with the Jewish nation—that salvation is of the Jews, but it is not. All that be known in that direction is that Jesus was a Jew, but the religionists of this age cannot be made to know that the kingdom Jesus preached the coming of is the restored

KINGDOM OF ISRAEL.

If the proofs that it is, were all of them found in the Old Testament there would be some little excuse for them, but when we come to the words of Gabriel to Mary in Luke i. 30-32, that the Lord God will give to Jesus the throne of his father David, and that over the house of Jacob forever, and of his kingdom there shall be no end, they have no manner of excuse. It is the reiterated testimony of the Scriptures that the kingdom to which the saints of God are called, the kingdom promised to them that love God and are called according to his purpose, is

HE SHALL REIGN

A HEBREW KINGDOM.

It is not a place away off beyond the skies where immortal souls are supposed to dwell in the eternal sunshine of God's presence and glory. It is not an ecclesiastical organization known as the church,—neither is it a state of mind engendered by the reception of what is styled evangelical religion. The kingdom is not a mythical one,—a mere abstraction,—it is real and substantial, as the name imports. We want people to realize that the phrase is used in contradistinction to the "kingdom of men." These are equally real, but the latter are transitory in their character. They are only permitted to exist for a time. Their abolition is decreed, and we are told by the prophet Daniel that upon their ruins will rise the everlasting, and of God. The one will succeed the other as morning does the night, and be as real as their predecessors, and more so, because the kingdoms of men are in their very constitution changing and evanescent, their existence depending upon the support of perishing mortals,—while the kingdom of God will be founded upon the unchangeable Word of the Eternal and upheld by the strength of his mighty arm. It will be immovable.

"THE KINGDOM OF GOD"

UNIVERSAL KINGDOM

IT WILL STAND FOREVER.

Hence the term kingdom suggests at once to the mind the existence of all that pertains to a kingdom, king, territory, metropolis, rulers, subjects, laws, etc., and what there will be in the future kingdom of God are plainly revealed in

THE SCRIPTURES OF TRUTH.

The territory is the land of Israel, the land promised to Abraham, turned into Paradise and extending from the river of Egypt to the river Euphrates. The King is the once rejected and despised Nazarine, Jesus of Nazareth, who is at the right hand of God, exalted to be a Prince and a Savior, now ever living, a royal priest after the order of Melchizedec. The nation is the re-united twelve tribes of Israel inhabiting the land of their fathers, cleansed from their iniquity by acknowledging the claims of Jesus their Messiah, and rendering a willing obedience to him as their King.

THE KING OF THE JEWS,

THE METROPOLIS

is Jerusalem purified and sanctified, no more the city of mourning and weeping, the home of the uncircumcised and the unclean, but a city of righteousness, a faithful city, a quiet habitation, a tabernacle that shall not be taken down.

ITS LAWS

are divine, for out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the Word of the Lord from Jerusalem.

ITS RULERS,

princes, priests and nobles consist of all those Jews after the flesh, who walked in the steps of the faith of their father Abraham which he had being yet uncircumcised; and those Jews after the Spirit, who embraced the faith of Abraham as the seed promised to him, accept him as the way, the truth, and the life, by repentance toward God and baptism into the Anointed for the remission of sins and continue steadfast unto the end of their probationary career."

RECOGNIZE JESUS

This is the truth of God in outline; the very essential truth that saves, because it is the substance of what God offers to those who believe and obey him. And the only conditions exacted by him. In a word—The Gospel of the Grace of God.

Ingratitude.

"Hear, O heavens, and give ear, O earth: for the Lord hath spoken: I have nourished and brought up children, and they have rebelled against me. The ox knoweth his owner, and the ass his master's crib: but Israel doth not know, my people doth not consider." Isa. 1:2-3.

There was a time when the writer thought that the above complaint applied only to the Jews. Not only this sin, but nearly all other heinous sins described in the Scriptures. I thought the only one capable of such crime was the Jew.

No, I do not think so any more. A few years ago while on a visit to Richmond, Va., I heard an old Methodist minister attempt to preach from "I have nourished and brought up children, and they have rebelled against me." I say he tried: well, that was what he did. He had uttered only a few sentences, when he broke down and sat down. We all concluded that it was vertigo, or some such thing, but the real cause soon went from ear to ear. The text fit a little too well his own experience. His children had turned out badly, had rebelled against him, would curse him as being the meanest man in Richmond, if he refused them the last dollar in his purse. It was a very touching scene in that Richmond church, when that old preacher attempted to discuss the ingratitude of Israel. Every one present appeared to understand the situation, many of them mingled their tears with his; knowing what terrible trials he had in his home. His wife and daughters as well as his sons, were very disrespectful to the old man. And strange to say, mother and children, in the presence of the neighbors, were models of good breeding. It was only in the presence of husband, father, head of the house, that they became sullen, coarse, disrespectful. The old man used to remark that his family could be nice to every body but him. No one was more attentive to the sick in the neighborhood than the preacher's wife (so it was said), but when her husband was sick she turned him in bed with a pitchfork, (so he said), and his children thought it was very funny.

Is it any wonder the old man broke down when trying to preach from, "I have nourished and raised up children, and they have rebelled against me"? Reader, have you ever known such children and such a mother? Are there any in Indiana? We have plenty of them here in Baltimore, and all over the United States. Yes, I think we have more of them to the square foot in our own country than in other Christian lands. Excessive kindness is not always rewarded with gratitude (hundreds of people are spoiled by it). I have nourished, and they turned me in bed when sick with a pitch fork. Have we not here a very good picture of the good moral man? The man who pays his debts, a good citizen, gives 16 ounces to the pound, etc., has a kind word and a smile for every one, but his Lord and Master? Our Father in heaven is not recognized by the man who thinks all he has to do to be saved, is just to treat his fellow man right.

The preacher's family, to my mind, is very much like the moralist. They did not recognize God as having any claim on his gratitude, for sending the Christ, our blessed Lord Jesus, to give himself for us. "I have nourished and brought up children, etc" Father, mother, do you know anything about the ingratitude of a son or daughter? You giving them nearly all your store, and have them abuse you, because you did not give them more? If you do then, you can understand better the nature of God's complaint about Israel's ingratitude.

Respectfully submitted,

ISAAC MCCURRY, Sr.

What Constitutes a Christian?

This is called the Christian dispensation to distinguish it from the patriarchal, or Mosaic or old dispensation. Why is this? It is because the Christ has come and instituted a new and living way, whereby men can rid themselves of sin and stand justified before God, and be heirs of all that God has promised to bestow upon those who love him.

Again, this is called a Christian country. Why is this? Is it because the people as a whole, or a majority of them have accepted the gospel of Christ, and complied with the gospel conditions? It would be natural to think so, if we knew no better. The gospel of Christ has not been accepted, the conditions of salvation have not been complied with, and we are under the necessity of asking again, why is this called a Christian country, when the gospel of Christ is not accepted? It might be well to call it Christian to distinguish it from the pagan or heathen world, who worship gods of their own making, blocks of carved wood or stone, or some four-footed beast.

Is this called a Christian country, because the gospel of Christ is printed and circulated, and devoutly revered by the tens and even hundreds of thousands of people, without knowing exactly why? It is regarded as God's good message to man, but they do not know what the good message is about, they clasp it to their breast as the pearl of great price; but if asked the reason why, they could not tell you. Again, this may be called a Christian country because of the beneficial influence the Bible has had on the people. This influence pervades everything about us to a greater or less extent, everything bears a different aspect from what it would without the Bible. But for all that, there is a vast difference between admitting the favorable influences exerted by the Bible, and being a Bible Christian.

I want to hurt no one's feelings, but men and women are either Bible Christians or no Christians at all. It is the belief and practice of Bible truth that constitutes a Christian. We learn in Acts ii 26, that the disciples were first called Christians at Antioch. What constituted them Christians? Was it that they believed in Jesus as the Son of God and the Savior of the world? I answer no, this alone will make no one a Christian. The demons believed this much and trembled, but they were demons all the same. In like manner, the one who is an alien from the commonwealth of Israel, and a stranger to the covenant of promise, may believe in Jesus as the Son of God, Son of David and Savior of the world, according to the popular idea, and remain an alien still, if he does not comply with the laws of citizenship, or naturalization. It makes no difference how much a person believes in, or about the constitution of the United States, unless he complies with the laws of naturalization he can never be a citizen. He must put off the old Englishman, old Scotchman, or the old Frenchman, or the old German, and put on the new man created by the constitution of the United States, and become politically and legally a new man, before he is entitled to the immunities and privileges of the national household, and, as no amount of love of, or esteem for, this country will make him a citizen; so no amount of professed regard for God, or Christ will make him a fellow citizen with the saints and the household of God, till he proves his faith in the things promised, and complies with the conditions imposed. Jesus' words for it, "Ye are my friends, if you do WHATSOEVER I COMMAND YOU." This the disciples at Antioch had done. They had believed the teachings of Christ, they had complied with the conditions imposed, and were thus entitled to the name Christian.

Editor Restitution:

Now that we are having so much good poetry, not only in THE RESTITUTION, but in other publications of the church. I think we ought to have a book of poems published. It is possible that the money to pay for the publishing could be raised by subscription. In this way we could preserve all of the poems of dearly beloved Father Chaplin and Sister Roberts, and a great many others who have fallen asleep, besides the poems of many living authors. It is now conceded that all literature had its beginning in poetry or rhyme, and that truths taught in that way are most lasting. In fact no literature can be permanent without poetry. If it was known that worthy poems would be given a place in a bound volume, it would be a great stimulus for those persons who express themselves in rhyme to do their best. I think it would be a good plan for teachers to encourage the Sunday School scholars to commit to memory poems that teach the truths that we feel are of such vital interest, and hear them recite them in the Sunday school. Most of us, in looking back over our past life can see that the Sunday school hymns and literature had a great deal of influence in forming our theology. A sagacious man once said, "Let me write the children's songs and you may make their laws."

MARY W. BARCLAY.

Editor Restitution:

I have a tract before me written by a brother in Toronto, Ont. In it there is one passage of Scripture quoted that he seems to have some difficulty with, and it may be that others have the same difficulty, so I thought I would give an explanation, which I think does away with all trouble. You will find it in John xi. 26, and it reads, "And whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die, believest thou this?" He claims that it is necessary to add again (to make sense) after liveth. The way he puts it is this. "I am the resurrection and the life, he that believeth in me, though he die, yet shall he live again, and whosoever liveth again and believeth in me shall never die." This will make the passage refer to him after the resurrection, but if properly understood it applies to the time of the resurrection. See 1 Cor. xv. 51, also 1 Thes. iv. 15, 16, 17, these passages refer to the same time, the time of the resurrection when the dead are to be raised and the righteous living changed and caught up with them to meet the Lord in the air, and so shall we ever be with the Lord. I think if he would allow the passage to apply to the time it refers to, he would not have to add anything to it, as it will make sense without it, and we are commanded not to add to, or to take from the Scriptures.

I submit this to your readers, hoping it may be of benefit to some,

J. E. H.

A while back I was reading in THE RESTITUTION an excellent article on Spiritualism by B. V. Reed, and as I read I copied the references and had them in order, and read them, and how connected they were, and the thought has been with me ever since how nice it would be to have portions of Scriptures, on different subjects arranged in order, (with references) with some systematic order. It would be just what I have wanted for a long while for reading at mission meetings, woman's meetings in general, and to give away—sometimes. I don't think the men would care about it as much as the women, but topics on Holy Spiritualism. Spiritual life, (contrast) carnal life, belief or faith, salvation work, overcomers, trust, kingdom and coming of the Lord, love, fear, joy, rejoicings, immortality, truth, steadfastness, peace, and if it could be gotten up, and printed on good paper with cheap binding, I do not doubt but in time there would be a great many in demand—if it was once known that we could get them—and perhaps get some to reading that would not any other way. I just throw out the idea that might be enlarged upon, and as many topics taken up as the compiler might desire. There are so many isms advanced all around us that many get so careless, and do not know what to believe, yet they do no searching forth themselves. I leave this, to do with as you think best, as the truth shall make us free,

MRS. LIZZIE WARREN.

Thought and Language.

A perfect thought will always clothe itself in appropriate language, and when people suppose that they are in want of words to express themselves, they are really in want of thought—have only got hold of a part of a thought instead of the complete thought, and are in difficulty about the clothing of an unformed thing. De Rotz says that strong emotions find their utterances in monosyllables, and the language of the poor in grief is often of an earnestness and simplicity rising to eloquence. Out of the fulness of the heart the mouth speaketh.

Say nothing, do nothing, which a good mother would not approve, and you are on the certain road to happiness.

Poetry.

Waiting for the Bridegroom.

"Surely, I come quickly. Amen! Even so, come, Lord Jesus." Rev. xxii. 20.

"I am coming, coming quickly;'
'Twas the Master's farewell word:
Keep your lamps well trimmed and burning,
Nor in sloth your loins angird.

As the thief with stealing footstep,
In the darkness draweth nigh,
I shall come when men are sleeping,
Terrible the midnight cry!

As from farthest east the lightning
Shining to the distant west,
Lighting up the hidden valleys,
And the mountain's snowy crest.

So will I come swift appearing,
Sudden joy to waiting hearts:
While in dread dismay the sleeper
From his dream of folly starts.

I am coming; not in weakness,
As to Bethlehem long ago:
But with angel-hosts attending,
Victory over every foe.

Saints from earth's remotest graves I shall meet me,
Living saints caught up shall be;
And the Kingdom of my glory
Cover earth from sea to sea.

I am coming, but none knoweth,
Neither man nor angel fair,
When shall be that solemn Advent,
And the day of God appear:

But the faithful shall be crowned,
And with me shall walk in white,
Through the everlasting ages,
In the world of perfect light.

Hail by all the storm-cloud gaiter
And the air is full of dread;
Sin's dark hosts around us muster
Earth to earth seems almost dead.

But the bridal souls are waiting,—
Chosen, precious, sealed, as I'm
Waiting for the Bridegroom's coming.
Strong in hope that maketh pure.

Christian Doctrine and Private Prosperity.

"Upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store, as God hath prospered him, that there be no gatherings when I come." 1 Cor. xvi. 2.

"But I say, he which soweth sparingly shall reap also sparingly, and he which soweth bountifully shall reap also bountifully." 2 Cor. ix. 6.

These two passages from the two epistles of Paul to the Church at Corinth are well worthy of careful study by every Christian, and it will be long before we exhaust the subject. It is assumed by the title of my subject that there is a connection between Christianity, or Christian teachings and our own personal prosperity or success. If this be correct, we will find it in the Book from whence those doctrines are derived. It is not assumed that the two passages just quoted cover the subject, or even fairly outline it; their context makes it perfectly evident that they relate to the giving to, or for, the support of the church, or the brethren in distant parts who were in need; and the principle upon which the giving was to be done—the basis upon which it would be acceptable to God is well established.

I will first consider these texts as we find them, and then extend its principle to other matters. In the matter of giving, the Apostle is very explicit, both as to when to give and how much to give; also as to the result of giving, whether it be "grudgingly and of necessity or cheerfully."

"Upon the first day of the week," says Paul, "let every one of you lay by him in store." There are two thoughts in this sentence, and both of them should be fully emphasized in our minds. They are "frequency" and "regularity." The divinely inspired Apostle was moved by the Holy Spirit to make the intervals between giving very short. This was Divine Wisdom, not man's. "On the first day of the week" does not mean, do it one week and then miss three or four. It means every week, as sure as the day comes around.

Paul evidently knew, and we have often observed the same thing, that a little given regularly and often is not felt as much by the giver as large donations given irregularly, and we see from this the wisdom of Paul's exhortation. It is the frequency and regularity which makes the gifts valuable.

Next, notice the broadness of the law. I call it a "law," because to all who are striving to fulfill the Royal Law spoken of by James in his epistle to the twelve tribes scattered abroad, (James ii. 8) to them it is a law. The breadth consists in the words "every one of you." No exceptions: no limitations, more than is added in the words, "As God hath prospered him." This is enough and perfectly adapts itself to any and all conditions. Like all of God's laws, it is perfect and needs no amendment. "Every one of you" includes every member of the One Body, and as every member of our physical body shares in the labors, pains, joys or sorrows of the whole body, and so in the church, every member should bear a part—not the same part, but that for which they are best fitted.

Nor can we forget that we are bound to recognize that what we have is due to God's kindly Providence watching over us. This is distinctly taught by Paul in the words, "As God hath prospered him," which also agrees exactly with the words of Jesus: "Seek first the kingdom of God, and all things shall be added unto you."

Another thought is that there is exact justice and wisdom in this, as also in the second passage,—that about sowing and reaping. In the latter, although the language is figurative, it is unmistable, which is not always the case with figurative language. It is the God of nature who best uses the known laws of nature to illustrate his meaning regarding spiritual things. Reader, Did you ever notice how profusely the seed has to be sown to ensure a bountiful harvest? What would the sower gain if he withheld the few bushels of grain or seed needful to bring him the bountiful harvest? Sometimes he has to cut his living allowance down to a very meagre fare in order to sow the seed which is required to do this. He knows only too well that if he soweth sparingly "so also will he reap."

Does not Paul liken us all to sowers of seed, and does he not apply the same rule to "the good seed of the kingdom" and to all the works of faith? If we sow sparingly we shall reap sparingly as surely in spiritual as in natural things.

But concerning prosperity. All desire to prosper according to their own definition of prosperity, which differs widely with different classes of people. The world generally judges that a man is prospering if his business is thriving and he is making money rapidly, regardless of all other things. If he can live luxuriously and indulge every desire he is called very prosperous, while at the same time he may be poverty stricken in health, and a bankrupt in morality, and utterly destitute of a hope of eternal life, but in spite of all these facts, from the world's point of view he is "a prosperous man." But of all such Job says: "In prosperity the destroyer shall come upon him." For says Solomon, "The prosperity of fools shall destroy them."

It is not their prosperity that destroys but their foolishness. Read Luke xii. 15, and context, for there we learn that "A man's life consisteth not in the abundance of things which he possesseth." Why then should any deal with a slack hand in the work of the Lord; in which work he has not only pledged himself, but all he possesses? "All that a man hath will he give for his (natural) life." How much more then should he cheerfully give in the work of him through whom he hath hope of eternal life.

David says: "Rest in the Lord, and wait patiently for him: fret not thyself because of him who prospereth in his way, because of the man who bringeth wicked devices to pass." David does not stop here, but gives us the reason why we should "wait patiently" in the face of these discouraging surroundings:—"For evil-doers shall be cut off." That is good as far as it goes, but what else, David? We are interested in knowing the whole truth. Answer: "But those that wait upon the Lord shall inherit the earth." Psa. xxxvii. 7-9. That is where the patient waiting ends and where the prosperity of his people begins. That will be prosperity indeed, and it is "forever."

In Gen. xxxix. 2, we find it recorded that "The Lord was with Joseph and he was a prosperous man." Compare his whole history with the story of that rich man who said unto himself: "Saul, thou hast much goods." Two extremes here meet in two characters, each called a prosperous man,—the prosperous man of God and the prosperous man of the world.

Great wealth and power were brought to Joseph because of his faithfulness to God, and he became second only to the Pharaoh in Egypt, but like Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, his father and forefathers, he was also rich in faith, believing the promises made unto them, and in his dying hour gave such directions and instructions to his children as showed his strong confidence in them. He knew the truth expressed in the words of Jesus: "For what is a man profited if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul (or life) or what shall a man give in exchange for his life."

It is written, "They that trust in their wealth and boast themselves in the abundance of their riches—none of them can by any means redeem his brother, nor give to God a ransom for him. Joseph having wisdom from God was not concerned about his riches or the disposal of them, but pointed to the future fulfillment of the promises as his strong consolation and hope, for if the wealth of the world is not sufficient to redeem one life from destruction, what sums can be too strong to express the foolishness of one who, for a little pleasure or selfishness loses himself the opportunity of unending blessedness, with all that the mind can conceive or heart desire in the kingdom of God on earth?

Esau gave up his birthright for a "mess of pottage." Remembering that "if ye be Christ's ye are Abraham's seed and heirs, according to the promise." Are any of us who claim this heirship going to be like Esau? Having parted with that right and hope of inheritance he found "no place of repentance, though he sought it carefully with tears." Heb. xii. 17. Let each make a personal application of the lesson.

But all that has been said on the subject of giving may just as well apply, in principle, to the giving of time and other service to the Master's cause, which is of equal importance with the giving of money. If we do not willingly give our time and talents to his cause, the time is in sight when we will not give anything at all. The Lord loveth the cheerful giver of these things as much as the cheerful giver of money, and measures his gifts by the same rule. "Unto whom much is given, of him much shall be required."

Let us all resolve then to give in all ways, as realizing that we are not our own, but were bought with a price. Therefore whatsoever our hands find to do, let us do with our might, for the night cometh when no man can work.

The Story of Dry Bones

CAN THESE BONES LIVE?

"Thus saith the Lord God.....Behold ye shall live." "I will lay sinews upon you and will bring up flesh upon you, and cover you with skin, and put breath in you, and ye shall live: and ye shall know that I am the Lord." Ezek. xxxvii. 5.

"The breath came into them and they lived and stood upon their feet." "Then he said unto me, Son of Man, these bones are the whole house of Israel: behold they say, our bones are dried, and our hope is lost, we are cut off."

It will be noticed that the prophet goes into great detail in foretelling the events which are to take place. He speaks of the dry bones. There are a great many of them and they are very dry. They have been accumulating since the days of Abraham down to the time of the general resurrection.

In the first chapter of the Bible, God gives an account of creation. But being very desirous that the matter may be fully understood, he repeats the account in the second chapter, going into greater detail with reference to those things in which the greatest interest centers. So in this prophecy, which we are now considering, he seems to be so very desirous that the matter shall be fully understood and comprehended, that he causes the prophet to repeat his saying over and over again.

He first asks the question, "Can these bones live?" And answers it himself by saying, "Behold, I will cause breath to enter into you and ye shall live." v. 5. Then he goes on and repeats, "I will lay sinews upon you, and will bring up flesh upon you and will cover you with skin, and put breath in you, and ye shall live." v. 6.

But why does the Lord do all this? For what purpose are these people made alive? After telling them that they shall live, he says "and ye shall know that I am the Lord." v. 6. The only object which he has in making them alive, is that they may come to know that he is the Lord.

Twice has God repeated, in this short prophecy, the statement that "Ye shall live." But he is not content with repeating it twice. Again he says, "The breath came into them and they lived and stood upon their feet." v. 10. But the matter is so important that the God of the Universe can only wait for the prophet to utter a few short sentences before he directs him to repeat the statement that they shall live in the following words, "Behold, O my people, I will open your graves, and cause you to come up out of your graves." v. 12. And still once more, "Ye shall know that I am the Lord when I have opened your graves, O my people, and brought you up out of your graves." v. 13.

This is a resurrection scene. Most of these people had been dead a very long time and their bones were very dry. When they shall be made alive and remember that they are of the house of Israel, they will say, "Our hope is lost, we are cut off." This will be a very natural thing for them to say. They will know perfectly well, that before their death they had transgressed God's law and were therefore unworthy of his blessings, and hence will say "Our hope is lost." If it was not for the fact that our heavenly Father is so very generous and long-suffering with frail humanity, they truly would have no hope. Their hope would be gone because of their disobedience. But as God did unto the wicked Ninevites, when they repented at the preaching of Jonah, so will he do to the "whole house of Israel."

The most remarkable thing with reference to God's dealings with mankind is the pertinacity with which he harps to the descendants of Abraham. How many chances that people have had, and how many more they are to have, as foretold by the prophecies, to make their peace with God, and receive the boon of eternal life as their reward! Don't tell me that the Ruler of the Universe is a fraud Master, "reaping where he has not sown and gathering where he has not strewn." Will God exhaust his mercies on the Israelites, who have been worshiping heathen gods, bowing down to "wood and stone," and reserve none for the balance of the race?

"Therefore, prophesy and say unto them, thus saith the Lord God, Behold, O my people, I will open your graves and cause you to come up out of your graves and bring you into the land of Israel." This all takes place at the general resurrection. The proof of this lies in the fact that all who are brought up out of their graves and are made alive, as foretold by this prophecy, are raised to mortal life. The life principle which causes these people to live, is the breath. Adam became a living being when the breath was breathed into his nostrils. He was mortal. So these Israelites who are made to live, by the breath will be mortal. All who have part in the first resurrection, are raised to immortal life. Paul in speaking of the first resurrection in Cor. xv., says, "It was sown a natural body, it is raised a spiritual body." Again those who have part in the first resurrection are caugh away to meet the Lord in the air. But these dead Israelites, when they are taken out of their graves and made alive are to be brought "into the land of Israel." Persons who have part in the first resurrection do not say as do these Israelites, "Our hope is lost, we are cut off." Far from it.

The prophet says of these Israelites, after their resurrection, "Ye shall know that I am the Lord." How will they come to know the Lord? What are the means which God uses to bring persons to this knowledge? It is the preaching of the gospel. John, the Baptist, as the forerunner of Christ, preached. Christ began his ministry by preaching. Jesus sent out the twelve apostles and directed them to "go preach, saying the kingdom of heaven is at hand." Later Jesus chose the seventy and sent them out to preach. Paul was sent to preach to the Gentiles. "The Spirit of the Lord God is upon me because the Lord has anointed me to preach good tidings unto the meek." Is. lx. 1 Jonah was sent to Nineveh to preach. Peter preached to Cornelius and his house. I might name any number of proof texts to show that God's plan of making himself known to any person or people, is by the preaching of the gospel and so when he says to the dead Israelites, as he does in this prophecy, "Ye shall know that I am the Lord," he means to instruct them in the usual and ordinary way, by having the gospel preached unto them. Why will these Israelites be resurrected and be made to know the Lord? God has but one purpose and one object, and can have but one purpose and one object, in making himself known to any member of the human family. It is for the sole and only purpose of giving them an opportunity of repenting of their sins, and obeying the gospel that they may obtain the reward of all the faithful. We learn therefore from this prophecy,

1. That all the Israelites shall be resurrected.

2. That after they are alive, they shall be taken to their own land.

3. That they shall be so instructed that they shall come to know the Lord, and have an opportunity of obeying and obtaining the reward.

4. This all takes place after the general resurrection and after the close of the millennium.

"O the depth of the riches and knowledge of God, how unsearchable are his judgments and his ways past finding out." Rom. xi. 33.

Doctrine of Devils.

"Now the Spirit speaketh expressly, that in the latter days some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits, and doctrine of devils." 1 Tim. iv. 1.

Can we prove that to be the case now? I think with very little trouble we can. People are preaching, and contending stoutly that we have eternal life now, and will never die, which is the doctrine of the serpent—devil, "Ye shall not surely die." Gen. ii. 1; John viii. 44. Referring back to Eden, and deceiving many.

I ask some of these people, even ministers, that advocate this God-dishonoring doctrine for an explanation, and to tell me what this "inner man" is, that never dies? And when they get him? Now, two ministers, one a missionary, tells me, that the "inner man," which is the immortal man that never dies, and is the real man, is the "Spirit of Christ." The "Holy Spirit," gives Rom. viii. 9; 1 Cor. vi. 19 to prove it, and affirm "This never dies," and seem to think they have us sure, but never take time to think what they have done, and the position they place themselves in. I tell them the Holy Spirit is a part of the God-head. Matt. xxviii. 19; John xiv. 26; xv. 26; Acts ii. 1-4. Now, I tell them, that if the Holy Spirit is yourself, as you claim, then you are God, or a part of the God-head. There is no other conclusion to come too, and give them warning. Acts xiv. 11, 15.

Paul said, ver. 15, we also are men of like passions with you, and for them to turn from vanities unto the living God. Now, it seems to me, the people now, are setting forth strange gods. That's what the people said Paul seemed to be doing, because Paul preached unto them Jesus and the resurrection. Acts xvii. 18. This "doctrine of devils" was taught to mother Eve in Gen. iii. 4, 5. Listen, "For God knows that in the day ye eat thereof, then your eyes shall be opened, and ye shall be as gods, not quite God, but "as gods," about the same as those claiming they have eternal life now in this life.

Then again, Paul speaks of the "sons of perdition," and falling away, the Apostle warns us by saying, "Let no man deceive you by any means: for that shall not come, except there come a falling away first, and that man of sin be revealed, the son of perdition, so that he as God sitteth in the temple of God, shewing himself that he is God," and this mystery of iniquity was at work in Paul's day. 2 Thes. ii. 3, 4, 7. And these people claiming the Holy Spirit to be the inner man, and this inner man is themselves, the real man, and will never die, if this allegation does not make them "as gods," and is the "doctrine of devils," then I give it up. The Apostle speaks of man being "in Christ." 2 Cor. v. 17. And if "Christ be in you," Rom. viii. 10, one God and Father of all, who is above all, and through all, and in you all, Eph. iv. 6, that does not make us Christ and God; if it did, there would be gods many, and lords many, but Paul says, "But to us there is but one God." 1 Cor. viii. 5, 6. But how does Christ dwell in us? Paul, "That Christ may dwell in your hearts by faith;" Eph. iii. 17, and this "inner man" is the mind, for Paul said, "With the mind I myself serve the law of God." Rom. vii 25. But we have the "mind" of Christ. 1 Cor. ii. 16. "God hath given us the spirit of a sound mind." 2 Tim. i. 7. What for? "I will put my laws into their minds." Heb. viii. 10. "Be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind." Rom. xii. 2. "And be renewed in the spirit of your mind." Eph. iv. 23. "The new man which is renewed in knowledge." Col. iii. 10. Paul says, "We have the 'mind' of Christ." 1 Cor. ii. 16. "Now if any man have not the 'Spirit' of Christ, he is none of his." Rom. viii. 9. "Mind" of Christ and "spirit" of Christ seems to be the same, with which Paul served the law of God. Rom. vii. 25. Eternal life we have by promise. 1 John ii. 25. Which Paul says, "In hope of eternal life, which God, who cannot lie, promised before the world began." Titus i. 2. "And this is the record which God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is in his Son, Christ. When will we get this eternal life? If ye will not believe what I said in Matt. xix. 29; Mark x. 29, 30; Luke xiv. 14; xviii. 29, 30; Matt. xvi. 27; Matt. xxv. 46; Rev. xxii. 12; John v. 28, 29, Ye would not believe one though he rose from the dead." Eternal life is promised to them who by patient continuance in well doing seek for glory and honor and immortality, eternal life. Rom. ii. 7. And they will get it at the resurrection of the just. Luke xiv. 14. "It is sown a natural body; it is raised a spiritual body." 1 Cor. xv. 44.

I hope to meet all the saints in the kingdom,

Obituary.

Elias Middlekauff was born in Washington Co., Md., Dec. 14, 1817; coming west in the year 1846, he settled in Pine Creek Township, Ogle Co., Ill., where he continued to reside, following the vocation of a farmer until 1877: he then moved to Oregon, where he resided until last summer, when he went to live with his daughter, Mrs. P. S. Burchell, in Chicago, where he died on the 4th of May, after only a few weeks illness, at the age of 82 years. He was married to Miss Elizabeth Ridenour of Hagerstown, Md., before coming west, who died 5 years ago. He became the father of ten children, only four survive him. The remains were brought out from Chicago on Saturday to his sons, who resides near his old homestead, in Pine Creek, until Sunday. The funeral services were held at the Dunkard Salem church. The sermon was preached by Bro. Hudler, his text being the future state of the dead, which left quite an impression on his audience. His friends opening the service by singing, "In the days of all days, when the world shall be judged.

And the chaff from the wheat shall in them mightily tossed;
Then the righteous shall shine as the stars in the sky,
And their place shall be at the Savior's right hand.

Let me find a place with that happy band,
Who shall ever abide at the Savior's right hand.

But the wicked who will not repent and believe,
And will never give up to the Master's command;
Shall be placed on the left as unworthy to be,
With the children of God at the Savior's right hand.

We are journeying on to eternity now,
On the banks of death's Jordan we sometime shall stand:
Shall we force to pass over the dark rolling flood,
Lest our portion be not at the Savior's right hand.

If our Shepherd he is, and we follow his call,
He will lead us safe home to that beautiful land;
And with crowns on our brows, and with branches of palm,
We shall ever abide at the Savior's right hand.

At the close friends sang, "May God be with you till we meet again." Father joined the Church of God in 1861, and his home was the stopping place of many of like precious faith, while attending Conference in Northern Illinois. In his latter days he became totally blind, and was in that condition for five years, but nevertheless he remained cheerful, and the last words he spoke to his daughter-in-law, Mrs. J. Middlekauff, were good by, may God bless you. He died in hope of soon meeting Christ, the Life-giver, who will open the eyes of the blind.

John R. Harris was born in Wayne County, O., May 27, 1837; came to Marshall County, Ind., in the year 1852; died July 2, 1899, aged 62 years, 1 month and 4 days. Leaves surviving him one daughter, two brothers and one sister. Funeral services were conducted by R. C. Railsback, July 3rd. A large number of friends and relatives were present.

Idleness.

The proverb tells us that idle persons can never find time for anything; and the reason is that they have always a huge bundle of arrears to engross their attention. They can do little or nothing because they are always intending to do a vast deal, or, more strictly speaking, because they have always a vast deal waiting to be done.

Signs of the Times.

1. Is it not evident to the most casual observer, that these are times of excessive worldliness? Gain and gayety are the two grand idols of the age. Together they enthrall the hearts, absorb the energies, and command the homage of the multitude. Everywhere men are in haste to be rich, and utterly unscrupulous as to the means used to secure the boon. Health is imperiled, physical and mental powers are over-taxed, conscience stifled, character and reputation sacrificed, and most of all to be deplored, the eternal welfare of the soul neglected, in order to gratify a towering ambition, or an insatiable avarice. This spirit is seen in the unseemly scramble for office, in the shameless abuse of power, in the eager pursuit of pleasure, in the prevalence of reckless speculation and grasping selfishness, and in extravagant expenditure of money on costly furniture, needless luxuries, and superfluous dress—in the latter instance not only despising Christian simplicity, but in many cases outraging all propriety and good taste, and displaying complete disregard to health and comfort, so that homage may be rendered at the shrine of fashion. This evil saps the very foundations of society, and awakens suspicion and distrust. It often sunders the dearest and tenderest ties, while it perverts and degrades the noblest gifts. It is especially fraught with peril to man's spiritual welfare. Its very essence is forgetfulness of God, and of eternity. Of it comes science without faith, politics without principle, business without conscience, literature without holiness, pleasure without purity, in short, man without God. It invades even the sanctity of the Christian church, to tarnish its purity and impair its strength. It produces among professing Christians a regard for talent, rather than piety; for costly church edifices, wealthy congregations, and showy forms, rather than the simplicity of Christ, the spirituality of the believer, and the rescue of sinners from eternal perdition. To a Christian mind such a spectacle is truly painful. To note its character and effects, and apply its remedy is the aim of all who desire the true prosperity of our country, and the eternal well-being of souls.

2. Are not these, also, times of widespread immorality? This may be inferred from what we have already observed. For where there is excess in worldliness, there will invariably be laxity in morals. If, instead of immutable truth, high-toned principle, and a regard for the general weal, society is governed by time-serving expediency, self-interest, and sensual gratification, then it must become essentially corrupt; evil of every grade must flourish and prevail. Is it not even so in our midst? We appeal to the state of things around us for proof. What do we see? Suicide treading in the steps of murder; drunkenness, profanity, and Sabbath desecration jostling each other; the innocent and unwary decoyed from the paths of virtue and honor to a course of infamy and shame; life and property constantly imperiled; and crime following crime in quick and alarming succession. What do we see? Speculation tampering with dishonesty, and bribery catering to theft; the public purse rifled [illegible] on parade [illegible] whose utter ruin was [illegible] them) said in my hearing that he had never been troubled with sceptical thoughts. How different was he from me in this! Though in boyhood I was deeply impressed with "religious" feeling, the eternal torment doctrine making me at times miserable indeed, on the other hand, scepticism was a temptation even in childhood; and it has been the severe besetment of my life until now.

The words of James came afresh to my mind recently, and have been consoling and encouraging.

To say little or nothing about the deductions of science as antagonistic (apparently) to Bible statements, certain historical facts and seeming contradictions in Scripture, have made the struggle in the mind more dreadful than aught outside the Bible has done. How to reconcile justice, love, and mercy with the war between Israel and Benjamin (Judges xx. 18-25) when the Israelites were told to go up against Benjamin—and the slaying of seven thousand people on account of David's sin in numbering Judah and Israel, (2 Sam. xxiv., 1 Chron. xxi.) when David himself asks, "These sheep what have they done?"—how, I say, to reconcile these and other recorded facts with the love, mercy, and justice of God, has been a hard matter in my mind. Time and again has the tongue, by some invisible influence or agent, been almost moved to blaspheme the God of the Bible, and again and again have I been fiercely tempted to declare myself an infidel. I would say to the reader, the conflict has been hard, infidelity staring me in the face at times with the Bible before me, and testifying of its truth to others. Few, perhaps, who read this have been tempted like myself, and gone, I opine, so terribly tempted, as but a fraction is told in this communication. But all, more or less are tempted. Let none yield. Excuse. There is a way of escape out of every temptation. (1 Cor. x. 13) and instead of viewing temptations as real excuses they prove prolific bodies if not yielded to. James i. 2-6.—Sparo.

THE GOSPEL OF THE KINGDOM, an 8 page, double column tract, sold formerly at 1.- cents a dozen.

EARLY LESSONS, suitable for old and young, 30 pages, sold formerly for 10 cents a copy.

These works are excellent for use by those who wish to do missionary labor, and we offer them at such a low price that they should be out in a short time. Bro. Jones had large editions of these tracts printed, and by dying suddenly, and his Widow being in feeble health, we have undertaken the task of selling them. Her income is quite limited, and all that can be gotten out of the sales goes to her after expenses are paid. When you buy these tracts you get several times the worth of your money, and also aid a worthy Sister, who will thank you for it.

Assorted package 30 cents per pound. Gospel of the Kingdom, alone at 25 cents per pound.

The Gospel of the Kingdom.

Advocated in a series of Ten Discourses. A Volume of 283 pages, cloth 25 cents, leather bound, embossed, and gilt edges, $1.00. By Wiley Jones. This book is so well known that it is only necessary to announce that it is for sale, to insure a market for it. We have undertaken to dispose of these books for the Widow of our lamented Brother Jones, and while getting them at this low price, you at the same time will help Sister Jones to much-needed money

Poetry.

The River of Time.

Dear are the memories
Of life's gentle stream,
And sweet its delusions.
Is only a dream!
And River of Time!
Real dreams are thy years,
So swift drift our by,
With thy hopes and thy fears.

A dream? Yes a dream!
And—I'Twas whispered to me.
By an angel who neared
South our happy home tree.]
O! child in thy beauty!
Remain pure and sweet,
When the storms of life's river,
Thy frail bark shall meet."

And that same voice did whisper,
[I know it is true.]
"O! young ones and fair ones,
Who sinned but to me.
Who stopped and who turned
At the words, 'This the way'
And straightway and ever,
Did Jesus obey.

Selected.

The Need, the Hour, the Man.

"Is Christianity a Failure?" is a question often asked. And no wonder so in the face of the outlook. But there is the larger question to consider: Is Humanity a failure?

According to Fynes Clinton's Chronology, based on the Hebrew record, humanity has completed (1895) 6,000 years from Adam's creation. A long test—the result, failure.

Admit, this is not popular teaching. What of that! Is it true? Perish the popular—if not also true. Honest men should always put truth above popularity.

It is commonly said that man has reached his zenith. His meridian splendor!

There are ugly facts that discredit this. And if these facts exist in the zenith, how indeed must have been the earlier times of humanity. For life is today crowded with sin, sorrow, suffering and wrong. If these things are done in the green tree, what of the dry?

Our contention is that humanity is a failure. So great is the failure that we have reached a crisis. One greater than any since the Flood, in some things greater even than that, since the world is so very much larger now in its crowded life.

We maintain that new laws, new rules, and new methods are vitally necessary; and that these can only come by supernatural means, by direct Divine intervention.

Admit the need, the rest follows. Thus this title: "The Need, the Hour, the Man."

My treatment of this great theme must be brief.

1. THE NEED.

Let me place before your mental eye a panorama.

What noble institution is this? bearing on its forefront the legend—which a French scholar has called the most eloquent sentence in the English language—"Supported by voluntary contributions." It is an Hospital. Let us enter and pass from ward to ward. All is done that modern skill and large revenues can suggest and accomplish, yet the painful fact remains that within these walls are several hundred sufferers, in all stages of disease and accident, and in all grades of suffering. The utmost the science and skill of the physician and surgeon can do is to relieve or cure—it cannot prevent. Multiply this by 10,000 and what a world of pain and sorrow stands revealed. And this after 6,000 years of human history!

What comes next? "A Home for Incurables." What a sad place this must be! Sadder even than the hospital we have just left. For there, at least, there is the hope of recovery for many—here for none. An appropriate legend for this would be; "Ye who enter here, leave hope behind." And yet we shall find all that love and skill can do is here done to alleviate the sad lot of those thus hopelessly afflicted. This, after 6,000 years of effort, is the best that man can do for many of his fellows—provide a home in which to wait for death!

Next comes a "Workhouse." The barrack-home of the pensioned soldiers of industry, where, under the taint of pauperism, they may herd together as worn-out or debased cattle rather than as men and women—more, as husbands and wives. "But, surely, it is better far to have this to fall back upon than nothing!" Surely, yes. And yet, how many thousands prefer to starve on nothing rather than to vegetate in a workhouse. "But shall we not always have the poor with us?" Only as long as the natural heart of man remains—the heart of sin—no longer. Such today is the best that offers for millions.

Next: What is this extensive block of huge plain buildings? Telescope or pharos, where are gathered one of the most many, sad sights of poor humanity—the children who are left without the fostering care of parents, without the loving breast of a mother, the protecting arm of a father. And this, as in all the cases we present, is but a type of many more, and of all their inmates none can say, "Mother." "Father." What can put at an end to this painful necessity? Nothing while sin and death remain.

What have we here, with its barred windows, and high walls, and carefully kept doors? A prison—no, a Lunatic Asylum. Of all the mischief wrought by sin, nothing is sadder to contemplate than the loss of man's greatest natural gift, reason. All within, save the warders, are sufferers of that sad type. And this is an increasing evil—not simply growing up with the natural increase of population, but in far greater ratio.

Here is another gloomy pile, much like the one we have left, but yet very different. This is a Prison—one of thousands of such on the fair expanse of earth. Here dwell, in enforced seclusion, those whose liberty would be dangerous to their fellow-men. These are the wild beasts of society—though not all of that nature, nor are all of society's wild beasts in prison: some hold positions of honor and trust, some are legislating for others less criminal than themselves, and some, alas! are found even in the sacred office of ministry. One city alone, the chief, London, contains 20,000 known criminals, in and out of prison—probably as many more unknown. When will this blot on civilization cease?

This is a Blind Asylum. Yon an institution for the Dumb. The proportion of those who thus suffer is no whit lessened by the growth of knowledge, though the means employed for their training and development have very greatly improved. The world still waits for one who, like Him of old, will give back sight and restore speech.

We pause at this Reformatory, and again at that Penitentiary. The former confines children and first offenders who have become criminals, the latter such of the morally leprous among our sisters as are endeavoring to tread anew the path of self-restraint. That such places are needed in this nineteenth century of the Christian era is a terrible impeachment of our boasted morality—to say nothing of our religion. Neither evil shows any sign of extirpation. Concerning the latter, one of themselves says, that three women enter on the primrose path of sin for every single one rescued by allegancies therefrom!

Here, on the right, is the gaudy house of a Procuress, and on the left the nursery of a Baby-Farmer. Are there any worse features of our social life than those conjured up by these terms? That of the fiend, in woman's shape, whose trade it is to supply the raw material of the vilest of manufactures—which transforms virtue into vice, and budding womanhood into the ante-chamber of Gehenna; and that which trades on the life of the very young, by withholding needed care and nourishment. Both these awful features of our social life are busy present day factors therein—as vile, frequent, and cruel, as ever in the past of human history. Who shall uproot and destroy them?

This is a Gambling Club, where men and, alas! women risk their all upon a throw of dice, a turn of the wheel, or a winning card. Such is theft, naked and simple, the taking, without an equivalent, that which is the property of another. That, yonder, is a Music-Hall for Hell, the terms are too often equivalent), for the provocation of the flesh. This, here, is a Gin Palace, for the slow but certain ruin of its blinded dupes—body and soul. Are these three things new features in our social life? Alas! No. Are they dwindling evils? Again we are forced to reply, No. Gambling, debauchery, and drunkenness never were so common before as today: never so destructive of all that is best worth preserving in the life of nations.

We bracket, briefly, in passing, another trinity of evil—War, Famine, and Pestilence. Of the first we need only say: that Europe—Christian Europe!—has above fifteen millions of men trained for war, with all its horrors. Famine in the East and Russia is now, well-nigh, an annual occurrence—especially in the vast area of the latter country. Pu: it is also everywhere in Europe, whilst America is no stranger to it, for there are never wanting white lips which lack bread. Pestilence, or plague, mocks at all our efforts to destroy it—and Influenza and Cholera are dread present-day forms thereof. Who shall deliver us from these? Who shall "beat the sword into the plough-share?" Who give the needy their "daily bread?" Who check the plague?

We must grasp what remains for us to see. Words have a habit of becoming "polarized," so that they express thought when standing alone. We need, therefore, only mention, without comment,—the "Liberator Bank," the fall of which has brought ruin and sorrow into thousands of English homes—the "Panama Canal," which has swallowed up in vain fifty millions sterling of hard-earned French money—the "Opium Curse," which threatens to debauch an empire of four hundred millions—the "Drink Traffic," which is wiping out, by degradation, disease and death, the native races of the heathen world—the "Social Evil," which grows with the growth of population, unchecked and horrible; perpetuating, even in innocent children, one of the vilest forms of disease—the "Slave Trade," which has depopulated whole regions of Africa, as though swept by the blast of a simoon—"Sweating," which is the civilized equivalent of slavery—the "Submerged Tenth," who are the despair of statesmen the world over—"Anti-Semitism"—"Socialism" in its worst features—"Communism"—"Nihilism." Need I add more?

But more remains. What of Decay? physical and mental, which is writ large upon all men—the proof of our common mortality. As though an Immortal being could ever grow old and weak and infantile!

Yet once again, What of Death? Who is to open your graves, oh, ye people, and bid their myriad tenants come forth? Is death to endure for ever? Surely not, yet it is Lord today over prince and peer, over peasant and pauper alike. Where is that abundant and immortal life we need? by which we may defy decay and death. The "elixir of life," though Humanity is 6,000 years old in wisdom, still eludes our grasp. It is still, like the "philosopher's stone," a fable. Science and sanitation have enabled men to reach an average of 42 years. But what is that to the centuries which were common before the Flood. Some of our teachers are content these things should remain. The Earth and Humanity should be ever thus. And, that only in distant ages and distant worlds shall a few favored members of the race attain to the larger and happier dimensions of life. Are you so content? For myself, I answer No. Ten thousand times No. I desire heaven on Earth, as well as over it. And, what is more, expect it. Aye with as much certainty as I expect tomorrow's sun to rise. But not by human methods nor human love. Not even by that latest noble but futile dream of Woman's influence in the Home," from which so much is expected by thousands.

How will it come then? of that anon, but first—When?

2. THE HOUR.

The dark and terrible facts it has been our painful task to chronicle need not surprise us, though they declare the Failure of Humanity—for the foretold fact of that failure is writ large on the sacred page of Prophecy. And of this last decade of the nineteenth century—6,000 years, at least, from Humanity's creation—the features are plainly declared as they do today exist; and that in the mouth of several witnesses. For brevity, I recite only New Testament predictions.

Our Lord said, Matt. xxiv. 37, "But as the days of Noah were, so shall also the coming of the Son of Man be." The stress here is laid on the as and so. The as relates to the old world, which was filled with wickedness—so utterly vile that only eight righteous persons were found in it and preserved from the Flood. The so declares that the same thing will be a specific feature of humanity at the time of the end of the present age—"This is wickedness" —when God shall again purge terribly the earth, but by fire instead of water. This sign is a present-day fact.

In his parable of the Tares and Wheat (Matt. xiii. 24-30), our Lord declares that in the end of the age both wickedness and righteousness will dwell side by side, ripe for the winepress and sickle. Is it not so? The facts cited prove that wickedness is ripe, and the "Holiness" movement proves that righteousness is equally ripe. But none may separate them, save the Lord of the Harvest.

Our Lord also said, The Kingdom-Gospel should be preached in all the world for a witness, and then the end should come. Matt. xxiv. 14. Only within the last fifty years has this been fulfilled, by the calling forth of Advent and Kingdom preachers, who have since circled the globe.

In the 32nd verse of the same chapter he speaks of the budding of the fig tree as a sign of the end. This is a symbol of God's Jewish people, who, marvellously preserved unto the present, are now flocking back to Palestine. 130,000 are now again (1895) settled in the land of their fathers,—thrice the number which returned from Babylon, B. C., and the cry is "Still they come." Whilst the "early and latter rains," withheld since the dispersion, are now again restored.

Our Lord also said, Matt. x. 34, "I came not to send peace but a sword." Is not Christian Europe today "an armed camp!" having 15,000,000 men trained for war? A new warlike power has arisen in the East—Japan! Even the U. S. A., which hitherto have taken no part outside that continent, claim place and voice among the Powers, and are rapidly building up a war navy. Is not the whole world, and especially the East, a powder magazine, which may explode any day?

Paul in 2 Tim. iii. gives some salient features of Humanity, which are true to life today. He says: "Men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers," etc.

John in Rev. xvi. 14 gives us a feature only true since 1840, and now fulfilled by Spiritualism, Theosophy, and kindred systems.

But I must be content to summarize what remains. (1) The great Divine Cycle of 2,520 years from the fall of Israel expires (according to the historic writers) in 1890. That cycle covers "the times of the Gentiles," and ends the age—subject, perhaps, to a short period of overlapping. Israel is then again to be a nation, and God's judgments are to be poured forth on them that destroy the earth.

This finding of the Historic School of prophecy is supported by one of a different school, Mr. Dimbleby, who from the movements of the heavenly bodies alone, arrives at the same conclusion, within two years—1808 instead of 1890. "God's great Clock," as it is termed, whose dial plate covers 2,250 years, is to strike from 1606 to 1808.

As a result the half-cycles also end then—I am taking here the Historic argument as far as I am able to accept its findings. The 1,260 years of Turkish and Papal domination run out—according to prophecy, about 1896, according to astronomy not later than 1898. Is not this significant in the face of widespread belief that the "sick man of Europe" (Turkey) is really now on his last legs. And also in this other fact that on the Continent, where the Papacy has reigned supreme for 1,000 years, the manhood of the nations is divorced from all religion, and abhors and hates the Papal system. In Italy, its seat, two-thirds of the people are outside the Church. Indeed, we seem to be upon the very edge of the period—as far as it relates to the Papal system —set forth in the 17th of Rev., and especially in verse 16, when the nations are to turn on Rome, to "make her desolate and naked," and to also "eat her flesh, and burn her with fire." Of course that is only partly the fulfilment of that chapter, but I frankly admit the claim made to that extent. Mind, this refers to Rome's system and not to her people.

(2) The Clay-Iron of Daniel's image (Dan. ii.) also finds its fulfilment here and now. In as far as this mixture is political, is it not fulfilled before our eyes—Clay-Iron? Is not Demos slurring power today with kings and peers? Is not the popular formula "Government of the people, by the people, and for the people" become an accomplished fact? Demos will not be absolute master, for it is clay mixed with iron down to the very day when the Stone (Christ) smites the image and becomes a great kingdom filling the whole earth.

(3) The World's Church—with which I pass on to briefly recite the closing feature of "The Man." Paul, in 2 Tim. iii. 5, speaks of men in the "last days" (verse 1), "Having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof." This is a picture of the World's Church, as it exists today. The fact answers to the forecast. A Church knowing not "What is Truth?" and erring less. A Church mumbling dead formulas, and largely bereft of Divine power—a galvanized corpse. A Church run on popular lines, those of a clever preacher, an ornate building, an esthetic service, sensuous music, and a fashionable congregation—a kind of annex to a milliner's show-room. Its distinctive features, pride, worldliness, fashion and formalism. It pains me to speak so plainly. Alas! that it should be necessary.

So the Hour has arrived, and the Judge of Mankind is on the threshold. Now, very briefly:

3. THE MAN.

"Who is sufficient for these things?" Who can right the million wrongs of Humanity? There are hungry needing to be fed, both with the bread of earth and that from heaven. There are blind needing sight, both physical and spiritual. There are deaf and dumb, needing sound and speech. There are slaves needing freedom. There are naked needing clothing. There are wrongs needing righting. Earth is vocal with weeping—who shall "wipe all its tears away?" Above the Babel of confusion rises the deep bass of a "groaning creation," with its long-drawn wail "How long, O Lord, how long?"

Only one Being can fill this gap, stand in this breach, and right the foul wrongs of 6,000 years of greed and wickedness. Who is he? Pilate answers: "Behold the man!" The prophet answers: "Behold the God!" Both characters meet in the Lord Jesus Christ—God's pre-destined Man. Some worthy men say this is a dream. That Christ will never stoop from heaven to earth again! Stoop! He stooped once to The Cross, emptying himself! Why not then stoop to The Crown! If the greater condescension why not the lesser! He is truly Man! Not among angels, but here, a man with men, Humanity's King, is his true abiding place. Yea, and will be, too, for it is written, Luke i. 31-33, "The Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David." It is written, Isa. ix. 6, "And the government shall be upon his shoulder." It is written, Dan. vii. 13, 14, that the Son of Man was brought before the Ancient of Days, "And there was given him dominion, and glory, and a kingdom, that all people, nations and languages, should serve him." And the scene of this kingdom is named in ver. 27, "Under the whole heavens," not above. It is written, John xiv. 3, "I will come again and receive you unto myself." The only condition was the going—"If I go." He did go, he will return. He went personally—so will he return. It is written, 1 Thes. iv. 16, "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout." It is written, Rev. i. 7, "Behold he cometh with clouds: and every eye shall see him."

But, enough, to every objection and objector we oppose, like Luther, the Word of God. It is Written, and God will surely bring it to pass.

We are standing on the Brink of Time. Get you ready for the Coming of the King.

It is a painful sight to see a single man standing on the brink of an abyss, unconscious of danger. It is a terrible experience to see a world of men and women on the brink of the abyss of time, unconscious of their danger. In the first case, if we neglected to raise the cry of warning, we should sin grieviously against our brother. But what of the second case? Is it a time for neglect, for pleasure, for ease, for the building up of worldly concerns, or of sectarian interests? No, surely, it is a time for self-sacrificing gift and service, to raise the cry of warning.

Here we stand upon the Brink of Time. The greatest change Earth has seen since the Flood is close upon us. We know the danger. The Church at large—great as it has become—and the World—many times vaster than the Church—knows it not!

What is our duty to our fellows at this crisis? Surely, we repeat, to warn them. To be God's witnesses to a Church asleep, and to a World plunging in the mad vortex of gain and pleasure. Duty and responsibility are but one in fact in such a case. We are our brother's keeper.

Oh, my hearers, it is time we all had the burden of souls upon us. Time we all saw the sublime and intense importance of faithful witness. Time we multiplied manifold our agents, whilst uniting our agencies. Time for intense activity in the few, very few years that lie before us. The sword of Divine justice will soon leap from its scabbard. The lightnings of Divine wrath will soon flash through the heavens. God's controversy with the Church and the World is close at hand —"The tribulation the great"—and mankind is unconscious of the danger, as well as unprepared to meet it.

Our duty is clear—our responsibility equally so.

1. To be Christ's personal witnesses within the area of our own circle of daily life.

2. To be Christ's consecrated witnesses. Dr. Pentecost speaks of an incident in the American Civil War, when as chaplain he was ministering to the wounded. One soldier, frightfully injured, would persist in raising objections, when urged to seek salvation. At last the chaplain told him plainly that as a dying man it was now or never with him. For a few minutes he was silent, then raising himself by a superhuman effort, he looked upward and said: "Lord Jesus, I surrender." That each must do sooner or later. Why not sooner? Why not now? Surrender all to the Lord of Life, who has bought us with his blood. Give ourselves up, wholly and unreservedly, to be his consecrated servants, personally enjoying a full and free salvation from the power and defilement of sin, and a daily communion with Christ through the Holy Spirit. And, with ourselves, to hold our all of time, talent and substance as the Lord's—a matter of stewardship.—Cyrus E. Brooks, in Faith.

The modest deportment of those who are truly wise, when contrasted with the assuming air of the young and ignorant, may be compared to the different appearance of wheat, which, while its ear is empty, holds up its head proudly, but as soon as it is filled with grain, bends modestly down, and withdraws from observation.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME XLVIII. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, JULY 19, 1899. NUMBER 27.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with Him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, prerequisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

"PATIENCE after all, is the highest courage, since it affords us time to matore all our energies. We shall hardly ever lose our redress if we keep the wrong-doer in our debt."

God All in All.

What a great truth these four words contain! It speaks with the force of reason and the power of eloquence.

"Let a man have all the world can give, and he is still miserable if he has a grovelling, unlettered and unlevent mind. Let him have his gardens, his fields, his lawns for grandeur, plenty, ornament and gratification, while at at the same time God is not in his thoughts. And let another have neither field nor garden; let him look only at nature with an enlarged and devout mind.—a mind which can see and adore the Creator in all his works—consider them as demonstrations of his power, wisdom and truth,—this man is greater as well as happier in his poverty than the other in his riches. The one is a little higher than the beast, the other a little lower than an angel."

Man.

In order to serve a person judiciously it is necessary to study him. In order to teach him it is essential to know something of his character and disposition as well as his condition. Unless you understand him he will hardly ever be made to understand you. To enter into his necessities and to reach the point from which he looks must be, or at least should be, the first steps toward informing him with your ideas, and moving his mind to appreciate what may be superior in them. As a people we fear we do not use our knowledge wisely. No people under heaven should be able to approach others with new ideas so successfully. We know what man is, and what his attributes are, by the Word of God who made him; and this is confirmed to us scientifically as well as by every day experience and observation. We are not hampered with an immaterial soul that directs our thoughts or controls our actions in all manner of conflicting ways. We know man to be a unit, and to be organized capable of being and doing all that he is and does. And in so far as we fail to study him from this point of view, we fail to interest him in unpopular truths.

A moment's reflection will convince one that duty demands that we study as well as possible, the material we have to work upon before we commence. Some can be first reached through the intellect, some through the affections, and others through the religious faculty. But after the entering wedge, of course the whole truth in outline must be unfolded.

The fact that love is the motive-power of the gospel should never be forgotten by those who want to labor with and for God. It would be an anomolous condition of things surely for God to employ one motive to repentance and we one of another nature.

The prominence given to the love of God in the gospel, together with the apostolic statements that the love of Christ constrained them to love him, and that they loved him because he loved them, goes a long way to prove that nothing will draw men to God, and Christ, and Truth, like love. And if further proof were called for we have it in the fact that intellectual assent without heart assent is utterly useless. "With the heart man believeth unto righteousness." One involves obedience, the other does not.

Truth.

If in these evil days there be one thing more than another which those of the Abrahamic faith should constantly teach, we think it is a love for truth. Nothing is of worth without that crowning excellence of human character. Without it the noblest structure is but a whited sepulchre. Although a person may have many other excellent qualities he should be shunned if deficient in this. A bachelor may admire a person of general beauty and symmetry, but when a seam of falsehood is found running from cap stone to base, he will shun the dangerous presence. There are few things more painful, experienced with our intercourse with men, than to feel that they are unworthy of our confidence,—that they are not what they seem; that they will betray while they smile,—that we tread upon a crater's mouth where all is hollow beneath. Teach a child to tell the truth to venerate and love it. Teach him so that whatever wrong he may commit, he will frankly and promptly admit it.

With a foundation of this sort, it would seem almost natural for him to have a receptive mind for THE TRUTH, that which begets children of God,—that which sets them apart for God,—and is used by God to save them. A child trained to reverence truth in the abstract, would easily understand that no saving power could reside in an *un*truth, if ever so firmly believed. He would also in his own way reason it out that the God of truth would only say what he means, and mean what he says, and, like his earthly parents, expects to be obeyed when he gives a command.

Brethren, and Sisters, we are in the last days, and influences are exerted on every hand to make us under-value the truth of God. After the tare-sowing of the last two hundred years the harvest has fully come; it is a harvest of infidelity. Infidelity is everywhere, in the churches calling themselves Christian as well as among those who make no profession, and alas, it is springing up among those who in the main, still defend the faith once delivered to the saints. It first shows itself in a pious light; "God is so kind and gracious that he will not hold us strictly to his Word if we are good at heart; or are truly sincere. He is a God of love and surely wont shut people out just because they do not comply with the rules laid down for pardon, reconciliation and adoption," etc,—but what does this mean? It means that an evil heart of unbelief has sprung up, and they have departed from the living God. They do not realize that an infidel is an unbeliever; do not realize that every one of the above pious assertions is a gospel nullifying assertion. They cannot talk that way and at the same time say with Paul that the gospel of the Anointed One is the power of God unto salvation, if men can be saved just as well without it. People who once embraced the truth in the love of it, and were taken out of the world by it and now lower its standard in sympathy with the surrounding religious atmosphere, have gotten farther away from God than they realize; and we warn them that the reckoning time is at hand, and urge them to repent before it is too late. A moments serious reflection should show them how ridiculous it is to think that those who reject the call to God's kingdom and glory should be placed in authority and power over it.

We hail with joy every certain sound of the gospel trumpet, and urgently ask that we have straight out gospel truth, and the practice of it, for the Lord is at hand.

The Son of God.

The following extract we copy from Glad Tidings, which it copies from a rare little volume by Dr. Isaac Watts, published in 1745, entitled "A Faithful Enquiry after the Ancient and Original Doctrine of the Trinity, Taught by Christ and his Apostles."—

"There are several reasons indeed, why he may be called the Son of God; first, because of the analogy, or resemblance which Scripture frequently makes use of between things divine and human. The Son amongst men is another distinct person from the Father, so Jesus Christ, the Son of God, is another distinct person, who is derived from God, his Father, and bears the nearest resemblance. He is called the express image of his person, Heb. i. 3.

He is called, secondly, the Son of God, because he was raised from the dead. Psa. ii. 7, "Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee," and Acts xiii. 33, 34, etc., where this verse is so explained, but not because of any natural generation; and Col. i. 18, where he is called the "first born from the dead," persons raised from the dead are, in Scripture, called "Sons of God, being children of the resurrection." Luke xx. 36.

He is also sometimes called the Son of God, because of his office as Mediator, Acts viii. 37—when the eunuch confessed this he was baptized.

But the obvious reason why he is called the Son of God, is most evident from Luke i. 35, "The Holy Spirit shall come upon thee, and the power of the highest shall overshadow thee; therefore that holy thing which shall be born of thee, shall be called the Son of God," thus spake the angel Gabriel to the Virgin Mary.

He was born as a man here on earth; he lived and died as a man; and in this view he was a being far inferior to the true and Eternal God.....The Man Jesus Christ is the inferior agent or medium of the great God, who doeth whatsoever he pleases in and by the Man Jesus Christ.....

If the Holy Spirit were really a true and proper person, it would be as difficult to account for all these and many more expressions in Scripture, which cannot possibly be ascribed to a proper person; and if in some places these impersonal expressions, or in other places the personal expressions must be figurative, why may not my explanation of them do as well as to the contrary? And thus the Spirit of God need not anywhere be construed into a real, proper, distinct person. And certainly this is and will be a perpetual difficulty on all those opinions which suppose the Spirit of God to be a real proper person, either created or uncreated—viz, that a person should be poured down on men,—should be shed down, or should fall on men, should be given with or without measure; that men be baptized with a person, should be anointed with a person, should be sealed with a person, should be filled with a person, for we are never said to be baptized with the Father or the Son, because they are proper persons,—but only baptized into their names, or into them; but since the expression of being baptized with the Holy Spirit is usual, Matt. iii. 11; Acts i. 5, etc., it seems to show us that the Holy Spirit here means some power, virtue, or influence which is not a proper person, etc. Yet let it be remembered (as is said before) that even in some of these impersonal senses it may be sometimes represented as performing personal actions, according to the Hebrew idiom; as wisdom, the Law, the Scriptures, Righteousness, sin, death, and other things are described are persons. So the anointing teacheth us all things, 1 John ii. 27, "The spirit lusteth against the flesh." Gal. v. 17, i. e., the new nature wrought by the Spirit."

The "Church Social."

Much has been said regarding this great "evil," and we have been censured because we did not condemn it quite enough, and we have even been accused of favoring—or "winking" at it. It is not our policy to always answer such statements, but in this event it may be well to state our views briefly. Games of chance are engaged in by individuals, and societies, and in either case they are wrong, and no Christian should severally or jointly play them.

A man—a Christian man—buys a stock of dry goods, advertises to the community of Christian and infidels, good and bad, that he wishes to sell them. They come and buy and he gets gain. The church to which he belongs needs money to pay pastor, light, fuel, etc., he contributes of the money taken for his goods, from the general public, to help pay the church expenses.

Another brother gets his by the gain in selling groceries, another lumber, another meat, another sells his labor as clerk, as carpenter, woodsawyer, each selling to or working for the "world," or "worldly" men. A Sister washes the clothes of an infidel family. Each puts into the "Lord's treasury" from such earnings. Anything wrong about this? Will the Lord "bless" money that is secured by contact with the world,—or that comes through such hands?

Two, five, ten, twenty, fifty women seeing a lack in certain lines of the church work, say, We will organize and call ourselves a "Ladies Aid Society" of the—— Church, and we will undertake to pay for the lights, or the cleaning and care of, of the church. We will earn the money some way. They hear that Mrs. Baker, a worldly, fashionable, "society" woman, wants a quilt made, and they say to her, "Mrs. Baker, we will make it for you for $1.00," a bargain is made, and the work done, the money paid, and used to pay for lights. These Sisters think they will cook some good victuals, and invite (advertise) their friends and neighbors—church members, and those who make no profession—to come in and eat the food and pay for it the same as at a restaurant, only that instead of going away right after eating, they invite all to stay and visit awhile—have a "social" time for an hour or two. They make a gain of $20.00 and give half of it to a preacher, who goes out and speaks a few times trying to instruct some in the way of truth.

The question to settle is where the line shall be drawn. The money earned by a company of sisters, by means of preparing a supper and selling it, to any one who can be induced to come and buy, is just as legitimately earned as the money that Brother Jones pays in to the church treasury after having sold goods to the general public, or built a house for an infidel to live in. So this is not the place to draw the line.

The merchant announces in the town papers what he has to sell, and by circulating hand bills, and even by voice of a "crier" invites the customers to his store. The carpenter uses every endeavor to let the community know he is in the market to do any work in his line. So with every clan of business. We advertise in every way we can. The "Ladies Aid Society" ask some of their members to spread a knowledge of the meal they wish to sell, and solicit patronage. They act exactly like the merchant and workman. Is this the place to draw the line? If one is wrong so is the other.

We all agree that any game of chance by individuals or societies is wrong. All must agree that individuals or societies have an equal right to earn money, and give it to the church in any legitimate way that gives value recieved.

Where is the "evil" then? Some one says it is the way of going at it. The "peddling" of tickets, and "coaxing" men to attend, "bothering" them until they are disgusted with anything that the "church" gets up. If this is where the trouble is, it appears that is wrong to do anything unladylike or rude, and of course no real Christian lady or gentleman will knowingly annoy another person.

Another says "Church Socials are just a place for gossip, and are evil in consequence." Let us see. Some people go to church before time for service, and say bad things about others. They have another chance between Sunday School and Church. They talk before and after prayer meeting. Gather at each others houses or on the street, even attend the "social" and give voice to their disreputable words. Yes, some will even go miles to a "conference" and there pour it out to all who will listen. A set of back-biters and vilifiers of the blackest dye—because they claim the name of "Christian."

Brethren and Sisters, let us condemn the right thing. The evil speakings, the back-biting, the vilifying of another's good name. The repeating of, and enlarging upon, every idle tale, is where the "evil" is. The church "social" has no more to do with it than has the church conference. Some people do wrong when they attend church services. Must we say in consequence, stop all meetings? Some people act in an unchristian manner when they go visiting. Shall we discourage the gathering together of friends and brethren at our homes, where so much of joy and pleasure may be? Shall we go and condemn as radically wrong and unchristian the gathering of a company of our sisters and holding a "social?"

We would not uphold the "church social" as it exists in many places, where besides the honest work done where value is given for every penny paid in, all sorts of questionable schemes are employed, like voting contests, grab-bags, chances on articles, lotteries and the like. These are covered by the broad statement that gambling is wrong. We are endeavoring to discover the evil, and when we find that let us condemn it, and it alone. We have failed to find the wrong in the sisters having a society and preparing a supper and selling it, if they give the money's worth to their customers. There is no wrong in their advertising it in any ladylike manner. The trouble lies in the opportunity given for what is termed "gossip." We will call it back-biting, vilifying, traducing of character of others, lying. Shake hands and utter the word "brother" and then stab in the back. Judas was a notable example, betraying the Master by a kiss, but he had remorse of conscience afterward, which is more than some nowadays appear to experience.

This, Brethren and Sisters, is the greatest evil we find in this study, and this we should condemn as pre-eminently wrong, whether indulged in by the honored Board of a State Conference, or the weakest brother or sister in the church, whether at the conference, the church, the home, or the "church social."

Men's lives should be like the days, more beautiful in the evenings; or like the spring, aglow with promise; or like the autumn, rich with golden sheaves, where good works and deeds have ripened on the field.

No man can avoid his own company; so he had best make it as good as possible.

Baptism. No. 2.

Our provings in the first article certainly show that God's thoughts and ways are not always,—indeed not often in harmony with our own. King Saul also thought he knew best how to carry out the commands of God in destroying the Amekites and all their substance, therefore he reserved some of the best for sacrifice, and so we read Samuel's reproof, viz., "Hath the Lord as great delight in burnt offerings and sacrifices as in obeying the voice of the Lord? Behold, to obey is better than sacrifice, and to hearken than the fat of rams.....Because thou hast rejected the Word of the Lord, he hath also rejected thee." It is our duty to teach and seek to impress upon the heart of every believer in the Anointed One the necessity of observing the all things whatsoever he has commanded; and and among those things is the duty of being immersed, and of attending to it as soon as circumstances will allow. But the question often arises, would you have me baptized before I feel it is a duty? By no means. But we would have you so instructed in the gospel as to begin to feel it a duty as soon as you decide to follow Christ. To follow Christ is to obey Christ. "If ye love me, keep my commandments." "This is the love of God that ye keep his commandments." We find that when Christ had come to an age suited to enter upon his public ministrations, he came to John the Baptist to be baptized in the Jordan. Thus he commences his public duties, —the duties of his divine mission. John was requested to perform the rite, and he pleads his own inferiority. Jesus replies, "Suffer it to be so now, for thus it becometh us to fulfill all righteousness." God had instituted this ordinance and caused it to be introduced by John when he sent him to preach and to baptize all believers. And as Christ was now to commence his work for the Father and for the fallen race of man by proclaiming the good news of the kingdom, it became him to observe this rite which was so significant of the work he had undertaken, and for the doing of which the Father had anointed him with the Holy Spirit, and then and there publicly acknowledges him before the assembled multitude by a voice from heaven, saying, "This is my beloved Son in whom I am well pleased." Such is Christ's example and the Father's approval clearly stated. Can we oppose Christian Baptism in view of all this? Yet many do, and view it as unnecessary. Losing sight of the Blessed Hope, the resurrection from the dead, they lose sight of the significance of this divinely instituted rite, and which signifies among other things their faith and hope in a Savior who died and lives again, a Savior once dead but now risen from death to die no more. Therefore Christ as our head and representative observed this rite at the commencement of his public life, to set us an example, and to present an emblem of the death he was to suffer for the redemption of the world of mankind from death under the provisions of the gospel announced. John the first Baptizer came not of himself. The Word of God came to him in the wilderness. He obeyed the Word, and as he journeyed he taught the masses to prepare to receive the Messiah by laying aside sin and superstition, and by the exercise of the principle of universal justice and benevolence, he gave rules of righteousness to the several classes who came to hear him. He baptized such as believed his message, constantly directing their attention not to himself, but to Jesus, the Messiah. John's name is connected with baptism because he was the first who administered that right.

By reference to John i. 32-34, we see that God called John to his work. With this statement of John that God sent him to baptize in water, it is conclusive that God then and there instituted this ordinance for the future observance of all believers of the gospel. We are told that Jesus made and baptized more disciples than John, showing that the baptism of believers was a constant practice during Christ's ministry, and also a prominent theme after his resurrection; and ever since it has been associated with the belief of the gospel as the obedience of the faith. All so-called Christian men even will concede that the All-wise—

GOD HAS AN OBJECT

in all he does and commands;—that all ordinances he institutes have a meaning, and are emblematical of some points of doctrine he has revealed. Baptism is a type or mould of doctrine, signifying death and resurrection. Christ came into the world to save from sin and its penalty—death. To do this he must seek man where he was lost,—in death, sin had entered, death followed, and all our race were subject to it. Christ must meet the claim of the law which Adam broke. To do this and enter the gates of hades and obtain the key, and thus be able to bring man out of its dark abode, because this great work was about to be accomplished for man's redemption. The Lord instituted the sublime and significant ordinance of Baptism to shadow forth the counsel and plan of God, that Christ should die and rise again from the dead. John preached the baptism of repentance, saying to the people that they should believe on him who should come after him. From the foregoing we learn,

HE MUST SUFFER DEATH

First, The word baptism is a Greek word and signifies a dipping, plunging, immersing. "Sprinkle" comes from the Greek word "Rhino," and means to sprinkle. The two words do not mean the same. "Rhino," is nowhere applied to baptism.

Second, There is but ONE baptism, for Paul so says,—"One Lord, One Faith, One Baptism." Eph. iv. 5.

Third, That one baptism is in water; for so says Peter,—"Can any forbid water that these should not be baptized," etc. Acts x. 47.

Fourth, This one Baptism in water is a burial, "Therefore we are buried with him by baptism, into death." Hence it cannot be sprinkling, for that is not a burial.

Fifth, A man is not in Christ before he is baptized into him, for we are plainly taught this in Gal. iii. 27, 28.

Sixth, Baptism is for the remission of sins that are past. "Repent and be baptized every one of you into the name of Jesus for the remission of sins," etc.

Seventh, Baptism, like all of God's commands, is essential. "The like figure whereunto baptism doth also now save us," etc. To say that baptism is not essential is to say that God gave a command which he does not require believers to obey.

Eight, The One baptism is preceded by a gospel faith, and that is the One Faith without which it is impossible to please God; or, in other words, it is preceded by a belief of the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ.

Ninth, Baptism includes a burial and a rising up to newness of life. "Buried with him in baptism, wherein ye are also risen with him through the faith of the operation of God, who hath raised him from the dead." Col. ii. 12.

Tenth, Baptism is a form or type of gospel doctrine. The gospel as preached by Paul included that Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures,—that he was buried, that he rose again the third day, according to the Scriptures. 1 Cor. xv. 1-4.

Eleventh, Baptism gives the gospel a formal expression. Obedience to Jesus in this ordinance honors the gospel. It makes our life, death and resurrection a reality. Those buried in the waters of baptism would never walk in newness of life, if they were not raised from the water to that end. So, also, if the dead in Christ are not to be raised, then they are perished. All depends upon the resurrection. No other act of obedience secures a distinct promise of a resurrection. "If ye be planted together in the likeness of his death you shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection." That likeness of Christ's death is stated in the previous verse, "To be buried with him in baptism."

Twelfth, Baptism is enjoined on all who believe the gospel. It symbolizes purgation from sin. We have in this ordinance an emblematic burial and putting off of the old man of sin, or Adamic nature. We have also an emblematic resurrection, "to walk in newness of life;" but it is a walk of faith, not by sight. Thus we see that the hope and resurrection from the dead is pre-figured by this striking ordinance. Christ loved the church and gave himself for it that he might sanctify it, having cleansed it by the bath of water with the Word, that he might himself present to himself a glorious Church, having no spot or wrinkle, or any such thing, but that it may be holy and blameless." Eph. v. 27.

The Bath of water sanctifies and cleanses no one apart from an intelligent and affectionate reception of the Word (of the kingdom) or the One Faith.

J. E. HOWARTH.

Job xiv. 15.

Few are the days, and full of woe
O man of woman born,
Thy doom is written, Dust thou art,
And shalt to dust return.
Behold the emblems of thy state,
In flowers that bloom and die,
Or in the shadow's fleeting form,
That mocks the gazer's eye:
Guilty and frail, how shalt thou stand
Before thy sovereign Lord?
Can troubled and polluted springs
A hallow'd stream afford?
Determined are the days that fly
Successive o'er thy head;
The number'd hour is on the wing
That lays thee with the dead.
Great God! afflict not in thy wrath,
The short allotted span,
That bounds the few and weary days
Of pilgrimage of man.
All nature dies and lives again,
The flowers that paint the field:
The trees that crown the mountain's brow
And bows and blossoms yield.
Resign the honors of their form,
At winter's stormy blast,
And leave the naked leafless plain,
A desolated waste:
Yet soon reviving plants and flow'rs,
Anew shall deck the plain;
The woods shall hear the voice of spring,
And flourish green again.
But man forsaken this earthly scene,
Ah, never to return;
Shall nay fall'wing spring revive
The ashes of the urn?
The mighty floods that roll along
Its torrents to the main,
Can ne'er recall its waters lost
From that abyss again:
So days and years and ages past,
Descending down to night,
Can henceforth never more return
Back to the gates of light;
And man when laid in lonesome grave,
Shall sleep in death's dark gloom,
Until th' eternal morning wake
The slumbers of the tomb;
O way the grave become to me,
The bed of peaceful rest:
When I shall gladly rise at length,
And mingle with the blest.
Cheer'd by this hope with patient mind,
I'll wait heaven's high decree,
Till the appointed period comes,
When Christ shall set me free.

Ecclesiastes ix. 4, 5, 6, 10.

As long as life its term extends,
Hope's blest dominion never ends,
For while the lamp holds on to burn,
The greatest sinner may return.
Life is the season God has given,
To do his will as 'tis in heaven;
That day of grace fleets fast away,
And now its rapid course may stay.

The living know that they must die,
But all the dead forgotten lie,
Their memory and their name is gone;
Alike, unknowing and unknown,
Their hatred and their love is lost,
Their envy buried in the dust,
They have no share in all that's done,
Beneath the circuit of the sun.

Then what thy thoughts design to do,
Still let thy hands with might pursue,
Since no device nor work is found,
Nor wisdom underneath the ground,
In the cold grave to which we haste,
There are no acts of pardon past;
But fix't the doom of all remains,
And everlasting silence reigns.

—ANON.

But there is hope beyond the tomb,
Christ has broke and sealed its doom,
And we shall rise and sing God's praise,
Through happy never-ending days.

[THROUGH an oversight, Chapter 19 of Judges, appeared before chapters 17 and 18. Will our readers please take note of this.—ED.]

Judges Chapter 17.

1. And it came to pass that there was a man of prominence from Mount Ephraim and his name Michaios.

2. And he said to his mother, The fifteen hundred of silver which thou didst take for thyself, and thou didst love me and previously say in my ears, Lo, the money (silver) is with me. I have received it. And his mother said, Blessed art thou by the Lord, my son.

3. And he gave the fifteen hundred of silver to his mother; and his mother said, I have set apart the money unto the Lord from out my son's hand to make a carved and moulded thing, and now I will give it to thee.

4. And he gave the money to his mother, and his mother took two hundred of silver and gave it to a silver-worker, and he made of it a carved and molded thing, and it came to be in the house of Michaios.

5. And the house of Michaios was a house of God; and he made an Ephood and Theraphin, and he filled the hand of one of his sons, and he became a priest for him.

6. And in those days there was no king in Israel. Each man did that which was upright in his eyes.

7. And it came to pass that there was a young man from Bethleem, dome Jouda, and he was a Leuite (Levite) and this man was sojourning there.

8. And the man had gone his way from Bethleem, the city of Jouda, to sojourn until he should find a place, and he had come unto Mount Ephraim and the house Michaios in making his way.

9. And Michaios said unto him, Whence comest thou? And he said unto him, I am a Leuite from Bethleem of Jouda, and I am going my way to sojourn wherever I may find a place.

10. And Michaios said unto him, Settle down with me and become my father and priest, and I will give thee ten of silver a day and flowing apparel for outer-garments and thy living.

11. And the Leuite went his way and began to sojourn with the man, and the young man became as one of his sons.

12. And Michaios filled the hand of of Leuite and he became a priest for him, and came to be in the house of Michaios.

13. And Michaios said, Now, I know that the Lord will be good to me, because the Leuite has become a priest for me.

CHAPTER 18.

1. In those days there was no king in Israel, and in those days the tribe of Dan was seeking to inhabit an inheritance for itself, because an inheritance had not fallen to it unto this day in the midst of the tribes of the sons of Israel.

2. And the sons of Dan sent from their demes five men, sons of ability, from Sarea and Esthaol to spy out the land and trace it out. And they said unto them, Go your way and trace out the land. And they came as far as Mount Ephraim unto the house of Michaios and they put up there.

3. In the house of Michaios, and they recognized the voice of the young man, the Leuite, and they inclined out there and said unto him, What brought thee here? And thou, what art thou doing in this place? And what is thine here?

4. And he said unto them, Michaios hath done so and so by me, and hath hired me, and I have become a priest for him.

5. And they said unto him, Ask forsooth in God, and we shall know whether our way will have been prospered, wherein we are going.

6. And the priest said unto them, Go your way in peace. In the sight of the Lord is your way in which ye are going.

7. And the five men went their way and came to Laisa; and they saw the laity in the midst thereof, settled in hope living quietly, as is the judicial procedure of the Sidonians, and there is no perverting or putting a word to shame in the land, no heir at law squeezing out treasures, and they are far from the Sidonians, and they have no account with mankind.

8. And the five men came unto their brethren in Sarea and Esthaol and said unto their brethren, Why are ye staying here?

9. And they said, Arise and let us go up against them, because we have seen the land, and lo, it is very good, and ye are living quietly; Do not delay going your way and entering in to inherit the land.

10. And whenever ye have gone ye will go in against a laity in hope, and the land is broad, because God hath given it into our hand, a place where there is no lack of the products in the land.

11. And six hundred men thrust out from demes of Dan from Sarea and Esthaol took up from there with weapons of warfare.

12. And they went up and pitched camp in Kariathiarim in Jouda. Therefore, it was called in this place Dan's camp, until this day. So it is back'of Kariathiarm.

13. And from there they went unto Mount Ephraim, and came to the house of Michaios.

14. And the five men who went their way to spy out the land of Laisa made answer and said unto their brethren, Ye are aware that there is in this house an Ephood and Theraphin and a carved and moulded thing, and now ye know what ye will do.

15. And they inclined out there and went into the house of the young man the Leuite, into the house of Michaios, and asked him for peace.

16. And the six hundred men girded with their weapons of warfare, they of the sons of Dan, were standing by the door of the gateway of the city.

17. And the five men who had gone their way to spy out the land,

18. Went up and entered into the house of Michaios, and the priest was standing; and they took the carved thing and the Ephood and the Theraphin and the moulded thing; and the priest said unto them. What are ye doing?

19. And they said unto him, Be dumb, put thy hand upon thy mouth and come with us and become a father and a priest for us. Is it a good thing for thee to be a priest of a house of one man rather than to become a priest of a tribe and house in a deme of Israel?

20. And the heart of the priest felt good and he took the Ephood and the Theraphin and the carved and moulded thing, and went in the midst of the laity

21. And they turned away and departed, and placed their children and their domestic animals, and their camp-baggage in front of them.

22. They had got far from the house of Michaios, and lo, Michaios and the men in the houses adjacent to the house of Michaios had responded to his cry for help and overtaken the sons of Dan.

23. And the sons of Dan turned their face and said unto Michaios, What is the reason thou hast called for help?

24. And Michaios said, It is because ye have taken the carved thing which I made, and my priest, and gone your way. And what have I got any more? And what is this ye are saying unto me, Why dost thou cry out?

25. And the sons of Dan said unto him, Let not thy voice be heard in our midst, lest perchance men bitter in soul meet with us, and they add thy soul and the soul of thy house to it.

26. And the sons of Dan went on their way. And Michaios saw that they were abler than he and returned to his house.

27. And the sons of Dan took that which Michaios had made and the priest who was his, and came to Laisa unto a laity living quietly and trusting in hope, and smote them with the mouth of the sword, and turned the city with fire.

28. And there was not one delivered, because it is far from Sidonians, and they had no intercourse with men, and it was in the valley of the house of Hraab. And they built the city and took up their abode in it.

29. And called the name of the city Dan, in the name of Dan, their father, who was born unto Israel: and the former name of the city was Oulamais.

30. And the sons of Dan stood for themselves the carved thing; and Joonathan, son of Goersoon, son of Manassee, he and his sons were priests for the tribe of Dan, until the day of their removal from the land.

31. And they placed for themselves the carved thing which Michaios had made all the days during which the house of God was in Seeloom, and it came to pass in those days that there was no king in Israel.

COMMENT.

This 17th and 18th chapters of Judges is an important excerpt historically in various ways. It gives a bit of history not elsewhere given of the city that afterwards became Jacob's "Bethel." The name at this time it seems was "Laisa" and an older name still had been "Oulamous" or "Oulamis" as here given. As Laisa, it not colonized by Sidonians, the people were evidently living according to the laws and customs of Sidonions; and if a Sidonion colony it is evident from the account here that it was an independent colony, though an appanage of Mount Ephraim. The lawless and barbarous act of these Danites discloses how far the Danites had already lapsed into idolatry and moreover how utterly demoralizing to any noble instincts idolatry is. It seems they still recognized the Lord as God, and the Levite as his true representative and the conservator of his oracles.

The story of the origin of this "carved and moulded thing" also illustrates how a good and consecrated purpose must be accompanied by spiritual enlightenment to accomplish any good result. The moral might be wisely applied to very much so-called "Christian Endeavor" at this present time. There is great danger now of the Christian Endeavor Organization of our day being captured by "the Danites" of the world for other purposes than that with which the movement started.

Another important historical fact is also recorded in this passage from the book of Judges namely—that the tribe had not up to this time succeeded in asserting an inheritance of their allotment under Jeesous ("Joshua" C. V.) in the land of Palestine, but were still a wandering and unsettled people of clans loosely organized and unaccountable to any stable central tribal authority. This helps account for their early disappearance from the sacred records, and also for the comparatively recent discovery of their early maritime enterprises as colonists of the islands of the Mediterranean and the "marks" Dan has left all through Europe, even as far as the early colonization of the North British Isles and the primitive mixture of truth and heathen superstition in all the "clan" organizations especially of Ireland and Scotland in their early history. It also accounts very largely for the mixture of historical and religious truth in the Greek and Roman myths and fables. We shall ultimately see God's hand in all this providential leading. For prophecy is very explicit in saying that "Dan will" yet "judge his laity, as though also one tribe in Israeel," and this rule of Dan is certainly not yet manifest to the world of scholarship or the world at large.

Then the importance of Dan as a factor in thus early promoting idolatry in the kingdom of Ephraim or Samaria, becomes an interesting study in this book of Judges as further developed in these latter chapters still to come.

Are We to Have Peace or War?

Should the Savior come tomorrow and set up his kingdom, and attempt to inaugurate a government of peace, would he or could he, make a success of it? Without an army, without a navy and with no money with which to build a navy or buy war material, how could he take his place as the Chief Monarch of the world, ruling and governing a great nation, and make himself and his nation respected and honored among the nations of the world? With the war spirit extant in the world, as it is today, such a thing would be impossible.

Let me ask another question. How would King Jesus get possession of his country, (Palestine) without the aid of a powerful army? It now belongs to the Turk, and with his present disposition to fight, he would not give it up without a struggle. No; Jesus cannot even commence his millennial reign of peace until the war spirit of the world is broken, completely broken.

The Czar of all the Russias issued a call inviting the nations to assemble and agree upon terms of disarmament. The conference has been held and proven an utter failure so far as agreeing to disarm.

The God of the universe has also issued a proclamation to the nations, and commanding them to prepare for war. Take your implements of husbandry and convert them into engines of war, says the prophet.

This proclamation is being obeyed to the very letter. It will all eventuate in the great and terrible war, foretold in Ezek. xxxviii. and xxxix. and Zech. xiv. When the armies of Gog shall be destroyed upon the mountains of Israel, then will all nations cry for peace. They will have had war enough. A ruler who can restore peace to the whole world, will then be doubly welcome. Then will King Jesus come, with all his saints, and will proclaim to the world that wars are over and that henceforth the world shall be at peace.

The Iowa Conference.

Read this carefully: Those coming to the State Conference (Aug. 10-20) over the Illinois Central and the Chicago and Great Western Railroads will check their baggage to, and get off the cars at East Waterloo. Those coming over the Burlington, Cedar Rapids and Northern Railroad check baggage to and get off at Waterloo, as the company has no depot on the east side. Near all the depots take the Independence Avenue street car going east to the campground. Leave all checked baggage at the depots, and come direct to the campground. We will arrange to transfer your baggage at reduced rates. Heretofore there has sometimes been difficulty in getting baggage that arrives after 6 o'clock, especially Saturday night and for this reason take the early trains. Bring a trunk well filled with everything to make tenting pleasant and that you think you may need. Among which we suggest the following items: sufficient bedding to make you comfortable (remembering that the nights are sometimes cold in a tent) a pillow, extra wraps, towels, soap, wash basin, plate, knife, fork, spoon, cup, a hammock if you have one, and whatever else your good judgment may suggest. If you have a tent bring it and thus help us along in this matter—we want to have tent room for all who come. Let the young people and children come. Board will be furnished at the boarding tent at 10 cents per meal or 25 cents per day. Come with the spirit of Christ and let us have the best Conference we have ever attended. There will be a splendid programme each day—song service, prayer and social meetings, Bible readings, topic talks, essays and preaching. On Sundays there will be Sunday school, so do not forget to bring the children with you.

Obituary.

Died June 24, 1899, at Grand Rapids, Mich., Miss Altia Belle Richards in the 25th year of her age. One of nine children born to Brother and Sister George Richards, now of Middleville, Mich. Altia was the first one to be taken from them by death, and this, coming under such peculiarly sad circumstances makes it doubly hard to bear. On Saturday morning June 24, she took the train for Grand Rapids to consult a Dr. Bennett, who made his regular visits to the city from Detroit; having his rooms in the Eagle Hotel. She had been treated by him for nervousness for some time, and thought she was receiving much benefit, but he told her she had some local trouble that would need an operation, and then she could be a perfectly healthy woman, and on this occasion had gone to have the operation performed, having had one two weeks previous. She did not inform her parents of her real object in going that day, knowing they would seriously object to the use of chloroform, which was administered on each occasion. She went directly to his rooms, the cap was placed over her face and in less than one half hour she was a cold, lifeless corpse. Her sister younger had started to meet her as the train whistled for Middleville, but met instead a gentleman bearing the telegram of her death. The news fell upon the aged and feeble parents with such a blow that it nearly paralyzed them for a while. Altia was a dressmaker by trade, a sweet, loveable woman who endeared herself to all who came in contact with her. This sad death should be a warning to keep away from the traveling physician, professedly skillful, but whose real object is to pocket their money and go on their way to dupe others. The funeral was held from the home, text James iv. 14, after which we drove 16 miles, finding many old friends and neighbors waiting at the cemetery to offer their sympathy and gaze upon the beautiful face they had loved from childhood. We gave a short address here and left the silent form to sleep and wait in God's care, crying out in our hearts, "Come Lord Jesus, come quickly."

Atlantic Port for Russia.

Through the opening today by Grand Duke Vladimir of the new naval stronghold and seaport of Ekaterinask, on the coast of Lapland, Russia, may be said to enter upon a new era of considerable importance, not only to Great Britain but also to the United States. For in Ekaterininsk she obtains for the first time a seaport on the Atlantic open all the year round, and whence her northern fleet can sally forth at will on to the Atlantic Ocean without any danger of its being shut up in the Baltic Sea.

Until now the northern half of Russia's navy has been practically useless during the whole of each winter—that is, nearly half of the year—owing to the ice in the Baltic, while in the event of war it would be the easiest thing in the world for Sweden and Germany combined, or even one or another of these two powers separately, to bar the entrance of the Baltic, and thus prevent the egress of the Russian fleet. The entrance to the Baltic is so narrow and so difficult that it may be said to be commanded by the guns of the Swedish forts, while it would require a small British naval force to blockade the outlet, it being assumed, of course, that Germany would close the Kiel Canal to Russia.

Ekaterinlusk renders Russia henceforth immune from any peril of this character, and I hear that from now on the Czar will rely upon gunboats, destroyers, and torpedo craft for the defense of his Baltic ports and will remove his entire Baltic fleet—which is more powerful than either his Black Sea fleet or his Mediterranean squadron—to his new port on the Murman coast.

It is thoroughly in keeping with the policy of Russia that so much secrecy should have been observed in connection with the construction of this new port, which has been in progress for a number of years past and upon which an enormous quantity of money has been spent. Indeed, the Russian press has been forbidden to mention any thing about the matter, and inasmuch as the coast of Russian Lapland lies beyond the cruising limits of all the maritime powers the great works at Ekaterinlusk have gone on without exciting any attention. The construction of this port has entailed the building of a line of railroad 600 miles in length to Kimi, with a branch line to Kandalask on the White Sea, and in this way the new naval stronghold may be said to be connected with St. Petersburg, not only by means of the Finnish railroad system, but likewise by the so-called Petrozavodsk line.

The defenses of Ekaterinlusk are declared to be as extensive as those of Kronstadt, the most powerful naval stronghold in the world, while the arsenal, the dry docks, the facilities for the building of great warships are all superior to those of any other maritime station of the Russian empire.

While for the present the inauguration of this port is unlikely to receive abroad the full attention that it deserves, yet the matter will become one of paramount importance in the event of any war between Russia and either England or Germany. For, using Ekaterininsk as a naval base, the northern fleet of the Czar could all the year round harass German or English transatlantic shipping to such a degree as to practically suspend all trade of either of these two countries with the United States.—Tribune.

The Higher Life.

The higher life is not a life on wings. It is not so much concerned with soaring as with sowing. Neither is it life on a dizzy pinnacle above the reach of the tempter. Neither the second blessing nor the fortieth comes in the form of a paid-up insurance policy. We never get to a point of safety above that of the householder who cannot completely shut up his house and who must, therefore, be always on watch. We can keep the doors of our mouths locked most of the time, but it is needful that the ear-gates and the eye-windows stand open a large part of the day. We cannot keep the tempter from approaching us wherever we may be; and in these days of unspeakable pictures, which will meet the eye at every turn, it is hardly possible to keep him from slipping in at the windows now and then, and sometimes he runs in at one of the gates before we can shut them. There is no time in life when the soul of man can turn the key and safely lie down to slumber. We are on the watch till the Master comes.—Richmond Christian Advocate.

Some persons apologize for their sins by saying: "We are a great deal better than some people. You see people all around about us that are a great deal worse than we." You stand up columnar in your integrity, and look down upon those who are prostrate in their habits and crimes. What of that? If I failed through recklessness and wicked imprudence for ten thousand dollars, is the matter at all alleviated by the fact that somebody else has failed for one hundred thousand dollars? Oh, no. If I have the neuralgia, shall I refuse medical attendance because my neighbor has virulent typhoid fever? The fact that his disease is worse than mine—does that cure mine? If I, through my fool-hardiness, leap into ruin, does it break the fall to know that others leap off a higher cliff into deeper darkness?—Talmage.

A man of God is worth more than a man of means, if the choice must be made between the two. A godly poor man is ten times the treasure to a church, as a means of support, that a godless rich man would prove to be. And the truth is just as true in the case of a woman as of man. Yet how much more is ordinarily thought of gaining or losing one rich person, than one poor one, in the average congregation.

On Sunday morning Bro. Herriman preached on the "Rich Man and Lazarus." In the afternoon we drove 12 miles to the Niobra river where we buried two willing and obedient souls in the watery grave and like as Christ rose from the grave so they rose to walk a new life. Brethren, pray for them that they may ever be found worthy to the cause they have espoused. In the evening we listened to an able discourse from John xv. "I am the vine, ye are the branches," by Bro. Eychaner, after which we partook of the emblems of our Lord and Savior's broken body and shed blood, which, if we fail not to do, we have no life in us. After this came the saddest part of all, the farewells and separating to our homes, some 150 miles by rail, the rest 18 miles across the prairie, arriving at our homes at 3 o'clock in the morning. We found everything all right for which we thanked God, and resolved to try and do more for the Master in the year to come.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

Poetry.

My Times are in Thy Hand.

My days are in thy hand, O Lord,
My times are in thy hand:
This comforts me with pained heart
I lay my burden at your feet.

My precious ones bound down with chains,
My hands may not unloose,
It comforts me to think thy love,
Not willingly would harm.

My times are in thy hand, O Lord,
My times are in thy hand!
My care, my work are known to thee,
[illegible]

Go thou with me, or else I faint,
Tarry while thy will I see:
Thy loving watchcare over me,
Make even such plant to grow!

S. ROXANA WIRE.

Communicated.

The Sacred or Ineffable Name of the Father.

PINE WOODS BIBLE CLASS.

Teacher. I find the study of the above topic, full of intense interest, and trust we shall be profited as we unfold its glorious truths together.

The topic naturally divides into two sections:

1. That which relates to the Name of the Father, which is the foundation rock.

2. That relating to the Name of the Son; the truths attaching to that Name, we may describe as the beautiful superstructure erected upon the foundation rock.

I will ask Lud. to kindly give us some of the names by which the Father has made himself known.

Lud. In my study, I find the words Eloah, Elohim, El Shaddai, I Am, Theos, Yehovah or Yehowah.

Teacher. By what words have these names been rendered in our Common Version?

Lud. By the words LORD and GOD.

Teacher. Are those words a correct translation of the words I AM, or YEHOWAH?

Lud. By no means, it is a substitution in place of a translation.

Teacher. What is the origin of the word Lord and what does it mean?

Lud. Lord is of Saxon origin, and means monarch, ruler, governor, or some distinguished person.

Teacher. From what word is Lord a proper translation?

Lud. Adon or Adonai.

Teacher. Is the word God a proper translation from the above words?

Lud. No, sir; God, in Saxon, signifies good.

Teacher. Carrie, can you cite some authorities showing that the use of those words in the Common Version, is wrong?

Carrie. Yes. Young, in his Analytical Concordance, says that Yehovah, "in the Common Version of the English Bible, is generally, but improperly translated by the word Lord."

Smith's Bible Dictionary says: "The substitution of the word Lord (for Jehovah) is most unhappy; for, while it in no way represents the meaning of the Sacred Name, the mind has to guard against a confusion with its lower use."

Teacher. Have these several words by which the Father is made known, a HIGHER and LOWER use?

Carrie. Most of them have, but YEHOVAH is an exception.

Teacher. Please give some Bible samples,

Carrie.

ELOAH OR ELOHIM.

Elohim is the plural of the singular Eloah. I will give quotations without distinguishing between the plural or singular.

HIGHER USE.

"So Abraham prayed unto God."

"God said this is the token of the covenant."

"The Spirit of God moved upon the face," etc.

"Enoch walked with God."

"Lord God said unto the serpent."

"God formed man," etc.

LOWER USE.

Jacob said: "I have seen God face to face, and my life is preserved."

"And Manoah said unto his wife, we shall surely die, because we have seen God."

"According to the number of thy cities were thy gods, O Judah."

"Have burnt incense to other gods."

"They choose new gods."

THEOS—HIGHER USE.

"I adjure thee by the living God."

"Thou shalt love the Lord thy God," etc.

"Ye cannot serve God and mammon."

THEOS—LOWER USE.

"As there be gods many, and lords many."

"He hath called them gods unto whom the Word of God came."

"Written your law, I said ye are gods."

EL SHADAI,

signifies strength, power to effect, in this sense it is sometimes applied to the Eternal. In its lower use, it is applied to heathen gods, and also to kings, judges, and others endued with power from the Eternal. See 1 Sam. xxviii. 13; Psa. lxxxii. 1, 6; xcvii. 7; Exod. xxi. 6; xxii. 7, 8.

YEHOVAH.

This name has no lower use, it belongs to the Great Eternal, alone. See Psa. lxxxiii. 18.

"That men may know that THOU WHOSE NAME ALONE is JEHOVAH (Yehovah) art the most high over all the earth."

See Exod. vi. 2, 3: "And God spake unto Moses, and said unto him, I am the Lord: (Yehovah, not Adon, or Adonai—Lord) and I appeared unto Abraham, unto Isaac, and unto Jacob, by the name of God Almighty, but by MY NAME JEHOVAH, (Yehovah) was I not known unto them."

See Gen. xxi. 33: "And Abraham planted a grove in Beersheba, and called there on THE NAME of the Lord (Yehovah—not Adonai—Lord) the EVERLASTING GOD."

Teacher. Before he made known his own true name, in what way was he known? I will ask Arlon to answer?

Arlon. He used a descriptive adjective, which distinguished him from other gods. See Exod. vi. 3: "I appeared unto Abraham, unto Isaac, and unto Jacob, by the name of God ALMIGHTY, but by my name JEHOVAH, was I not known to them." He was the only god which possessed almighty power.

Teacher. By what name did he make himself known to Israel, in Egypt?

Arlon. See Exod. iii. 13, 14: "Moses said unto God, behold, when I come unto the children of Israel, and shall say unto them. The God of your fathers hath sent me unto you; and they shall say unto me, What is his name? What shall I say unto them? And God said unto Moses, I AM THAT I AM: And he said, Thus shalt thou say unto the children of Israel, I AM hath sent me unto you."

Scholars say "I AM," in its etymology, is the same as Yehovah.

Teacher. What is the meaning of the name?

Arlon. Mackay's Lexicon says, I AM means self-existing. Young, in his Analytical Concordance says it partakes more of the nature of unsearchableness. Hence, I AM could be taken to mean the self-existing unsearchable Father.

Teacher. The children of Israel were so long in Egyptian slavery, that they probably knew more about the gods of the Egyptians, than the god of their fathers. Would they comprehend the name, I AM?

Arlon. A writer speaking of that point, said: It is believed that I AM is a talismanic word, which the children of Israel readily comprehended. It was evident that the name was known to the Egyptians in their temple worship. It is referred to by an eminent Egyptian scholar, saying that the words were found inscribed on temple stones lately unearthed in that land, of very ancient date as follows: "NUK-PU-NUK," and bears the English translation, "I AM and I Am." One of the speakers of the Parliament of Religions spoke of this discovery.

Teacher. I will ask Albert to speak of the reverence which the Israelites had for God's sacred name.

Albert. Josephus says: "Moses besought the Lord since he had heard and seen him, that he would tell him his name, that when he offered sacrifice he might invoke him by his name, which had never been disclosed to men before, concerning which it is not lawful for me to say more."

We also read that from a very early date, the Israelites refrained from pronouncing the Sacred Name, for fear of its irreverent use.

Teacher. What occasioned this fear?

Albert. That is found by [illegible] "HE THAT blasphemeth the Name of the Lord (Yeowah, not Adonai) he shall surely be put to death, all the congregation shall certainly stone him: as will the stranger, as he that is born in the land, when he blasphemeth the Name of the Lord, (should be Yehowah Jehovah) shall be put to death."

The name is also spoken of as being "the great and terrible name," "the peculiar name," and "the separate name."

It is said that the High Priest, on the day of atonement, when he entered the Holy of Holies, pronounced the Ineffable Name within the sacred inclosure, while the people stood without, in an attitude of reverence and awe, as the Sacred Name was being spoken by the High Priest.

Teacher. Where was this Holy Name placed?

Albert. Bible quotations speak of it in this wise: "To build a house for the Name of the Lord God of Israel," "that his Name might be there," "in Jerusalem will I put my Name forever."

Teacher. How is it, that in place of the real Name, we have a substitution?

Albert. We learn that the Rabbis substituted shema for the Unutterable Name when spoken. In reading the Scriptures, they refrained from pronouncing the true Name, and substituted in its place, Adonai—Lord.

Teacher. Did the Israelites attribute power to the proper pronunciation of the Name?

Albert. They did. They could not deny that Jesus really performed his miracles; some said he did them through the prince of devils, and others, "through the proper pronunciation of the Sacred Name, which they say, he stole from the temple."

The true pronunciation of this Name, is said to be lost, and is known in hitory as the lost Name.

Teacher. Is there any other name by which the Eternal Father is known? What do you say, George?

George. Yes, see Psa. lxviii. 4: "Sing unto God, Sing praises to his Name: extol him that rideth upon the heavens by his Name JAH, and rejoice before him."

Teacher. Is this really another name?

George. No, JAH or YAH is contraction of YEHOVAH—JEHOVAH, and enters into the composition of

THE NAME JESUS.

Teacher. Please explain how?

George. A note in the Diaglott says: This Name (Jesus) is composed of YAH (I shall be) and SHUA (powerful) YAH-SHUA (I shall be powerful.)

Eusbius says, the Name JESUS means the salvation of God. For Isaiah is the salvation JAH (YAH) i.e. the salvation of God.

Teacher. How many names are there through which men might be saved?

George. Only one. The Bible says there is no other name besides the Name JESUS. It is also inseparably linked with the Father's Name, as ONE NAME. See Isa. xii. 2: "God is my salvation: I will trust and not be afraid; for the Lord JEHOVAH (even YAH-SHUA) is my strength, and my song. He is BECOME MY SALVATION." Eusbius calls JESUS is the "SALVATION of God." Compare this with what Simeon said, when he held our Savior in his arms; and you will find that his eyes had literally seen just what Isaiah said the Lord JEHOVAH is —"My Salvation." In taking the child in his arms he said: "Now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace according to thy Word, for my eyes have seen THY SALVATION."

Jesus said he came in his Father's Name. He shall be called the "Everlasting Father." Isa. vii. 4.

Teacher. How did he get this name?

George. In the first place his Father gave it to him. In the next place, it belonged to him BY INHERITANCE. See Heb. i. 4: "Being made so much better than the angels, as he hath BY INHERITANCE obtained a more excellent Name than they." Every son inherits his father's name, and Jesus being God's "Only Begotten Son," did the

The Bible says he received a name which is above "every name that is named, not only in this world, but also in that which is to come," "God hath highly exalted him, and given him a Name which is above every name," "that at the Name of JESUS, every knee should bow." And right here I want to observe, that it is by the wonderful favor of God that we are permitted to bear that Sacred Name, having it called upon us as we are buried with Jesus in baptism.

Teacher. I want to ask Lucy what will be the result if we continually honor the Sacred Name, after it has been placed upon us?

Lucy. The result will be, that will be added to the others. See Rev. ii. 17: "To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the hidden manna, and I will give him a white stone, and in the stone a NEW NAME written, which no man knoweth, saving he that receiveth it."

A NEW NAME,

Rev. iii. 12: "I will write upon him the Name of my God, and the Name of the City of my God, and I will write upon him my NEW NAME."

Teacher. What name is there like that of JESUS? Ever since the angels announced him as the one who would ultimately bring peace on earth, and harmonize the socials of society, he has been a real live factor in the hearts of all true believers. No Name like that can captivate the heart, and stir it to its utmost depths. Blessed be his glorious name forever.

Spiritualism, Idolatry.

That Spiritualism is idolatry, has but lately dawned upon my mind. We are to seek only to God for knowledge pertaining to the future, not to "spirits that peep and mutter," nor "for the living to the dead." The Bible gives us full and explicit instruction as to the state of man in death, and of his destiny beyond the resurrection.

If we seek to other beings for knowledge regarding these matters, we virtually ignore God, and give his Word the lie. We pay homage and honor to the unseen spirits, by thus seeking to them,—homage and honor, that belong only to God. We set the spirits higher than the Creator in our esteem and affections; is not this plainly idolatry?—the same old idolatry that began in Eden with Eve, was perpetuated by Cain, and re-established after the flood by Nimrod, and that has been kept alive among the human family ever since?

And who are these spirits anyhow? Prof. James H. Hyslop, a member of the faculty of philosophy in Columbia University says that "through Mrs. Piper, (a spirit medium of Boston) "he has talked with the dead, and is as certain of their identity as he is of his own identity." He cannot be certain; the thing is impossible. I dare him to prove that he has talked with the dead, or that he can within a year, or over, demonstrate scientifically the immortality of the soul. As if God did not know! and he says that "none but himself hath immortality"

Mrs. Piper will continue to "baffle the foremost psychologists of Europe and America, as to the secret of her mysterious power" just so long as they refuse to accept the statements of the Bible. It is telepathy, but not telepathy with human beings, living or dead, "The dead know not any thing, neither they that go down into silence," but wicked spirits do, and from these she receives her knowledge, —forbidden knowledge, and false in its superstructure though it be. It has all come from the lie of Satan in the Garden of Eden, "Ye shall be as gods" or in other words, ye shall be immortal, "Ye shall not surely die."

Spiritualism, in common with all other forms of idolatry, assumes that the dead are alive, and then affirms that the communications received are from these dead people, when instead, they are from the demons, or angels, who with their leader, Satan, lost their first estate.

The ancients made no secret of the fact that messages came from demons, and they also professed to receive communications from the dead. Mrs. Piper may be sincere; she undoubtedly is; she may have no bureau of information to obtain family histories and secrets; the tests to which she has been subjected, may show spirit communication: this we will not deny; and yet she, and all who appeal to her are deceived, and rightly too, for they "have hewn themselves out cisterns, broken cisterns that can hold no water." For what of hope or promise is there in spiritualism anyhow? What comparison is there between it and the grand faith of the Bible? What rest for poor humanity is there in the unproved assertions of lying spirits, who though saying that the dead are alive, never have and never can demonstrate the fact? They may make forms appear, and call them by the name of our loved ones. The vision that seems to be seen, is inside the brain and not outside. It is like the row of changing, ugly dark faces, that seem to dance before our eyes when we lie down at night, with weary limbs and overwrought brain. We shut our eyes and the faces are there; we open them and they are grinning at us still. And yet, we know that there are no faces before us. It is the same in fever, we see people sitting on the side walls of a room; children playing over the floor, great cheeses, and sheets full of delicious grapes, brought in; white mice by the myriad jumping through a tangle of saw-grass, and little babes carried away to starve, and yet, none of these visions are real, they are all imaginings of a diseased brain, all inside the brain and not outside. If the visions seen by those under the control of spirit-mediums, were real and tangible, others could see them too. O that men would cleave to God! But it is the last time—the last 360 years of the 2520 years of Gentile domination, and this period was to be marked by the lack of faith among the masses.

The Savior asked "if he should find faith upon the earth," at his second advent, intimating thereby that he would not. The state of the world, only proves that the Word of the Lord is true, and that we are very near the end of the age.

"Blessed is he that watcheth and keepeth his garments!"

Lost! $500 Reward.

I am in an agreement with four other men in Ventura Co., California, who associated together, have decided to offer the above reward, in order to find "the faith once delivered to the saints" which has been lost in the errors of pagan tradition.

To any one finding any of the following words or phrases in the following Scriptures,—if they will send us the name of the book, in either Old or New Testament stating chapter and verse, we will pay the above named reward.

THEY TO FIND.

"Immortal soul," "deathless soul," "never dying soul," "disembodied souls," "deathless spirit," "glorified spirit," "spirit world," "upper fold," "the brighter home above," "the upper and better kingdom," "gone to the spirit land," "is safe in heaven," "has gone to be an angel," "death is another life," "the body is only a cage," "go to heaven at death," "the death that never dies," "eternal hell," "never ending torment," "everlasting torture," "endless misery," "senseless anguish," "eternal sorrow," "immaterinlity," etc.

Elder Jas. A. Harding, a noted preacher, was shown the above and he says it cannot be found in the Bible. Yet he has been preaching people to heaven when they die, and immortal souls, and the death that never dies. Why, do they do that, knowing to the contrary? Had they not as well speak of the life that never lives. He is of the Christian or Campbellite persuasion, and now he says our home will be here on this earth.

Yours in the one faith,

S. R. CLINKENBEARD.

Dear Restitution:

It was our privilege a few weeks ago to listen to a popular minister, who in the course of his remarks said he believed the spirits of deceased friends were free, and at liberty to come and go at will. And he went on and narrated a dying mother's experience and testimony in confirmation of his opinions. He said that when she was at the point of death, she held out her hands and said to her departed husband, "Now, come pap, I am ready to go." And pap came and conveyed his wife away to heaven. Of course it was his spirit which is supposed to be an immaterial entity, without body, parts or passions, (the discipline idea of God) that came after his immaterial spirit wife and conveyed her away to that imaginary clime. But O, do stop a moment, I pray thee, and think of an immaterial spirit pap, coming for and carrying his immaterial spirit wife "across the river styx," neither one having any body, parts or passions, and so very fine and thin that ten thousand such fairy men and women could stand on the point of the finest cambric needle and have lots of room to spare.

No tongue to talk,
No ears to hear,
No feet to walk,
No heart to love,
No wings to fly
Far up above,
The deep blue sky.
How will they go,
I pray thee tell,
So far away,
To live and dwell?
O, stop and think,
Before you go,
You have no boat,
No hands to row.
These fairy tales,
Have long been spun,
By rattle heads,
Beneath the sun.
This seed was sown
In Eden fair,
And led astray,
The happy pair.
His Satanic sting,
Came very nigh;
It was poison then,
And caused all to die.
Renounce this fatal drug.
Fling it all away,
And look to Jesus,
The only living way.
If you would him gain:
Haste to him fly:
If you neglect it,
You must surely die:
Then in death of sleep,
And know not any thing,
So says the Bible.
By our Lord and King.
Jesus soon will come,
His day is nigh at hand,
To gather home his jewels,
And live in Eden's land,
His saints then immortal,
A grand and glorious band,
Will live again and rule,
With Jesus in the land.

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME XLVIII. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, JULY 26, 1899. NUMBER 28.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for salvation.

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, JULY 26, 1899.

ROBERT G. Ingersoll, the greatest infidel lecturer and writer of the age, died suddenly of heart disease on last Friday.

"WE deceive ourselves when we fancy that only weakness needs support. Strength needs it far more. A straw or a feather sustains itself long in the air."

GARTIER said, "He had known many people who would have plucked cannon balls out of guns with their bare hands, and yet had not courage the to be happy."

THE Editor was called to St. Charles, Ill., last week to attend the funeral of his youngest brother's wife, Kittie Vesler Underwood, who was buried at Aurora, Ill., July 18.

"IT is easy to shout with the multitude; it is hard to raise one feeble voice against their loud decisive roar. Yet if that one voice be one of truth, it shall at last be heard in tones of thunder, when the wild strife of tongues which to drown it, is hushed in the eternal silence which awaits all lies."

HORACE Smith defines toleration as being "Wise enough to have no difference with those who differ from us. The mutual rancor of conflicting sects is inversely as their distance from each other: no one hates a Jew or a Pagan half so much as a fellow Christian who agrees with him in all but one unimportant point."

PHILOSOPHERS say that causation plays a great part in the history of our faults, especially those of habit. It is in their causes that these must be attacked. We need to contend, not so much against the actions themselves, as the dispositions out of which they spring. Go back to the fountain, if you would purify the stream.

TATIAN, who lived in the Second century of the Christian Era, said that man, before he was born had no existence. He also taught that at death he goes out of existence as an Adamic creature; and will only live again by Jesus at the resurrection. He thus practically denies the false dogma of the soul's existence in an invisible world. His words are:—"Just as, not existing before I was born, I knew not who I was, and only existed in the potentiality of fleshly matter. But being born after a former state of nothingness, I have obtained through my birth a certainty of my existence. In the same way, having been born, through death existing, no longer, and seen no longer, I shall exist again just as before I was not, but was afterward born."

Keep a List.

"Keep a list of your FRIENDS, and let God be first on the list.

Keep a list of the GIFTS you get, and let Christ the unspeakable gift be first.

Keep a list of your MERCIES, and let pardon and peace be at the top.

Keep a list of your JOYS, and let the 'Joy unspeakable and full of glory' head the list.

Keep a list of your HOPES, but be sure that the hope of glory be first.

Keep a list of your SORROWS, and let Godly sorrow head the list.

Keep a list of your SINS, and let the sins of unbelief be set down as the first and worst of all.

Keep a list of your ENEMIES, and put down the 'Old Man' first, and pray for all the rest."

"Scoffers in the Last Days,"

Is the express word of the Spirit in the Apostle Paul. If the reader doubts that the last days are upon us, let him read the following from the English Methodist Recorder:—

"A correspondent requests us to give an opinion on the seven vials and ten horns of Revelation and the time, times and half a time of Daniel. We beg to be excused. Even had we time and times and half a time, we have not even half of a disposition to get into a ten-horned discussion with somebody who might pour out his vials of wrath upon us for not seeing as he sees after all."

Surely the Last Days are upon us; and the man who has no "disposition" to know the mind of the Spirit is nigh unto cursing.

"Good is slow; it climbs. Evil is swift; it descends. Why should we marvel that it makes great progress in a short time."

Important Changes.

There are many important changes in the Revised Version of the Scriptures with relation to the Truth, which are very helpful, and thinking that perhaps a majority of our readers have not the benefit of the New Translation we have concluded to give them the benefit of the labors in this direction of Bro. Geo. M. Lees of Dublin; we quote as follows:—

Eccl. iii. 21. "Who knoweth the spirit of man, whether it goeth upward, and the spirit of the beast, whether it goeth downward?"

Isa. xiv. 12. "Daystar" instead of "Lucifer."

Isa. xxxiii. 21. "But there the Lord will be with us in Majesty."

Isa. xxxv. 1. "For them," omitted.

Isa. lii. 14. The portion from "his vision" to "Sons of Men" is in brackets, and the following verse reads in margin "startle" instead of "sprinkle." They were astonished or startled before and will be so again.

Isa. lxiii. 9. (Margin) "In all their adversity he was no adversary." Instead of "In all afflicted."

Jer. xxxiii 25. "If my covenant of day and night stand not."

Ezek. x. 18. "From over the threshold" instead of "from off." Note the stages in departing. Ezek. ix. 3. "to the threshold;" x. 4. "over the threshold," x. 19, "to door of East gate:" xi. 23. "To the Mount of Olives, "For the glory of arriving," see Ezek. xliii. 2; Rev. xvi. 12.

Ezek. xxxviii. 2, 3 and 39: (R. V.) "Gog, prince of Rosh"—the word chief is omitted and Rosh added.

Dan. iii. 25. "Like a Son of the God," instead of "like the Son of God."

Dan. vii. 9. "The thrones were placed," instead of "cast down."

Dan. vii. 25. "Half a time" instead of "The dividing of time."

Hosea iv. 18. "Her rulers dearly love shame," instead of "her rulers with shame do love, give ye."

Zech. x. 4. "Corner stone," instead of "corner," and (Mar) "ruler" instead of "oppressor."

Luke xxi. 9. "Immediately," instead of "by and by."

Luke xxiii. 32. "Two others, malefactors," instead of "two other malefactors."

Luke xxiv. 50. "Over against" instead of "as far as." It was from the Mount of Olives—not Bethany—that Jesus ascended.

John xi. 15. (Mar) "First in regard of me," instead of "before me."

John v. 22. "From the Jews," instead of "of the Jews."

John v. 3, 4. The passage concerning the moving of the water by an angel is omitted.

Acts i. 8. "When," instead of "after that."

Acts i. 13. "Where they were abiding; both Peter and John and James" and others. The R. V. here gives the names of those present at the ascension, whereas the Common Version does not.

Acts vii. 45. "Joshua" instead of "Jesus."

Acts xx. 27. "The whole counsel of God," instead of the indefinite position of the pause, before or after, all.

Rom. viii. 33, 34. (Mar.) "Shall God that justifieth?" "Shall Jesus Christ that died?"

1 Cor. i. 23. "Gentiles," instead of Greeks."

1 Cor. i. 5. "Then shall each man have his praise from God," enforcing individuality, and that this praise is from God.

1 Cor. vii. 5. "To prayer," instead of "To fasting and prayer." See Isa. lviii. 5, 6, 7.

1 Cor. viii. 6. "Through," instead of "by," in both instances.

1 Cor. x. 9. "The Lord," instead of "Christ."

2 Cor. iv. 4. "Gospel of the glory of Christ." Note contrast with Isa. lii. 15.

Gal. iii. 17. The words "In Christ" omitted.

Gal. iv. 10. "Seasons," instead of "times."

Phil. iii. 21. "Body of our humiliation" instead of vile body. Body is not "vile," see Rom. vi. 18; xii. 1.

Col. i. 16. "From him," instead of "for by him," also "created through him," instead of "by him."

Col. ii. 23. Re-ordinances—Roman Catholic and otherwise—which things have indeed a show of wisdom in will worship and humility, and severity to the body; but not of any value against the indulgence of the flesh." A great improvement on the Common Version.

1 Thess. i. 10. "Deliverth us," instead of "delivered us."

2 Thess. ii. 8. "To them," repeated, i. e. to them that obey not, because a different class to first part of the verse.

1 Tim. iv. 12. "To the believers," instead of "of the believers."

2 Tim. iv. 14. "Will render," instead of "reward."

Heb. i. 2. "At the end of those days," because a different Greek word from 2 Tim. iii. 1; 2 Pet. iii. 3; also "through whom," instead of "by whom."

Heb. x. 34. "In heaven," omitted.

Heb. x. 38. "He," instead of "any man," that is, even the Just.

2 Pet. i. 19. "The word of prophecy made more sure," instead of "a more sure word of prophecy."

2 Pet. iii. 12. "Earnestly desiring the coming," instead of "hastening unto."

1 John v. 7. This verse on which the doctrine of the trinity is so largely based is omitted.

2 John i. 7. "Cometh, instead of "is come." Probably this should have been so in 1 John iv. 2.

Jude i. 6. "Bonds," instead of "chains."

Rev. vii. 14. "Come," instead of "came."

Rev. xvii. 6. "Wonder," instead of admiration."

Rev. xvii. 8. "Shall come," instead of "yet is."

Rev. xix. 10. "I am a fellow servant with thee, and with thy brethren that hold" etc. Not that the angel was of John's brethren, as in C. V., but was a fellow-servant with John's brethren. Note also the word, "holding" in R. V. as more significant than "having" so also chap. xxii. 9.

Rev. xx. 4. "Such as worshipped not the beast, "instead of "and which had not,"—the combination of being beheaded and not worshipping is not implied.

Editor Restitution:

In article in THE RESTITUTION, June 11, written by J. and Lizzie Anthony, the following statements occurred: "Again we are informed in various portions of Scripture, that the Satan or devil (Diabol) was cast out of heaven, and there are so many passages which speak of him in a personal sense and as a personality, that there can hardly be any doubt of a personal being who is engaged in an open antagonism to God and all that is good." ....."Now then, how are you going to destroy a being whose nature is like angel's? It would be an impossibility, yet the above Scriptures are both antagonizing features. Manifestly, here is a conflict in the Word of God through the Spirit. I don't think the Spirit deals in clashing theories, etc." The Scriptures certainly do not deal in clashing theories, and the seeming clash, is due to our ignorance. If you will permit me I will examine the various passages where the devil and Satan are spoken of, and try to get an understanding of their various meanings. James i. 15 says, "Let no man say when he is tempted, I am tempted of God; for God cannot be tempted with evil, neither tempteth he any man. But every man is tempted, when he is drawn away of his own lust and enticed." It would seem to be that this would have been the correct place to have put in something about Satan, if he existed, and his power, because many people of modern times excuse their crimes by saying, "It was the devil who tempted me." But this passage holds us entirely responsible when we transgress. The passage from Jude 6 does not prove the existence in the world of a supernatural being doing evil and causing others to do evil continually. The Diaglott reads, "And those angels who kept not their own principality, but left their own habitations, he has kept in perpetual chains under thick darkness for the judgment of the great day." When God keeps any one, angels or men, "In perpetual chains under thick darkness," we may feel perfectly sure they are not roaming round tempting people. The word then translated angels means messengers, who those messengers were, who then transgressed, we have no means of knowing, but they may have been human for all we know. In regard to the devil spoken of in the 12th of Rev., we must remember that this is book full of metaphor figure and symbol, and we should be careful not to build theories upon light, metaphorical language. The book of Revelations was written long after Christ had ascended into heaven and John was told Rev. i. 19, "Write therefore the things thou sawest, even those which are, and the things which are about to transpire after these." Emphatic Diaglott. So that this war, if it was a war in the heaven of heavens, took place long after Christ had gone there. And not as is represented in Paradise Lost, which the popular idea is taken from before the fall of Adam. When reading such passages we must bear in mind that the words heaven and earth are frequently used in a political sense and when so used represents governments and peoples. See Isa. i. 2; also xiii. 13. 14; xiv. 12. 13 xxxiv. 4. 5; 2 Pet. iii. 5 to 10. There are several words translated devil in the Common Version. To properly understand the subject we should know the meanings of the various words used. The word generally used in the Old Testament is the Hebrew word Satan, but the word does not necessarily mean an evil being, or a supernatural one. It is used for persons doing good as well as doing evil. It simply means an opponent and adversary may be the hindering one who is going to do evil, as in the case of the angels of the Lord, who were sent to be an adversary to Balaam. In Numbers xxii. 22 the word Satan is translated adversary; if it had been left untranslated as in so many other places, it would have spoiled the whole popular theory. Also in verse 32 the angel says, "Behold I went out to withstand thee." The literal reading would be, "I went to be a Satan unto thee." The revised reading is "I am come forth as an adversary." Christ said to Peter on one occasion, "Get thee behind me, Satan." The word Satan was thus used by the Hebrews, and no more implied a supernatural being than our word adversary. The word devil occurs very seldom in the Common Version of the Old Testament. In Psa. cvi. 37, it occurs, "Yea, they sacrificed their sons and their daughters unto devils." The word translated here devils is the Hebrew word shedim. It is a compound word, shed signifies a nourisher and is applied to a woman's breast because it gives forth nourishment. "Am" means mother, so that the word meant a mother's breast. In ancient times the heathen erected great mounds in the shape of woman's breast, and on these they offered their sacrifices. God accuses the children of Israel of the same idolatry, they were thus sacrificing their children. But these gods were not real living beings. God says in Isa. xliv. 8, "Is there a god beside me? Yea, there is no God; I know not any." Rev. ix. 20, "And the rest of the men who were not killed by these plagues did not reform from the works of their hands, that they should not worship the demons and the idols of gold and of silver and of brass and of wood, which can neither see, nor hear nor walk." Emphatic Diaglott. If there is a great arch fiend roaming round prompting men to sin and offer these horrible sacrifices, then there is another god. In the New Testament there are two words in the old version, indiscriminately translated devil; the one is diabolous, the other is demon. The diabolous is a compound Greek word, literally meaning one who strikes through with calumny. Amongst many other places the word occurs in the following passages: 1 Tim. iii. 11, "Even so must their wives be grave, not slanderers," (diabolus). Titus ii. 3, "The aged women likewise that they be in behavior as becometh holiness, not false accusers." (diabolus) It would have been rather startling to the ordinary reader, if in these two passages the word had been left as in many other places with the anglicized Greek form devils. The word demon frequently translated devil in the gospels has another meaning entirely. It was a word in common use amongst the Greeks; its equivalent in English is immortal soul or spirit. The demons were supposed to be the departed spirits of their forefathers. Socrates, who was one of the wise men amongst the Greeks, when making his defence before the judges who condemned him to death says, "What is it then, that has prevented me from appearing in your assemblies? It is that demon, that voice divine, which you so often have heard me mention. That spirit has attached itself to me from my infancy; it is a voice I never hear, but when it would prevent me from persisting in some thing I have resolved, for it never exhorts me to undertake any thing. It is the same being that has always opposed me when I would intermeddle in the affairs of the republic, and that with the greatest reason, for I should have been among the dead long ago, had I been concerned in the measures of the state, without affecting anything to the advantage of myself or my country."

Hesiod says in speaking of the supposed golden age of the world. "After this generation were dead they were by the will of the great Jupith promoted to be demons, keepers of mortal men, observers of their evil works, clothed in air, always walking about the earth, givers of riches and these are the royal honors which they enjoy."

Plato, disciple of Socrates and father of the Platonic philosophy, which has bewitched mankind into a belief of man's inherent immortality, says, "All those who die valiantly in war are of Hesiod's golden generation, and are made demons. The same also we decree when ever any of those who were excellently good in life die either of old age or in any other manner." When a man died then, if he was good in this life he was supposed to have become a good demon, but if he had here, he was a bad demon, corresponding to modern spiritualism.

When Paul preached at Athens, the city of philosophers, when he told them of Jesus, and the resurrection of the dead they said, "He seems to be a setter-forth of strange demons." They could not comprehend a demon resurrection of his body again. Their philosophy knew nothing of God bringing man to life again from the dust of the ground. Some mocked as well as they might from their standpoint, what did a demon want with a mortal body again. In the East at that time and the same thing is true of the present time, persons who are insane, or who have any very peculiar disease, such as epilepsy, are looked upon as being possessed by evil demons, that was the universal belief in the time of our Savior. Christ simply used the common language of the people, had he taken the time to explain to the people physical conditions he would never have accomplished the work he had to do, he left that to the slow development of future ages. As a proof that he did not often combat ideas which were clearly unscriptural, when he was accused by his adversaries of casting out demons by the power of Beelzebub, the prince of demons, he did not reply as he might have done, that he could not do so, as there could be no god Beelzebub. Beelzebub was a god which the Philistines worshiped. These gods were simply dumb idols, the Scriptures declare, how then could he cast out demons by Beelzebub, but he puts them to silence in a more direct way. He says, "If I by Beelzebub cast out demons, by whom do your children cast them out?" And they were silenced at once, for it was a fact that some of the afflicted ones had been cured by their children, just as we can cure some of them now, but Christ could cure by a word. The man in the country of the Gadarnes, who lived among the tombs was a raving maniac, and I have seen many such pitiable sufferers. He had the popular idea that he was possessed by demons, he said he had a legion (there can be no question but it was the insane man who spoke) a legion of Roman soldiers, which the word was taken from, was between three and four thousand. Christ simply transferred the insanity or diseased condition of the man to the swine.

In 1 Tim. iv. 1, we read, "Now the spirit speaketh expressly, that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils (demons)." The seducing spirits there spoken of were men. This same phraseology applied to men you will find in 1 John iv. 1-3. The warning was given in regard to what actually came to pass by the time of the Council of Nicea, 325, the whole church (Catholic church) believed in the doctrines of demons. This belief by that time was that all mankind was born immortal beings. They had adopted through the teaching of Origen and other teachers the heathen doctrine of demons. Mosheim, who is himself a believer in the inherent immortality of man, says in speaking of the fourth century, "The public processions and supplications by which the pagans endeavored to appease their gods, were now adopted into the Christian worship and celebrated with great pomp and magnificence in several places..... It is at the same time, as undoubtedly certain, as it is extravagant and monstrous, that the worship of the martyrs was modeled by degrees, according to the religious services that were paid to the gods before the coming of Christ." And these gods were simply the supposed demons of their forefathers. So that when dealing with the devil-question we must exclude all those passages where the word demon occurs. Whether the Editor will care to give any more space to dealing with this question remains to be seen, if so, I am willing to take up each passage where the word Satan and diabolus occurs, and show that there are no passages in the Scriptures, when carefully examined, which proves the existence of a great arch fiend roaming round destroying mankind.

Religion and Business.

It is possible to put into one's coming and going, into one's doing, a glow of reverence for God, and to make it evident in every transaction that one is trying to be obedient to the Divine will. Men may be strictly honest—true in speech and all that—and yet be worldly. How often one hears the remark that business is business. Very true. But business may be more than business: it may be a means of grace. It may be, and ought to be, a school in which we may grow in gratitude, in patience, in faith, in love, and in all the qualities through which man comes into fitness to fellowship now and evermore with the Lord Jesus Christ. It is a pitiable sight to see a man hard and cold in his business life, as though this were a great section of his existence in which there is no possibility of cultivating religious principles and having the grace of God. It is a refreshing sight to see a man living in the world and doing with his might what his hands find to do, and yet doing all in this spirit of loyalty to the Master.

Bible Study.

"Thy Word is a lamp unto my feet," said the psalmist of old. You want your lamp to burn as brightly as possible. You trim the wick; you wash dry, and polish the glass chimney; you keep the shade clean. But let the dust gather, and the smoke make its sooty deposit; and the wick becomes crisp and hard and black, and the light upon the open page is flickering and weak. The lamp is your friend, but you must take good care of it. It will treat you as you treat it. The figure may be homely but it is true. What the Bible brings to you will depend in large measures upon what you bring to it. You may have a crumb or a granary full to bursting, just as you choose. There is gold on its surface, there are jewels in its mines, there are royal pearls in its depths. All are not equally equipped for its study; but every one of us can do his utmost in its patient, loving study, and no labors will bring a surer or a richer reward.—Dr. A. J. F. Behrends.

For ever, O Lord, thy Word is settled in heaven. Thy faithfulness is unto all generations: thou hast established the earth, and it abideth for ever.

Earth and Heaven.

One of the strongest instincts of the human mind is the love of home. Nearly akin is the attachment to the locality, State or country, where one is brought up, or is wont to dwell. Further reaching still is the general sympathy with humanity on all the face of the earth, and in proportion to intellectual, moral and spiritual culture, so strengthens and widens the linking bond to home, to country and to man. There is no subject of such universal interest to humanity as humanity; no world in the reach of the telescope that commands anything like so much attention as mother Earth. And it is vain that some recklessly and selfishly take flat in order to impress upon people the necessity for fitting themselves for sudden and hasty transmission to some far-away sphere in which they have no interest. The idea, however logically elaborated or eloquently pronounced, can find no receptive lodgment in the human mind; in fact, common sense rejects and resents it, and so the adventures thereof are fain to refuge in the assumption of authority, or arrogate to themselves a superior and spiritual sense, to which common sense is opposed.

In considering this subject from a Biblical point of view we can go further still. All through the "ancient classic" there is no special mention of any planet but this. Its history is of man and earth; its laws are for man and the earth; its prophecies concern man and the earth; its gospel and redemption are for the man and earth. The Bible tells us that "God so loved the world," and as a plan for the purifying, the elevation, the redemption, and the glorifying of the world and the race of man, it will always commend itself to the better class of thinking humanity in spite of all efforts to project a universal and permanent emigration of the race, and the ultimate depopulation and incineration of the planet. Isaiah tells us that God formed the earth and made it. "He created it not in vain, he formed it to be inhabited." This is the general tone of the whole volume. No one has ever found a single quotation in it in which heaven, or any world or planet there, outside of this one, is suggested even distantly as the ultimate home of the race. Any one with a good Bible concordance can settle this point for himself in a short time by running over the quotations under the word "heaven." As for the much-referred-to "Abraham's bosom," with its hard-hearted company, it is no place for a decent man to go, far less to take his family to see the exhibition. Moreover, we have the positive statement in various ways from the mouth of the Savior himself that he alone ascendeth to heaven, and that where he goes (went) his disciples or anyone else cannot come. We have his plain statement in the Sermon on the Mount that "the meek will inherit the earth," (quotation from Psalms, by the way) and in the prophetic song of the redeemed in Revelations 10th and 5th the refrain is, "we shall reign on the earth." So much for the New Testament. One only needs to open the Old Testament anywhere in the "Prophetic Books" and read the glowing descriptions of the coming ages of glory and beauty, of righteousness and peace—the civilization par excellence, the climax of human and divine effort, the culmination of hopes. Merely from a literary point of view some of these productions of old are incomparable in their magnificent breadth of thought and grandeur of expression, but their limit is humanity. They include the "whole earth"—no more. A great deal was said of a certain rich New Yorker who made himself notorious by saying that this country wasn't fit for a gentleman to live in, and so crossed the Atlantic and had himself naturalized in Britain, but what must be thought of those who can't find a place on the whole earth good enough—not even Britain, who sing

"They are but strangers here
Earth is a desert drear."

What are we to think of theologies that foster such senseless ingratitude for the blessings now enjoyed and the hope that is coming? The beautiful thought that we are progressing to a better state in this world has always been the motive power, the inspiration of righteous men and women, antiquated theology clouding the light, and venerable superstition blocking the way, nevertheless. It has been the star of hope in the past; at present it looks like dawn, although, verily, "the light shineth in the darkness, and the darkness comprehendeth it not," for, although education has progressed in many lines, the Bible is practically an unknown book. Little snatches are quoted in religious papers, and short texts extracted from it are orated or mull-off for an hour or two on Sunday. And although many have caught on to the spirit of its ethics, the spirit of its hope and ultimate redemption is a sealed book, and in regard to this latter "they grope along the wall like the blind." What renewed inspiration it would be to such to know that the labor they do and the interest they take in the intellectual and spiritual endowment of their fellows, their home, country, and world, will not all end in smoke and splinters when the earth goes off like a stick of dynamite, but we are a patient and conservative God, working with good through us, and no plant or planet of his planting will ever be rooted up. Therefore, pray we, "Our Father, thy kingdom come. Thy will be done on earth."

Report of Meeting.

Report of the Northwest Conference of the Church of God held at Lake Shore, near Vancouver, Wash., June 21, 1899. Meetings commenced Friday night; there was a large gathering from different parts of the Conference, and all had a pleasant and profitable time. Friday night we listened to a very able sermon by Bro. Eggleston. Saturday morning at 10 A. M. class meeting led by Bro. Johnson, of Fisher; preaching at 11 by Bro. Wm. Prosser. Business meeting at 3 P. M., at which the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, A. J. Mills, Vancouver; Vice President, W. W. Truesdell, of Scholls; Secretary, W. J. Byham, Vancouver; Treasurer, P. G. Woolf, Vancouver. The business meeting was one of the pleasantest in the history of this Conference. The reports of ministers were very encouraging, especially that of Evangelist W. L. Skeels who reports the organization of two new churches, but as Sister Brooks will give his report in full as made to the Association of the Church of God I will not dwell upon the report. In the evening we listened to a sermon on the Eastern question, by E. Grant. Sunday class meeting 10 A. M., preaching by Bro. Wm. Skeels, 11 A. M.; a sermon in the evening by Bro. Prosser. During the meetings letters of commendation were issued to Brothers Eggleston and Johnson.

REPORT OF ASSOCIATION OF BELIEVERS.

To the Household of Faith:

I have been rather dilatory in sending in report of the meeting of the Association of Believers of the Church of God. In connection with the Northwestern Conference this association met and transacted their business for the ensuing year. After the reading of the minutes they proceeded to the election of officers. The following are the names of the officers: President, J. B. Woolf, Vancouver, Wash.; Vice President, Samuel Lawrence, Sr., Scholls, Oregon. Secretary, Almira Brooks, Scholls, Oregon; Treasurer, C. H. Schmeltzer, Scholls, Oregon; Evangelist, W. L. Skeels, Scholls, Oregon. In connection with this report we will send in the report of the Evangelist. We have a membership of eighty-two now. We invite all lovers of the truth to unite with us that we may have more strength. We believe it will be a dollar well spent. Our nation's motto would do for us to go by, "For in union there is strength." I would have you all notice one part of Bro. Skeels' report particularly; it is where he speaks of the work of Bro. Belshaw's work in the Union Sunday school. This has always been my hobby. I have seen more good done in union Sunday schools than any other. In fact I do not think there ought to be any other. Now, Bro. T. E. Adams, don't make me say what I did not say, as you did once before. But I thought you did not catch my meaning so I let it go. But how much good we can do if we only go where there is work to do.

ALMIRA BROOKS, Sec.

Evangelist's report for the Conference year beginning Oct. 21, 1898, and ending June 24, 1899. To the Northwestern Conference and to the Association of Believers of the Church of God, and their officials:

Number of days evangelizing, 68; number evangelizing sermons, 64; number of regular days, 185; number of sermons, 19; whole number of days, 805; whole number of sermons, 83; whole number immersed, 17; whole number churches organized, 2; whole amount received, $127.19; whole amount of traveling expense, $22.45; order on treasurer of association making up deficit, $17.51; number of miles travel in evangelizing, 800.

The churches organized are as follows: the church at Central Point, Jackson Co. Organization was organized June 4th, and consists of 15 or 18 members, of whom 1 immersed six. Two members have been added since I left the locality. The officers are Elder A. J. Daley, Eagle Point, Deacon and Secretary, Merritt Elliott, Deacon and Treasurer, O. Bursell, both of Central Point. The church at Fir Butte, Eugene, Oregon, was organized June 21, and sixteen names of believers enrolled. The officers are Eld. C. H. Belshaw, Deacon and Sec., Geo. Edmonson, Deacon and Treasurer, Benjamin Fisher. I immersed nine of the members Sunday June 18. On this trip to Southern Oregon, your evangelist gave forty-four discourses and four talks at the immersions in forty-three days. The time includes days spent in traveling. The success[illegible] largely due to Bro. Daley's occasional preaching and to Bro. Fisher's work in Germany schools. Also to Bro. Belshaw's direct manner of teaching the gospel in a Bible Class. All the members of the church at Fir Butte had been members of his class in the Union Sunday school. This should greatly encourage all to zealously work in their several vocations, knowing that "one may plant and another water, but God must give the increase."

Respectfully submitted in love for the cause,

W. L. SKEELS.

Iowa State Conference.

The Twelfth Annual Conference of the Church of God in Iowa, will convene at Waterloo, Aug. 10 to 20 inclusive. Waterloo is situated at a junction of the Illinois Central, Burlington, Cedar Rapids and Northern, and the Chicago and Great Western Railways, and is of easy access from all parts of the State. Directions as to street car lines, baggage, etc, are given else where in this paper.

Dear brethren, we expect a better attendance this year than ever before. Rains have been frequent and abundant, and you have a bountiful harvest. You have been blessed financially and we want you to be blessed abundantly by coming to our annual gathering. The Lord wants you there, for his cause may suffer without you.

Our evangelists have worked faithfully and sacrificed much and they will be on the ground, and indeed they will feel discouraged if you are not there to greet them, and encourage them in their work. We missed some who were not there last year. And O, what a blessed meeting we enjoyed with those who came. Do you rejoice in the things of the kingdom? Are you glad that our Savior is soon coming to set up his kingdom? Do you believe it is near? Then you surely are willing to make some sacrifice of time and money. It is your duty to do so. God has committed to you the Word of Reconciliation.

You say, "We are so scattered." Yes, and this is a very strong reason why you should attend this meeting. There are some who are always at our annual meetings. We expect them there and they do not disappoint us. But some of you have not been with us for two, three years, and some have never attended. We want to see you; we need your presence and help, and this year is a good time to come.

Now, brethren, what if everything at home does not get just the same care as when you are there. If you will devote a few days and a few dollars God will bless you more abundantly than ever. We expect this meeting to be a feast of fat things, and you cannot afford to stay away. Begin at once to prepare for the meeting.

Yours expecting to see you at Waterloo Conference, Aug. 10-20.

A. J. EYCHANER, Pres.
O. J. ALLARD, Sec.

Read this carefully: Those coming to the State Conference (Aug. 10-20) over the Illinois Central and the Chicago and Great Western Railroads will check their baggage to, and get off the cars at East Waterloo. Those coming over the Burlington, Cedar Rapids and Northern Railroad check baggage to and get off at Waterloo, as the company has no depot on the east side. Near all the depots take the Independence Avenue street car going east to the campground. Leave all checked baggage at the depots, and come direct to the campground. We will arrange to transfer your baggage at reduced rates. Heretofore there has sometimes been difficulty in getting baggage that arrives after 6 o'clock, especially Saturday night and for this reason take the early trains. Bring a trunk well filled with everything to make tenting pleasant and that you think you may need. Among which we suggest the following items, sufficient bedding to make you comfortable (remembering that the nights are sometimes cool in a tent) a pillow, extra wraps, towels, soap, wash basin, plate, knife, fork, spoon, cup, a hammock if you have one, and whatever else your good judgment may suggest. If you have a tent bring it and thus help us along in this matter—we want to have tent room for all who come. Let the young people and children come. Board will be furnished at the boarding tent at 10 cents per meal or 25 cents per day. Come with the spirit of Christ and let us have the best Conference we have ever attended. There will be a splendid programme each day—song service, prayer and social meetings, Bible readings, topic talks, essays and preaching. On Sundays there will be Sunday school, so do not forget to bring the children with you.

A. J. EYCHANER, Chairman.

Evil Speaking.

Is it a part I wonder, says Margaret Sangster, of the fruit of that "forbidden tree which brought death into the world, and all our woe," that so many of us are too ready to say of others the thing which is unkind, to attribute the wrong motive to our fellow beings, to judge unfairly? Is it not, in truth, one of its worst effects, since no one can think of Eden, peace and beauty, in a word where it is possible for one person to speak with anything but gentleness and sincerity of a neighbor. "Charity thinketh no evil," says the best of books, linking the sweet declaration in a golden chain, on which several descriptions of charity or love are strung like gems which glitter and flash at every turn.

A lie that is half truth, is ever the worst of lies," is the conclusion of a poet who sees only deeply into the heart of things. Do we remember this when we permit in ourselves the license to speak doubtingly of some friend whose good fame should be a sacred trust; when we listen to the innuendo, or fail to resent the slur cast upon the character of the absent; when we happen to know something concerning an acquaintance, which our inner conscience tells us would be better left to silence than whispered in a confidential corner, thence presently to be bruited on the housetops? Should there not be cultivated in every child a delicate sense of honor, which should act as a guard on the door of the lips, barring the way for censorious, evil, or untrue speech? "By thy words shalt thou be justified." "By thy words—condemned."

Would not society be better, our home life happier, our friendship stronger, our own souls nobler, if we were, God helping, determined hereafter to speak in kindness only of the absent, therefore, the defenceless? And in cases where such speech is unfortunately impossible, is it not a Christian duty to bear in mind that silence is golden?

Harvest Time.

The harvest time is the time of fulfilled hopes and realized expectations, when the ruddy gleam of the ripened fruit succeeds the lavish wealth of blossoms, and he who went forth weeping, bearing precious seed returns with rejoicing, bringing his sheaves with him. The miracle of the loaves was a sudden putting forth of God's bountiful hand from behind the veil of his ordinary providence; the miracle of the harvest is the working of the same bountiful hand, only unseen, giving power to the tiny grains to drink the dew, and imbibe the sunshine, and appropriate the nourishment of the soil during the long bright days of summer. The harvest fields are the golden links that connect the ages and the zones, and associate together the most distant times and the remotest nations in one common bond of sympathy and independence. They make of the earth one great home, of the human race one great family, and of God the universal parent, to whom, day after day, we are encouraged to go with filial faith and love, not in selfishness and isolation, but in a fraternal spirit which embraces the whole world, asking not for ourselves only, but for all our brothers of mankind as well, "Our Father, which art in heaven, give us this day our daily bread." —Hugh Macmillan.

Jealousy is the apprehension of superiority.—Shenstone.

What is Man?

Answer from the Bible standpoint. He is the greatest achievement of God's creative power, he was created after a perfect pattern—the great creator himself, God. "And God said, let us make man in our image." We understand this to be a proposition from God to his co-worker in the creation. So God created man in his own image, and God saw it was very good, a perfect image of its Creator, and God called it man—that was its name; but in that condition it was no more than any other inanimate thing, the stones or the dust of the earth which he had created. But there was a wonderful change to take place, a change of name and nature, and God breathed into his nostrils the breath or spirit of life, and the image man became a living soul, a new condition. Instead of being an inanimate image of creation called man, by the breath or spirit of God breathed into his nostrils man's being was changed, instead of being an inanimate image of creation it became a living soul, a new name instead of man and when he has lived out his allotted time and breathes out his last breath, or spirit of life, it goes to God who gave it. And man takes a retrograde movement, from a living soul returns to the image man—a dead man as he was before he became a living soul, and crumbles back to dust from which he was taken.

Where is the immortal soul we hear about so often? All in the dust. Then where is our hope of future life? Simply in the promise of God. Isa. xxvi. 17. "Thy dead men shall live with my dead body shall they arise. Awake and sing, ye that dwell in the dust," Job said. xiv. 7. "There is hope in a tree if it be cut down that it will sprout again and its tender branch will not cease," etc., "but man dieth and wasteth away, he giveth up the ghost, and where is he? Like the waters and the flood which decayeth and dryeth up, nothing left of them. So man lieth down and riseth not. Till the heavens be no more and shall not awake nor be raised out of their sleep." Verse 15. "Thou shalt call and I will answer thee." Jesus says, "Marvel not at this, for the hour cometh in the which all that are in their graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth, they that have done unto the resurrection of life, and they that have done evil unto the resurrection of damnation. And so it is written, the first man Adam was made a living soul. The last man Adam a quickening spirit."

The body without the breath or spirit is useless, and there is no soul without for the body man became the soul. So Paul prayed God to preserve the whole spirit, soul and body unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, when they will be united again and he made living souls again at the resurrection. Now the only logical conclusion is this, First, that man is a creation of God. Without the breath of life or spirit he is a dead man. Second, That God breathes into his nostrils the breath or spirit of life, and man, the body, becomes a living soul. Third. That the breath, or spirit, leaves the living soul returns to its original condition, an inanimate body. Fourth, That we will be re-animated and live again by the quickening spirit in the last Adam, Jesus Christ, our Lord, at the resurrection of the dead.—J. S. Johnson, in Crisis.

Napoleon said, "Imagination rules the world," and a study of biography, and intimate acquaintance with the world's leaders in thought and action, a close study of the human mind in young or old, in the humble or the exalted, reveals how clearly the world's most brilliant historic character understood the influence of that activity of mind which take parts of conceptions and combines them into new forms and images "more select, more striking, more delightful, or more terrible than those of ordinary nature." The child becomes in a large measure what his imagination inspires him to be, and the teacher who holds the lines of intellectual activity has rare opportunities of directing, toning up and toning down, balancing and intensifying the imagination.

The man who finds not God in his own heart will find him nowhere; and he who finds him there will find him everywhere. The reason why men are so often disappointed in the search for God is that they do not look for him first of all where he should chiefly be sought,—in the manifestations he makes of himself in their own minds and hearts. They set the masses of the world to drown the "still, small voice" that never ceases to plead with them to keep in the path of righteousness and peace.—Israel Smith.

"Cheer Him."

In one of our cities a fire occurred in a dwelling. It was near midnight, and the flames had made headway before they were discovered. The fire companies rallied; the inmates escaped in affright, and the firemen worked with a will to subdue the flames. The smoke had become so thick that the outlines of the house were scarcely visible, and the fiery element was raging with fearful power, when a piercing cry thrilled all hearts as they learned that there was one person yet unsaved within the building.

In a moment a ladder was swung through the flames and planted against the heated walls, and a brave fireman rushed up its rounds to the rescue.

Overcome by the smoke, and perhaps daunted by the hissing flames before him, he halted, and seemed to hesitate. It was an awful scene. A life hung in the balance, and each moment was an age.

"Cheer him!" shouted a voice from the crowd, and a wild "Hurrah!" burst like a tempest from the beholding multitude. That cheer did the work, and the brave fireman went upward amid smoke and flame, and in a moment descended with the rescued one in his arms.

Friend, brother, when you see a brave soul battling with temptation, struggling under a cross, rushing forward to rescue dying men, and yet faltering in an hour of weakness or a moment of peril, then cheer him! And as a pebble's fall may change a river's course, so your words of sympathetic kindness may uplift a drooping heart and fix its faltering purpose for a noble life.—Good Words.

It is easy to keep busily at work, but there is little gain in keeping busily at work unless one is doing something worth doing. The Emperor Domitian kept himself constantly employed in the latter years of his reign, but it was at no more important tasks than catching flies. And Domitian's sorry business is the type of much of what passes for useful work among nineteenth century Anglo-Saxons. He neglected the affairs of a great empire, that he might find time to perform tasks that were beneath the dignity of a professional fool; too many, today, neglect the interests of a far greater kingdom that they may gratify personal ambitions, whose outcome, in this world or the next, will be as little use to God, or to man, as the self-imposed task of fly-catching Domitian. It is well to be busy at work, if one is engaged in a work worth doing; but if one is engaged in the Devil's work, it is far better to be an idle workman than a busy one.

The language of the Bible grows more harmoniously luminous with the growing light, when its words are read and interpreted simply, as words still living; they are found to give the spiritual message which each age requires, the one message made audible to each hearer in the language wherein he was born.

Obituary.

Brother W. I. Church fell asleep June 3, 1899, at his home near Oskaloosa, Jefferson Co., Kas. If he had lived until the 13th, he would have been 87 years old. And yet at this advanced age, he was able to get around and work most of the time, being sick only about four days. Bro. Church has passed his last mile stone in a long eventful life, and now sleeps and rests quietly in the grave, "Where the wicked cease from troubling, and the weary be at rest." He has left a wife and family behind to toil on and wait and mourn their loss. And with all his imperfections and frailties as are common to mortal man, yet from a long intimate acquaintance with Bro. Church, I can truly say "that he had many noble qualities, being strictly honest and upright in all his dealings with his fellow men, and was a dear lover of the old Bible with its precious promises, which were first made plain to him many years ago by that dear old Bro. Ephraim Miller, who was a faithful pioneer preacher of the Word in his day. Bro. Church would often walk six or seven miles in early morning, winter and summer, to meet a few brethren and hear the Word of life. Discourse by the writer to a full house on June 25, based on Isa. xxxviii. 1: 1 Kings ii. 1, 2, 10, with Job xiv. 14. The first is "Die and not live." Plainly two opposite states or conditions are brought to view. Secondly, David died, and slept with his fathers and was buried in the city of David, and went the way of all the earth. All earthly beings pass off into the death state of darkness where there is no work nor device nor knowledge nor wisdom, where the dead praise not the Lord, neither any that go down into silence. A state of profound silence, where all sleep and rest together. The great and the small are there. Thirdly, last but not least. Is it an endless sleep, or will the dead awake and live again? The Bible teems with evidence that the sleeping dead will hear the voice of the Son of God, and awake and sing ye that dwell or sleep in the dust. This will be a resurrection or living again.

In the resurrection morning.
When the dead shall live again
The saints all immortal,
Shall rise and with him reign.

T. E. ADAMS.

[Lines selected and composed by Isaac Wm. Church, son of our late Bro. Wm. Isaac Church, in memory of his young brother, who died March 6, 1884.]

Oh Rusty, thou hast left us,
Thou hast gone, at last, to rest;
But we hope again to meet thee,
In the land where dwell the blest.

Oh, Rusty, dearest Rusty,
We shall never see thee more,
Until we meet beyond the grave,
Then we shall part no more.

All through the painful illness,
Thou ne'er complained a word;
All through the dark night's stillness,
Not a sound from thee was heard.

But brother, dearest brother,
Thy troubles now are over;
We trust again to meet thee,
On Canaan's happy shore.

Then with the blessed Savior,
If we at last should reign;
There we shall part, no never,
In the new Jerusalem.

Oh men, ye mortal beings,
Know ye not that ye must die?
Prepare to meet the Lord's approving,
For the time is drawing nigh.

ISAAC WM. CHURCH.

Our Love Feast.

Dear Restitution:

As I see so many letters from the isolated ones, I must send in my mite, and try and sow a few good seed in my feeble way, and report our meeting. Bro. George Kulwell will begin a series of meetings Sunday Aug. 1, and will continue ten days, at the Hix school house, known as Bannister house, six miles south of Climax Springs, Mo.; would like to have any one come, they will be cared for. I ask an interest in your prayers.

Yours in hope of the soon coming King,

MRS A. HURST.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

I have been a reader of THE RESTITUTION for twenty-four years and it is always a welcome visitor to my house, for it always comes with its precious news to encourage us on our way. It does me so much good to read the letters of the brothers and sisters. I am still strong in the one faith and am trying to keep in the strait and narrow path that leads to life eternal.

Your Sister in hope of eternal life when Jesus comes,

MARY A. VERMILLION.

Editor Restitution:

Enclosed please find $1.50 in money order for the dear old paper another year, for I can not do without it. As it is all the preacher we have here in Pine Valley, Ore. Oh, if we could have some of our good ministers come to this valley and hold a meeting; it would do great and everlasting good, for there are Methodist and Christian or Cumellite meetings here and it makes me feel bad to hear things preached that are not in the Bible.

Your Sister for the kingdom,

M. A. ALLEN.

Dear Household of Faith:

I have many times thought I would write to you. I was baptized into the Church of God several years ago and well I remember that eventful day of this mortal life. We now live on the rocky shores of an inlet of the Pacific Ocean.

In the morning, when the dawn is breaking
Many sounds flowing swift
Sometimes we are longing to the willows,
Some times shaking rocky cliffs.
Yet often the ring, oh, so clearly,
While the sun begins sparkling in the sky
All the stars seem twinkling brightly,
Life seems but one happy day.

When I ponder o'er earth's beauty,
And how lovely this world is made
Life's meeting means a duty,
Which I wish not to evade.
But the joys here that greet us,
Myriad pleasures that abound;
Is only a slight foretaste of that
Which in Paradise will be found.

But God with his all wise wisdom,
With the angel's guarding care,
Is calling us for his kingdom,
Which Christ his Son has gone to prepare;
John the Revelator kindly tells us,
The beautiful city shall descend;
Coming down from God out of heaven,
When Christ comes to dwell with men.

When Jesus now sees all his disciples,
Soaring upward above their power,
He answers their grief and sorrow;
Let two men in white appear'd,
Came to comfort and to herald,
Glad tidings that "this same Jesus"
Shall return.

So let us be watching and waiting for Jesus to come,
Longing to be gathered with the chosen at home;
Seeking his rescue, trusting his love,
Asking for mercy and help from above;

Oh! to be worthy to be with Jesus at home,
And reign with him on David's throne;
The golden streets forever to tread,
Surveying the beauties of the City of God,

Oh! think of that celestial clime,
With it's enjoyments of knowledge infinite sublime;
Harps are playing their wooden strings,
Listening to music from melodied hearts.

Oh! weary pilgrims the day draws near,
When seated on the throne of God shall fall on our ear;
Let not trials which on beset our way,
Hinder our readiness for that great day.

There is perfect safety in that blissful land,
No one to molest, No danger at hand;
No proud look, no evil to fear,
With the saints and angels and Jesus so near.

LUCELLA C. WILKINS.

Editor Restitution:

I see my time is up so please find enclosed one dollar and fifty cents to pay for the paper another year, as we can not do with it. The paper and our Bible are all the preachers we have as we are among the isolated ones. We are the only one of the one faith in Mexico, Ind. My wife is a cripple, caused by a stroke of paralysis. We love to read the articles of the brothers and sisters. We ask an interest in the prayers of the brethren, that we hold out faithful and meet you in the kingdom.

EARLY LESSONS, suitable for old and young. 30 pages, sold formerly for 10 cents a copy.

These works are excellent for use by those who wish to do missionary labor, and we offer them at such a low price that they should be out in a short time. Bro. Jones had urgeddions of these tracts printed, and by dying suddenly, and his Widow being in feeble health, we have undertaken the task of selling them. Her income is quite limited, and all that can be gotten out of the sales goes to her after expenses are paid. When you buy these tracts you get several times the worth of your money, and also aid a worthy Sister, who will thank you for it.

Assorted package 30 cents per pound. Gospel of the Kingdom, alone at 25 cents per pound.

The Gospel of the Kingdom.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

One of These Days.

One of these days it will all be over.
Sorrow and laughter, and loss and gain,
Meetings and partings of friend and lover:
Joy that was ever so edged with pain.
One of these days will our hands be folded,
One of these days will the work be done,
Finished the pattern our lives have moulded,
Ended the labor beneath the sun.

One of these days will the heartache leave us,
One of these days will the burden drop;
Never again shall a hope deceive us.
Never again will our progress stop.
Freed from the blight of our vain endeavor,
Winged with the health of immortal life,
One of these days we shall quit forever
All that is vexing in earthly strife.

One of these days we shall know the reason
Happy, of much that perplexes now;
One of these days in the Lord's good season,
Light of his peace shall adorn the brow.
Blessed, though out of tribulation
Lifted to dwell in his sun-bright smile,
Happy to share in the great salvation,
Well may we tarry a little while.

The Gospel Recovered. No. 18.

SUPPLEMENTARY TO NO. 10.

With the editor's permission I propose to break the continuity of these papers in order to supply a defect which want of access to a certain periodical prevented being attended to in its proper place.

In the 10th article on this subject it was stated that in 1847, Dr. Thomas, after 15 years' connection with the "Reformation," attained to the obedience of faith in the gospel of the kingdom. In "Life and Work" is recorded a reference he made to an incident which had the effect of his coming to this important decision. This was an article in a certain periodical in 1839. The writer of these papers was aware of this, and as he knew incidentally that the doctor had been a contributor to that magazine, he thought the doctor might have been himself the writer of the article, no other having been indicated. Owing to this uncertainty the writer of this deferred making use of the incident in writing No. 10. Having recently seen the periodical referred to however, it seems fitting now to notice the article, especially as in various respects it is not without interest.

What led up latterly to this important crisis in the Doctor's position was his first visit to New York, in October, 1846. He there gave ten lectures in the Disciples' meeting house. Of these he published a summary, set out in 30 numbered paragraphs in the "Herald of the Future Age," which was reproduced in the "Gospel Banner" (Nottingham, England) Vol. I., 1848. "In February, 1847, the Doctor observed a communication in the "Protestant Unionist," the writer, a Campbellite preacher, remarking that on visiting New York he "found the minds of the brethren confused and agitated about the reign of Christ on David's throne, the restoration of the Jews to their own land, the millennium, the destiny of the wicked, the non-immortality of the soul, and other husks and useless speculations laid before them by Dr. Thomas."

On this the Doctor says, "Is it possible that these things are useless which the Spirit hath revealed: and is it to feast on "husks," to dwell on the throne and kingdom of David, the future age, the glorious appearing of the saints, etc.....We will look further into this matter and see. Accordingly we revealed our pen and commenced an article on the "Hope of the World and the Hope of Israel." In elaborating this, the first principle that startled us on reviewing it, after we had penned it was that it matters not what a man hopes for if that hope be false or spurious, i. e. if it be not the hope promised in the covenants of promise, he is repudiated as hopeless in the Scriptures of truth.....It was a startling truth; but the chord had not yet been struck which was to vibrate on the conscience, saying, 'Examine thyself, and see if thou be in the faith.'"

"As we progressed we came to consider Paul's definition of faith in Heb. xi. 1. We pointed out its relation to hope that it contained the belief of things to come: and that without this expectant faith, it was impossible to please God. Still, when we penned this, we possessed this expectant faith, and had been unfolding for several previous years the unseen things to come! Was not our faith then pleasing to God? Step by step we neared the precipice over which our profession was to be dashed to pieces. We continued our argument, showing that none other than this was a saving faith: 'for we are saved by hope.' Rom. viii. 24."

"This was the turning point, 'saved by hope,' said we. What hope?..... We will look into this. Accordingly we turned to the original, and found that he had said, 'THE HOPE;' and not only so, but affirms this salvation by the hope in time past—'we WERE SAVED BY THE HOPE.' This was very definite. A number of passages now crowded in upon us, and we perceived that the time when the Roman brethren were saved by the hope, was when they obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine delivered unto them.' They were then saved from sin, 'being made free from it.' The question immediately flashed within us, 'When you were buried in baptism, were you saved by the hope?' We had to confess we know nothing then about the hope; that the covenants of promise were a hidden mystery to us," etc.....

"Now, reader, mark this; we have never until comparatively recently perceived that the doctrine pleaded for concerning the kingdom, etc., was the gospel;' and therefore we have never ventured to affirm that these things concerning the kingdom 'were necessary' to be believed in order 'to salvation.'....."

"Does the reader enquire by what steps we were brought to the discovery of this truth? Listen. In looking over some old Christian Messengers and Reformers, published in England by Mr. Wallis, we found one dated July, 1839. On looking through it, an article arrested our attention, entitled 'The Hope of the Gospel.'.....In reading over it, the following passages struck us forcibly:—

"'The light which must soon enlighten the Gentile church is the HOPE OF THE SECOND coming of the LORD, and no worship or ordinance can be considered acceptable unless this great event be held up in the very front of every Christian assembly. And in the same proportion as this hope be quickened will be the advances made in knowledge, in faith, in life, and in purity."

"'We are not to look for heaven in any other way than by the medium of A HEAVENLY KINGDOM.'"

"Without the proclamation of the ANCIENT HOPE, THERE CANNOT BE ANY PROCLAMATION OF THE ANCIENT GOSPEL.

[Note here that the form of paragraphs, with the capitals and italics in these extracts were supplied by Dr. Thomas.]

Now for twelve years, we had delighted to dwell on the coming of the Lord in power and great glory, as visibly as he appeared, to Peter, James, and John, on the Mount of Transfiguration: we have held it up in the forefront of our discourses; yet we did not perceive that the belief of it was essential to acceptable worship or salvation. But we see it now."

"While for a less number of years we have spoken much about the kingdom which is to be set up, and believed that heaven would be on earth, we did not perceive its manifestation 'through the medium of a heavenly kingdom.' But we see it now most satisfactorily."

"Much as we have talked and written about the hope of the gospel, it never occurred to us, till we read this, that the ancient gospel could not be preached without it. This gave us pause. Queries crowded upon us thick and fast. The principle is doubtless true, most true. But if so, what shall we say of the 'ancient gospel' that Scott and Campbell were contesting the honor of having restored? Life and incorruptibility through a future kingdom on earth is no part of the gospel they preach! They oppose this as an untaught question and speculation, and in lieu thereof have substituted the Hymenean philosophy. These gentlemen believe not the hope, but subvert it by their traditions. What did we know about this hope before we heard Mr. Scott's ancient gospel? Nothing. What did he teach us about it? Nothing. What did we know about it before we were immersed? Nothing."

[illegible] With my present knowledge I cannot see the consistency in hoping to come forth at the first resurrection and at the same time desiring to have our names written in the Book of Life. It may be concluded by some that the language used with regard to Moses (Ex. xxxii.) would go to show that the faithful are to have their names written in the Book. Was Moses obedient unto the commands of the Lord? Will he come up in the first resurrection, his sins having gone before to judgment, or will he come up in the last judgment to be judged according to his works?

Submitted in love,

S. J. LINDSAY.

Dear Brother Underwood:

In answer to the kind suggestions made by Bro. S. J. Lindsay, on my article "The Foolish Virgins," permit me to say, that for the very purpose of avoiding the line of thought, into which Bro. Lindsay has been led, I purposely said that "the bride is selected, or elected, from among those whose names are written in the Lamb's Book of Life," I was careful not to say that the books were opened at the first resurrection. Suppose instead of saying what I did, I had said the bride will be elected from among those who had become obedient. The meaning would have been the same. The language used was carefully considered and conveys the exact meaning I intended. It contains two ideas: First, That the bride will be selected from among those whose names are written in the book of life and; Second, That not all whose names are written therein, will have part in the first resurrection.

Our good brother says, "It may be concluded by some, that the language used with regard to Moses (Ex. xxxii.) would go to show that the faithful are to have their names written in the Book." The Scriptures fully teach that doctrine. Moses said, "Blot me out of thy book." Ex. xxxii. 32. Showing that his name was written in the book. "He that overcometh I will not blot his name out of the book of life." Rev. iii. 5. All "whose names are not written in the book of life" worship the beast.

There are but two classes. Those who worship God and those who worship the beast. All the former have their names written in the book of life. This is a very important proposition. I will therefore ask to be indulged for a moment while I elaborate it a little. In Rev. xiii. 7-8, we read, "And it was given to him (the beast) to make war with the saints, and to overcome them: and power was given him over all kindreds, and tongues and nations, And all that dwell upon the earth shall worship him, whose names are not written in the book of life of the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world." IF THE NAMES OF THOSE WHO SHALL BECOME MEMBERS OF THE BRIDE, ARE NOT WRITTEN IN THE BOOK OF LIFE, THEY WILL WORSHIP THE BEAST. That can't be. Therefore their names must be written in the book of life. Again, there are but the two classes. The sheep and the goats. Christ is the door to the sheepfold. Anyone who enters not through that door, but climbs up some other way, is a thief and a robber. We may take a goat and bleach him out by "good works" until he is as white as the driven snow, but he will still remain a goat.

Our brother after quoting Rev. xx. 12, 13, uses this language, "I take it from this that there are two things plainly made known to us. They come forth to judgment, at the end of the thousand years, and they are to be judged not upon their faith, or obedience, or overcoming, but according to their works.

I am striving to come forth at the first resurrection and am trying to conduct my life in such a manner that through faith and obedience I may lay claim to the reward which Jesus will bring with him at his coming for all those who are faithful. I want to reign with him over the nations of the earth during the thousand years. If I succeed in this there will be no need of judgment at the end of this time for I shall have long since passed from judgment unto life.

Rev. xx. 15, reads, "And whosoever was not found written in the book of life, was cast into the lake of fire." Therefore as a condition precedent to salvation, we must have our names written in the book of life. How can we get our names written in the book of life? "As many as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ." Must we not be in Christ before our names will be written in the book of life? Are we fit subjects for baptism before we have a living faith? Can we believe that which we know nothing about and have faith in that which we know not of? Is it not therefore necessary to study God's Word and learn the way of salvation, as a prerequisite to baptism? Having learned the way we must repent of our sins, by not only being sorry for them, but by turning from them? Having made all this preparation, must we not be baptized and wash away our sins and thus become one of God's children and have our names recorded in his family record, which is the book of life? My good brother will agree with me on all these propositions. It is only because of the great importance of ever keeping these fundamental questions before us, that I have written thus.

R. S. DWIGGINS.

Rom. I. 1-4.

Paul begins his letter to his brethren at Rome, by telling them that he was a servant of Christ Jesus, called to be an apostle, set apart or separated unto the gospel of God. A very significant expression indeed, which (gospel) he had promised before by his prophets in the holy Scriptures, concerning his Son Jesus Christ our Lord, which was made of the seed of David according to the flesh; note, he was made of, not by the seed of David; hence that lets Joseph out, and justifies and honors both Mary and the angel.

Question: Who was the maker, God or man? God was, then we have a divine Savior, able to save to the uttermost. On the other hand, if man was the father and maker of Jesus, then we have a man made Savior, no better or greater than his father and maker, not able to save any one, as a stream cannot rise higher than its fountain.

Concerning that Son of his, who was born of the posterity of David as to the flesh. Diglott. Note, Jesus was that Son of God who was born of his mother Mary, who was of the posterity of David, for she was cousin to Elizabeth who was of the house, or of the daughters of Aaron. See Luke i. 5 and 36. A nail in a sure place. Now let Paul clinch this nail and we will have it fast. Listen, "But when the completion of the time arrived, God sent forth his son, having been produced or born from a woman. Diaglott. Gal iv. 4. Note, how specific and precisely Paul talks about this Son, and how Paul explains and agrees with Paul. God sent forth his son, or the Son of himself," produced or born from or of a woman. Diaglott. Of this specific and particular Son of God, Paul in verse 4, says, "And declared to be the Son of God with power, according to the spirit of holiness, by the resurrection from the dead. Note, this wonderful Son, was the Son of God when produced and born of this highly favored woman. And his resurrection was only the crowning act that declared or designated, marked and pointed him out distinctly as the Son of God. His production was a miracle, a miracle pointed him out to John the Baptist. A miracle proclaimed and marked him out as God's beloved Son in whom he was well pleased. And now his resurrection from the dead is the final and stupendous miracle—the crowning evidence that sets him forth and marks him out as the wonderful Son of God, a Savior of sinners, in whom is light and life. And his return to earth in power and great glory, and the resurrection and final salvation of his dear people will be no less a miracle, over which men and angels will long be amazed and wonder. And there is no need of stumbling over this wonderful Son of God, as did the Jews of old.

Amen, and amen,

T. E. ADAMS.

Dear Restitution:

Having just returned home from another good meeting at Seven Fountains, Va., I feel like praising our heavenly Father for his unbounded goodness and mercy; we left for that point on Saturday last, accompanied by two sisters of the faith and their husbands. We reached our much beloved Bro. J. F. Boyer's house in the afternoon and spent the evening with him and his interesting family quite pleasantly. The next day we met with the brethren and sisters at Slate Hill school house, where Bro. Boyer preaches the third Sunday in every month. A nice little band of believers met here on that day: among the rest Bro. Jacob Boyer and two sisters of Mowerrytown, where the house was dedicated on the second Sunday in June. We listened to and was much edified by a very able discourse from Bro. Boyer, after which we enjoyed quite a feast in grasping the hands of old and new brethren and sisters and much enjoyable conversation with those of like precious faith. We were then invited to go home with Bro. Samuel Boyer for refreshments. He occupies the old homestead, and he and his good wife shall ever have abundance of thanks for their rich repast. We wish them success and happiness in their new married life. Our blessed Lord says where two or three meet in his name, he will be with them. I can testify to this, it inspires us with new life to meet with congenial spirits, and as our guide says, "They that feared the Lord spake often one to another." Then let us speak to each other in psalms, hymns and spiritual songs, making melody in our hearts to the Lord. Yes, let children of the heavenly King, join in and sweetly sing his praises until he comes to reign before his ancients gloriously. Oh, may all have on the wedding garments and go out to meet him.

Your Sister in hope of life in the kingdom of our Father,

SARAH P. MORGAN.

Dear Restitution:

Please let the brothers and sisters and friends of THE RESTITUTION know that I have left Linden, Oklahoma, and am now on my way to the Pacific northwest; will probably locate in Idaho or Oregon. I am now at Rockford, Col., at my son-in-law's, fifty miles east of Pueblo, Col., in plain sight of Pikes Peak; will start for Colorado Springs tomorrow, the Lord willing. We are traveling with teams; have come over five hundred miles on our journey, have had a very pleasant trip so far, except considerable rain. Crops are fine here. This is a great place for alfalfa and melons and tomatoes, and small fruit—with quite a lot of apples. A nice healthy place to live. I believe we all feel better than when we started, though the water is nothing to brag on.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

"Symbols are a universal language. Words differ widely in significance, when used by different persons and in different ages. This shows the Divine Wisdom in giving large place to symbols on Scripture pages, for it makes the Bible a universal Book."

Powerful and Timely Rebuke.

Some time ago the following letter appeared in an American Paper. It was sent to a young preacher by one of his hearers upon the occasion of an exchange with another pastor, and it would be well for all the better class of popularly religionists to read it. They are deeply concerned because the people generally do not "attend church," and want to find the reason why. Of course no one can teach the Gospel of the Kingdom which Jesus preached, and which is God's saving power, if they do not know what it is; but for all that, men of piety, earnestness and honesty can stir up the religious faculties in others, and inspire reverence for God and resolves to lead better lives, and so be better fathers, and mothers, and brothers, and sisters, and friends, and neighbors; and the various communities under the ministrations of such men are practically so many moral or religious police stations, and exert an influence for good in proportion to the attendance, and the examplary conduct of its members. It needs to be kept in mind that just now, when iniquity abounds as seldom, if ever before, these communities have lost their influence for good. When most needed they are powerless; and it is no wonder that they ask with deep concern, "What is the reason people do not attend church?" The letter to referred is as follows:—

"Reverend Brother:—I listened very attentively to your clever essay on history this morning, and hoped to find some features of a gospel sermon. Was it my fault that I did not find or detect anything in it,—first, to convict men of sin: second, to comfort the penitent to Christ: third, to quicken the backslider; fourth, to comfort the afflicted; fifth, to guide the perplexed; sixth, to encourage the desponding; seventh, to caution the unwary; eighth, to remove doubt; ninth, to stimulate zeal: tenth, to fortify patience: eleventh, to arouse aspirations; twelth, to kindle devotion; thirteenth, to develop faith; fourteenth, to expose the wiles of the adversary; fifteenth, to deepen love; sixteenth, to instruct in any of the practical duties of Christian life: or finally, to impart information needed for practical utilization in Christain life? You may reply, I did not design to do any of these things. But, my brother, as a Christian Minister (?) and not as a literary essayist, can you afford to misuse any such occasion by not designing to do some of these things? You are (should be ") a minister of the Word, which is to make the man of God perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works. Pardon these kindly suggestions from one, who, tired of business, goes to church to be helped."

Who can doubt that reviews of popular novels, and the lives of heroes, and politics, and expansion, and essays on history and other things prove that the prevailing idea is entertainment, not a gospel message; and this has produced the impression that a great religious fraud is being perpetrated, and they keep away from it.

And brethren of the Abrahamic Faith, may there not be a lesson for us in this letter? Would it not be well for us to remember that those who send for us to set forth the truth as it is in Jesus, to their neighbors and friends, may be just hungry and thirsty themselves? Long isolation and want of communion with those of like precious faith make them anxious to hear something more than arguments in defence of gospel promises and facts, which they know already. They love to hear first principles rehearsed, and the foundation of their faith and hope made clear by removing traditional rubbish, and all that; but it pays to draw them up close to us, and remind them of their exalted position as the called according to God's eternal purpose,—a royal priesthood,—heirs of God, joint heirs with Christ,—with the hallowed privilege of access to God at all times, and all circumstances, and the help guaranteed for every time of need. Yes: it pays to run over some of the manifestations of God's love, and the exceeding riches of his grace stored up in the Anointed One for the faithful; it pays to dwell upon the blessed hope of seeing Jesus and of being wrapped about with immortality and sharing his power and glory, and becoming Evangels of peace and righteousness till the whole earth reverberates with God's praise, till their hearts are so set on fire that they will continue to water the seed of the kingdom we sow, after we are gone.

Man is very prone to go from one extreme to another; and we fear that many who have been trusting altogether to feelings and earnestness, go to the other extreme when they discover the essentiality of truth. If the person who taught them the truth was all head and no heart they would be apt to follow his lead, and all attention to the work of converting people intellectually, while the great truth that it is with the heart man believes unto righteousness: or in other words that faith in the truth of God must work by love and purify the heart, is largely neglected. It will not be denied by the honest, intelligent and thoughtful, that the practice of the truth is as important as faith in it, and that neither the one or the other alone, is of value. Because to practice the truth, it must be known and believed: and the Word of the Spirit for it,—"faith without works is dead."—useless! Besides intellectual assent to the truth, its transforming power must be taught,—and more than that, its transforming power must be demonstrated by those who essay to speak for God and his gospel. And if Christ be in them the hope of glory, there will be no lack of demonstration. The Lord,—the spirit being in them, the fruits of the spirit will attest the fact. If filled will run over and effect others. As love is the motive power of the gospel,—the constraining power of the gospel, we mean,—we are bound to use it or be culpable. It is love that begets love, and if the love of God does not beget love in a person how will he get it? And if he has no love for God how can he keep his commandments? Impossible! See I John v. 3. Does this explain the conduct of any professors to you, who seem to have the truth in their heads only?

Are We as a People Narrow?

There has been some points of doctrine taught directly and by implication by our people that as I become old seem to become rather a thorn in my side, and upon which I would wish to submit a few thoughts.

Is it a fact that certain points of doctrine must be understood and believed in order to obtain salvation? The Bible says, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved." Does such a belief imply an understanding and belief in all the points of doctrine as we believe and teach them? Or to be more plain, is it necessary to understand and believe in the location of Christ's kingdom on this earth? The promises made to Abraham; the mortality of all men; first and second resurrection of the dead, and many other points that might be enumerated. Now, if we say that these things are necessary, do we not substitute knowledge for goodness and love? We are taught that "love is the fulfilling of the law." And right here comes in the thorn, shall any pure hearted man or woman be denied salvation simply because they have not understood these things?

A few years ago as one of the great ocean liners was crossing the Atlantic it was wrecked in the fury of a storm. It was evident that the ship must soon go down. The life preservers were distributed and for a while it was thought that all were provided with this last chance for life. But the captain discovered that there was one boy, a mere lad, who was not provided with one, and there were no more life preservers on board the ship. What was to be done? The captain simply takes off his own and fastens it on the lad. They commit themselves to the waves; the boy is saved; the captain is never seen again. Now, I know not what his faith was. He may never have heard of the doctrine that we as a people believe and teach. He may have been a Turk for any thing I know, but I do believe that men that can do such a noble, merciful, self-sacrificing act will not be forgotten by God.

Sisters of charity of the Catholic church a few years ago went down into the yellow fever districts of the south to nurse the sick and dying, and many of them paid for their devotion with their lives. Then shall mercy be denied to them who have sacrificed their lives in its cause? "Greater love hath no man than he that lays down his life for a friend." They gave their all for God and humanity. But let us try and get the true spirit of Christianity as manifested by the Savior. Behold him as he weeps over Jerusalem. See the tears that start from those compassion-filled eyes. Hear his voice as it breaks with a sob and he cries, "Oh, Jerusalem! Jerusalem! how oft would I have gathered you together as a hen doth gather her brood under her wings and ye would not." Here is mercy: here is love; here is forgiveness: here is the spirit that should dominate in every Christian heart. How boldly we can approach the throne of grace, when we have such an intervesor to plead in our behalf. He knows our weakness and infirmity, for he himself likewise took part in the same and he tells us that on our love to God and our neighbor hang all the law and the prophets, his yoke is easy and his burden light. Then shall we put a yoke and burden on the people by requiring an understanding of intricate theories and points of doctrine upon which our most able men can hardly agree? God forbid that we should lay any other burden save what Christ has laid and that is that, "Ye love one another." In Tim. i., "Now the end of the commandment is love from a pure heart and a good conscience and an undissembled faith, which some having missed, turned aside to foolish talking, desiring to be law expositors, neither understanding what they are saying nor certain things about which they positively affirm." (Diaglotti). Then let us believe the statement here given by Paul that "The end of the commandment is love and not be as the party spoken here positively affirming things that we may not understand. Now from what I know the teachings of the Scriptures from what I have learned of the spirit of Christ as manifested by his life and ministry, from my observation of human nature during a life of fifty-six years I conclude that no man, no woman in whose breast the white doves of love and pity have ever plumed their pure wings will ever go un-rewarded or forgotten by God who has said, "I will love them that love me."

B. GARDINER.

"Are we as a people narrow?" We certainly ought to be. Christ advised his hearers when delivering his "Sermon on the Mount" to keep in the "narrow" way. There is very grave danger in being in the broad path. It is true that the Bible says, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved," but if we take pains to refer to Acts xvi., and read the 32 and 33 verses we will there learn what Paul and Silas did immediately after uttering the words quoted. They instructed this jailer and his household in what it meant to "believe on the Lord Jesus Christ." In the exact language used "They spake unto him the Word of the Lord." Then, and not till then was he ready for baptism. This jailer expresses a desire to be saved—wanted to be saved. He was told to accept (believe on) Jesus the Christ. Then was fully instructed in what that meant, Paul and Silas being the teachers, and able ones no doubt they were. The next thing was the works, and he commenced by being baptized, and we are to suppose that of course his life after that was to be in accord with his new faith.

Most certainly the narrative of the "conversion of the jailer" does imply a necessity for a belief and understanding of certain points of doctrine before he could be "saved." The points of doctrine were given to him by Paul and Silas, and on his acceptance of them he was baptized. Question: If the jailer had replied to his teachers that in his opinion God did not require any certain things to be believed, that he would do some good, generous, kind deeds, and rely upon them for salvation; would God have accepted this as satisfactory, in opposition to his appointed messengers in the persons of Paul and Silas?

The captain of a vessel who hands the last life-preserver to a boy and is himself lost while the boy is saved, or the fireman who sacrifices his life at a burning building while saving the life of another, may have lived a perfectly godless life; been the basest sort of a villain, and yet on the spur of the moment do the most generous, self-sacrificing deed. Will this be sufficient to gain him eternal life? We may believe what we please as to what God will do with such a man. Whether he will think this act of sufficient worth to warrant him in "doing something" for him. But this is not our business. We want eternal life. Nothing short of this will satisfy us. We must therefore use every possible endeavor to find out what God would have us do. As we study the book that is the only medium we have to guide us, we shall be struck with the thought that it is not such a very easy thing after all to gain eternal life, and we may be led to ask as did one as recorded in Luke xiii. 23, "Lord are there few that be saved?" When Jesus sent his chosen ones out to preach he said, "Go and teach all nations, baptizing them, etc. Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you." The necessity of instructing them in some belief first, then baptizing them, then having them living in accordance with the profession made, is the gist of the whole matter. Matt. x. 22, tells us only such as "endure to the end will be saved." By reading the epistle of James we will learn that not faith alone, nor works alone can possibly save. The two must be joined together. God's order is "belief and obedience," "faith and works." Together they stand, separate them and neither is of any worth. This is Bible, no matter what our opinion of God's love and mercy may be.

The quotation from I Tim. i. 5 saying that "Now the end of the commandment is charity (love) out of a pure heart, and of a good conscience, and of faith unfeigned," is most excellent, but let us go on in the chapter and we shall learn that it must be "according to the glorious gospel of the blessed God." Further on we will find in this letter by Paul that he most emphatically exhorts Timothy to "Take heed unto himself, and unto the doctrine." Paul was a most faithful preacher, and we are told in Acts xx. 27, that in his labors he "shunned not to declare the whole counsel of God."

Do not, brother, misunderstand this addition to your article. We do not decry the generous, self-sacrificing acts of those who give to their brother the last means of escape from a watery grave, nor those who risk life and health to relieve the fever-stricken sufferers. This is all right, and no doubt will be given such reward as the Father sees fit. The trouble is with us trying to find a fit reward for them. In the absence in God's Word of any specific reward for such persons, we may with confident safety leave it with God to do as he wills. Our work is with what the Word teaches, and we never find that the person who says "I believe on the Lord Jesus Christ," refuses to study and ascertain who and what he is; we never find that the person who says "I love God and humanity, and will show my love by a generous act," and yet refuses to show his love by obeying God's commandments, we never find that such persons are ever promised eternal life. We must get a true conception of what God's love and mercy means. The high conception of this is not embodied in the idea of the "Universal brotherhood" of man, but in God's provision for the uplifting of man from the state of darkness and death in which he now lies a chained prisoner, and placing him in the light of eternal day where he can enjoy the glorious liberty of the children of God. There is no more dangerous doctrine taught in this age than the "Universal brotherhood" theory. It looks so very plausible so generous, so full of the purest love. It sacrifices self, and so completely gives over all for the good of humanity, that many are taken with it. So fully exemplifies the true Christ spirit, that few can resist it—it is so nice. It says one belief is as good as another, and no belief at all will do as well as all. "Are we as a people narrow?" Can we as a people afford to be generous, in the sense that this theory calls generosity? What does the Bible teach? Let us study God's Word, and adhere to it, no matter if we are sneered at and called "narrow" and "bigoted."

For Our Children.

Children's Hymn.

From the sunny morning,
To the starry night,
Every look and motion
Meets our Father's sight.
From our earliest breath
To our latest year,
Every sound we utter
Meets our Father's ear.

Let us, then, be careful
That our look shall be
Brave and kind and cheerful,
For our Lord to see.
Help us, O our Father!
Hear our earnest plea—
Teach thy little children
How to live for thee.

Weaving Sunshine.

"You can't guess, mamma, what grandma Davis said to me this morning, when I carried her the flowers and the basket of apples!" exclaimed Little Mary Price, as she came running into the house, her cheeks red as twin roses.

"I am quite sure darling," said mamma, "that I can not: but I hope it was something pleasant."

"Indeed it was, mamma," said Mary. "She said, 'Good morning, dear; you are wearing sunshine.' I hardly knew what she meant at first, but I think I do now, and I am going to try to weave sunshine every day."

"Mother," concluded Mary, "don't you remember that beautiful poetry, 'Four Little Sunbeams,' you read to me one day? If those sunbeams could do me so much good, I think we all ought to be little sunbeams."

After a few moments' pause a new thought seemed to pop into Mary's little head, and she said, "Oh, mamma, I have just thought. When Lizzie Patton was here she told me that her Sabbath school class was named 'Little Gleaners,' and I knew another class called 'Busy Bees.' Now, next Sabbath I mean to ask our teacher to call our class 'Sunshine Weavers,' and then we will go weaving sunshine."

It is a good plan. Sunshine weavers will be kindly remembered long after cross, hateful people have been forgotten.

The Story of Israel. No. 92.

Our last lesson was about Korah, Dathan and Abiram, the dreadful plague and the budding of Aaron's rod. The rod was laid up and kept, so that there could be no more dispute as to who should be the high priest. We are to take up the 20th chapter of Numbers today. Have you studied it children? I have given you plenty of time to do so. Do you know what it is about?

The children of Israel have been wandering a long time, but they are going to Canaan now: not the grown men, who started out of Egypt, but their children, many of whom are now middle-aged men and woman. The oldest of them were not twenty years old when they were counted in the wilderness of Sinai.

Not much is said about the rebellious ones since the Amelekites and the Canaanites that dwelt in the hill came down and smote them at Hormah: when they made the attempt to go into the land of promise, after the Lord had told them that they should die in the wilderness, because of their unbelief. It is not needful to say much about sinners. Their lives are of no account. They do nothing towards building the great and glorious kingdom that is to endure forever.

You can turn from the 14th chapter of Numbers to the 20th, and you will find nothing recorded about them, only the rebellion of Korah, Dathan, and Abiram, the laws relating to the priests and Levites, and to the slaying and burning of the red heifer. Perhaps you would like to hear about the heifer. She must be red all over: not a spot of white or brown must appear: not even her hoofs. She must not be lame nor blind, and no yoke must ever have been put upon her neck. The priest must kill her outside of the camp and some one must burn her while he is looking on, while he throws cedar-wood, and hyssop and scarlet into the fire. Then the priest and the man who did the burning must wash their clothes and bathe their flesh in water and be unclean until evening, and a man who has not touched any dead thing, must gather up the ashes and lay them up carefully, in a clean place outside of the camp, and wash himself and his clothes and be unclean until evening.

When any one has touched a dead person, some of these ashes must be taken and put in a dish, and water from a spring or running stream must be poured on them, and some clean person must take a branch of hyssop, and sprinkle him on the third day and on the seventh day. And then he must wash his clothes and himself and be unclean until evening. The same thing must be done for all those who come into a tent where a man has died, and for those who touch the bones of a man or a grave, and for all open dishes and basins and pots.

You think it a strange law? It seems so, and we would think it a great deal of trouble, I suppose, unless we loved God more than most people do. But if any one came into the tabernacle of the Lord who had touched a dead person, and had not had the cleansing water sprinkled upon him, he defiled the temple, and would be cut off from Israel.

Dead things symbolize sin, because sin brought death into the world. God teaches us how dangerous it is to touch sin, by making it death to touch the dead, unless cleansing follows. This shows the certainty of death, for those who are not made clean by the living waters of baptism. For the ashes of the innocent heifer in the living water, pointed to Christ, whose blood at our baptism atones for our sins.

But we must go to our lesson. After we have noticed that the law relating to the cleansing of unclean persons was made just after so many people had died from the plague. It would have been almost impossible for all who had touched their dead friends to have brought the needful offerings of heifers, lambs, kids, doves, or pigeons for cleansing. Korah's company, 14,950 had died! Therefore, God out of mercy for his people, made another law.

They needed no new victim: they had only to look back to one already slain, and to "the running water close at hand," just as we look back to Jesus. Heb. ix. 13, 14.

The children of Israel have come into the desert of Zin, and are abiding at Kadesh; the same place where their sentence was pronounced when they turned back from Canaan. They have been moving about in the desert, making a living somehow, very much as the Arabs do now, only they were not robbers.

Miriam, who sang so beautifully after the Red Sea had been crossed, died at Kadesh. What a sad chapter this is! It is not much like the glad setting out from Sinai, of the hosts of the Lord for war. For now there is no water for the congregation, and the people scold Moses and wish they had died with that awful plague when their brethren died. They are so thirsty, and their poor animals are suffering for the cooling drink. They wonder why they have been made to "come up out of Egypt to such an evil place: no place of seed, or of figs, or of vines, or of pomegranates, or of water to drink."

Moses and Aaron left the people and went to the tabernacle, and fell on their faces by the door, and the glory of the Lord appeared. This showed that he was ready to tell them what to do. Moses was to take the rod and gather the people together and speak to the rock before them, and it would "give forth his water." He was not to smite it as he had smitten at Horeb 38 years before, and yet he did; he smote it twice, and thus dishonored the Lord by not obeying him. For that rock represented Christ, who was to be smitten once on our behalf. Paul says "the rock that followed them (margin, "went with them") was Christ," meaning, that it pictured Christ from whom the waters of salvation flow.

Aaron was with Moses. Neither of them believed that water would come from the rock by just speaking to it. See 12th verse. And they spoke as if it was by their own power that the water would come, and not by the power of the Lord.

For their sin they could not go into the beautiful land but were sentenced to die, the one at Mount Nebo, the other at Mount Hor. But I see we can go no farther this time or our lesson will be too long. We will leave the people at Meribah, and begin next time at the 14th verse.

AUNTIE WISE.

Editor Restitution:

Since the Annual Conference at Dutton, the first week in June, I have been working in the Bible Mission in Grand Rapids and preaching for the Church of God there, of which I am pastor. The indications are encouraging,

O. R. L. CROZIER.

A distinguished author says: "I resolved when I was a child, never to use a word which I could not pronounce before my mother." He kept his resolution, and became a pure minded, noble, honored gentleman. His rule and example are worthy of imitation.

Young reader! keep your mouth free from all impurity and your "tongue from evil;" but in order to do this, ask Jesus to cleanse your heart and keep it clean, for "out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh."

The Bride of Christ.

Holy Bride! without blemish,
Found of God without spot;
Without wrinkle or tarnish,
Her glory without blot;
With coronet of stars, the moon in her train,
She's clothed with the sun; with Messiah will reign.

She has followed her Savior,
For his kingdom doth pray;
She will wait for his favor,
Until up against that day;
With long-suffering Paul she'll finish the race,
Maintain the good contest, and guard well the faith.

She's been justified freely,
By God's grace through the Blood.
Her consecration holy,
Which ever binds the fire's flood.
She ever with diligent care doth contend,
For the full completion of hope to the end.

Instructed in godliness,
She is under his rod:
Her fruit unto holiness,
She e'er lives unto God;
Walks in meekness of life, lives no longer in sin,
She's begotten of God, Christ liveth within.

Her armor Christian graces,
Burnished, lustrious and bright;
She's equipped for all places,
She's prepared for the fight:
She stands for the Lord in the battle unfaltering,
Is not judged, but has passed from death into life.

She goes forth without shrinking,
Faith and works e'er replete;
No thought has she of yielding,
In Christ she is complete.
She loves his appearing and soon he will place,
On his right, God's jewels—the bride of his grace.

She has had her soul watered,
In millions with joy;
She's ready to be offered,
She's a heavenly convoy:
Which safely will guide to the "Hill of the Lord,"
His bride with clean hands, to receive her reward.

In her faithfulness steady,
And appareled with care;
"She hath made herself ready,"
The Lord's kingdom to share:
"Prepared as a bride, adorned for her husband,"
When Jerusalem New comes down out of heaven.

She ne'er feasts on old leaven,
But e'er eateth the Word,
Which proceedeth from heaven,
From the mouth of the Lord;
The Lord in his mountain, a feast of fat things,
Will spread for all people, when their marriage bell rings.

God has filled her pulses
With the waves of his love;
Made her fruitful in graces,
Gave her gifts from above;
His glory doth kindle faith's eye never dim,
While waiting and watching and looking for him.

She will stand as God's princes,
In the City of Light;
Be arrayed in fine linen,
All glorious and white;
Behold her King cometh! the Bridegroom draws nigh,
And his bride will possess the kingdom most High.

Selected.

A Letter.

Editor Catamet:

I notice in your issue of July 8d a letter from one who signs "M. D." and note the same line of argument held by "Reason," who wrote some time since. I have waited to see if some who profess to love the Word of God and claim to be his servants, would answer this letter or make a small plea and defend the attack made on the Bible.

Acts xvii. 23. As Paul stood on Mar's Hill, he said: "I perceive that in all things ye are too superstitious: for as I passed by, and beheld your devotions, I found this inscription, 'To the Unknown God,' whom therefore ye ignorantly worship, him declare I unto you." So I perceive that M. D. and many others are not instructed and are ignorant of the true teaching of Word of God. I have confidence in "M. D.," to believe he is sincere and honest. As ridicule teaches nothing let me endeavor to point out some of the true ideas of the Bible.

With "Christian Science" and so-called professed Christianity I have nothing to do. Briefly, your remarks thereto I do not question. By the study of the life of Christ you will readily see that his teachings do not correspond with what your idea of Christianity is, or what many of the sects now profess.

To be a true follower of Christ is to be called a fanatic, a crank, and to be told it is all speculation, and many other things will be said, so it requires strength of character and backbone to be on the Lord's side. In conversion to him there is no new nature imparted, no new faculties added, but a readjustment of disordered powers, such as will bring nature again into submission to God's will, and into the fellowship of his love.

God requires the same now that he did of Abraham, Gen. xvii. 1. "I am the Almighty God, walk before me and be thou perfect," (margin) "upright, or sincere." Christ's life and teachings are beyond criticism. He says, "The words I speak unto you, they are spirit, and they are life." The different sects are not built upon his words. "The servant is not greater than his lord. If they have persecuted me, they will also persecute you." "Blessed are ye when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely, for my sake." Blessed are ye when men separate from your company. By their fruits they are to be known. Show me the ones who are persecuted and I will join them at once. Straight is the gate and narrow the way and few there be that enter therein. Many are called but few are chosen. "Fear not, little flock, it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom." You can readily see it is boiled down to a "few" not many.

Rom. x. 2. "For I bear them record that they have a zeal of God, but not according to knowledge; for they being ignorant of God's righteousness, and going about to establish their own righteousness, have not submitted themselves unto the righteousness of God." Atonement means simply at-one-ment with God, and to be a Christian is to be Christ-like, hence to apply the term Christian to all does not make them Christ-like. Because there are so many quack doctors, all should not be called quacks. In your college course you were required to study all the books, therefore, to understand the Word of God you must study all, not a part. Paul says it was written for our admonition and learning so that we could understand God and his purpose.

2 Tim. ii. 15.—"Study to show thyself approved unto God, (not to man) a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of truth." Because so many sects build upon a portion of the Bible and ignore the rest, is no sign they are following Christ. Matt. xv. 8, 9. "In vain they do worship me, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men."

As to prayer, because so many failures are presented it is no sign God does not hear and answer prayer.

The C. E. Society praying for the conversion of Robt. Ingersoll was out of place, for "God has raised him up for a purpose." Rom. ix. 17, 18. Read James v. 16. "The effectual, fervent prayer (of who?) a righteous man availeth much." God looks to righteousness, not profession; if sincere you will truly find an Aladdin's lamp in Matt. xxi. 22. "All things whatsoever ye shall ask in prayer, believing ye shall receive." I put my faith to trial and did not find God backward in his help. God does help any doubting Thomas, James i. 5 to 8.

After using tobacco to excess for twenty-five years I found myself unable to give it up, nerves all shattered, and being deprived of its use for a day or two found myself in the same condition as the soldiers on the field at Santiago, and as I have seen them many times during the rebellion, unable to eat, sleep, or do anything. In this condition I applied on several occasions to men of science and doctors, and receiving no help finally gave it up as useless, as far as that part of my system was concerned the will power had gone and I could do nothing. I was sceptical on religion and the Bible, and heard these words quoted, Phil. iv. 13, "I can do all things through Christ, which strengtheneth me." I did not tried that mode and concluded to investigate and try him. After an investigation I saw at once that I was wrong in my ideas, and made the change, and as I was about to be baptized, in my feeble way I asked God to help me remove the tobacco habit, and my prayer was answered, science failed but God did not. Since Feb. 8, 1888, I have not used tobacco, and I thank God that I am rid of the curse which bound me with an iron grasp. I felt no after effects and this confirmed my faith in an all-wise God's religion and answer to prayer. My scepticism has vanished and I am satisfied that God is the controlling power. It is vain to ask for help when we can help ourselves, but when unable to do anything we turn to him acknowledgeing his power and ask for help, you can rest satisfied it will come in his own time and way. Effectual, fervent prayer is to come from the righteous or true believers, and is not meant for others. Praying always, our mind will be towards God, and we will think no evil of our neighbors. Heb. xi. 6, "Without faith it is impossible to please him; for he that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him."

We can get followers for any number of cranks, but to follow the meek and lowly Jesus, is another thing. 1 Pet. ii. 21. "Leaving us an example that ye should follow his steps." Christ says, he that confesses me before the Father in heaven and he that denieth me before men, him will I deny before my Father in heaven."

How many are ready to answer any man and confess Christ before men?

1 Peter iii. 15, "But sanctify the Lord God in your hearts: and be ready always to give an answer to every man that asketh you a reason of the hope that is in you with meekness and fear." To believe on Christ is to believe what he taught. Nowhere does he teach anything that compares with the theology of today.

At funeral services we often hear, "Man that is born of woman is of few days and full of trouble." Turn to this chapter, Job xiv. 14, and you will find an important question which is never answered, though it is very plain in the Bible. "If a man die, shall he live again?" The next verse says that God has a desire for the work of his hands. Job answers in xix. 25. "I know that my Redeemer liveth and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth, and though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God." Heb. i. 1, "God, who at sundry times and in divers manners spake in time past unto the Fathers by the prophets, hath in these last days spoken unto us by his Son, whom he hath appointed heir of all things." Through Christ God has promised the restoration of all things to its edenic beauty, and in his own time he will surely fulfill his promise. Dominion through lust, lost in Adam, is to be restored through Christ who came to save that which was lost. The blessing is to be to all the families of the earth. Gen. xii. 3, "in thee shall all the families of the earth be blessed." Theology says that if we are good, when we die, we will fly around the great white throne, if wicked we go into hell-fire. I am glad that I cannot find any such doctrine taught in the Bible. God is love, and such a doctrine dishonors him and his Son. John iii. 13, "No man hath ascended up to heaven." John xiii. 33, "As I said to the Jews, whither I go ye cannot come; so now I say to you." Acts ii. 34, "For David is not ascended into the heavens." If they could not go how are we to get to heaven?

Hell is the grave as shown in Oxford Teachers Bible (margin.) Read Psa. lv. 15; Rev. xx. 13; 1 Cor. xv. 55.

Christ's whole teaching was about his kingdom to be on the earth, and the resurrection of the dead, to occupy that kingdom and the Word is plain on these questions. See Isa. xxvi. 19, "Thy dead men shall live, the earth shall cast out her dead." Hosea xiii. 14, "I will ransom them from the power of the grave." John v. 28, "The hour is coming when all that are in their graves shall hear his voice." Acts xxvi. 8, "Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you, that God should raise the dead." 1 Cor. xv. 21, "By man (Adam) came death, by man, (Christ) comes the resurrection of the dead. As in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive." Think well on this. Rev. xx. 6, "Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection; on such the second death hath no power, but they shall be priests (teachers) of God and of Christ, and shall reign with him a thousand years." And it is to be on the earth. Rev. v. 10, "And hast made us unto our God kings and priests and we shall reign on the earth." Many pray the prayer that was taught to the disciples, "Thy kingdom come," and do not know what they are praying for.

In conclusion, friend "M. D.," I ask you to study God's promises to man, and the life of Christ, and you will not be so ready to apply Christianity to any and all things that have a touch of Bible make-up.—Fred Greiner, in "Niagara Falls Daily Catamet."

The Exodus of Sin and Death.

The divine revelation is dualistic in substance as well as in form, by means of two so-called Testaments, the Old and the New. We have revealed to us two worlds, two Adams, two progenitors, two births, two covenants, two classes of men, two kingdoms, two divine advents, two lives, two deaths. This revelation makes known to us first the one, and then the other, in this series of couplets that we compare them and see how much superior the second is to the first. We must bring them together, study them together. This is rendered the more necessary by the fact, that the traditional doctrine of only one actual life, an immortal for all men. This has made void some of those distinctions so sharply drawn in the Scriptures.

1. The creation of this lower world is graphically though briefly described. All is very good, yes, perfect according to nature, but is in its nature material all its appointments are material and under the reign of natural law, and therefore mutable and transitory. Afterwards it is revealed to us as a brighter, better and more glorious world. As yet invisible spiritual in its nature, to endure forever, and it is only in the New Testament and more especially in its closing chapters that its glory as the second paradise, of which the first Eden was but a faint type are more clearly revealed.

2. Next we have the creation of the first man. "Out of the dust of the ground" the noblest of all earthly creatures, and yet, essentially earthly as he proves himself to be; and as the name Adam which was given him by his Creator imparts. "He became a living soul," or creature like the animals beneath him; but with this essential difference, there was given to him a capacity for a higher life, and he was intended for this by his Creator. But only by being established in holiness, failing in this essential condition through sin. He proved himself unworthy, and sank to the condition of an earthly and perishable creature. That was not first which was spiritual, but that which was natural.

Now the way is prepared for the revelation of a second Adam. Born of woman, yet begotten by God, the Son of God, both divine and human, "Tempted in all points as we are yet without sin." Dying as a mortal for the redemption of man, though possessed of inherent immortality in his own right, which could not be lost and so, "Being made perfect through suffering he became the Author of eternal salvation to all those that obey him."

3. The first Adam is the progenitor of a race like himself, earthly, sinful mortal. His children could not inherit from him an immortality which he failed to secure for himself. The second Adam is the progenitor of a race who are like him. Pure in heart and who inherit from him his own immortal life, though lingering here and subject to physical death, they shall enter upon that inheritance incorruptible, which fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for them who are kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation, ready to be revealed in the last time.

4. There must be two births as well as two begettings. No child of Adam can inherit eternal life except he be born again or from above, that which is born of the flesh is flesh, and that which is born of (or begotten of) the Spirit is spirit. We inherit from Adam in our first birth, nothing but natural mortal life. We inherit from the second Adam in our birth from above, spiritual, deathless life. This is the life so repeatedly spoken of by our Lord, as the life everlasting.

5. This dispensation brings us under a new covenant the first covenant was a covenant of works, "for if the first had been faultless there should have been no place for the second. But the second covenant is one of faith. "Believe and thou shalt be saved," it implies perfect faith in the Almighty Savior.

6. And so mankind came to be divided into two classes, sinners and saints. The first are carnal minded, they only live seek for worldly gain. The second class are spiritually minded, their choice is the good part which can never be taken away, they and they only have eternal life.

7. Hence there are two kingdoms, the one of this world over which the enemy of God and man bears rule, as Prince of this world, a kingdom of sorrow, of darkness and death; a kingdom doomed to be overthrown utterly and forever destroyed. The other is the kingdom of God. His everlasting kingdom shall endure forever.

8. To lay the foundation of this kingdom, the Son of God came as the Son of Man, to live under the law and to suffer and die, and then victorious over the power of death. He rose and ascended on high. We have assurance he will come again to gather the fruits of his victory to raise the dead, to judge the world, to destroy all that is vile and to make all things new, "And unto them that look for him will he appear the second time without sin unto salvation," and in that new heaven and new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness he shall reign over his people forever.

9. Finally not to extend these thoughts into other points less clearly revealed we ask especial attention to the first and second death to which such prominence is given in the Word of God. There is no vagueness in the teachings of the Scripture with respect to these two deaths, and there would be no misunderstanding of its doctrine, were it not for the philosophy that deems the actuality of even the first death, because man is assumed to be an immortal being of course there is no place for a second death. Death instead of being a penal infliction, is the door by which the righteous enter upon that state of higher existence; for the wicked also it is the door by which they enter upon a state of eternal misery and suffering then as to the second death, which according to the Word of God, follows upon the resurrection and the judgment to condemnation it means—why it means just nothing at all. Only more misery and sin; it is of death itself and the final end of the sinner's career of which the Scriptures so emphatically speak, "Sin." Whatever miseries may attend its course, when it is finished bringeth forth death. If there be no actual death there can be no actual resurrection, no actual personal coming of our victorious Lord to take the government of a ransomed world, and to rule in righteousness over his loyal, holy people. If the language of Scripture, in which this is so clearly and positively foretold is to be taken in a metaphorical sense to indicate a kind of invisible impersonal, (Parousia) long since passed, and that great event for which Christ's followers have waited and prayed for and are still waiting with joyful expectancy, is all a delusive dream, in short all the great doctrine of our holy religion must be explained away or spiritualized to accommodate this ruling dogma. We believe the devil and all his works shall be utterly destroyed, that "Death shall be abolished and swallowed up of life;" that the victory which the Son of God shall gain over his enemies and the enemies of his people shall be complete, wanting nothing, and at the name of Jesus every knee shall bow, and every tongue shall confess that he is Lord to the glory of the Father. To us this glorious consummation seems essential, but we believe it because this is what his Word tells us, and the many promises that God made to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob concerning their posterity and the extermination of all their enemies, and the solemn oath, "As truly as I live all the earth shall be filled with the glory of the Lord" are to be taken in no partial restricted sense. We understand them as the establishment of a kingdom that shall never end.

The Old Testament closes with a description of the gathering in of God's people, as jewels into his kingdom, and the utter destruction of the wicked. In the New Testament the main object of Christ's coming is to destroy the works of him who brought sin and death for he must reign until he hath put all enemies under his feet. Then let us turn to the last book of the New Testament and see the glories of the eternal works, the new heavens and new earth, for the former things are passed away, there shall be no more death, neither crying nor sorrow for the throne of God and the Lamb shall be there, and there shall be no night there, for the Lord God giveth them light, and they shall reign forever and ever. These sayings are faithful and true. He which testifieth these things saith, "Surely I come quickly, even so come Lord Jesus."—E. T. Knowles.

Bishop Latimer, burned at the stake in A. D. 1555, said: "There will be a parliament in which Christ himself shall bear rule and not men, and which the righteous pray for when they say, 'Thy kingdom come;' because they know that therein reformation of all things shall be had. Let us, therefore, have a desire that this day may come quickly. Let us hasten God forward. Let us cry unto him day and night. 'Most merciful Father thy kingdom come'.....That man or that woman that saith these words, 'Thy kingdom come,' with a faithful heart, no doubt desirest in every deed that God will come to judgment, and amend all things in this world, and put down Satan, that old serpent under our feet."

Take time to think of the wants and needs of others. Looking ceaselessly upon your own affairs freezes up the fountains of sympathy in your soul, and hardens your noble nature. Cultivate a life of broad sympathy and fellowship with the experiences of your fellow men.

Patient waiting is often the highest way of doing God's will.

Conference Report.

The business meeting of the Quarterly Conference of the Church of God in Nebraska was held at the home of the President, Bro. M. D. Newell on Saturday afternoon, July 1, 1899. The meeting was called to order by the President, at 4 20 P. M. after which the minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. The Secretary's and Evangelist's reports were then read as follows.

Secretary's report: money received for this year, $103.85; on back subscription. $19.50; total, $123.35.

Evangelist's report: money received for this year, $103.85; expenses, $9.63; amount less expenses, $94.22; on back subscription $19.50; total on salary. $113.72. Sermons preached 41; number baptized, 2.

It was moved and carried that the reports be accepted. The question as to where the Annual Conference should be held was then brought up. The church at Blair was the only one that cast any vote for it. Some thought that it might be more largely attended, if held in some more central place. Moved that the secretary correspond with the church at Blair, as to whether they would be willing to give up the Conference for a three-weeks tent meeting; and that the Conference board investigate the matter and decide by the first of August, where to hold the meeting if not at Blair. Motion seconded and carried. Moved that the Secretary and President write a letter to someone in each congregation in the State, or belonging to the Conference, or asking them to solicit money for the Evangelist Fund. Motion seconded and carried. Moved and carried that we adjourn.

During this Conference the preaching services were held in the D. T. Prime school house, south of Arapahoe, as announced. Bro. Almus Adams and Bro. J. T. Prime were the only preaching brethren present. Bro. Prime preached on Saturday evening and on Sunday afternoon; Bro. Adams, Sunday morning. Owing to a heavy rain Sunday afternoon, there was no meeting that evening.

Submitted in love,

Obituary.

Gladiolus Yeagley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Yeagley of near Plymouth, died at South Bend on July 26, where she had been taken only a few days before for medical treatment. She was born Oct. 4, 1874, at Bourbon, Ind., her parents soon after moving to near this city. For several years past she has been living in Chicago, but came home some weeks ago in poor health.

She was a member of the Church of God at this place, the funeral being held at the Church on July 28. Services conducted by Bros. W. D. Thompson and E. K. Barnhill after which she was taken to Oak Hill Cemetery, and laid away to await the angel's summons to come forth. Our prayer is that the Lord may soon come and end these scenes of sorrow. May he comfort the afflicted father and mother, brothers and sisters, and grant them a happy reunion.

Editor Restitution:

Brother John Foore begins a series of meetings, August 17th, 1899, at Blush, Madison Co., Mo. to continue for six or eight days. From there he will go to DeSoto, Jefferson Co., Mo. and remain there about the same length of time. This is our 4th annual meeting at Blush. Twice held by Bro. John Foore, and once by Bro. J. S. Hatch. During the three meetings 19 were immersed into the name of Jesus, for remission of sin. We hope this meeting will not be out-done by the rest, as other additions are expected. All of the one faith are cordially invited to attend these meetings. Your presence will encourage us to press forward and onward to gain the great prize.

All necessary arrangements are being made to make this meeting a grand success, and we hope all the brethren and sisters who can do so will be present and assist,

Iowa State Conference.

The Twelfth Annual Conference of the Church of God in Iowa, will convene at Waterloo, Aug. 10 to 20 inclusive. Waterloo is situated at a junction of the Illinois Central, Burlington, Cedar Rapids and Northern, and the Chicago and Great Western Railways, and is of easy access from all parts of the State. Directions as to street car lines, baggage, etc, are given else where in this paper.

Dear brethren, we expect a better attendance this year than ever before. Rains have been frequent and abundant, and you have a bountiful harvest. You have been blessed financially and we want you to be blessed abundantly by coming to our annual gathering. The Lord wants you there, for his cause may suffer without you.

Our evangelists have worked faithfully and sacrificed much and they will be on the ground, and indeed they will feel discouraged if you are not there to greet them, and encourage them in their work. We missed some who were not there last year. And O, what a blessed meeting we enjoyed with those who came. Do you rejoice in the things of the kingdom? Are you glad that our Savior is soon coming to set up his kingdom? Do you believe it is near? Then you surely are willing to make some sacrifice of time and money. It is your duty to do so. God has committed to you the Word of Reconciliation.

You say, "We are so scattered." Yes, and this is a very strong reason why you should attend this meeting. There are some who are always at our annual meetings. We expect them there and they do not disappoint us. But some of you have not been with us for two, three years, and some have never attended. We want to see you: we need your presence and help, and this year is a good time to come.

Now, brethren, what if everything at home does not get just the same care as when you are there. If you will devote a few days and a few dollars God will bless you more abundantly than ever. We expect this meeting to be a feast of fat things, and you cannot afford to stay away. Begin at once to prepare for the meeting.

Yours expecting to see you at Waterloo Conference, Aug. 10-20.

A. J. EYCHANER, Pres.
O. J. ALLARD, Sec.

Read this carefully: Those coming to the State Conference (Aug. 10-20) over the Illinois Central and the Chicago and Great Western Railroads will check their baggage to, and get off the cars at East Waterloo. Those coming over the Burlington, Cedar Rapids and Northern Railroad check baggage to and get off at Waterloo, as the company has no depot on the east side. Near all the depots take the Independence Avenue street car going east to the campground. Leave all checked baggage at the depots, and come direct to the campground. We will arrange to transfer your baggage at reduced rates. Heretofore there has sometimes been difficulty in getting baggage that arrives after 6 o'clock, especially Saturday night and for this reason take the early trains. Bring a trunk well filled with everything to make tenting pleasant and that you think you may need. Among which we suggest the following items: sufficient bedding to make you comfortable (remembering that the nights are sometimes cold in a tent) a pillow, extra wraps, towels, soap, wash basin, plate, knife, fork, spoon, cup, a hammock if you have one, and whatever else your good judgment may suggest. If you have a tent bring it and thus help us along in this matter—we want to have tent room for all who come. Let the young people and children come. Board will be furnished at the boarding tent at 10 cents per meal or 25 cents per day. Come with the spirit of Christ and let us have the best Conference we have ever attended. There will be a splendid programme each day—song service, prayer and social meetings, Bible readings, topic talks, essays and preaching. On Sundays there will be Sunday school, so do not forget to bring the children with you.

A. J. EYCHANER, Chairman.

To enter the Christ-life—not the Church life—is to lay down the natural and lower life, as Christ laid it down. It is to consecrate one's self—every reasoning power, every element of genius, every force of disposition, everything that belongs to the power of human nature—to make one's self the bread of others, the supply of others, and to live for beneficence.

We only ask of God what we think will be best, but he gives us what he knows is best.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship." Much Serving.

Christ never asks of us such busy labor
As leaves no time for resting at his feet;
The wanting attitude of expectation
He oft times counts a service most complete.

He sometimes wants our ear—our rapt attention—
That he some sweetened secret may impart;
'Tis always in the time of deepest silence
That heart finds deepest fellowship with heart.

We sometimes wonder why our Lord has placed us
Within a space so narrow, so obscure,
That nothing we call work can find us room
There's only room to suffer—to endure.

Well, God loves patience! Souls that dwell in stillness,
Doing the little things, or resting quite,
May just as perfectly fulfil their mission,
Be just as useful in the Father's sight.

As they who grapple with some giant evil,
Clearing a path that every one can see,
Our Savior cares for cheerful acquiescence,
Rather than for a busy mindlessness.

And yet he does love service, where 'tis given
By grateful love that clothes itself in deeds;
But work that's done beneath the scourge of duty,
Be sure to such he gives but little heed.

Then seek to please him, whatsoever he bids thee,
Whether to do, to suffer, to be still;
'Twill matter little by what path he bid us,
If in it all we sought to do his will.

Selected.

Confessing Christ.

"If thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead thou shalt be saved." Rom. x. 9.

The epistle of Paul to the Romans may be said to contain the "magna charta" of salvation,—God's great grant or charter to the human family.

Martin Luther described it as the masterpiece of the New Testament which can never be too much studied because the more it is handled the more precious it becomes.

The salutation in the first seven verses is the longest and most solemnly impressive of any found throughout Paul's epistles. It is doubtless if ever a greater range of thought was ever compressed into fewer words and it is a tribute even to the admitted genius of St. Paul that such a volume of profound truth could be condensed into so few lines. The substance of the letter to Romans is this:—The end and aim of the gospel of God is the salvation of man. Man by nature is sinful and cannot by his own effort attain to holiness. Without holiness no man can see the Lord therefore without holiness no man can be saved. How then is this holiness to be obtained? The gospel of Jesus Christ is the answer to that question and the epistle of Paul to the Romans is the fullest explanation of that gospel.

Now while it is not possible for us to understand or measure the profound truths underlying the doctrine which Paul in this epistles delineates, it is comparatively easy for us to comprehend God's dealings with us in so far as they affect our present actions and future hopes.

While it is quite useless for us to attempt to arrange in the puny pigeonholes of our limited intellect the incomprehensible mysteries of revelation, it is possible for us to practically appropriate to ourselves the priceless treasures which are offered to us through the gospel of Jesus Christ.

In the former part of this 10th chapter of Romans we notice that the apostle is proving the impartiality of God's dealings with the Jews and Gentiles, and that from the view-point of righteousness or right-doing both Jews and Gentiles are on the same level—are entirely equal in God's estimation.

The Jews of Paul's day had been trying to establish a "righteousness" or "justification" which was by the law of Moses, they were not willing to submit themselves unto the righteousness of the new dispensation, that righteousness or justification which comes by faith.

The righteousness of faith teaches us that Christ is not a distant mediator or savior but is very near and is at all times willing and waiting to be a very present savior to each one of us. The passage which we have selected for our remarks may be regarded as the summing up of the Christian faith and the verse which follows is seen to be a repetition of the same truth in another form, apparently to invest it with the greater emphasis and importance. In both verses we have practice a parallel or twofold condition, viz., confession by the mouth and belief in the heart or soul. These two conditions are the necessary and inseparable counterpart and complement of each other and may be viewed as a condensed representation of God's plan of salvation. "If thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead thou shalt be saved." "With the heart man believeth unto righteousness and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation."

Confession by mouth represents theory in religion, belief in the heart or soul represents practice in religion. Head religion implies theory; heart religion assumes practice. Head religion is nominal Christianity; heart religion is actual Christianity. Mr. Ruskin writes:—"I do not wonder at what men suffer but I often wonder at what they lose." The greatest wonder of the age—of this age perhaps more than any other—is the thought that many men will admit the substantial truth of Paul's words, "If in this life only we have hope we are of all men most miserable," and yet make little or no effort to avail themselves of God's free gift of eternal life offered to them through Jesus Christ.

It is an astonishing fact that so many persons seem content to spend their lives in pursuing the shadowy forms of wealth, ambition or luxury and yet persistently neglect to secure that better part which can never be taken from them. It has been well said that "An enthusiastic religion is the perfection of common sense," and yet how many men and women do we see who are absorbed in running after the fading things of time. The unregulated pursuit of wealth, is it not a vain shadow? and yet from the studied anxiety with which some men made haste to be rich one might conclude that they believed that their chance for the next world depended upon the rapidity with which they accumulated sovereigns in this.

The life-long and unregulated struggles of business men, professional men, politicians, what are they but a vain shadow? From the disappointment and failure which such unregulated lives must necessarily bring do we wish to be saved?

Do we desire to enjoy that glorious inheritance of which we are told that, "Eye hath not seen, ear hath not heard, neither hath it entered into the heart of man to conceive the things which God has prepared for those that love him."

Now, the first step in a man's salvation is his willingness to be saved. The question is altogether and distinctly a moral one hinging entirely upon the will and therefore the practical question is:—Does a man really want to enjoy the benefits of religion, does he truly and earnestly wish to be saved? The form in which the gospel offer is made elsewhere as here is always optional. Man's highest gift, prerogative or privilege is his freewill, the exercise of his individuality with constraint either by his fellow man or by God. God's offer of eternal life to man is made on such terms that he is quite free to accept or reject it, and it is precisely because God has made us free agents or masters of our wills that the responsibility to accept or reject rests entirely upon ourselves.

The first great and real discovery which a man makes is to discover himself. There is a great depth of philosophy which our Savior uses of the prodigal son. "When he came to himself"—that is, when he had at last discovered his individuality—when he truly realized his exact position. When he came to himself he said, "I will arise and go to my father." This resolution of the prodigal son is a conspicuous example of the exercise of free-will in which we notice that filial duty and self reform are inseparably ascertained. Now it is very clear that so long as a man's time is monopolized by the pursuit of worldly affairs to the utter exclusion of Christ he has not "come to himself." The very moment upon which a man hesitates, then halts and alters his course, and starts for his father's house with a certainty of purpose, a certainty which only ceases with the end of the journey, that moment when real spiritual life and action begins. By comparison, the only question which ought seriously to engage the close and prolonged attention of any man or woman is the question of the rich young ruler: "Good master (or teacher) what shall I do that I may inherit eternal life?" Let the form of the question be carefully noted. It is not simply, What must I think? or, What must I believe? but it is "What must I do?" this last form of the question including and implying the former elements of thought and belief.

Here we clearly recognize that any man or woman who decides to come to Christ for salvation must come prepared for action. True religion is no milk and water business. The religion of Jesus Christ is no idle mysticism, no mere ecstatic vision, no mere sentimental outburst. It is, or should be, nothing less than life-long sacrifice and service. It is a giving up of the claims of the world and the laying down of ourselves upon the altar of sacrifice and service: and unless we are prepared to adopt this view and act upon it the prayer "Thy kingdom come," which is so often upon our lips is resolved through lack of action on our part into nothing less than insincere mockery.

It is to those and those only "who by patient continuance in well-doing" that God will reward eternal life.

It can never be too carefully learned that there is a radical and essential difference between lipservice and heart service. "Not every one" said Christ, "who saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven, but he that doeth the will of my Father who is in heaven." That is what Christ said of lip service.

"Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, with all thy soul and with all thy strength, and thy neighbor as thyself." That is what Christ said of our heart service.

When a man believes in his heart and soul that Christ is his personal Savior it implies a desire and effort to live in conformity with Christ's will. Not only must we confess him with our mouth but we must make diligent effort to appropriate him in our lives; we must so far as possible copy his life in devotion to the claims of our fellowmen. The days are past when public confession of Christ's name meant public martyrdom; notwithstanding a daily, active, living confession insufficiently difficult. It is comparatively easy for a man to confess Christ when surrounded by a circle of religious friends, but it requires moral courage and considerable effort to do so when and where it is most needed—in the workshop, the railway carriage, commercial room, or drawing room.

The most advanced Christian men and women are doubtless at times much hindered by the severe limitations of our poor human nature. That which is born of the flesh is flesh and, with our present environment, it can never be anything else, it can never in this life be improved into spirit. Regeneration is not complete rooting up of the principle of evil from our human nature, it is rather the planting by the side of the old principle a new one, that is the Christ principle.

And if we are true to Christ and to ourselves the Christ principle will continue to grow up in us until at last the old or selfish principle is entirely subdued and overpowered,—although in this life it can never be rooted out.

Before we are converted, or born again, before we confess Christ—self and self only is the motive power of our life in all that we do; our kindest and best actions spring only from the love of ourselves. After the Christ life has been formed in us, and has taken root genuinely, the whole horizon of our life is widened and we realize slowly yet surely that to live for ourselves alone is the lowest form of life. It is remarkable how many persons are under the impression that there is some secret or magic influence or power about religion.

It is impossible to make a greater mistake. The plain and simple truth is, the possession and exercise of [illegible] certainty from beginning to end. The progress which a truly converted man or woman may make in the Christ life is minutely and exactly proportioned to the effort made—no more and no less. The obvious and frequent mistake made by persons desiring to become Christians is this; they attempt in their own strength and by their own unaided effort to improve themselves, thinking by such means to make themselves better fitted to embrace the gospel of Christ. For such Christ stands at the door and knocks, saying, "Wilt thou be made whole?" Some persons expect to be better fitted to become Christians by observing forms and ceremonies. They are always trying to get—as they think—more correct conceptions of Christianity by slavery to the letter of the law rather than submit themselves to the gospel method. Others say, "Oh if they could only feel more deeply, realize a greater sorrow for sin and a greater love towards God, then they would be more prepared—better fitted to accept Christ." For such Christ stands at the door and knocks saying "Wilt thou be made whole?" The atheist, the agnostic, positivist, secularist, materialist and communalist is each trying to cleanse himself in some Abana or Pharpar of his own preference, with what success—or want of success is too well known. For each and all of these Christ stands at the door and knocks saying, "Wilt thou be made whole?" God's royal invitation is sounding in our ears today quite as clearly as it did in the days of his servant Isaiah: "Ho, every one that thirsteth come ye to the waters and he that hath no money come, buy wine and milk without money and without price." And if we are attentive, quite as clearly may we hear the still small voice of the gospel telling us that "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son that whosoever believeth in him should not perish but should have everlasting life."

The gospel deals with us as individuals, and each of us must face our responsibility—must decide for ourselves whether we accept or reject the gracious offers of Christ. Let us recognize that it is our highest wisdom to practice Christ's commands. Let us rejoice that the work of Christ is a finished work, and that God can and will pardon all those who approach him through Christ's atoning sacrifice. Let the words of Christ fall as grateful music upon our ear "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest." Above all, let us be wise to remember that faith without works is dead and that the reward following Salvation is in direct proportion to our works.—Robert Henry Pullen, in Faith.

What We Believe and Teach, and Why.

1. We teach that men can only be saved by an intelligent belief in the gospel. Mark xvi. 15-16; Matt. xiii. 23; Rom. i. 16-19.

2. This gospel consists of the good news of the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ. Matt. iv. 23; Acts viii. 12; xxiii. 23.

3. The kingdom of God will be a literal kingdom, established on the earth. 2 Sam. vii. 16; Jer. iii. 17-18; Dan. ii. 44.

4. The kingdom proper will consist of the twelve tribes of Israel, who will be gathered from all nations; and, after the rebels have been purged out, will be planted in the land of Palestine. Ezek. xx. 38; Amos ix. 15.

5. The dominion pertaining to this kingdom will embrace all Gentile nations on the earth. Dan. vii. 27; Rev. xi. 15.

6. Jerusalem will be rebuilt in splendor, and will be "the City of the Great King," the Capital of the world. Matt. v. 35; Isa. lxii. 7; lxvi. 13; Jer. xxxi. 38-39.

7. The nations then in existence will consist of mortal men and women, as at present. They will go up, representatively, from year to year, to worship the Lord, the King, at Jerusalem. Isa. lxv. 17-25; Zech. xiv. 16.

8. When the kingdom has been established, the nations [illegible] no more, but live in peace "one thousand years." Micah iv. 1-4; Rev. xx. 1-5.

9. The RULERS of the kingdom will be immortal, yet tangible, and will consist of Jesus and his brethren. These kings will be those who will have been redeemed by the blood of Jesus out of every nation. Rev. v. 9-10; Matt. xix. 28; Rev. ii. 26-27; Zech. xiv. 9.

10. Before the twelve tribes can be fully restored, and before the Gentile nations can be subdued and blessed, Jesus must return to JERUSALEM to sit on David's throne. Luke i. 32-33; Rom. xi. 22-26; Acts iii. 20-26; Psa. lxxii.; Ezek. xxxvii.

11. The glorious reign of JESUS and his BRETHREN will continue one thousand years over mortal nations. At the end of that time all sinners will be rooted out of the earth, and from that period the earth will be inhabited by a race of immortal beings. Rev. xx. 4; Prov. ii. 22; Psa. xxxvii. 20-34; Matt. v. 5; Rev. xxi. 4.

12. Deity will be manifested in each approved saint, as he now is in JESUS, which multitude of saints, with JESUS as the Chief, will constitute the ONE NAME, which is to rule the kingdom and dominions for one thousand years. Exod. iii. 13-15; vi. 3; John xvii. 20-26; iii. 5-6; Psa. lxvii. 1-4; Zech. xiv. 9.

13. Man is a creature of the dust—out of the earth, earthy—and by reason of sin is death doomed. 1 Cor. xv. 47; Gen. ii. 8; Psa. civ. 14; Job iv. 17.

14. Death is the extinction of life; and man in death is unconscious, and dependent on resurrection for a future life. Gen. iii. 19; Psa. vi. 5; Isa. xxxviii. 18; Psa. cxlvi. 4; Eccl. ix. 5-6; x. 10; 1 Cor. xv. 16-23.

15. Man in his present state, being destitute of immortality, if he remains in ignorance of the way of life, will forever end his existence in death. Psa. xlix. 12-14-20; Isa. xxvi. 14.

16. Those who comply with the conditions will obtain immortality at the resurrection. Rom. ii. 6-7-16; 1 Cor. xv. 51-57; 2 Cor. v. 10.

17. Men and women whose hearts have been purified by the belief of the things of the kingdom of God and the NAME of Jesus, if they desire in all honesty the inheritance of eternal life in the kingdom of God, are proper subjects for an immersion in water into the ONE NAME. John iii. 5; Rom. vi. 3-5; Acts viii. 12.

18. In the ONE NAME they have Christ as their Mediator, Advocate and High Priest, who will, if they are faithful, intercede for them, and through whom they will obtain the great salvation. 1 John i. 7-9; ii. 1; 1 Tim. ii. 5; Heb. iii. 1.

19. We reject the Gentile dogmas regarding an immortal soul, an immortal devil, unending hell, eternal torments, eternal existence of the wicked kingdom in the skies for saints. Gen. ii. 7; Ezek. xviii. 1-20; Heb. ii. 17; Rev. xx. 14; Psa. xxxvii. 20; Isa. xliii. 17; Dan. vii. 27; Prov. xxi. 16.

"To the law and the testimony, if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them." Isa. viii. 20.

The reader is respectfully requested, for his own sake, to turn to all the texts of Scripture above given, and see if the above is not in perfect harmony with the Bible. If the Scriptures teach these things, what a glorious future there is for this earth and for all men and women who believe and obey the gospel! Do not imagine that it makes no difference what you believe. God requires you to believe HIM; he has given you the Bible for that purpose, and your salvation depends upon your belief of and obedience to the gospel of the kingdom not "another gospel," because it is said that "Though we or an angel from heaven preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed." Gal. i. 8.—Prepared for Church of Blessed Hope, Cleveland.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

One-Tenth, No, the Whole.

Dr. Strong, speaking upon the duty of consecrating our all to the Master, says:

When the Scripture and reason speak of God's ownership in us they use the word in no accomodated sense. It means all that it can mean in a court of law. It means that God has a right to the service of his own. It means that, since our possessions are his property, they should be used in his service—not a fraction of them, but the whole.

When the Lord returned from the far country, to reckon with his servants to whom he entrusted his goods. He demanded not simply a small portion of the increase, but held his servants accountable for both principle and interest—"Mine own with usury." Every dollar that belongs to God must serve him.

And it is not enough that we make good use of our means. We are under the same obligations to make the best use of our money that we are to make a good use of it; and to make any use of it other than the best is a maladministration of trust.

Here, then, is the principle always applicable, that of our entire possessions, every dollar, every cent, is to be employed in the way that will best honor God. And whatever money is spent on self that would have yielded larger returns of usefulness if applied otherwise, is misapplied; and, if this has been done intelligently, it is a case of embezzlement.

Skimming It.

"If you're going to give a pan of milk don't skim it first," the old grandmother used to say, meaning: If you are going to do a favor don't spoil it by an ungracious word or manner. Haven't we noticed how much of this "skimming" goes on in ordinary family intercourse?

"Another errand? I can never go down town without a half a dozen commissions!" complains Rob when his sister asks him to bring a book the library. He never refuses to oblige her, he does really count it an inconvenience; he only takes the cream off his kindness.

"Those gloves ripped again!" exclaims Mary when John wants her to take a few stitches. "It seems to me they always need mending when I am in a hurry with something else." She would be shocked at his going shabby, and distressed if any one thought her unwilling to render such offices, but she makes it a little unpleasant to ask the favor. The children follow the fashion. Tommy shuts the door at Bridget's request, but he grumbles at having to leave his top. Susie goes to the door when she is sent, but she departs with a protest that "it is Tommy's turn." Thus all day long people who love one another, and at heart are glad to serve one another, skim the sweetness from every service they rendered.

A Kind Word.

A kind word costs but little, but it may bless the one to whom it is spoken all day. Nay, have not kind words been spoken to you which have lived in your heart through years, and borne fruit of joy and hope? Let us speak kindly one to another. We have burdens and worries, but let us not therefore rasp and irritate those near us,—those we love, those Christ would have us save. An exchange presents this thought in these impressive words: "Speak kindly in the morning; it lightens the cares of the day, and makes the household and all its affairs move along smoothly. Speak kindly at night, for it may be that before dawn some loved one may finish his space of life for this world, and it will be too late to ask forgiveness."

"If aught good thou canst not say,
Of thy brother, foe or friend,
Take thou then the silent way,
Lest in word thou should offend."

If your course be good be sure you do not injure it by a bad spirit. If it is bad, give it up at once.

Every time you avoid doing wrong, you increase your inclination to do that which is right.

Carlyle says:—"Make yourself a good man, and then you may be sure there is one less rascal in the world."

Minds capable of great things can enjoy the most trivial: the elephant's trunk can knock down a tree, or pick up a pin.

There are some people in the world who are always thinking what they shall do, and do nothing because of their thinking. They cannot make up their minds what to do. Is it possible there is nothing in God's Book to help them?

Some men's names are inscribed on rolls of parchment, and emblazoned with devices and colors. Some other men's names are cut in marble in letters of gold. But there are names which are written in heaven, as citizens of the Capital of the Age to come. Reader, is your name written there? If not, why not?

Be courteous, is a divine injunction. Politeness is defined for us in various ways, but the best definition to suit us is as follows:—"Politeness is consideration,—that vigilant, moral sense which never loses sight of the rights, the claims, and the sensibilities of others." This is the one quality, over all others, necessary to make the gentleman.

God's Great Oath.

We read in an English Magazine that oaths are common in every nation and tribe,—that even the uncivilized and next to cannibal, are acquainted with and make oaths. When England was at war with the Ashantees the letters from correspondents told of kings making "great oaths" in particular places, as to what they would do to the British forces. Among civilized nations we do not know of any whose oaths are more impressive than those of the Welsh. They express their oaths thus: "Indeed, indeed!" "My very indeed;" "Indeed and double indeed!" etc.

But oaths are not confined to earth; the Book tells us that the Great Head of All, the God of heaven and earth has taken an oath,—has sworn a solemn promise. It was to Abraham that he made the promise, and to him swore he. "And he swore by Himself, because he could swear by no greater, saying, Surely blessing, I will bless thee, and multiplying, I will multiply thee." Thus God confirmed his promise by an oath, to give "strong consolation" to us who have fled for refuge to the hope set before us in the gospel.

Surely "God shall bless us;" surely we, "the ends of the earth," shall receive the fulfillment of his promises, being the faithwise Seed of Abraham. For Yahweh hath sworn, not by some old bleached bones, nor by the "very indeed" of a mortal man, but by his own life and self, and that he will keep his promise. We have his promise and confirmatory oath—two immutable things. We are positive that God will not lie; we praise and adore him for his condescension and love in making that oath of confirmation.

Ruskin.

Writing on Faith, Truth and Obedience, says:—

"In the pressing or recommending, of any act or manner of acting, we have choice of two separate lines of argument:—the one based on representation of the expediency or inherent value of the work, which is often small, and always disputable; the other based on proofs of its relations to the higher orders of human virtue, and of its acceptableness, so far as it goes, to him who is the origin of virtue. The former is commonly the more persuasive method, the latter assuredly the more conclusive; only it is liable to give offence, as if there were irreverence in adducing consideration so weighty in treating subjects of small temporal importance. I believe, however, that no error is more thoughtless than this. What is true of the Deity is equally true of his Revelation. I have been blamed for the familiar introduction of its sacred words. I am grieved at having given pain by so doing: but my excuse must be my wish that those words were made the ground of every argument and the test of every action. We have them not often enough on our lips, nor deeply enough in our memories, nor loyally enough in our lives. The snow, the vapor, and the stormy wind fulfil his word. Are our acts and thoughts lighter and wilder than these—that we should forget it?

I have, therefore, ventured, at the risk of giving some passages the appearance of irreverence, to take the higher line of argument whenever it appeared clearly traceable: and this I would ask the reader especially to observe, not merely because I think it the best mode of reaching ultimate truth, still less because I think the object of more importance than many others, but because every object should surely, at a period like the present, be taken up in this spirit, or not at all. The neglect of the years that approach us is as solemn as it is full of mystery. I would that this noble mind could see there is not so much mystery as he thinks, and the weight of evil against which we have to contend is increasing like the letting out of water. It is no time for the idleness of metaphysics, or the entertainment of the arts. The blasphemies of the earth are sounding louder, and its miseries heaped heavier every day: and if, in the midst of the exertion which every good man is called upon to put forth for their repression or relief, it is lawful to ask for a thought, for a moment for a lifting of the finger, in any direction but that of the immediate and overwhelming need, it is at least incumbent to approach the questions in which we would engage him in the spirit which has become the habit of his mind, and in the hope that neither his zeal nor his usefulness may be checked by the withdrawal of an hour which has shown him how even those things which seemed to be mechanical, indifferent, or contemptible, depend for their perfection upon the sacred principles of faith, truth, and obedience, and for which it has been the occupation of his life to contend."

For Our Children.

The Daisy.

Not worlds on worlds, in phalanx deep,
Need we to prove a God is here;
The daisy, fresh from winter's sleep,
Tells of his hand in lines as clear.

For who but he, who arched the skies,
And poures out day-spring's loving flood,
Who works and dwells in mysteries,
Could bear the daisy's purple head?

Mould its green cup, its wiry stem,
Its fringed border nicely spin,
And cut the gold-embossed gem
That sets in silver gleams within?

And ling it, unrestrained and free,
O'er hill, and dale, and desert sod,
That man, where'er he walks, may see
In every step the stamp of God?

Forgive Much.

"Very well," said the head of the firm, looking over the top of his glasses at the erect figure of the boy in front of his desk. "References all satisfactory. Will engage you from tomorrow morning as office boy. Be round early and keep up to time."

He made a motion with his hand towards the door, but the boy lingered, twirling his well-worn cap in his hand.

"Please sir," he said at length, "I've a dog, a real clever little chap. Mother's out washing all day, and I don't know where to leave him. He follows me round everywhere, and if I should turn him out he might get lost. Would you mind, sir, if he sat in the entry while I was inside?"

It was a novel request for the new office boy to make, and the head of the firm frowned, but fortunately for the boy he was fond of dogs.

"Have you got the animal with you?" he inquired.

"Yes sir," was the eager answer, "right outside, sir."

He followed the boy out through the front office where three clerks were sitting writing busily.

The dog, a small Scotch terrier, was lying on the pavement, his bright eyes fixed on the door, patiently waiting for his master to come.

"He's not bad, not bad at all," said the head of the firm, surveying him critically. "You wouldn't want to sell him, now?"

"Please, sir," said the boy, flushing, "I'd a deal rather have Mop than the money he'd bring."

"Well, well," said the old gentleman, somewhat touched at the boy's evident devotion to his little favorite, "keep the dog and bring him every morning if he gives no trouble."

And so the matter was settled. How proud and happy Mop and his master felt as they ran home through the streets of the city that afternoon, to think that they had obtained the coveted position.

"I wonder, Mop," said the boy, what "Jim Elder will say when he hears about it. I guess he wanted the position most as bad as we did." And Mop wagged his tail as if to say he was glad they had been the successful candidates.

Suddenly the tall, ungainly figure of the subject of their thoughts loomed up before them with a dark scowl on his face.

"I say you, Nat Meadows," he commenced. "So I hear you've sneaked into that place. You knew I wanted it, and it was mighty mean—that's all I have to say. Everywhere, in school and out of it, you are always getting in my way."

He spoke with a mixture of despair and passion that was pitiful to see.

"I can't help your having got the place," said Nat, gently, "but I'm sorry you had one too, Jim."

"Oh, it's all very well for you to say that," said the boy. "Get out of my way," and he gave the too inquisitive Mop a kick with his foot, and was off the next instant down a side street. Mop pursued him, barking furiously, but Nat called him back, and they went home quite soberly together.

The next morning Nat commenced his work, and very soon had become a great favorite with the clerks, as well as with the head of the firm. He was always conscientious, prompt and obliging, and full of a certain bright humor that brought freshness and life into the quiet office. Mop instead of being a trouble, was a great amusement, and the young men taught him a number of tricks, of which he was very proud. Sometimes they noticed a shade of anxiety and trouble on Nat's bright face, but they did not know that on the boy's way home at night he was often subject to petty persecutions that he had found it hard to bear. One morning he burst into the office with flashing eyes and the tears running down his face. The clerks looked up in consternation.

"What is the matter?" one of them asked anxiously.

"Jim Elder's killed my dog," cried Nat, passionately. "I could stand anything he did to me—but my dog." He stopped—it seemed as if he could not go on.

"What a shame—how did he do it?" asked his sympathizing and indignant listeners.

"Threw a stone at him, and it hit him in the head," said Nat in a smothered tone. When I took him up he was quite dead."

"Where is the wretched boy?" they asked, with righteous indignation.

"He cut and run while I was seeing to Mop," said Nat, dejectedly. "Oh, there is no use talking any more about it."

The boy went around for the next few days, looking as if he had lost a near and dear friend, and they all felt profoundly sorry for him. On his way home in the evening Nat looked in vain for the destroyer of his dog, intending to make summary vengeance on him, but nowhere did he see him.

"I guess he knows enough to keep out of my way," he thought gloomily. "Oh, Mop, Mop, how I miss you!"

"Not long afterwards a messenger boy came into the office with a note directed to Master Nat Meadows, from one of the nurses in B——Hospital.

"There is a boy in my ward," the note ran, "very ill with a kind of low fever. He says he has done you an injury, and cannot rest until he sees you. Will you come to him?"

"It must be Jim Elder," thought Nat, "and I don't want to go."

All his life Nat had been taught by his honest, hard-working mother to listen to the voice of conscience, and do always what was right, yet it was hard to put down anger, and the sense of injury and injustice done to himself and to his companion Mop. But the next afternoon he walked slowly up to the hospital, and with a hesitating hand pulled the iron door bell. In one of the upper wards he was met by the nurse who had written to him, and was taken to the end of the room where Jim Elder lay tossing to and fro.

As soon as the sick boy saw Nat he sat up in bed, strong with fever, and held out his hand, "Nat," he said, "I want to hear you say that you forgive me. I've been awful jealous, and mean as could be to you, and then I killed Mop; I am sorry. Every night it seemed as if you came and stood beside my bed, and I can't get any sleep."

The boy sank back on the pillow exhausted, with his bright eyes fixed on Nat, who was not looking at Jim, but at a spot in the carpet; and a tumult was struggling within him. The one who had done him more injury than any one else in his life lay before him. He was afraid he could not say from his heart that he fully forgave him for wantonly killing his little favorite. No, the words choked him. At length he raised his eyes. The victory was half won, and only half. "I am sorry you're sick Jim," he said drawing a long breath.

"Say you forgive me," whispered the sick boy, but still Nat was silent.

Over the bed hung the colored text, at which Nat looked vaguely for a minute without taking in its meaning. "Forgive and ye shall be forgiven," he repeated to himself. Suddenly his face flushed and he grasped his cap with a convulsive movement. The words which seemed written all over the the wall in letters of light entered his heart. Could he ever pray, "Forgive us our trespasses," unless he freely forgive his prostrate enemy? Ah no, never. How bitter and hard he had been, and a great wave of contrition swept over him. The battle was won at last, but not in his marshalled strength. "Jim," he said, "I do forgive you, for Mop, for everything," and, breaking down with a sob, he left the room. Every visitor day after that saw a bright-eyed boy sitting beside the now convalescent Jim, talking, reading to him and filling the little corner with sunshine. When the sick boy was able to leave the hospital he found a place open to him. He did not know that Nat had gone to one of the clerks in his office, and that it was through his intercession with the head of the firm that the place had been secured. But he guessed that Nat was the mainspring of his good fortune, and it touched him to the quick.

Nat forgave much, and found great joy in doing it; peace of conscience, a chance to help another back to health and useful labor, and bound to his side by ties of gratitude and love a life-long friend.—Jean Sutherland Reese.

Can Dead Men Talk?

"Can Dead Men Talk?" was the subject of a sermon delivered by O. R. L. Crozier, of Ann Arbor, in the Scribner street church. He said that good citizens hold opposite opinions on this important question, but in his opinion the Old Testament seems to answer the question in the negative and the New Testament to show a better way than talking while dead. He quoted at length from the Old Testament to show that all along it was uniformly held that death was the end of life, and that men after death showed none of the phenomena of living beings. The record shows no exception and gives no instance of dead men talking. According to Job, kings, counselors, princes and infants and the pre-natal dead, the wicked, the small, the great, all sleep together when dead, as still and quiet as if they had never been living. Job's funeral chapter says that man at death is cut down as a flower, does not know the condition of the living, yet will be remembered and live again. Solomon wrote that the dead know not anything. The dust returns to the earth as it was, and the spirit to God who gave it, and the spirit no more alive and intelligent than the dust.

"Such are the facts of ancient necrology," he said. "They accord with natural laws and lay a firm foundation for a plan of redemption. Believing those facts, no one can worship or pray to the dead, and this clears the way for Christian civilization. The New Testament finds the dead in the grave. They can come out only by the resurrection, asleep and silent till then; immediately after the new song to the Lamb.

"Early Hebrew literature was in harmony with the Hebrew Scriptures, but when the Hebrews mingled with their heathen neighbors, their literature took on a heathen cast."

"Dr. George Campbell, a learned Scotch divine, says:

"Before the captivity, and the Macedonian and Roman conquests, the Jews observed the most profound silence upon the state of the deceased as to their happiness or misery. They spoke of it simply as a place of silence, darkness and inactivity. But after the Hebrews mingled with the Greeks and Romans, they insensibly slided into their use of terms and adopted some of their ideas on such subjects as those on which their oracles were silent. Hence the abodes of Elysium and Tartarus became familiar among the Jews, and as the Greeks and the Romans had their gardens and fields of delight in Hades and their Tartarus in the same region; so the Jews assimilated to them and had their garden of Eden, or paradise, and their Tartarus all within the boundaries of Hades. So Abraham's bosom, or paradise, was the abode of happy separated spirits and Tartarus was the abode of the wicked."

The Bible record, in both the Old Testament and in the New Testament how men die, and their condition while dead, seems to be as plain as language can make it—that dead men do not talk; that they are 'asleep,' 'silent,' and 'their thoughts perished'—and that no voice, message, or impression does and can come from them; hence such supposed communications must be accounted for in some other way, or remain a mystery. The vocal organs pertain to the physical organism: when they are paralyzed by death the man cannot talk. The spirit separated from the body, has no organs of speech, and therefore cannot talk. The New Testament as well as the Old, puts it beyond reasonable doubt that death is what it seems to be and what the dictionaries define it to be—a 'cessation of physical life;' a 'dissolution;' a 'returning to the ground;' 'dust thou art, and unto dust thou shalt return.' Hence the resurrection is the door to future life. That has been the unvarying faith and hope of the church in all the ages passed. No other way has been or can be discovered. That is the way God has provided in the gift of his Son, and by his death, and resurrection and second coming. We need to be exceeding careful not to cloud that bright, sure and glorious hope. We do that at our peril. It is better every way to trust the Lord; to put implicit confidence in his Word; that accords with the wisest wisdom, the securest safety, the highest prudence.

It is an inspiring assurance that there is One who is more interested in the successful outcome of human life than it is possible for us to be. He has more at stake than we can have. Yet our salvation and eternal reward are involved and included in his triumph. The whole scheme of the New Testament is built—not on what men are dead—but on what they may be and will be, raised from the dead. Hence the infinite value of this mortal life—so brief, so frail, so imperfect, yet preliminary and preparatory to that life eternal so measureless in its wealth of every worthy possession and opportunity."—Grand Rapids Herald.

Conversation warms the mind, enlivens the imagination, and is continually starting fresh game that is immediately pursued and taken, and which would never have occured in the duller intercourse of epistolary correspondence.

Opportunities for great usefulness, like thousand-dollar notes, seldom come to ordinary mortals, but little kindnesses and benefactions are wanted daily, and like small change, are very necessary to carry on the business of life and happiness.

No man, however confident he may be in himself, can certainly tell, if reasoning solely from himself, what may be the effect of future and unknown temptations upon him. Hence, Paul's advice is always in order: "Wherefore let him that thinketh he standeth, take heed lest he fall." 2 Cor. x. 12.

"Henceforth We Should not Serve Sin."

Henceforth—from when, since the "old man" with his sin has been buried. And how could we serve him any more unless we allow him to come out from the buried state; how foolish and unwise to allow an evil thing to gain the mastery over us after having it once secure, even buried out of sight. Sin may be all around us, we may even have to walk through it, by it, but we need not court its company or allow ourselves to become servants to it. How quickly the devoted, prayerful spirit leaves us, when we leave the restful presence of God for the service of sin; and sin or evil comes not always in giant form that we cannot help beholding, but its shadow slowly, slyly creeps along, the slanderer's tongue is listened to, and some one spoils for us the sweet peace of mouths, by repeating some expression from another and you have unguardedly replied, served sin, and the bitterness of both lingers in your thoughts, drives out the sweet spirit of Christ and leaves the alter of your heart "profaned and bare." We did not keep the "old man" buried and hidden, and the new man Christ Jesus enthroned there; the result is unhappy days, restless nights, tear-dimmed eyes, an aching heart, and throbbing brain, a miserable life, when perhaps one-half hour with God would have made all right, and sweet peace like a white winged dove would be the abiding presence. "Let not sin therefore reign in your mortal bodies."

Dear Restitution:

Brother J. P. Weethee was stricken with paralysis of the right side a few days ago. This, his many friends, familiar with his excellent writings, will be sorry to learn. Up to the date of the stroke, he had been in apparent good health for one of his years—87 the 6th of August,—and had been quite active, speaking twice on Decoration Day, and twice on the Fourth of July, once afterwards to a Sunday School Convention and again at a memorial Service. His friends from all the little towns around him were intending to make him a birth-day visit on the 5th of August, but of course they cannot come,—they can only send him kind words and flowers, and needful help. He, wishes very much to be remembered by letters from all the dear brethren and sisters who have been so kind to him during the past few years. Write to him at Jacksonville, Ohio. A few kind words from your pens will be to him in these hours of suffering better than gold.

When we put off doing the kind, Christ-like thing, it is only to bring life-long regret to our souls.

Editor Restitution:

I am pleased to report that the Church of God, at Niagara Falls, N. Y. have enjoyed every evening a two weeks course of lectures on the Scriptures.

Brother A. H. Zilmer, of Plymouth, Ind., lectured here July 16th to 28th, on God's plan and purpose in creating the earth and the object of the creation of man. Sunday July 23rd he spoke three times for the benefit of the brethren from Fonthill, Ontario, Can., who had come some fourteen miles and were obliged to return early. A good attendance and attentive audiences. He has certainly sown some seed which in God's own appointed time may bring forth fruit. A few are convinced of the truth as presented and in time will no doubt obey the Lord's command.

The brethren and sisters are all greatly benefited. On Sunday 16th, we had with us, from Toronto, Ont., Bro. Dr. Wallace Mason, who presided at the table and gave us a few words of cheer and comfort.

Brother Zilmer lectured on the following subjects which were listened to with a great deal of attention. The Scriptures, The Gospel If Ye be Risen with Christ, Birth of the Spirit, Moral and Physical Qualifications for an Entrance into the Kingdom, What we must do to be Saved, Thief On the Cross, Fathers' House, closing by giving a review or reason of his hope. The subjects were all made so plain a child could understand.

Brother Zilmer left on Saturday for Oshawa, Canada, where he was to speak on Sunday.

We live in hopes of soon hearing him again, as he has given us much food for reflection, and to the thoughtful ones much to think of and ponder over in the study of the Word.

Yours, in the Master's service.

The Temple Offerings.

"The last shall be first, and the first last."

The rich man took from the purple fold
Of his robe a piece of shining gold,

Cast in the gift, a treasure rare,
And then passed on with lordly air,

As he thought of merit justly one,
By his noble deed, so nobly done.

The widow followed, with lowly mien—
A respectful space was placed between—

Cast in two mites, and her thought seemed bold,
When she wished their worth as the shining gold.

The rich man rolled in his state away,
Drawn by his chargers sleek and gray,

The widow her lonely pathway trod,
And her heart was filled with the thought of God,

Of the loving kindness that gave for all
She had ever prized, and her gift seemed small.

Long years have passed, and this rich man's name
Were lost, were it not for the widow's fame.

His dust without love, so cold and dead,
Had sunk in the waves of time as lead.

Her humble gift was a seed with wings,
And rich the harvest that from it springs.

Her wish that the laser coin were gold,
Has been fulfilled a thousand fold.

So the promise comes we know not how,
And the widow's mites are millions now.

The rich man's deed is but seen afar,
The shadow that follows the widow's star.

Which adown the ages still shall shine,
To show the wisdom and grace divine,

Of him who reckons each deed apart,
Not by worth of metal, but warmth of heart.

PINE WOODS BIBLE CLASS.

Teacher. The Blessed Hope is a charming theme, and I believe we have all been blessed in hearing the recital of conversations and studies between Mr. Williams, and Miss Gordon, on the above topic, which will be continued today.

Mr. Williams. Good morning, Miss Gordon, I am glad to meet you again. I have lately returned from a visit to the great City of Chicago, and while there I have been led to think deeply on matters relating to the Blessed Hope. I attended a few sessions of the Willard Hall noon meeting. The first meeting I attended was led by a graduate from a theological institution located at Evanston, which is situated about twelve miles north of Chicago. This speaker spoke of the preachers of the popular churches as

"A LOT OF SKY PILOTS."

How strange, thought I! I knew the business of an ocean pilot, was to guide vessels past dangerous points, and to land his charge safely in the harbor to which the ship was bound. This being so, it must be the business, of sky pilots, to guide safely those in their charge, to some desired spot in the skies. I could not for the life of me call to memory anything said about "sky pilots," in the Bible, nor could I see the necessity for sky guides, because I had learned from the Bible by your kind help, that, "The righteous shall inherit THE LAND, and dwell therein FOREVER." Psa. xxxvii. 29, 34; ix. 11, 22; Matt. v. 5. Nor could I remember any Bible promise of an inheritance in the sky. All I have ever seen, has been in religious stories and hymn books, neither of which, I regard as authority.

I call to mind some hymns I used to hear sung at church prayer meetings, at Rainesville; one of which may relate to the work of "sky pilots:"

"A charge to keep I have,
A God to glorify,
A never dying soul to save,
And fit it for the skies."

Now, Miss Gordon, tell me what you really think about saving and fitting never dying souls for the sky? Is this the work of the guides, styled as above "sky pilots?"

Miss Gordon. It seems to be the work they have taken upon themselves to perform. That is, in the first place to save never-dying souls from death; second, to fit them for sky habitations. They are certainly visionary pilots, having neither compass or guide. I am certain that our guide called the Bible, never in one instance mentions that air port, as the objective point toward which voyagers upon the sea of life should steer their craft. It certainly exists only in the dreamy fancy of air castle builders, and their innocent dupes who trust them as their guides. Jesus would call such guides, "blind leaders of the blind." Not only is the above air port a dreamy delusion, but likewise also is the never dying souls they seek to fit for the above airy home. The Bible is as silent as the grave about never dying or immortal souls, the faintest allusion to the existence of such a creature of a distorted imagination, does not exist between the covers of the sacred Book.

Mr. Williams. I want to ask you, Miss Gordon, if Jesus said anything about NOT going to heaven?

Miss Gordon. He certainly did. In John iii. 13, we find these words: "And NO MAN hath ASCENDED UP TO HEAVEN, but he that came down from heaven." It surely must be conceded that Jesus is in a position to be correctly informed upon this matter. Yet in spite of these plain words, sky pilot preachers invariably seek to comfort mourners, by telling them that their loved ones have gone to heaven. That is not doing as Jesus would do.

Mr. Williams. Did he say anything to his chosen followers who labored with him during his ministry on earth about this matter? Did he hold out any hope that they could go where he was going?

Miss Gordon. He held out no such expectation. He said: "Little children, yet a little while I am with you. Ye shall seek me; and as I said unto the Jews, WHITHER I GO YE CANNOT COME; so now I SAY TO YOU." John xiii. 32.

Now, if these sky pilots would do as Jesus would do, they would never preach contrary to his express Word, and seek to guide people to a place where Jesus said, "YE CANNOT COME; SO NOW I SAY TO YOU."

Mr. Williams. Are there other Scriptures which speak of the righteous dead as not being in heaven?

Miss Gordon. Yes, indeed. Here is one. See Acts ii. 34, "For David is NOT ASCENDED INTO THE HEAVENS."

Mr. Williams. How marvelously plain these Scriptures are. It seems to me that these sky pilots must be very ignorant, or a very perverse lot of fellows to contradict Jesus. That is not doing as Jesus would do.

The next meeting at Willard Hall which I attended was presided over by another sky pilot, named Strubel. He read from the Scriptures, and commented upon the account of the Sadducees' question propounded to Jesus, about the woman having seven deceased husbands, and the accompanying question as to whose wife will she be in the resurrection?

He seemed to admire the reply of Jesus charging them with ignorance both as to the Scriptures, and God's power; which was doubtless true. But Mr. Strubel was equally in the dark with regard to the Scripture Jesus used on that occasion to prove a resurrection from the dead, to those critics who vainly thought to puzzle him with a supposed smart question, which reads as follows: "AS touching the DEAD that they RISE: have ye not read in the book of Moses, how in the bush God spake unto him, saying, I am the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob? He is not the God of the dead, but the God of the living; ye therefore do greatly err."

I would like to ask Miss Gordon, in what way does the above Scripture show that the dead rise?

Miss Gordon. The force seems to lie in the words "dead," and "living." Those three worthies were really dead, (not dead and alive at the same time) and if God is to be their God, they must rise again. Everything is centered upon living again. Paul in 1 Cor. xv. 16-19 harmonizes with this. He says: "For if the dead rise not, then is not Christ raised: and if Christ be not raised, your faith is vain; ye are yet in your sins. Then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are PERISHED." Paul was not a sky pilot preacher like Mr. Strubel; if he was, he would not stake all future life on a resurrection from the dead. Paul says it is all up with those who have died in Christ, if the dead rise not, their hope and faith is all vain, they are "PERISHED." Mr. Strubel also says, I am told, that what he calls the soul or spirit is the real man, and at death is alive, happy and immortal, living in the sky mansions, where sky pilots point them to as their eternal home. One thing Mr. Strubel, when he preaches such vain fables, should remember that the Bible knows nothing about immortal souls, there is not a single place between the two covers of God's sacred Book where the phrase can be found; he is simply preaching a false hope, and by doing this he will do more harm than he did when he professed infidelity.

The above delusion is taught in song books and in that manner it is propagated and accepted by many as true, without even an investigation. The following verse is a sample of hymn book religion.

"When I can read my title clear
To mansions in the skies,
I'll bid farewell to every fear,
And wipe my weeping eyes."

Neither Mr. Strubel, or any other sky pilot can find a clear title to sky mansions for immortal souls in God's Holy Book. If he thinks he can, I would like to call his attention to the following reward for proof:

LOST! $500.00 REWARD!

I am in agreement with four other men in Ventura County, California, who, associated together, have decided to offer the above reward in order to find "the faith once delivered to the Saints," that has been LOST in the CHURCHES OF HEATHEN TRADITION. To any one finding any of the following words or phrases in their Bibles—whether in English, Greek or Hebrew—if they will send us the name of the book—in either Old or New Testament—stating chapter and verse—we will pay the above-named reward.

(Signed) GEO. W. KETCHUM.

Mr. Williams. At the next meeting Mr. Strubel commented on the parable of the rich man and Lazarus. He ignored the opinion of our most thorough Biblical scholars saying that it is nothing more than a parable, or an allegory, to teach a lesson, and treated it as a literal historical fact.

Now, Miss Gordon, what do you think about the matter?

Miss Gordon. Let us look at it in that light, and see where it leads us to.

Now, what brought the rich man to the torturing flame? You told me that Mr. Strubel admitted that the rich man was a member of the Jewish Church, because he called Abraham "father," and Abraham called him "son," so a lack of religious profession was not the cause. Refer to the Bible and the only cause named, is: He wore "fine linen" and "purple," and "fared sumptuously every day," no other reason is given than that he wore good clothes, and had lots of good things to eat; and Lazarus was carried into Abraham's bosom, simply because he was a "beggar" "full of sores," and received "evil things." The above are the only causes given for reward or misery. Mr. Strubel made out that it was the immortal souls of these parties that was blessed and cursed. That is an assumption, the words soul or spirit are not mentioned in this Scripture. Neither is eternity of suffering taught in the parable. Fire is named as the cause of suffering, but other Scripture shows what the fire will do for them. See Mal. iv. 1-3: "Behold, the day cometh that shall burn as an oven, and all the proud; (like the rich man) yea, and ALL THAT DO WICKEDLY shall be stubble: and the day that cometh shall BURN THEM UP, saith the Lord of hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch."

Obadiah xvi.: "They shall be as though they HAD NOT BEEN."

Psa. xxxvii. 20: "But the wicked shall PERISH, and the enemies of the Lord shall be as the fat of lambs, they shall CONSUME; into SMOKE shall they CONSUME AWAY," and that puts an eternal end to all suffering.

Sky pilots, like Mr. Strubel, say the supposed immortal soul is immaterial, and has neither height, weight, breadth, or compass, and cannot occupy space, and does not possess either body or parts; but in the Scripture before us, Lazarus had fingers, and the rich man a tongue. But it is somewhat of a puzzle to know how literal water, (especially so small a quantity) could cool off an immaterial tongue. There could be no suffering in an immaterial nonentity which is destitute of nerves.

We are told that this immaterial soul can cleave the sky like an eagle loosed from its cage. Yet we read in this Scripture (which Mr. Strubel says is to be used as literal): "And beside all this between us and you there is a great gulf fixed: so that they who would pass from hence to you cannot; neither can they pass to us, that would come from thence." I can conceive of a material substance bound by the laws of gravitation not being able to pass a "great gulf," but what is to hinder this supposed immaterial spirit passing the "gulf"? Is that which is not material subject to laws of gravitation? Mr. Strubel ought to explain this to us.

Use this Scripture as a parable, which it doubtless is, and we can see harmony and common sense in the lesson taught. We must remember that in parables the thing that is said is not the thing meant. When Jesus said "tares," he mean "the children of the devil;" when he said "field," he meant "the world;" when he said "reapers," he meant "angels." Hab. ii. 11, represents the stone and timbers in a wall conversing. Isa. xiv. represents the descent of the king of Babylon into sheol, where the trees talk and jeer about it. In Isa. iv. 12. we have mountains and hills singing, and trees clapping their hands. You can all see that the thing said, is not meant. So is the case with the parable of the rich man and Lazarus.

Text. We have doubtless been all interested in what we have heard today. I had hoped to hear of Mr. Williams becoming obedient to the faith, but with the progress he is making lustily, it cannot be long delayed.

W. H. WILSON.

Life and Death.

Of all words none are so pregnant with solemnity, interesting, meaning as these little monosyllables, "life and death." Few words are of more common occurence in the Bible, and certainly none sustain a more significant relation to the human race. They are the Scriptural terms which express the respective future destinies of the righteous and the wicked, the term life designating the reward that awaits the faithful in Christ, and its correlative, death, the desert of every sinful and unpardoned creature.

Has it ever been suggested to you that the meaning which is put upon these words as used in the Bible, is altogether different from the meaning attached to them in common converse? "Life" in the theology of the churches means eternal happiness, and "death" means eternal misery. Such is not however their meaning from a Bible standpoint. I would urge our readers to be very jealous for the integrity of the Word of God, we ought to be suspicious of that scheme of theology which is obliged to vindicate itself by tampering with the terms of revealed truth, I trust all will be. Here is a plain and most important declaration. "He that hath the Son hath life, and he that not the Son hath not life." 1 John v. 12. I would ask why these words should not be literally accepted? How important that we should come to the Bible and believe its literal testimony without spiritualizing or mystifying its language. From a Bible standpoint this is what I believe and why.

Jesus said: "Search the Scriptures for in them ye think yo have eternal life, and they are they which testify of me." "And ye will not come to me that ye might have life." John v. 39-40.

What must I do to be saved? Jesus said, "Search the Scriptures."

What do I find? I must believe what Christ preached concerning the gospel of the kingdom. And he said unto them, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature, he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, but he that believeth not shall be damned." Mark xvi. 15-16.

Is it true that all men will obtain that eternal life which is in Christ, when Jesus says: "He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life, and he that believeth not the Son shall not see life, but the wrath of God abideth on him?" John iii. 36.

Is it true that those who live in the flesh and follow the ways of sin, that they in common with God's people shall gain eternal life, when the Word solemnly declares that "he that soweth to the flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption?" Gal. vi. 8. Will he reap a crown afterwards?

Is it true that the Apostle Paul expected all men to gain immortality, and the kingdom of God, when he says, "But I keep under my body and bring it into subjection, lest that by any means when I have preached to others I myself should be a castaway?" 1 Cor. ix. 27.

If the teachings of Christ and the apostles mean anything, their meaning is apparent when we read that, "He that soweth to the flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption, but he that soweth to the spirit shall of the spirit reap life everlasting." The portion of the wicked is to reap corruption, to be destroyed, to die; this is their future punishment. The portion of the righteous is to have an eternal life in a glorified state, which is the gift of God through the Lord Jesus Christ, the resurrection and life. "This is the record that God hath given us eternal life, and this life is in his Son. He that hath the Son, hath life, and he that hath not the Son, hath not life." And now, kind reader, I leave the case as we find it in the Word of God.

There is one Mediator between God and man, the Man, Christ Jesus.

There is one way to the Father, and that is by the way of the cross.

There is one name which is above every name, the name of Jesus.

There is one way of coming into that great and saving name, by being immersed into it. When Peter was preaching at the house of Cornelius, the believers were commanded to be baptized. Acts x. 48. In like manner the command was given to Paul, "Arise and be baptized, and wash away thy sins." Acts xxii. 16.

Much more might be said but this is enough to prove that baptism is one of the great commands of the gospel, "and what shall the end be of them that obey not the gospel?" Turn to 1 Peter iv. 17–18. "For the time is come that judgment must begin at the house of God, and if it first begin at us, what shall the end be of them that obey not the gospel of God, and if the righteous scarcely be saved where shall the ungodly and the sinner appear?" 1 Peter iv. 17-18.

We that have been baptized should follow all the works of obedience pertaining to the new career that we have begun. "Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life and enter in through the gates into the city."

May we be numbered with the redeemed at the resurrection morn, is my prayer.

EUGENE HARNEY.

At Rest.

Died, July 28, 1899, in Chicago, Ill. W. D. St. Clair, of Hammond, La., of collapse of the nervous system. Service by Brother D. M. Hudler.

Many of the readers of our paper will doubtless remember him as one of the former publishers of "The Herald of the Kingdom," before its change to its present name, "THE RESTITUTION."

He was laid to rest in the family lot at Roselill, on Sunday, July 30, by the side of loved children, who passed away before him.

The word "rest," suggests a train of thought. How sweet to the weary is the word "rest." This closing age is peculiarly one of unrest, it is impressed upon every phase of life. The body politic of all nations is a tumultuous sea of unrest, in every department of its life, in matters of state, of finance, of commerce, and in social affairs. The people are in a feverish state of unrest, the toiler has no rest, not because he is overburdened with work, but because he has unrest of mind on account of its lack.

The combined wisdom of the world cannot speak peace to the troubled sea.

"Men stand breathless in their dread,
And baffled in their skill—
But one there is, who rose and said
To the wild sea, 'Be still!'
Thou that didst bow the billows pride,
Thy mandate to fulfil,—
Oh! speak to passions raging tide,
Speak, and say, 'Peace, be still!'"

While amidst the sorrows, trials, and vexations of this weary life, there is no rest half so sweet as that found in Jesus, this rest lights up the altar fires even while the cloud of adversity overcasts our sky, obscuring the sunbeams beyond. The rest in Jesus is a soothing balm to the wounded heart. This rest enters within the sick chamber, and enables the sufferer to endure while in pain.

By faith the rest in Jesus enters the gloomy realm of the dead. The bow of hope more glorious than the beauteous rainbow arches the vale of tears between the city of the dead and the Evergreen Shore.

"Toil brings repose; with noontide fervors hunting,
When droop thy temples o'er thy breast.
Cheer up, cheer up, gray twilight cool and fleeting,
Wafts on its wing the hour of rest."

There is rest in Jesus while in toil and sorrow so restful and sweet is the repose found in Jesus. It is he, the man of Galilee, alone, that can bespeak a sweet calm in the troubled heart, that sweetly rests in Jesus. The saint of God behind prison bars, even there finds a luxurious rest.

How restful, even to the living is the sleep in Jesus.

"Gently, gently fall sweet sleep
O'er thine eyelids soft and deep;
Gently as the breath of flowers
In the bright noon's honeyed hours,
Gently on the dawn of heaven,
On the wild rose of the even."

Have we been with Jesus in close companionship? Have we locked arms with him in holy embrace even as the disciple whom Jesus loved leaned upon his breast? Then we can impart this sweet and restful life to voyagers upon the troubled sea. We can grow into that restful life to the extent of changing the carnal to that of a holy rest, and a serene calm.

The one just laid to rest was of a sympathetic turn of mind. Distress of others quickly struck a sympathetic chord in his heart, and he became lavish with his money to relieve it. He loved childhood, he would stop by the way to speak kindly to a child, and give it something. He lost all his own children which was a sad blight in his life. In his delirium during his last sickness he was as in his life, surrounded with children, and talked and played with them as in life. In his mind he also saw friends and relatives before his vision.

"Come, Jesus, come, return again
With brightest beams thy servants bless.
Who long to hail thy perfect reign,
And share thy kingdom's happiness."

W. H. WILSON.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

We are home again. We found all well, and propects for corn, apples and grape crops is very good, for which we are thankful to our heavenly Father. We have just returned from our reunion in Miami Co., Ind. which we held at Bro. Henry Foores, near Macy. But oh, the missing links, the absent ones, who sleep within the tomb, but when the great reunion takes place we hope to meet them.

The reunion just held will be long remembered, but at last will be forgotten, but the last one spoken of will be one never to be forgotten, the one in Heb. xii. 22. "But ye are come unto Mount Zion, and unto the city of the living God, the New Jerusalem, and to an innumerable company of angels, to the general assembly and church of the first born, which are written in heaven, and to God the Judge of all, and to the spirits of just men made perfect." My prayer is that we may meet when the kingdom cannot be shaken or removed. Let us have grace, whereby we may serve God acceptably with reverence and fear.

I held several meetings in the Christian church at Macy, with a good attendance and left them with a good interest. From what I learned while there, some of our former brothers and sisters joined the Christian Church for a home, they think this better than no home at all. I think that is all wrong. Before I would join any of the sects I would be out in the cold by myself, with no one but God. We have a number of good brothers and sisters yet at Macy and in the vicinity, and I know of no better location to do evangelistic work. We think if some good preacher like Bro. J. F. Wagoner would take a tent and stay for four or five weeks, that much could be done. All they need is to learn the truth more perfectly. The trouble is, we are a little selfish, we want all the preaching done at home, if we pay out one dollar we want to hear the man ourselves. While in Indiana it was not my privilege to meet with but a few of the brethren, among whom was Brother Wagoner, also his family. We had a season of rejoicing with them, and we would have loved to meet with many more, but could not. I hope to meet you all in the kingdom of God.

Editor Restitution:

We landed here July 27th, and have been seeing the sights for four days. We took the street car for Manitou and the Iron and Soda Springs which is six or seven miles from here. We passed through Colorado City, thence past the Garden of the Gods, thence to Manitou, there we walked up to the Iron Springs, and the starting point of the Cog R. R., up to the top of Pikes Peak. We saw the car start for the Peak. It costs five dollars to go the round trip. The scenery is grand to behold. The fine costly buildings and pretty shade trees, sparkling soda water, and a man to wait on you and hand the water out, and a throng of people coming and going all the time. As we go from here it is up grade all the way, makes it wonderful to behold. Where art and nature join hands it is a sight worth seeing. Colorado Springs has a population of about 20,000 souls, while Colorado City and Manitou will swell the number to about 40,000. The altitude at Colorado Springs is about 6,000 feet, and is free from malaria and cyclones. The nights are very cool, which calls for a couple of good blankets. We expect to strike tent and go on in a day or so. We are 678 miles west of Kansas City by R. R. We are thinking of going to Denver, which is about 75 miles north of this place. All well.

Iowa State Conference.

The Twelfth Annual Conference of the Church of God in Iowa, will convene at Waterloo, Aug. 10 to 20 inclusive. Waterloo is situated at a junction of the Illinois Central, Burlington, Cedar Rapids and Northern, and the Chicago and Great Western Railways, and is of easy access from all parts of the State. Directions as to street car lines, baggage, etc, are given else where in this paper

Dear brethren, we expect a better attendance this year than ever before. Rains have been frequent and abundant, and you have a bountiful harvest. You have been blessed financially and we want you to be blessed abundantly by coming to our annual gathering. The Lord wants you there, for his cause may suffer without you.

Our evangelists have worked faithfully and sacrificed much and they will be on the ground, and indeed they will feel discouraged if you are not there to greet them, and encourage them in their work. We missed some who were not there last year. And O, what a blessed meeting we enjoyed with those who came. Do you rejoice in the things of the kingdom? Are you glad that our Savior is soon coming to set up his kingdom? Do you believe it is near? Then you surely are willing to make some sacrifice of time and money. It is your duty to do so. God has committed to you the Word of Reconciliation.

You say, "We are so scattered." Yes, and this is a very strong reason why you should attend this meeting. There are some who are always at our annual meetings. We expect them there and they do not disappoint us. But some of you have not been with us for two, three years, and some have never attended. We want to see you; we need your presence and help, and this year is a good time to come.

Now, brethren, what if everything at home does not get just the same care as when you are there. If you will devote a few days and a few dollars God will bless you more abundantly than ever. We expect this meeting to be a feast of fat things, and you cannot afford to stay away. Begin at once to prepare for the meeting.

Yours expecting to see you at Waterloo Conference, Aug. 10-20.

A. J. Eychaner, Pres.
O. J. Allard, Sec.

Read this carefully: Those coming to the State Conference (Aug. 10-20) over the Illinois Central and the Chicago and Great Western Railroads will check their baggage to, and get off the cars at East Waterloo. Those coming over the Burlington, Cedar Rapids and Northern Railroad check baggage to and get off at Waterloo, as the company has no depot on the east side. Near all the depots take the Independence Avenue street car going east to the campground. Leave all checked baggage at the depots, and come direct to the campground. We will arrange to transfer your baggage at reduced rates. Heretofore there has sometimes been difficulty in getting baggage that arrives after 6 o'clock, especially Saturday night and for this reason take the early trains. Bring a trunk well filled with everything to make tenting pleasant and that you think you may need. Among which we suggest the following items: sufficient bedding to make you comfortable (remembering that the nights are sometimes cold in a tent) a pillow, extra wraps, towels, soap, wash basin, plate, knife, fork, spoon, cup, a hammock if you have one, and whatever else your good judgment may suggest. If you have a tent bring it and thus help us along in this matter—we want to have tent room for all who come. Let the young people and children come. Board will be furnished at the boarding tent at 10 cents per meal or 25 cents per day. Come with the spirit of Christ and let us have the best Conference we have ever attended. There will be a splendid programme each day—song service, prayer and social meetings, Bible readings, topic talks, essays and preaching. On Sundays there will be Sunday school, so do not forget to bring the children with you.

A. J. Eychaner, Chairman.

If may not be ours to utter convincing arguments, but it may be ours to live holy lives. It may not be ours to be subtle, and learned, and logical, but it may be ours to be noble, and sweet and pure.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Important Notices.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "The Restitution, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money so thrown in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "The Restitution."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended to.

This will be mailed to you for 25 cts. Send orders at once, and get the position of the places named that you can better understand how the various complication will affect the nations of the world. Poetry.

Truth.

Be true in everything you do.
Be true in all you say:
Seek simply truth; add naught thereto,
And, too, take naught away.

Seek not to hide the truth from sight:
'Tis easy to deceive.
Yet one untruth, however slight,
A ghost will weave.

Pretericatio is a sin
That thrives in every heart.
Unless we strive the day to win
And makes the foe depart.

May we be true as in God's sight,
Honest in everything:
True ever to our sense of right,
True to our God and King!

Judges Chapter 20.

1. And all the sons of Israel went out, and the synagogue met in church assembly to a man from Dan to Beersabee and to the land of Galaad with the Lord in Masseepha;

2. And all the tribes of Israel in church assembly stood before the face of the Lord in an assembly of the laity of God, four hundred thousand men on foot men who draw the sword;

3. And the sons of Benjamin heard that the sons of Israel had gone up to Masseepha; and when the sons of Israel had come, they said, Say, Where did this wickedness occur?

4. And the Levite, the husband of the woman who was murdered answered and said, I and my concubine went into Gabaa of Beniamin to pass the night.

5. And the men of Gabaa arose against me and surrounded the house against me in the night and purposed to murder me and they did humble my concubine and murdered her.

6. And I laid hold of my concubine and cut her up into portions and sent them into every boundary of the sons of Israel's inheritance because they had done this seething thing and abomination in Israel.

7. Lo, all ye sons of Israel may ye have given to yourselves word and counsel here.

8. And all the laity arose to a man saying, We will not depart a single man to his habitation nor return a single man to his house;

9. And now this is the thing which shall be done to Gabaa; we will go up against it in allotment.

10. Moreover we will take ten men to the hundred in all the tribes of Israel and a hundred to the thousand, and a thousand to the ten thousand to take provision and to provide for their going into Gabaa of Beniamin that they may do it according to all the abomination which it hath done in Israel.

11. And all the men of Israel were gathered together into the city to a man.

12. And the tribes of Israel sent men unto all the tribe of Beniamin, saying, What is this wickedness that hath occurred in your midst?

13. And surrender the men, sons of evilers of law that are in Gabaa, and we will put them to death, and cleanse away wickedness from Israel; and the sons of Beniamin were not satisfied to hearken to the voice of their brethren the sons of Israel.

15. And the sons of Beniamin made a review that day from their cities of twenty-three thousand men who drew a sword besides those who dwelt in Gabaa who mustered seven hundred chosen men.

16. From all the laity who used both the right and left hand alike; all these slingers with stones to a hair and who did not miss.

17. And the men of Israel outside of Beniamin mustered four hundred thousand men who drew the sword; all these men of warfare.

18. And they arose and went up to Baitheel and inquired in God, and the sons of Israel said, Who shall go up for us in authority to array us for battle against the sons of Beniamin? And the Lord said, Joudas in authority shall go up leading.

19. And the sons of Israel arose at dawn and encamped against Gabaa.

20. And the men of Israel went out in battle-array sons of Beniamen, and joined issue with them at Gabaa.

21. And the sons of Beniamin came out from Gabaa and destroyed that day in Israel twenty two thousand men on that ground.

22. And the men of Israel strengthened their forces and again joined battle in the place where they had joined issue on the first day.

23. And the sons of Israel went up and lamented in the sight of the Lord until evening, and inquired in the Lord, saying, Shall we again draw nigh to join issue in battle with sons of Beniamin our brethren? And the Lord said, Go up against them.

24. And the sons of Israel went against the sons of Beniamin the second day.

25. And the sons of Beniamin went out to meet them from Gabaa on the second day, and they destroyed of the sons of Israel eighteen thousand more men on that ground; all these were men who drew the sword.

26. And all the sons of Israel went up and all the laity went to Baitheel and lamented and sat down in the sight of the Lord, and fasted that day till evening, and offered the whole burnt-offering-services and perfecting-services in the sight of the Lord.

27. Because the ark of the covenant of the Lord God was there in those days.

28. And Phinees, son of Eleazar, son of Aaroon, stood before it in those days. And the sons of Israel inquired in the Lord saying, We shall not go up again in battle-array against the sons of Beniamin, our brethren, shall we? (Answer emphatieno). And the Lord said, Go up. Tomorrow I shall give them up into your hands.

29. And the sons of Israel set an ambush around Gabaa.

30. And the sons of Israel went up against the sons of Beniamin the third day and joined issue against Gabaa as twice before.

31. And the sons of Beniamin came out to meet the laity and they emptied out the city and began to smite wounded of the laity on the highways as once and twice before—one of which high-ways was an ascent to Baitheel and the other to Gabaa, to the number of about thirty men in Israel.

32. And the sons of Beniamin said, They are falling before us as at the first; and the sons of Israel said, Let us flee and empty them out of the city into the highways, and they did in this wise.

33. And every man arose from out his place, and they joined issue in Baal Thamar; and the ambush of Israel arose out of their place from Maraagabe;

34. And there came to confront Gabaa ten thousand chosen men of all Israel and an imposing array, and they (the sons of Beniamin) were not aware that the calamity was approaching them.

35. And the Lord smote Beniamin that day one hundred and thirty thousand men; all these drew the sword.

36. And the sons of Beniamin saw that they were smitten; and the men of Israel gave way to Beniamin, because they hoped in the ambush they had set at Gabaa.

37. And when they had retired and the ambush had moved, and they had extended out unto Gabaa and the ambush had poured out, they smote the city also with the mouth of the sword.

38. And their raising a concerted-signal of smoke from the city was a sign for the sons of Israel in relation to the fighting of the ambush.

39. And the sons of Israel saw that the ambush had already taken the city and they took their stand in battle array; and Beniamin began to smite wounded among the men of Israel, thirty men or so, because said they, they are falling before us in the first contest.

40. And the concerted-signal arose more manifestly over the city like a pillar of smoke; and Beniamin looked behind him, and lo, the destruction of the city arose to the heavens.

41. And the men of Israel turned against them, and the men of Beniamin hasted, because they saw their wickedness had met them.

42. And they looked sons of Israel in the face in the way to the desert and they fled and the army met them and those from the city destroyed them in their midst.

43. And they cut Beniamin down and pursued him from Nous on foot as far as the east of Gabaa.

44. And there fell of Beniamin eighteen thousand men; all these men of might.

45. And the rest took a look and fled into the wilderness unto the Rock of Hremmoon, and the sons of Israel gleaned of them five thousand men, and the sons of Israel went down after them as far as Gelan and they smote of them two thousand men.

46. And it came to pass that there fell in all from Beniamin twenty-five thousand men who drew the sword that day, all these men of might.

47. And the rest took a look and fled into the wilderness unto the Rock of Hremmoon, six hundred men namely, and they stayed in Rock Hremmoon four months.

48. And the sons of Israel returned against sons of Beniamin and smote them with the mouth of the sword from the city Mathhaeven unto domestic animal and unto every one found in all the cities found they burned with fire.

COMMENT.

Among other things of interest in this twentieth chapter besides its historical import is a definite example here portrayed of judicial-procedure under the theocracy which still obtained in Israel. The Lord God of Israel is still recognized as the Lord of hosts as well as the Judge of their supreme court at Masseepha where the issue is tried and the verdict rendered in this case of blood for blood or life for life. Then comes the formal demand on Beniamin for the surrender to execution of the verdict of the condemned culprits, their refusal and a formal declaration of war under a supple mental decision of the court in answer to the inquiry "Shall we go up against our brethren the sons of Beniamin and if so who shall lead us." The oracular response comes, "Go up, and Joudas shall lead you," or in the language of the text "Joudas in authority." This is one of the few places besides 1 verse and 1st chap. John's gospel 1st and 2nd verses where this old louie idiom occurs in the Bible, and it is very poor scholarship that cannot see that it cannot be rendered "In the beginning." The balance of the chapter is taken up with the recital of the three great battles fought, the discomfiture of Joudas in the first two, the great slaughter and discouragement of Israel and the final oracular assurance of victory in response to their third inquiry, then the almost utter annihilation of the tribe of Beniamin. What a judgment and requital of blood! And what a reminder of our fratricidal strife of thirty-five years ago to assert the justice and integrity of another union and another theocracy here in the west. Where were flimsy "compromises" and evasions of right and even one boasted "constitution" when the fiat of the Omnipotent went forth to this later Israel?

DRAWBACKS AND HINDRANCES.

"That they all may be one.....that the world may believe that thou hast sent me."

"THE HOPE OF THE GOSPEL."

In previous article No. 18 it was mentioned that Dr. Thomas acknowledged his indebtedness to an article entitled, "The Hope of the Gospel," for bringing him to a decision as to the gospel of the kingdom and its obedience. The article is contained in "The Christian Messenger and Reformer," organ of the "Reformation" in Nottingham, England. I give the entire article and introductory note as follows:—

"My dear Brother, I beg to offer you an article for the 'Christian Messenger,' condensed in few words, so as to occupy little space. I have endeavored as temperately as possible, so as not to offend people's prejudices; but, perhaps, it is rather difficult to succeed in the matter. The subject appears to me of the utmost importance, because, if we do not know clearly and explicitly for what we are looking, we have no motive for perseverance. And in a crisis like the present, when men are forming combinations [illegible] those great events of which we shall so soon be the actual witnesses, it is not unfit, in some small measure, to protest against the all prevailing infatuation. I remain, my dear Brother, yours, in the hope of a kingdom that cannot be moved. * * *

The time has now come, in which a faithful testimony must be lifted up for those things which God has freely given to us, and especially for the hope of eternal life which God, who cannot lie, promised before the world began. We behold the ashes of the kingdom of antichrist giving birth to every unclean and hateful bird; and we continually see on every hand a practical illustration of the prevailing idea, 'The Lord hath forsaken the earth, and seeth us not.' Can Babylon bring forth anything except confusion? Will not the children partake of the qualities of the parent? Do not all the sects seek to elevate a throne of judgment, thereby arrogating to themselves the office of the Lord Messiah? Do not all see a religious ministry fully resolved, at all hazards, and in defiance of all conviction to 'support those schemes which support them?' Do we not find formal professions and mere lip services, everywhere assuming the place of vital godliness? Do we not find that those who pretend to the greatest sanctity and originality, are at the same time those who drink the most deeply into the spirit of the world, which is covetousness? Do we not find the most strenuous advocates of seventh-day observances playing the hypocrite on every day and all days? But those who sow to the wind shall reap the whirlwind; and those who sow to the flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption. The light which must soon enlighten the Gentile church, is the hope of the second coming of our Lord, and no worship or ordinance can be considered acceptable, unless this great event be held up in the very front of every Christian assembly. And in the same proportion as this hope be quickened, will be the advances made in knowledge, in faith, and in purity. If on the other hand, this hope be lost sight of, or kept in the back ground as a mere secondary object, no advances can possibly be made in any good or perfect gift, but a speedy and certain retrogression will be the attendant consequence. It was not till this hope was extinguished that the apostolic churches languished into the arms of the powers of this world, becoming, in that same hour the prey of a vicious and tyrannical priesthood."

"If the hope of the coming of the Son of Man in the clouds of heaven had been preserved untainted and inviolate, no establishment of 'clergy,' as a separate order would have been brought into existence; if the hope of the Lord's coming into his kingdom, to 'strike through kings in the day of his wrath,' had been continued, no 'reverend' wolf would have dared to act as the spoliator of Christ's flock; no pampered prelacy would have been permitted to change the truth of God into a lie, and to render themselves the curse of the whole earth!

It became the interest of hirelings (officiating in sacred things) to envelope these great facts in darkness; to enshroud the hope of a future state in doubt and mysticism; to proclaim themselves as the medium by which wisdom and knowledge were to be perpetuated. Lo, we are the people, and unto us must you come for the bread of life!

When the Lord appears he comes to destroy death and also him that hath the power of death; he comes to judge the world in righteousness; he comes to substitute his own glory, his own justice, and his own love, in place of the partial and rotten governments which are now existing. When this hope became extinguished, the Christian church was constituted an engine of political power on the one hand, and of personal emolument on the other; the spirit of despotism commenced on the one hand, and the spirit of superstition on the other; and grant has been the trafficin horses, chariots, and slaves, and in the souls of men. Rev. xviii.

One of the steps made by the assumers of divine right, was to substitute the belief in a purgatorial state of the human soul, (an indescribable condition of probation), which no mortal can possibly realize or comprehend. We are not taught by the Scriptures to expect any condition of future happiness, except in the redemption of the soul (or the vital principle) from the power of the grave.

The Almighty Father of creation breathed into man's nostrils the breath of life, and he became a living soul. This shows that a man's soul is in his breath; when, therefore, this breath is withdrawn, the spirits are held by the Lord Jesus Christ until the great day; or in other words, the Lord Jesus Christ retains the power in himself to reproduce, or to re-animate the fallen dust, and out of flesh and blood and breath to bring incorruption and immortality. We are not to look for heaven in any other way than by the medium of a heavenly kingdom; for we do not find in the whole account of the Jewish economy, or in the Prophets, any mention whatever of a condition of abstract spiritual existence; and we have as much reason to assert the spirit's individual consciousness 'prior' to the production of the body, as we have to assert it after the dissolution of the body.

Even in the patriarchal days, when life and immortality were not brought to light, rational ideas were entertained on this subject, and the memorable declaration of Job will here serve as an apt quotation. [Here is quoted in full Job xix. 23 27].

The following passages of Scripture will declare this matter more explicitly than a further multiplying of words: [Then follow 3½ pages of apposite passages from the Scriptures, accompanied with an occasional brief remark].

An overwhelming mass of evidence might be produced from the same sources, in behalf of the positions now advanced; but these few quotations may serve for the purpose of illustrating, and if diligently examined, will turn the mind of the sincere inquirer from the fables which antiquity has heaped upon us.

The Word of God will ever remain a sealed book (as it now is) unless these principles of interpretation be applied to it, and then indeed we shall behold wondrous things out of these sacred records. We shall see in the law given to Moses the shadows of good things, not fulfilled, but yet to come. We shall see in the prophetic Word the manifestation of Messiah's kingdom (not in the day of his humiliation) but in the day of his coming glory.

Without the proclamation of the ancient hope there cannot be any proclamation of the ancient gospel, or these glad tidings declared? Behold I bring you glad tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day, a Savior which is Christ the Lord. Luke ii. 10. He shall be great and shall be called the Son of the Highest; and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David; and he shall reign over the house of Jacob for ever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end." Luke i. 33.

In this gospel there is no mention of being 'prepared to die,' (or any such prelatical mummery); but on the contrary 'for life,' that 'whether we wake or sleep we shall live together with him.'

Blessed be those servants who are found prepared when the Bridegroom cometh; for, if in apostolic days the end of all things was declared to be at hand, how much greater necessity is there now (in these days of darkness) to be sober and watch unto prayer.

The great signal of the immediate approach of the Son of Man will be found in the gathering together of the Jewish people into a national form, and in the conflict of nations in the day of Armageddon.

And the redeemed of the Lord shall return, and come to Zion with songs of everlasting joy upon their heads, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away."

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Why Do You Not Write?

"Why do you not write? I have been looking anxiously for a letter from you for some time."

These were the words of a dear and honored friend, in a recent missive—the second he had written without receiving a reply. The same evening that an answer was mailed word came that he was seriously ill. It is a sad lesson; I wonder if I shall ever need another?

We forget that our dear ones can get sick and die. We go on putting off things, just as if tomorrow would be the same as today. We shall have more time by and by when the berries are canned and the garden hoed; then we will write. But to-morrow is never the same. The duty neglected in the present hour, if done at all, will never be as well done as if it were done now. And in the meantime events may occur that will make the performance of the little service impossible; we cannot call back the dead.

Write the letters to the dear, shut-in-sufferers today.

France and the Jew.

It is almost impossible that intelligent Christians should fail to see that we are indeed living on the borderland of a new dispensation of things. Striking object-lessons are to be seen on all sides of us. The condition of the Church: the condition of the nations. How wonderfully does France at this hour stand before us as an object-lesson of Jehovah's faithfulness to his Jewish people. "He that toucheth you toucheth the apple of mine eye." On a small scale, we have a combination against him and his anointed people, just as a little later there will be on the larger scale and with the same result.

A proud aristocratic army, full of anti-Semitic hatred, plots to ruin a young officer for no other apparent personal reason than that of his nationality. To do this, all sense of honor and truth is cast to the winds.

For a time, and seemingly for good, they achieve their purpose and are jubilant. Aha! "the fool hath said in his heart—No God!" but God is there. Slowly but surely his hand rectifies things, and judgment is reversed. Today the enemies of Dreyfus are found false accusers and unblushing liars, with the result that today the leaders in the anti-Semitic movement are in their turn overtaken with condign and just degradation and punishment, and Dreyfus is reinstated in his good name and former position, to be followed by greater honor and compensation. It is old, old story of Haman and Mordecai. Yes, Jehovah loveth his people.

They have been stiff-necked, rebellious, and foolishly ignorant of his ways. They crucified his Son in their madness, but his covenant remains unbroken, and he is faithful. A little while the last bit of discipline in the person of the "wilful king" shall be over, and then in the destruction of all Israel's national enemies and the exaltation of that nation to the summit of earthly greatness under Jesus their Christ, they shall abhor themselves like Daniel and Job, and their last end shall be for glory and beauty and greatness beyond all that ever they possessed as a great nation in the old days, and beyond all present conception of greatness and honor. Truly, not only the Church but devout men of Israel may well cry, "Come, Lord Jesus, come quickly."—Morning Star, London.

Good doing among men does not consist so much in great deeds, occasionly done and to most men impracticable, as it does in comparatively small deeds, often repeated and practicable to all men. It is the little things seasonably done that make up the bulk of an eminently useful life.

THERE being five Wednesdays in this month, and as we only issue our papers a month, our next issue may be delayed a few days.

IT would please us very much and aid us in paying for our paper, and other bills, if the friends who have promised to pay their subscriptions would consider this a good time to redeem their pledges. We need it very much indeed.

"Faith is the foundation of salvation; hope is the rising edifice; charity the topstone and completeness.

"Yethat make mention of the Lord keep not silence, and give him no rest till he establish, and till he make Jerusalem a praise in the earth."

A CARD from Sister Wince informs us that Brother J. P. Weethee who was partially paralyzed as stated in last week's paper, died on Aug. 8. Hope Sister Wince will give us a full obituary notice by next week.

A HURRICANE in the West Indies last week wrecked the town of Ponnce, in Porto Rico, killing 200 people and doing damage to the extent of half a million dollars. Upwards of 3 hundred persons were killed at other places in the track of the storm, which lasted several hours.

"The severest test of manhood is never found in good times, but in bad times. It is the man who keeps up his courage and struggles on when every body else is wavering or going down who is the real hero. It is easy to make good time when both wind and tide are in one's favor, or when one is moving with the current; but it requires character, and skill, and darling to make headway in spite of opposing forces or to work successfully against the current."

THE following dispatch from Berlin is taken from the Chicago Tribune of Aug. 11, and will be of interest to the watcher of events.

The Dortmund and North Sea Canal a waterway planned 200 years ago by the Great Elector, will be formally opened tomorrow. The work was begun in 1892, and the total cost up to date has been $20,000,000. Its length is 271 kilometers, the depth two and a half meters, and it has a capacity sufficient to float vessels of nine hundred tons.

The canal connects the Westphalian coal and iron district with Emden, using the river Ems for a distance of 120 kilometers. The city of Dortmund has spent $2,000,000 for a harbor of 200 acres in size, with an equal area reserved for extensions. This will be the greatest inland harbor to be found in Europe.

THE Dreyfus case still absorbs the attention of the French nation, and comes in for a large part of the consideration of the civilized world. On Saturday when General Mercier, who is the principal accuser of Dreyfus ended his speech, a scene was enacted that is likely to have some bearing on the result. A daily paper commenting on it says:

At last Captain Dreyfus has satisfied the longing of the French public for a dramatic sensation, and, judging by Saturday's demonstrations in the court room, his chances for acquittal are infinitely increased thereby. Incidentally, one's opinion of the French style of conducting a court martial is perceptibly lowered. When Dreyfus ended a four hours' siege of listening to General Mercier's ruthless denunciation of himself by springing to his feet and shouting "You have lied, scoundrel!" he gave way to a natural impulse, as did also the audience when it burst into a wild cheer for the prisoner. But when the court left this demonstration so completely unrebuked that the whole scene was repeated a few minutes later, it demonstrated clearly enough that French officers do not know how to conduct a court martial. No doubt the judges were as pleasantly electrified by seeing the worm turn as were the auditors, but an American President of a court martial, in the same circumstances, would have cleared the room before he would have suffered a repetition of such a popular demonstration in favor of one side of a case still in judgment. The love of the theatrical and dramatic is in the French blood, and heretofore it has been a prime factor in perpetuating an injustice. It is to be hoped it will now operate on behalf of justice to Dreyfus. General Mercier was War Minister at the time of Dreyfus' condemnation in 1894, and his false testimony then, coupled with his heartless abuse of Saturday, will merit the hisses and execrations that were hurled at him during the disorderly scene at the court martial; but this does not excuse the court officers for tolerating such an outbreak."

Threats are freely made that Mercier will be killed.

A FEW months ago the Pope of Rome sent out a letter to counteract the effect of what is called 'Americanism," the occasion being a work on the life of a priest named Hecker, a member of the society known as "Paulists. This work had been accepted by the Catholic authorities of this country for some years, but a French translation had been published and "adapted" to the French nation. The American Catholics claim that the French translation is unfair, but it coming to the notice of the Vatican, and the breath of "liberality" being detected in it, a letter was sent out, not exactly putting a "ban" on the book, but setting forth the fact most clearly that usages and doctrines of Rome were to remain as they were—that she is still semper idem—"always the same—she changes not."

The "Society of Christian Brothers" whose head it in Paris, had a man as President of the branches in the United States, and as the society is an educational concern solely, the manner of conducting the schools came under notice of the foreign "masters" and resulted in the Vatican advising the Paris office to remove the American President of the society. This being done without the knowledge of Catholic officials here caused a degree of excitement and indignation, and the end is not yet.

In Belleville, Ill., a Catholic Church of Irish members lost their priest by death, and wanted a young priest who had been his assistant appointed in his place. The bishop, however, thought best to send them a German priest, and a rebellion is on hand. The members seem determined to show Rome that as Americans they must be heard, and propose to force their rulers to recognize the American principle that they "derive their just powers from the consent of the governed." A new thing for the Vatican is this surely. The matter now stands about a thousand members excommunicated and a new church to be built.

We give these items to show you that the great error of our time—the doctrine of "liberality" of "universal brotherhood"—that says "you are all right, no matter what you believe, so long as you are honest," has at last struck the Catholic church as well as all others.

THE Editor of Glad Tidings, after giving the address of Dr. Herzl, the leader of the Zionist movement before an audience in England, remarks as follows:

There is one point in the address to which we draw attention. For many years we have believed that Israel's time of downtreading "seven times," or 2520 years began with Josiah's great passover, 628 years B. C., 2d Kings xxii. and xxiii. 2 Chron. xxiv. 8 to end, xxxv. 1-19. The first half of the seven times ended in 667 A. D., when Jerusalem was taken by Caliph Omar, and finally fell under Gentile domination. The Mosque of Omar still remains as a sign of Moslem supremacy.

The second half of the seven times would thus end in 1892, and for several years anterior we were looking to that year as a year likely to see a sign of Israel's uprising. Events justified our expectations. When perusing the address we were startled to find that Dr. Herzl fixes upon the year 1897 as the year when the Jewish nation gave its first signs of return to life.

This is remarkable, coming from the recognized leader of the Zionist movement. What is happening among the Jewish people should surely move every one who is looking for the day of Israel's deliverance and of earth's redemption."

A Noble Purpose.

Brother H. H. makes known a noble purpose when he says, "I do not know much, but what I do know that is worth knowing, I am determined that the world shall know. This should be the aim of all enlightened men. To gather and retain without scattering is a sin, not only against God, but against humanity. The truths I have so near my heart I want to be graven on the hearts of my fellow countrymen. Give me to know this—give me to know even less than this—that I have been instrumental in guiding one poor soul across life's tempestuous sea, and I ask for no inscription on marble tablet, for no honored sepulchre, for no stone to tell where I may lie."

"It is a peaceful, restful feeling creeps over one when it is remembered that the Lord knoweth them that are his: and they will assuredly hear his voice and come forth to life! What are all the honors the world can confer upon men, or all it is possible to receive of one another, compared with the recognition and approval of Him who died for us and intercedes for us, and to whom all judgment has been committed! The humble, faithful child of God can afford to be unrecognized by the world now, in view of the glory to be revealed in him when Christ his life appears.

The beloved brother quoted above is not known by us, and we [illegible] expect to see him in the flesh, but his words testify that he has been with Jesus and learned of him. May we all emulate that same spirit and be found of Jesus in peace, is our fervent prayer.

Passing Events in the Light of Prophecy.

The Editor of Glad Tidings says what every one who is watching the signs of the times in the light of prophecy expected, viz: that the "results of the Peace Conference are very meagre. On matters of comparative unimportance some results were attained, but on large questions, such as the reduction of armaments, the delegates were found to be completely at loggerheads.

Some progress, however, appears to have been made on the question of arbitration, but whether the practical can take the place of the theoretical, should need arise, time alone can show."

The Scotsman says, "Even before the Conference assembled it seemed hopeless to expect that nations could agree to the limitations of their armies and navies, or that any basis for such limitation could be agreed upon. What has taken place both within and without the conference during its sittings, has not made agreement any more probable. Russia is adding to her navy, while other nations have been strengthening their defences without thinking that the matter was in any way subjudice."

The London Spectator writes thus: "The Czar must be content with the glory of having conceived a great philanthropic idea which may one day bear fruit. For the present this main proposal, the one, indeed, on the necessity of which he based his summons to Europe, the reduction of armaments, has been totally defeated. The German delegates refused in the most positive and outspoken way to adhere to it. It is perfectly natural that Germany should be the power to give it outspoken expression. She does not arm for the sake of arming, but under the pressure of a terrible fear. She is a nation of forty million, with an uncertain ally of forty million, is threatened on two sides at once by martial nations, whose population, equally brave with her own, exceeds, when taken together, a hundred and fifty million."

The crisis in South Africa has continued throughout the month of July, the English speaking people being thoroughly aroused and clamoring for energetic action on the part of the British government; and there was great danger that precipitate action would lead to a race war between the English and Dutch throughout the colonies. And although the Transvaal Volksraad has been considering a new franchise scheme it is generally held to be totally inadequate to redress the grievances of the Outlanders. Troops and immense quantities of war material were dispatched to South Africa by Britain, and offers of assistance from Australia and other parts of the empire.

The Daily News says, "We all hope there will be no occasion to consider such offer of troops. But this spontaneous action shows how closely the crisis is being watched in distant parts of the empire. The ability or inability of the British government to secure redress may leave its mark not only on the history of South Africa, but on that of the Empire at large." We see by later dispatches that the tension is not now so great; the Transvaal authorities seem disposed to arrange their differences peaceably.

Captain Dreyfus who was condemned in 1894 to perpetual exile, landed in France on July 1, and was taken to Rennes and there lodged in the military prison. He is now being retried by a court martial. Since his return events have quieted down, but if the government have the courage to punish the military leaders who either deliberately or ignorantly gave such gross injustice to a man who is now generally believed to be innocent of the grave charges brought against him. His treatment in the Devil's Island was shockingly cruel, and shows that in this enlightened nineteenth century, men in high places are capable of as fiendish deeds as were done during the dark ages.

It is said that the French government has obtained authentic information of an Orleanist plot.

An important announcement has been made by the Canadian Premier. Some time ago the Dominion government disallowed the act of the British Columbian Legislature prohibiting the immigration into the province of Japanese and Chinese. In the Dominion House of Commons, Ottawa, the Canadian government was urged not to disallow the measure. The Premier said the question of the Orient is one which may become very acute at any moment, and Britain may be involved in complications which might precipitate her into war. If she is precipitated into war, it will be to her of the greatest importance and advantage to have the support of the Empire of Japan. We owe it to ourselves and to our position as British subjects, that every other subject shall give way before the reason of imperial necessity. If we are to share the glory and participate in the advantages of our imperial connection, we must also assume the duties, and be ready for and abide by them."

According to the London Standard reports continue to be received describing great misery and suffering in Asia Minor, but this is only part of the present state of Turkey, politically, economically, socially, and financially.

The Zionist Movement.

There appears in the current North American Review a hopeful and impassioned appeal for the permanent colonization of the Jewish nation in Palestine, written by Prof. Richard Gottheil, of Columbia university. The author, himself a Jew, believes that the Zionist movement is the only hope for the happiness and preservation of his race. Twenty centuries of anti-Semetic persecution have convinced him that this prejudice against his race and religion will never die out until the Jew has a country and a government of his own. Palestine, the ancestral home of the Israelites, has sentimental and religious associations that still draw the scattered exiles to it, and Professor Gottheil believes a common ground has been found on which all the diverse factions of his creed and race can stand.

The approach of the third annual Zionist congress at Basle gives a timely interest to Professor Gottheil's statements. Whatever one may think about the feasibility of this strange modern crusade, its progress in the last three years must be admitted to be remarkable. Before the first congress at Baise in 1897 there were in various parts of the world 117 societies whose aims were more or less Zionistic. At the second Baise conference in 1898 their number had risen to more than 800. In the last three years the American Federation of Zionists has come into existence and now includes 125 societies, besides a number of other Zionist societies not yet affiliated with the federation.

In Palestine itself the movement has attained considerable proportions. The May Laws of Count Ignatieff marked the beginning of the modern Zionistic movement. Instinctively the Jew turned to his old home. Colonization societies were formed in Russia and Roumania. Attempts at colonizing the Jews in Palestine had been made in the '50s by Sir Moses Montefiore, Lord Shaftesbury, Laurence Oliphant, and Dr. Friedman, but the first real colony was founded in 1870 by Charles Netter under the auspices of the Alliance Israelite Universalle of Paris. An agricultural school was started, around which sixteen mother colonists have since grouped themselves, with other settlements attached, which bring the total to twenty-five. They are located around Jerusalem, near Haifa and Jaffa, in Galilee, and even beyond the Jordan. There are now 60,000 Jews in Palestine.

Thus far the colonists have been successful, thanks to the solid interest taken in them by Baron Edmond de Rothschild, who has spared neither expense nor trouble in helping them over the experimental stage. Professor Gottheil does not pretend that they have yet passed that stage, but he says that as soon as they find a market for the wine, cognac, scent, and soap produced there they will be self-supporting. Already good schools and a national Hebrew library have been founded and are well maintained. A part of Baron de Hirsch's great bequest for the colonization of Jews in the Argentine has latterly been turned to the support of the Zionist movement. For the most part, however, the funds by which the cause is being advanced come from the poorer Jews in all parts of the world. The hundreds of societies now back of the project indicate that the experiment will at least go much further before the wave of Zionistic enthusiasm has passed.

Professor Gottheil, Dr. Herzl, Max Nordau, and the other leaders of the movement have abandoned the idea of religious unity as the basis of the new Zion. The ideal is that of a fixed home and a renewed life in common for all Jews. The pressure of anti-Semetism calls for a refuge, and the traditions of Judaism draw toward Palestine. Professor Gottheil tries in his article to show that Zionism deserves support from the Turk, Christian, and Jew alike. The world at large will continue to doubt the economic feasibility of grouping any considerable proportion of the 7,000,000 Jews of the world in the narrow confines of Palestine, but it is an interesting fact that the tendency to try the experiment has reached a stage where it must be regarded as one of the social phenomena of the day.—Chicago Tribune.

Another French Plot Suppressed.

President Loubet's government has shown a commendable amount of nerve and determination in its arrest of Paul Deroulede and other conspirators associated with him. Deroulede is the founder of the large organization known as the League of Patriots, and he has latterly become one of the most pestiferous anti-Semetic agitators and would-be revolutionists in the republic. He will be remembered as the clown who seized Gen. Roget's bridle and tried to lead him to the Elysee, and who was released by a sympathetic court after his imprisonment and trial had advertised him sufficiently for his melodramatic taste. The police are now said to have discovered evidence of a plot to overthrow the government, in which the names of sundry royalist youths and members of the patriotic and anti-Semetic leagues are implicated. Whether it be true or not that these youths were preparing for a fresh attempt at Boulangism, the government has shown its strength by its firm action. The plot was probably a milk-and-water affair similar to the other, but Deroulede still retains enough remnants of his former influence to do more or less harm, and it is just as well to make him and his associates realize that the business of opera bouffe revolutionist is not as safe as might be imagined.—Tribune.

Belated Love.

I have known a husband to neglect his wife in his pursuit of pleasure or business, and when finally she died he wrung his hands over her dead body, called her his angel wife, said his heart was broken and home desolate, and climaxed the whole by having built over the unconscious body the finest marble monument in the graveyard. She asked for love and he gave her a stone. And I thought as I pondered over the whole scene that if some of the loving words he was pouring into the dead ear had been uttered in life, and if some or the dollars he had spent on the coffin had been invested in a way to make life and body easier and less toilworn, she would have been the happy-faced wife and mother of the home circle instead of sleeping alone under the cedars and among the white monuments on the hillside.

Put to the Proof.

Every perpetual motion machine is a perfect success, until it begins to work; and many a character that has never been tested is worth about as much. But when you have stood some trial, when, after the smelting, you have found some gold left in you, and some new reason for trusting God you are hardly the same person as before. You have made, it may be, a year's growth in a week. Such a trial will show you, for one thing, sorrowing disciple, your own honesty of heart. It is of no use to talk of God's mercy to a man who knows in his conscience that he has no sincerity. The greater is God's goodness, the more of a torture; the more like sunlight on diseases and throbbing eyes, will it be to a consciously bad soul. A Christian wants some proof that he is playing no false part, that his character is not a sham. And a sharp trial gives such proof—shows him of what stuff he is made.

The Bible or Nothing.

Those who cannot hear the voice of God speaking in clear and emphatic tones through his own Word must either trust to their own wisdom for guidance or set up some sort of pope and accept his word as the law of righteousness. A church that does not stand on a definite and authoritative revelation of God's will cannot have any authority over men's consciences. If the Bible be set aside as without authority there is no possible authority to which any question of morality or righteousness can be submitted.—N. Y. Sun.

Anything which makes religion its second object, makes religion no object. God will put up with a great many things in the human heart, but there is one thing He will not put up with in it—a second place! He who offers God a second place, offers him no place.

Dear Restitution:

We landed in Denver Aug. 8, and are laying over a day or two in the city. We were laid over one-half day coming by the rain. One peculiar feature about this country is that it rains every afternoon this time of year, and there is sharp thunder and lightning. I think we will soon have a change of weather.

We are in Denver today, and snow is in plain sight on the Continental Divide forty miles away west, but it looks not over ten. We aim to pull on in the morning by way of Cheyenne, Wyoming, and from there we go west till we reach Idaho. We are all well and enjoying the trip only for the rain. Since we struck the mountains we have good cold water to drink, and wife's rheumatism is about gone. The altitude is over 5000 feet, and Denver is a fine city.

Yours in hope.

Poetry.

Bring Flowers!

"Bring flowers, fresh flowers,"
For the bed of pain
Their lovely smile
Bring a ray to me.

For they speak of God,
And of joy to come
In the earth made new,
—Our Eden home.

They bring us tokens
And to each [illegible]
Of our Father's love,
Though it be unseen.

So bring your flowers
To the sick to pain,
For their loving smiles
Make hope again.

And they tell the joy
That you cannot speak,
When [illegible]
And your strength [illegible].

To bring him back
To catch the tune,
That the flowers sing,
In their fairy bloom.

What Jesus Preached.

1. Jesus preached about the kingdom of God, and that men should repent.

"Jesus went about all Galilee, teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom." Matt. iv. 23. Matt. ix. 35. "From that time Jesus began to preach and to say Repent for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." Matt. iv. 17. Now after John was put in prison, Jesus came into Galilee, preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God, and saying, The time is fulfilled and the kingdom of heaven is at hand; repent ye and believe the gospel." Mark i. 14.

2. Jesus was anointed by the Spirit to preach the gospel of the kingdom of God.

"The spirit of the Lord is upon me, because he has anointed me to preach the gospel to the poor." Lu. iv. 18. Isa. lxi. 1. "And he said unto them, I must preach the kingdom of God to other cities also; for therefore am I sent." Lu. iv. 43.

3. He preached about this kingdom in every place where he went.

"And it came to pass afterward that he went through every city and village preaching and showing the glad tidings of the kingdom of God." Lu. i. 8.

"And he received them, and spake unto them of the kingdom of God, and healing those who had need of healing." Lu. ix. 11.

4. In every public discourse which we have record, Jesus preached about the kingdom of God. The sermon on the Mount was to the disciples as recorded by Matthew, as also the one given in the upper room just before his death, as recorded by John; and in both he gives them instructions in practical life. Even his public parables relate to the kingdom of God.

The "Word of the kingdom" is the good seed sown in the heart—[Matt. xiii. 19; Lu. viii. 5, 15] in the parable of the sower. "And this is the Word, which by the Gospel is preached unto you." 1 Pet. i. 22-25.

The parable of the grain of mustard seed relates to the kingdom of heaven, or kingdom of God. Matt. xiii. 31-44. Also the parables of the leaven; the net; the treasure, and the merchant seeking pearls. Matt. xiii. 33-47.

And he said, whereunto shall we compare it? It is like unto a grain of mustard seed. Mk. iv. 30.

5. After his resurrection he still talked about the kingdom of God. He was seen of the disciples forty days, speaking of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God, which, after all this instruction, they understood to be the Kingdom restored to Israel. Acts i. 1-9.

6. The sermons of the apostles relate to the same kingdom.

"And he sent them to preach the kingdom of God and to heal the sick." Lu. ix. 2.

7. Faith in the gospel of the kingdom is necessary to salvation.

"Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, and he that believeth not shall be condemned." Mk. xvi. 15, 16.

"Though we or an angel from heaven preach any other gospel, let him be accursed." Gal. i. 6-9.

"And to you who are troubled rest with us when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven, with his mighty angels, taking vengeance on them that know not God, and obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ." 2 Thes. i. 7, 8.

"But if our Gospel be hid, it is hid to them that are lost." 2 Cor. iv. 2-6

These texts teach us that the gospel is a definite message; and those who do not believe it, will be condemned, and that man or angel perverting it will be accursed, and those who do not obey it, will be punished at the revelation of Jesus Christ, and that it is so simple that it is only hid to them who are lost by wilfully rejecting it.

8. What then is the nature of that kingdom?

"Art thou the King of the Jews?" "To this end was I born, and for this cause came I into the world, that I should bear witness to the truth." John xviii. 33-38.

"JESUS OF NAZARETH THE KING OF THE JEWS." John xix. 19.

"Because that for the hope of Israel I am bound with this chain." Acts xxviii. 20.

"And now I stand and am judged for the hope of the promise of God made unto the fathers." Acts xxvi. 6-9.

"We trusted that it was he that should have redeemed Israel." Luke xxiv. 21.

"And the Lord God will give unto him the throne of his father David: and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever, and of his kingdom there will be no end." Lu. i. 31-33.

"Therefore, being a prophet and knowing that God had sworn with an oath, that of the fruit of his loins according to the flesh he would raise up Christ to sit on his throne." Acts ii. 29-35.

"After this I will return, and build again the tabernacle of David that is fallen down." Acts xv. 14-18.

"At that time shall they call Jerusalem the throne of the Lord." Jer. iii. 17.

"He that scattereth Israel will gather him, and keep him as a shepherd doth his flock." Jer. xxxi. 10.

"I will plant them upon their own land and they shall no more be pulled up out of their land, saith the Lord God." Amos ix. 11-15.

These texts relate to Israel according to the flesh, and not to the church. They bring out, and make clear the following points:—

That Jesus will yet be the King of the Israelitish nation, and sit on David's throne.

For preaching the resurrection and the restoration of the kingdom of Israel Paul was bound with a chain.

That the promises made to the fathers are not yet fulfilled. These promises include the Messiah and his kingdom.

The tabernacle, or kingdom of David to be set up again after our Lord's return.

At that time Jerusalem will be the most important city on earth, for the throne of Jesus will be there.

That the twelve tribes of Israel will be gathered back to Palestine, to never more be pulled up out of their land. See also 1 Chron. xvii; Ps. lxxxix; Ps. cxxxii; Isa. ix; Jer. 30; Deut. xxx.

Hence as Jesus' preaching was in harmony with the promises made to David and Abraham, it was glad tidings of the future kingdom of Israel, which will grow till "the kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord and of his Christ." Rev. xi. 15. The gospel or good news, which we must believe in order to be saved, is about this kingdom, which is to be "under the whole heaven, [Dan. vii. 27,] when Jesus' dominion shall be from sea to sea and from the river unto the ends of the earth." Ps. lxx. 8.

9. The covenant with Abraham also shows us the territory of that future kingdom.

"The Lord appeared unto Abraham and said: unto thy seed will I give this land." Gen. xii. 7.

I will give unto thee, and to thy seed after thee, the land wherein thou art a stranger, all the land of Canaan for an everlasting possession." Gen. xvii. 8.

"Thy seed shall possess the gate of his enemies, and in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed." Gen. xxii. 17.

"The land whereon thou liest, to thee will I give it and to thy seed." Gen. xxviii. 13.

"And he gave him none inheritance in it, no not so much as to set his foot upon. Acts vii. 5.

These all died in faith, not having received the promises, but having seen them afar off * * * Hebrews xi. 8-40.

The promise that he should be heir of the world was not to Abraham or his seed through the law, but through the righteousness of faith . . the father of all that believe. Romans iv. 12-18.

Now to Abraham and his seed were the promises made. He saith not and to seeds, as of many, but as of one; and to thy seed, which is Christ. Gal. iii. 16.

As many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ. . . and if ye be Christ's then are ye Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise. Gal. iii. 27-29.

These Scriptures teach us that God promised Abraham and his seed the land of Canaan for an everlasting possession. Yet that during his lifetime he never received it, but that he and his seed will yet possess not only the land of Canaan but the whole world, and that the seed referred to is Jesus and those who are baptized into him, whether they be Gentiles or be Jews.

Hence to be one Christians we must be baptized into Christ, and this will adopt us as children of Abraham, and makes us heirs of the new earth and kingdom.

The Kingdom the judgment, and the appearing of Christ occur at the same time. 2 Tim. iv. 1; Matt. xxv. 31; 1 Cor. xv. 12-18.

Come!—Go!

There is a remarkable sententiousness in the words of our Jesus Christ. He was able to put a whole system of theology in a word, and state the plan of salvation in a paragraph. In the two words that are found at the head of this article we have given us the whole religious duty of man. Come unto me! Go work in my vineyard! The invitation and the commission are here put in a form that cannot be misunderstood. Without compliance with the first man cannot be equipped for the second. Without a willingness to obey the command to go on a man cannot have the privilege of accepting the invitation to come. When Christ says "Come!" he also means "Go!" and when he commands us to "Go!" he opens to most direct path by which to "Come!" If ye would be my disciples, do whatsoever I command you, and his command is, "Go ye into all the earth and preach my gospel to every creature." Paradox as it may seem to be, the further we go in the path of duty the nearer do we come to Christ in the enjoyment of the privileges of his gospel.

To come to Christ requires renunciation of sin, repentance toward God and a full and complete surrender of man's self to his will. He can receive no divided heart. He will accept no partial service. Ye cannot serve God and mammon. It is not coming to question, but to surrender; not to start inquiries, but to accept salvation. It is to go, not because it promises a good place, but work for Christ; not because there is hope of prominence and worldly preferment, but because there are souls to save and sacrifices to be made. It is needless to say that neither can be done without the other. To "go" into any successful Christian work requires that a man first "come" with all his mind and strength to Jesus Christ. When he comes to Christ he will be sent upon a mission with Christ of salvation to somebody, for the conditions of staying with Christ are all bound up in going to do his will wherever he may send him.—Methodist Protestant.

Editor Restitution:

So far as I know, I am alone in this city of New Orleans in "the faith," concerning the kingdom of God and eternal life through Christ only. I am doing what I can in a quiet way to sow the good seed of the kingdom. I have attended pretty regularly for several months, the Christian Church, as I have some opportunity there to work. At their mid-week evening meeting for prayer and Bible exegisis, the pastor announces the topic a week in advance, and appoints several to speak or to have essays on the subject. In this way I have been called on a number of times, and have responded as best I could, endeavoring to work in as much special truth, such as they do not teach, as I deemed they would bear.

I enclose a paper read on one such evening. If you think it worthy of a place in THE RESTITUTION it is at your disposal.

I might incidentally remark that neither with my papers, nor with such private talks as I have had, have I been able, in all appearance, to interest any one. All seem satisfied with "the Ancient Gospel" as taught by A. C. and his compeers, which we know, while indeed a "Reformation" fell far short of the whole truth. In fact it failed to discover the very foundation truth that man is mortal, and needs salvation, which is the gift of eternal life, to be enjoyed in the kingdom of God, and to be utalized in blessing the families of the earth in joint rulership with Christ their head, over all nations.

SOLOMON T. BLESSING.

THE MORE EXCELLENT WAY.

1 COR. xii. 31.

In the preceding verses Paul had been speaking of the special spiritual gifts that had been bestowed on the apostles, and on those believers on whom the apostles laid their hands. Such became prophets, teachers, and workers of miracles; and the gifts of healing, could speak in different languages, also understand, interpret and translate strange tongues. Paul said all these gifts were worthy of being possessed, and his advice and exhortation was to covet earnestly the best gifts. Yet there was a more excellent way.

In the next chapter Paul proceeds to show that this more excellent way is founded and grounded in Love. It is possible that we might know the Scriptures as that we could call to mind and quote on any subject that might be brought up. We might intellectually know correctly God's plan of salvation, and our minds might give assent to the same, but without we have the love for these truths it would profit us nothing.

Intellectual Christianity is very good, and absolutely necessary, but to be acceptable to Deity it must be accompanied with love. Love for God the Creator, Love for Jesus the Redeemer, and love of fellow mortals for whom Christ died. Practical deeds of charity and mercy are commendable in those who practice them, and good is doubtless accomplished in those who are the recipients, but to meet the full approval of our heavenly Father, must proceed from a heart filled with love—love to God and love to our fellows.

There is such a thing as giving and doing to gain the applause and praise of our fellow man. Much of the charity that is bestowed is simply an advertising scheme. A certain sum is donated to some benevolent institution, and the trumpet is sounded in the way of news paper puffs, and they have their reward. Such deeds of charity will have no weight when cast into the scales in the great day of accounts.

There are others who do good for the sake of the good that they are striving to accomplish. They are sincere and honest in their purpose; even sacrifice much of their own personal comfort and wealth for the sake of benefiting others, both temporally and as they think spiritually. They are very zealous in doing those good works, visiting the sick and those in prison; preaching in the slums, and reclaiming the fallen, and lending a helping hand wherever and whenever an opportunity presents. But alas, many, very many are trusting in their good works to thereby merit salvation.

Now, the works in themselves are good and commendable, and no doubt approved of God, as such; but will not merit nor give personal salvation. God offers salvation on belief and obedience to certain cardinal facts and doctrines, as communicated in his word of truth. Paul said to Timothy "From a child thou hast known the Holy Scriptures, which are able to make thee wise unto salvation through faith which is in Christ Jesus. 2 Tim. iii. 15. Jesus said "Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free. John viii. 32.

Now we may be just as zealous for the law, and for the word of God, as were the Pharisees, and yet by "our traditions" make void the word of God, as Jesus said they did. Matt. xv. 1-9.

I will call attention to one particular tradition or doctrine that is almost universally believed by heathen, Mohammedan, Jew, Catholic and by Protestant; which doctrine sets at naught and makes void God's often repeated and distinctly declared purpose concerning the earth, and the Adamic race which he created to inhabit it. Jehovah said to Moses, "But as truly as I live, all the earth shall be filled with the glory of the Lord." Num. xiv. 21.

God's oath-confirmed promise to Abraham was "In thee and in thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed." Gen. xii. 3; xxii. 16-18; Gal. iii. 8, 16.

Again the Lord said to Abraham "Lift up now thine eyes, and look from the place where thou art northward, and southward, and eastward, and westward; for the land which thou seest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed forever. Arise, and walk through the land, in the length of it, and in the breadth of it, for I will give it unto thee." Gen. xiii. 14-17. Abraham believed the promises of God, and his faith was accounted to him for righteousness. Gen. xv. 6; Gal. iii. 6.

Stephen, commenting on these promises said God gave him none inheritance in it, no, not so much as to set his foot on; yet He promised that he would give it to him for a possession. Acts vii. 5. So then Abraham must yet receive it when he shall rise from the dead.

In Psa. xxxvii. is the oft-repeated declaration in substance, "The righteous shall inherit the land, and dwell therein forever."

Jesus said "Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth." Mat. v. 5. He also promised the Apostles that they should sit on twelve thrones and rule over the twelve tribes of Israel. Mat. xix. 28.

The angel's word to Mary was that Jesus should be great, and should be called the Son of the Highest, and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David, and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever, and of his kingdom there shall be no end. Lu. i. 32, 33.

The Father's house is now being prepared, which house ye are, said Paul, Heb. iii. 6, so that when Jesus comes again, Acts i. 11, he will receive all his faithful ones to himself, that where he is, there they may be also. John xiv. 3. And when he comes he will certainly be on earth; for it is stated that his feet shall stand that day on the Mount of Olives which is before Jerusalem on the east. Zech. xiv. 4.

There is no intimation in the Bible that Jesus will ever leave the earth again when he shall have come the second time. It is distinctly stated that he is heir to the throne of David, which was on earth, and that he will rule over the house of Jacob forever. The Father says "Ask of me and I will give thee the heathen (nations) for thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thine possession." Psa. i. 8. Such as rebel at his authority shall be dashed in pieces like a potter's vessel.

The saints are joint heirs with the Christ, Rom. viii. 17, and they are to people are to be a portion of that body called or taken out of every nation, tongue and tribe, to reign with him in his kingdom, to judge the nations—we are certainly a narrow people, and have to be qualified for the position. If we are to constitute the third class spoken of in Matt. xxv. 34-40, which the King calls his brethren, we are while in the mortal state a little flock, under special obligations as to knowledge and moral conduct. On the other hand, the right hand nations, the accepted who are to receive a welcome into the kingdom, will to my mind enjoy a glory in the resurrection inferior to the saints. 1 Cor. xv. 11, 12.

I am seeking to obtain the highest degree of glory. Which degree are you striving for? It would not be beneficial to the cause of Christ or to the church for me to advance my own opinions, or relate what I as an individual believe, it would only evoke controversy and criticism by Bible students, neither do I wish to impose my private belief upon others, or presume to be any better posted, but one very important thing I have learned That thing is the more I study the Bible the more I see the unfathomable depth of his word, and how far his ways are past finding out. I strive to obey the command to grow in grace and the knowledge of the Lord That of course implies that I did not know as much about God's plan of salvation when I first became Abraham's seed and an heir of the promise as I do now. Yet it is necessary to understand the rudiments of the gospel before we are entitled to the seal of the covenant we make with the Lord, which is to walk in a new life until the sign is swallowed up in reality at death and the resurrection.

I have pondered over the orders and glories of the resurrection, the talent given by the nobleman, the reward for the gift of a cup of water in his name, and many other like phrases, and wondered why I never see them examined by writers in THE RESTITUTION. The paper is the only gospel preacher I hear regularly. Four sermons by Bro. J. S. Hatch a few weeks ago are the only oral sermons for 18 years, though there are two churches within two miles of my house.

Looking for the soon appearing of the King and kingdom, I submit this in love.

C. P. GRAHAM.

Editor Restitution:

Our hearts have been again made glad. The same gospel of the kingdom as proclaimed by Jesus and the apostles near nineteen hundred years ago, is still able to save them that believe it. A brother and sister having heard, believed, and then wished to obey said gospel which made it necessary we should go to the water. We therefore went to the shore of Lake Erie, where the brother and sister were buried with Christ in baptism, and raised to walk in newness of life.

It was a fine evening, and the Lake, with its broad expanse was beautiful. We would be pleased if we could more often have such occasions.

The following Sunday they were added to the Church of God meeting in Hall 1231½ Euclid Ave. Cleveland, Ohio.

Yours in the One Hope.

GEORGE ELTON.

If you want knowledge, you must toil for it; if food, you must toil for it; and if pleasure, you must toil for it. Toil is the law. Pleasure comes through toil, and not by self-indulgence and indolence. When one gets to love work, his life is a happy one. —Ruskin.

Low Fare to Philadelphia.

The thirty-third National Encampment and Reunion of the Grand Army of the Republic will be held at Philadelphia Sep. 4-9 inclusive. For this event special excursion tickets will be sold to Philadelphia via the Pennsylvania Lines Sep. 1, 2, 3, and 4.

Three forms of tickets will be on sale at special reduced fares, which will be as cheap over the Pennsylvania Route as any other line.

One cent per mile, except where the one way rate is $11.00 or less, will be the rate from ticket stations west of Pittsburgh. Tickets sold at this low fare will be good for continuous journey in both directions.

Tickets via Baltimore and Washington will be sold at the lowest one-way rate, and will be good for stop over at Baltimore and the National Capital, and also valid for an additional stop over in each direction east of Pittsburgh.

Tickets over diverse routes (going over one direct route and returning another) will be sold at the single fare rate plus $2.00 These tickets will also be good for stop over at Baltimore and Washington, in addition to one stop over in each direction east of Pittsburgh.

The return limit on all excursion tickets by these lines will be Sep. 12, which may be extended to Sep. 30 inclusive by depositing tickets with the joint Agent at Philadelphia.

All Pennsylvania lines lead to Philadelphia, and principal points on this system have daily through sleeping-car and coach service to the Quaker City, enabling passengers to go without changing cars. The route is via Pittsburgh and Harrisburg and by the most interesting portions of Pennsylvania.

Philadelphia is reached by daylight by all trains over the Pennsylvania route from points west of Pittsburgh. This gives visitors an opportunity to select quarters and get located before night.

The Pennsylvania station at Philadelphia is located in the heart of the city, opposite the great City Hall and to the hotel, boarding house and business portions.

For information about rates, time of trains and other advantages offered by these lines apply to local passenger and ticket agents, or address F. VanDusen, Chief Assistant General Passenger Agent, Pittsburgh, Pa.

For Our Children.

NOW.

Love me now! Love such a little minute.
Day crowds on day with swift and noiseless tread.
Life's weird voices are fairly we begin it.
Pain jostles joy, and hope gives place to dread.
Love me now!
It will be too late when we are dead!

Love me now! While we still are young to-gether,
While gold and brave the autumn days are
Hand locked in hand, as blissful wedded weather,
Sighing woe, sin and sadness of husband.
Love me now!
It will be too late when you are dead!

Love me now! Shadows hover in Oneliness
Cold winds are coming; green leaves must
Frost-nest clods, icy bars, a thin sod-coverlet
Even the moment may be dust be-dead!
Love me now
It will be too late when I am dead!

Holding the Light.

A dear little boy of five years, who lived in an old-fashioned Spartan mother, was brave ordinarily, but was afraid to be left alone in the dark. To cure him of his fear his mother decided to send him to bed alone, and to have the light taken away, which had usually been left until the little fellow was asleep.

This was a sore trial to the boy, and possibly to the mother, but most of all to the boy's sister, a girl about ten years of age. She could not forget her own times of trembling and of terror, of looking under the bed, and hiding her head under the blanket. Her heart ached for the little fellow undergoing such heroic treatment, and she used to steal softly upstairs, with her bed-room candle and stand outside her brother's door.

"Are you there sister?"

"Yes, Willie."

"Can I have the light?"

"No, Willie; mother says no."

"Do bring it."

"No but I'll let it stay right here."

"Will it shine in?"

"Yes, all across the floor; dont you see it? You must go to sleep or mother will take it away."

Then a pause, and soon the sleepy voice asking, "are you there, sister?"

"Yes, Willie."

"Will you surely stay?"

"Surely."

"Till I'm all, every bit asleep? You won't let the light go out till I'm gone?"

"No, Willie."

"Nor leave me alone?"

"No, brother, never."

And all this in the briefest whisper possible; and if the mother heard, she did not heed, for the children were not forbidden to comfort each other in their own fashion, until by-and-by the boy outgrew his fear.

Years passed and lovely boyhood and brilliant youth were left behind. Willie had outgrown his sister in size, and strength, and knowledge, but not in goodness or faith. Life parted them early—their lives went separate ways. Her love and her letters and her prayers followed him, but evil temptations crept closer to him than these, and little by little he became the victim of drink. It did not conquer all the good in him at once, but at intervals he yielded, and slowly and surely went. Then it was that she failed him. She had been so proud of his talents, of his power to win all the world could offer, and now he made her so pitifully ashamed. When he repented she found it hard to relent. She hated the sin so bitterly that she almost included the sinner. She hardened under the shame of it, and lost faith in his efforts and promises, and while she did not give him up, she made him feel ashamed to come with his bemoanings to her, when she knew that before the next temptation his resolves would go down like dead leaves in the wind. And so the distance widened, and she suffered much, and he went down and down. At last his health broke, and life drew near its close. Then she found him and drew near to him, nearer and nearer till the day he died. Lying with his hand in hers, he looked up at her as a child might do to his mother and said faintly.

"Do you remember, sister?"

"Remember what, Willie?"

"The light! the light! How I was afraid, and you used to stand by the door and hold the light?"

"Yes, yes, I remember, it was so long ago!" and she turned her face away to hide the tears.

"Never mind, sister, it's all right now. I feel like a child again, and I'm not afraid."

"Not afraid of the dark. No, you know who goes with us, Willie, when we come to the dark"—she could not go on

"The dark valley," he finished for her. "Yes, I know. I see, sister, and you hold the light, but—but"—

"But what, brother?"

"But you didn't keep on holding it always; you left me so many times in the dark. I would have been good sister, if you had held it—every time,—but," suddenly seeming to realize that he was troubling her, he drew her face down as she bent over him, and whispered: "But now I'll be still. I am tired—you will stay till I go to sleep?"

"Yes Willie yes; I will never leave you again."

"You—and—you will hold the light—so?"

"As long as you need it dear."

"No, no, not for me—not for me, but for the other—the other" and the old smile lit up his face—"the other little boys in the dark!"

There was no answer in words. He would not have heard it if there had been, for with his clasping for the boys in the dark his life went out and he was asleep.

Such lessons need not be repeated to any heart on which such bitter scourging has fallen once. But the boys in the dark are many, and many the sisters and mothers and wives that ought to be "holding the light."

A Word to the Boys.

You are made to be kind, boys, generous, magnanimous.

If there is a boy in school who has a club foot, dont let him know you ever saw it.

If there is a poor boy with ragged clothes, dont talk about rags in his hearing.

If there is a lame boy assign him some part of the game that doesn't require running.

If there is a hungry one give him part of your dinner.

If there is a dull one help him learn his lesson.

If there is a bright one be not envious of him; for if on e boy is proud of his talents, and another is envious of them, there are two great wrongs, and no more talent than before.

If a larger or stronger boy has injured you, and is sorry for it, forgive him. All the school will show by their countenances how much better it is than to have a great fuss.—Horace Mann.

THE GOSPEL OF THE KINGDOM, same size, double column, cloth bound, sold formerly at 10 cents a dozen.

EARLY LESSONS, suitable for old and young, 30 pages, sold formerly for 10 cents a copy.

These works are excellent to use by those who wish to do missionary work, and we offer them at such a low price that they should be out in a short time. Bro. Jones had large editions of these tracts printed, and by dying suddenly and his Widow being in poor health, we have undertaken the task of selling them. Her income is very limited, and all she can get for them out of the estate goes to her after expenses are paid. When you buy these tracts you get an equal value the worth of your money, and help a worthy Sister, who will thank you for it.

Assorted package 30 cents per pound. Gospel of the Kingdom, alone or 25 cents per pound.

The Gospel of the Kingdom.

Advocated in a series of Ten Discourses. A Volume of 283 pages, cloth 25 cents, leather bound, embossed, and gilt edges, $1.00. By Wiley Jones. This book is so well known that it is only necessary to announce that it is for sale, to insure a market for it. We have undertaken to dispose of these books for the Widow of our lamented Brother Jones, and while getting them at this low price, you at the same time will help Sister Jones to much-needed money.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as co-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

PINE WOODS BIBLE CLASS.

Teacher. We were much interested last week as we listened to the recital of the investigation of Bible topics between Mr. Williams and Miss Gordon, especially on that part relating to sky pilots, and are willing for the time being to forego our own class investigations. Today we have their conversation on the subject of the baptisms of water and Holy Spirit, and also the promptings, or leadings of the Holy Spirit.

Mr. Williams. My dear Miss Gordon, how I do enjoy talking with you on sacred topics. The last time we met, we discussed the sayings of sky pilots made at Willard Hall, Chicago, Ill. While at these meetings I heard much talk about the Baptism of the Holy Ghost, and many prayers were offered that the baptism of the Holy Spirit and fire may come upon them. In regard to the baptism of fire, I said, "Good Lord deliver me, that is to come upon the wicked only," and it will burn them up as chaff, and they shall be no more. They shall consume away as the burning of the fat lambs, when that dreadful baptism of fire comes upon them.

I was about to ask for the baptism enjoined by Christ, at the Church of God, in Rainesville, but after hearing what I did at Willard Hall, I concluded to look into the matter a little closer. My Bible says, there is but ONE baptism, yet it also speaks of two—the baptism of water, and of Holy Spirit; how is it Miss Gordon?

Miss Gordon. There is but one baptism that we have anything to do with, or can control, or obey, or refuse to obey, at our pleasure. As to the baptism of Holy Spirit, God alone administers that, and sacred history furnishes two occasions when it was administered. I assure you, that most sky pilots are as much in the dark upon the subject of baptism, both of water, and Holy Spirit, as they are on the sky kingdom delusion.

Laying at the base of the study of the subject of baptism, is the exact meaning of the word "baptize," and the use Holy Scripture makes of it. The word is used by sky pilots as being applicable to the actions of immersion, pouring and sprinkling. They are only excusable for this use on the ground of ignorance, (if ignorant, they should become informed, before attempting to teach) and any person who is at all acquainted with the Greek tongue, know full well, that the actions of pouring or sprinkling is not derived from either bapto or baptizo. If any one thinks otherwise, I call their attention to the following offer of $500 by Mr. Ketchum, "For the passage saying that either Christ or his Apostles ever SPRINKLED or POURED WATER on the head of any person—old or young—for Baptism.

If these things are taught by Bible writers, must they not be in the Bible? Cannot a Bible faith be stated in Bible language? If Bible writers never used them is it right for men to do so? Rev. xxi. 18-19. Can a Christian use words that convey a false impression, deceiving the minds of his hearers, and be guiltless?

What think ye?"

MEANING OF THE WORD BAPTIZE.

With regard to the various uses of water, the following words with their compounds were used in the Septuagint of the Greek of the New Testament:

Kathairo, aguizo, baptizo, bapto, pluno, louo, nipto, rehuo, cheo, rauno, rantizo.

1. SPRINKLE, together with its various derivatives is found in the Old and New Testament Scriptures 62 times; thirty-one times it is from rehuo, and twenty-three times it is from the compounds of cheo, and eight times from other minor words. Now, one noticeable fact is clear, that never in one instance is "sprinkle" a translation from bapto or baptizo, yet ministers say that they baptize people, when they sprinkle (rantize) them. Is that honest?

2. POUR, together with its derivatives, is found 152 times: 94 times it is taken from the word cheo; and 58 times it is from other words, etc., there being some 27 varieties, yet among them all, never in a single instance is it from bapto or baptizo, yet ministers pour water on a candidate, and call it baptism. Is it honest?

3. We have the word WASH 139 times, it is 18 times from nipto, as applied to washing the hands and feet. Forty-nine times from louo, washing the body; 44 times, from pluno, washing clothes, etc., 5 times, baptizo or bapto, signifying immersion: 3 times from cheo and cheuzo, having a metaphorical sense.

4. DIP with its derivatives is found 22 times. Once it is from molumo, signifying to stain, as when Joseph's coat was dipped in the blood of a kid: 21 times it is from bapto or baptizo; but never in any case from pluno, louo, nipto, cheo or rauno.

5. Plunge is found once, and in that case, it is bapto.

6. In the Hebrew of the Old Testament, we find the word tebal; it is translated in the Septuagint, once by molumo, to dye, and 16 times by baptizo, or bapto, to dip.

Bapto and baptizo are never in any case translated to sprinkle or pour; likewise rauno and rantizo, are never translated to dip, immerse, or plunge; then can you see any sense in preachers calling pouring or sprinkling baptism, when it bears no relation to either bapto or baptizo?

Joseph Mede says: "There was no such thing as sprinkling or rantism used in baptism in the apostles' days, nor many ages after them."

Chambers says: "the word baptism is formed from the Greek baptizo of bapto, I dip or plunge."

Calvin says: "The very word baptize, signifies to dip."

Dr. Owen says: "No honest man who understands the Greek tongue, can deny the word (baptizo) to signify to dip."

Mr. Williams. The meaning of the word baptize is applicable to the baptism of the Holy Spirit, as well as that of water, is it not?

Miss Gordon. Certainly. It means to submerge without regard to what material the person or object may be submerged in. The Bible only records two baptisms of the Holy Spirit and they took place at the opening of the Christian Dispensation: one upon the Israelites, and the other upon the Gentiles. See Acts ii. 2: "And it FILLED all the house in which they were sitting."

Acts xi. 15: "The Holy Ghost fell on them (Gentiles), AS ON US at the beginning." If that was the case, it must have "FILLED ALL THE HOUSE where they were sitting." They were submerged or buried in Holy Spirit.

Mr. Williams. Don't you think that Holy Spirit baptism may have taken the place of water baptism, as the "ONE BAPTISM, one God and Father of all?"

Miss Gordon. Not at all. For proof see Acts x. 47, 48: "Can any man FORBID WATER, that these should not BE BAPTIZED WHICH HAVE RECEIVED THE HOLY GHOST as well as we? And he COMMANDED them to baptized (in water) in the name of the Lord."

Mr. Williams. That is very plain. But how was it on the day of Pentecost, did the Apostles still preach that people should be baptized, after the baptism of the Holy Spirit had been received? And what was the object of that baptism, if it was so commanded?

Miss Gordon. They did continue to preach the necessity of baptism and they also enlightened their minds as to the OBJECT of baptism, stating also the benefit which would accrue to the obedient.

See Acts ii. 38: "Then Peter said unto them, Repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ, FOR THE REMISSION OF SINS, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost." Now a "gift of the Holy Ghost, is in no sense a baptism of the Holy Ghost. We have no record of a baptism of the Holy Ghost taking place either in ancient or modern times except the two already cited as occurring at the beginning of the Christian era.

THE OBJECT OF THE BAPTISM OF THE SPIRIT.

The apostles "went forth and preached every where, the Lord working with them, and CONFIRMING their word with signs following." Mark xvi. 20.

"The great salvation which at first began to be spoken by the Lord, and was CONFIRMED unto us by them that heard him, God also BEARING them WITNESS with signs and wonders, and with divers miracles, and gifts of the Holy Spirit." Heb. ii. 4.

"We are his witnesses of these things, and so ALSO is the HOLY SPIRIT." Acts v. 30-32.

"And there are diversities of operations, but it is the same God which worketh all in all. But the manifestation of the Spirit is given to every man to profit withal. For to one is given by the Spirit the word of wisdom; to another, the word of knowledge by the same Spirit; to another, faith by the Spirit; to another, the gifts of healing by the same Spirit. To another, the working of miracles; to another, prophecy; to another, discerning of spirits; to another, divers kinds of tongues; to another, the interpretation of tongues. But all these worketh that one and the self same Spirit, dividing to every man severally as he will." 1 Cor. xii. 6-11.

In the first place, the Baptism of the Holy Spirit was given for the establishing, or confirming the Word Jesus sent out his heralds to proclaim. The message has all been given, and confirmed by the "signs and wonders, and with divers miracles, and gifts of the Holy Spirit," and was followed by the various gifts as noted in the above quotation for the establishing and building up of the body of Christ. The Word has been confirmed, and firmly established, hence the work has been completed and the signs have consequently ceased to operate. The confirmed Word is now complete, and sufficient for all purposes, even to guide believers to the eternal rest, without any further baptisms of the Holy Spirit. The Scriptures alone are now our guide—they are spirit and life. It is to be hidden in the heart, that we may not sin.

THE HOLY SCRIPTURE IS IN ITSELF SUFFICIENT.

See 2 Tim. ii. 14-17, "But continue thou in the things which thou hast learned and hast been assured of, knowing of whom thou hast learned them. And that from a child thou hast known the Holy Scriptures, which are able to make thee wise unto salvation through faith which is in Christ Jesus. All Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness. That the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works."

What does Holy Scripture do for us? For answer please read the following, as taken from the above passage:

1. "It makes wise unto salvation," what more do we want?

2. "It is profitable for doctrine." Then that also is sufficient.

3. "For reproof, for correction." This being so, we don't need anything else.

4. "For instruction in righteousness." Anything more would be superfluous.

5. "That the man of God may be perfect." Perfection is all we desire.

6. "Thoroughly furnished unto all good works." The continued presence of the Holy Spirit could not add to that which is thorough and perfect. All the above completeness is the result of the work of the Holy Spirit; even its very words holy men of old wrote as they were moved by the Holy Spirit, and confirmed the same by mighty signs and works. The work designed for the Holy Spirit being accomplished, doubtless accounts for the fact, that we have no further baptisms of the Holy Spirit.

THE GIFT OF THE HOLY SPIRIT

continued for a time. The Apostles received power to convey the gift by the laying on of hands. See Acts viii. 13-21. "Then Simon himself believed also: and when he was baptized, he continued with Philip, and wondered, beholding the miracles and signs which were done. Now when the apostles which were at Jerusalem heard that Samaria had received the Word of God, they sent unto them Peter and John: who, when they were come down, prayed for them that they might receive the Holy Ghost. (For as yet he was fallen upon none of them: only they were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus.) Then laid they their hands on them, and they received the Holy Ghost. And when Simon saw that through laying on of the apostles' hands the Holy Ghost was given, he offered them money, saying, Give me also this power, that on whomsoever I lay hands, he may receive the Holy Ghost. But Peter said unto him, Thy money perish with thee, because thou hast thought that the gift of God may be purchased with money. Thou hast neither part nor lot in this matter; for thy heart is not right in the sight of God."

This shows that the Apostles alone had the power to convey the Holy Ghost by the laying on of hands, as we see Simon coveted the same power to convey it to others. We have men today, who lay their hands on the heads of others, saying: "Receive ye the Holy Ghost." It is but a piece of solemn mockery, they possess no more power to confer the Holy Ghost than Simon did. Since the death of the apostles no one has had the power to give the Holy Spirit by the laying on of hands.

DOES THE HOLY GHOST TALK WITH MEN NOW?

We have no satisfactory evidence that such is the case except through Holy Scripture. Men of old had no misgivings on that point. It was provable to a demonstration. Today we have no better evidence than fleshly thinking, enlivened by imagination. In religious meetings people say, the Holy Ghost said so and so to me, the Holy Spirit directed me to do such and such a thing. How do they know that such was the case? Sometimes an impressible brain thinks a great many unreal things, and even fancy the Holy Spirit is speaking to them, when in fact, it amounts to nothing more than a surmise, or a little fleshly imagination.

If people would compare the effect, power and manifestation of both the baptism, and gift of the Holy Spirit, in apostolic days, with what is seen today, no trouble would be had in detecting spuriousness of our modern socalled baptisms of the Holy Ghost.

The phenomena of modern outpourings bear no resemblance to the original, they are explainable on natural grounds. The original was supernatural. To have a good modern outpouring, it is necessary to have an excitable magnetic preacher; nothing can be done without that; a tame, common place man will never answer. The temperature of the room must also be right. An outpouring will never take place in a cold, chilly church. Hot weather is also quite unfavorable to a modern outpouring. Winter is the time when the right temperature is effected by means of stove or furnace. A good full house is also favorable to such an outpouring. An outpouring will not come when we have a small audience, which is scattered all over a large church. In such a case an effort is made to pack them altogether in the front. Speaking on these points a writer says: "It does not come so quickly at the bidding of a dull temperment, and barren imagination, especially if the man be of small stature—as it does at that of a lusty, excitable well-built man. The reason is, that all these conditions are unfavorable, to the play of the latent magnetism of the human system (which is the modern Holy Spirit). Were it the Holy Spirit of old time that attended these operations, it would overleap all barriers, and not only so, but its result would be of a more worthy and permanent character than the impressions made at revival meetings. That is a mere spirit of the flesh, worked up into a religious excitement." If people would think and reason a little, they would detect the source of this modern phenomena, and when compared with the Bible, its spuriousness would be apparent. When a person trusts this modern delusion as a guide, in place of the Holy Scriptures they sadly deceive themselves. Trust nothing but God's Word as a guide.

Faith and Hope: Heb. xi. 1.

Now faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen—or ground work, or confidence. Our religion is built up and sustained by faith. This it is that prompts us to crucify the flesh, and abstain from worldly pleasure, and to abound in good works. By faith we are justified and hope to participate in the joys and blessings of the Abrahamic covenant, because we believe that if we are Christs then are we Abraham's seed and heirs according to promise.

Christ is the grand central point on which our all depends, and faith in him makes us claimants of the exceeding great and precious promises which are recorded in the Scriptures. Are we strong in faith? Do we permit doubts to arise? If we have doubts as to God's promises, of him not being able to fulfill all that he has promised, then we do not believe the Bible. Abraham believed God and it was accounted to him for righteousness. We need to lean hard upon him, trusting like children in their father and mother, fearing nothing.

Unbelief is a species of sin gotten up by the adversary to lead us from rectitude. It opens a place in the heart for the entrance of evil, and no man can be an earnest working Christian if he doubts his own acceptance, God wants implicit faith, the whole heart, entire consecration. Our blessed Master has said "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind: and thy neighbor as thyself." We find no half way work; there is no middle ground. It is for Christ or all for the world. We walk by faith, not by sight. Though we have never seen Jesus we believe and confess that he died, and was buried, and that he rose again. Whom having not seen, ye love; in whom, though now ye see him not, yet believing ye rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory. 1 Pet. i. 8.

All you need is faith that the following words are true, and are to be taken in their literal sense. If we confess our sins he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all our unrighteousness. It is simply taking God at his word, or as another has so clearly and forcibly written, It is not a terrible effort to climb up, but a cutting loose from all human props and dependencies, sink down at Jesus feet, obeying every commandments, claiming God's promises, taking right hold of it as a thing that must be fulfilled, in God's due time. Yea that is just now being fulfilled.

This sort of faith saves men from sin, making them living epistles, read and known of all men.

Now what are the things promised? Titus i. 2. In hope of eternal life, which God that cannot lie, promised before the world began. 1 John ii. 25. And this is the promise that he hath promised us, even eternal life, and faith is the ground work and confidence of the things we hope for. Hope is made up of desire and expectation, Rom. viii. 24. For we are saved by hope, but hope that is seen is not hope, for what a man seeth why doth he yet hope for? But if we hope for that we see not, then do we with patience wait for it.

These promises are to be taken as realities without further questionings. If God in his infinite wisdom does not deem it fit to grant you some marvelous token of your conversion, striking you prostrate like Saul of Tarsus, are we to doubt and fear? All the disciples did not have Paul's experience, and yet they believed in Jesus. Neither did they all need to feel the nail prints in our Savior's hands in order to have faith. So we are not to take another man's experience as a criterion, but with Job exclaim Though he slay me yet will I trust in him.

We now have the gospel of Christ, which Paul said I am not ashamed of, for it is God's power unto salvation, to every one that believeth, to the Jew first, and also to the Greek. We need not be deceived, as the gospel is God's power, and his only power. He has only one power to draw all men to him, while the world is full of a gospel to draw men to a church or to man-made creeds, to divide people up into sects, and put partition walls between God's children.

If we had eternal life now why seek for it? Rom. ii. 5, 7. If we had immortality now why put it on at the sounding of the last trump? 1 Cor. xv. 53, 54. If we are in possession of all these things, why do we hope for them, and patiently wait for them?

Truly yours in hope of life when Jesus comes.

JOHN FOORE.

Dear Restitution:

Having seen in RESTITUTION of Aug. 2d that Bro. M. L. Adams is on his way to the Pacific Coast by private conveyance, and that he is not fully determined in his mind where he will locate, I wish to write a brief statement of the country in the famed Rogue River Valley, situated in Jackson county, Oregon, hoping it may catch the notice of Bro. Adams before he finishes his long journey.

We do not claim that we are yet in the Garden of Eden, nor that we have the best country in the world; but we do think that we have as good a country, with as many advantages, and as few disadvantages, as any state that I have visited, which is twenty-three.

Rogue River Valley has long been noted as a sanitarium for pulmonary and bronchial troubles, and is a summer resort of many people. There are innumerable chalybeate springs, including soda, magnesia, sulphur, iron, etc., both hot and cold.

There is an abundance of pure water, great bodies of timber, and a diversified soil. Wheat, oats, barley and corn yield good crops, and a failure has yet to be recorded. It is the home of the peach, apple, pear, grape, nectarine, apricot, prunes, and all small fruits. We have two seasons, the wet and the dry. Average rainfall about twenty-eight inches. Southern Pacific railway runs through the valley from north to south, giving us communication from San Francisco, Cal., and Portland, Oregon. Schools are liberally supported, both common and high, and the State normal has a branch located at Ashland, with a faculty as able as can be found in any State.

There is a little congregation of the Church of God located at Central Point, organized in May last, by Bro. Skeels, of Scholls, Oregon. There is a good field of labor here for some able brother, and it only needs some one to sound out the truths of the gospel to draw many into the fold of Christ. If some of our preaching brethren would locate here they would be supported in part by the brethren. We are not strong enough financially to furnish a full support, but if a preacher had means enough to furnish a part of his living, he would not want, and he could live in as perfect a climate as can be found anywhere. No cyclones, no earthquakes, very little if any snow in the valley proper. In 1853 and 1888 there was nearly two feet of snow, but of short duration. Faithfully yours, MERRITT ELLIOTT.

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, AUGUST 23, 1899.

THERE being five Wednesdays in this month, and as we only issue four papers a month, our next issue will be dated Sept. 5.

IT would please us very much and aid us in paying for our paper, and other bills, if the friends who have promised to pay their subscriptions would consider this a good time to redeem their pledges. We need it very much indeed.

EMERSON truly stated it when he said that "Immortality will come to him who is fit for it, and he who would be a great soul in the future must be a great soul now."

IT was Gilchrist who said we were transformed by our ideals,—and that he who holds a lofty ideal ascends to it, while a man with a base ideal descends. What a noble ideal the gospel of Jesus Christ presents to us.

IT was the striking remark of a dying man whose life, alas, had been but poorly spent:—"Oh, that my influence could be gathered up and buried with me!" But it was too late for that. He had put in motion an agency which he was powerless to arrest; yet there is nothing we should more dread —there is nothing for which we must hereafter give a more solemn account."

J. R. MILLER writes:—"There will always be cloudy days. No one can live without meeting discomforts, disappointments and hardships. No wisdom, no industry of ours, can eliminate from our experience all that is disagreeable and painful. But shall we allow the one discordant note in the grand symphony to mar for us the noble music? Shall we permit the one discomfort in our home to cast a cloud over all the home life? A traveller over the bleak desert watched the wind swept sand. It saved him from despair and from death, and filled his soul with joy and hope. There is no lot in life so dreary that it has not at least its one little patch of beauty or its one wee flower looking up out of the dreariness, like a smile of God."

"IT is one thing to be kindly critical, and quite another thing to continually find fault. Criticism when offered in the right spirit is more valuable than gold to him who accepts it gratefully. We often go wrong without knowing it, and a true friend will brave our anger and point out the fact. It does us good, if we are sensible, to know how others see us. But the constitutional fault-finder is not that kind of an evangelist. He is not actuated by any such motive, neither has he the good of his victim in view. On the contrary, his methods exasperate, and he serves no higher purpose than an irritant. He is merely an animated cheatnut burr; may the Lord have mercy on such."

THE following paragraph deserves to go round and round whoever wrote it:

"Christianity is a religion that sings. Atheism has no songs; agnosticism is not tuneful. We have never heard of a Brahmanic hymnal, or a Confucian psalmody. The metre of heathendom is not to be compared with the lively heartiness, the freeness, fullness and depth of the Christian song. There is a spontaniety and abandon to the singing of Christians that is sadly lacking in the musical exercises of paganism. The believer explains his own songfulness in the conclusive question, "How can I keep from singing?"

The Outlook.

At the recent Endeavor Convention at Detroit the Rev. McLean of Cincinnati said that nineteen centuries after the birth of Christ only one-third of the race is even nominally Christian. Nine per cent only are Protestant. Fifteen per cent are Catholic, and seven per cent are Greek. And not only are there 1,000,000,000 without the gospel, but non-Christians are increasing at an appalling rate,—there being now 250,000,000 more in this class than there were a century ago. He said Africa is a den of desolation, misery and crime;—that the Japanese are characterized by lying and licentiousness; and that every man is for himself, and that there is no national strength or progress; and that in India the bulk of the population lie down hungry every night in the year. —and that Hinduism has filled the capitals of India with the most rotten superstitions in the world,—and set forth the evils of Mohammedanism as polygamy, divorce, violence, slavery and sensuality, and the government of the Sultan as most corrupt and oppressive. And the moral condition of the world was rounded out by the Rev. C. N. Howard, of Rochester, N. Y., by saying that Americans are face to face with a mighty problem. It is not "What shall be done with Cuba or the Philippines, but how shall we restore to the people the right of self-government?" It would seem that democracy has given place to rumocracy. The American people have abdicted the throne of government to the saloon. Red-handed anarchy spits upon our laws, insults our flag, robs our houses, curses our motherhood, and damns our children. Seeing these things are generally admitted to be so, is it not astounding that these facts and figures do not lead earnest men to the Word of that God who has revealed not only his eternal purpose and the means to accomplish it, but also the abounding iniquity that shall prevail till his Son takes to himself his great power and reigns. Painful indeed, is it, to see men in an agony of effort to convert the world before Christ comes, —the very thing that cannot be done, if Christ and his Apostles told the truth: and doubly painful is it to know that these earnest men themselves are strangers to the gospel of the kingdom Jesus preached, and which Paul most emphatically declares to be God's saving power. Would to God we could reach them with the invitation to God's kingdom and glory, so that they could become evangels of peace and righteousness when power and authority is wrested from the beastly human world-rulers by God's King upon the Holy Hill of Zion.

From a human point of view the moral condition of the world is truly appalling, but to those who have found the key of knowledge, it is an infallible sign that their redemption draweth nigh. It is darkest just before break of day.

The Presence of God.

In writing of the presence of God Ruskin says: "The reason that preaching is so commonly ineffectual is, that it calls on men oftener to work for God, than to behold God working for them. In every rebuke of men's vices we utter, we put forth a claim upon their hearts; if for every assertion of God's demands from them, we could substitute a display of his kindness to them,—if side by side with every warning of death, we could exhibit proofs and promises of immortality; if, in fine, instead of assuming the being of an awful God, which men, though they cannot and dare not deny, are always unwilling, sometimes unable, to conceive, we were to show them a near, visible, inevitable, but all beneficent God, whose presence makes the earth itself a heaven, I think there would be fewer deaf children sitting in the market-place. At all events, whatever may be the inability in this present life to mingle the full enjoyment of the divine works with the full discharge of every practical duty, and confessedly in many cases this must be, let us not attribute the inconsistency to any indignity of the faculty of contemplation, but to the sin and suffering of the fallen state, and the change of order from the keeping of the garden, to the tilling of the ground. We cannot say how far it is right or agreeable with God's will, while men are perishing round about us,—while grief, and pain, and wrath, and impiety, and death, and all the powers of the air, are working wildly and evermore, and the cry of blood is going up to heaven, that any of us should take hand from the plow; but this we know, that there will come a time when the service of God shall be the beholding of him; and though in these stormy seas, where we are now driven up and down, his Spirit is dimly seen on the face of the waters, and we are left to cast anchors out of the stern and wish for the day, that day will come, when, all the creatures of God shall be full of eyes within, and there shall be "no more curse," but his servants shall serve him, and shall see his face."

The Baltic-Black Sea Canal.

By commencing the construction of the Siberian railway Russia is committed, for the present at least, to a peace policy. That work is expensive and will not be immediately remunerative. Like the Union Pacific roads, it is built in advance of settlement. It will create business, but not for some years. With the drain on Russian resources which the construction of the road entails, the Russian government is naturally averse to war. But when that railway is completed its military position in Asia will be strengthened enormously.

Russia is engaged in another great undertaking which cannot be completed for nine or ten years, but which when finished will be of peculiar value from a commercial and a military point of view. It will strengthen Russia on the west as the Siberian railway will on the east. This other undertaking is a canal drawing twenty-eight feet of water connecting the Baltic and the Black seas. The estimated cost is $100,000,000. The more Russia has to spend on the army the less easy will it be to get funds for this proposed canal. It is not difficult to see why the Czar should favor a disarmament policy, so as to enable him the more speedily to complete public works which will be of the greatest military value. When this canal is done his Baltic fleet can be transferred to the Black sea if desired without having to circumnavigate Europe. This canal will help Russia as a Nicaraguan canal will help the United States.

This new waterway will extend for 994 miles from Dunamunde in the Gulf of Riga to Kherson on the estuary of the Dnieper. The canal will follow the course of the Duna or Dwina, which will have to be deepened considerably, until a ridge of low hills is reached, which forms the watershed for the streams flowing into the Baltic and Black seas. The canal will then follow the Beresina to its junction with the Dnieper, which river will be utilized for the remainder of its course, the last 200 miles of which will need little if any improving. Some difficult engineering problems will be encountered at different points, but there is none that is insuperable.

There is already a shallow canal which connects the Duna and the Dnieper. It has all the traffic it can carry. Furthermore, its usefulness is lessened by the fact that there are forty miles of rapids in the Dnieper. These rapids form one of the problems the engineers of the proposed canal will have to deal with. When completed there will be an enormous quantity of heavy freight for it to carry, so that it can be expected to pay expenses from the outset. It will traverse productive provinces and connect thriving cities and towns. The rye of northern and wheat of southern Russia, salt, iron, petroleum and other bulky products will be transported at greatly reduced expense.

Kherson is on the estuary of the Dnieper, which can be fortified so as to defy attack. Near that city are the large naval docks of Nikolaief. When this proposed canal is completed and the Baltic fleet can be transferred within Russian territory to the Black sea, Russia will be the master of that body of water. That transfer could be made before the other powers of Europe know what was going on. This canal will be, therefore, a constant menace to Constantinople.—Chicago Tribune.

The Threat of the Boers.

In threatening to blow up and destroy the great gold mines of the Transvaal in case of war with Great Britain the Boers have succeeded in sending a shudder through the London financial world. The threat comes in a form that leaves no doubt of the Boers' capability of carrying it out. There have been former threats to invade Cape Colony and blow up the diamond mines of Kimberley, but this is quite different from announcing a deliberate intention to destroy the gold mines of the Rand in the Transvaal itself. Nothing could prevent a concerted attempt of the Boers to do this, and, while it would be injuring their own country, the chief loss would fall upon the uitlanders and upon the shareholders in London and elsewhere. Owing to the peculiar nature of the situation it would be a more direct blow to the enemy than the burning of Moscow by the Russians.

The threat is made in the Boer organ published in London under the title of the Standard and Diggers' News of Johannesburg. It is embodied in a long manifesto evidently emanating from the circles in close touch with President Kruger, as the article outlines the reply of the Boer President to Mr. Chamberlain's recent aggressive speech. It anticipates the rejection of the proposal of a joint commission of inquiry and ironically suggests a commission to investigate the source of the 21,000 signatures to the uitlanders' petition. The threat follows in these terms:

"The Transvaal, being the richest country for its size in the world, would form a bright gem in the British crown, and it may answer the purpose of Great Britain to acquire the whole country even at the cost of the mining industry. In the event of war the Boers will assuredly wreck the mines, and by the loss of millions of pounds worth of mining plant the general body of shareholders in Europe will be irretrievably ruined, and they should fully understand the price they must pay before authorizing the British government to go to war."

The Boers' ancestors were ready to cut the dykes and drown Holland sooner than submit to the Spaniards. The stubborn determination of the descendants is perfectly capable of carrying out this program, and the European shareholders know it. Enormous sums of British capital are invested in the Transvaal mines. A few thousand pounds of dynamite dropped down the shafts of the mines and applied to the surface plants could easily destroy them and render the mines for a time as useless as if they had never existed. The crash of the explosives would be followed by a similar crash on the London Stock Exchange. The collapse of the Transvaal gold interests might easily precipitate a general panic in London financial circles. The realization of this fact may well render the whole of the English business world increasingly patient with the Boers. This influence may not be sufficient to keep the British government from going to war if the Boer government persists in its obstinate refusal to grant reforms, but it makes the situation decidedly interesting.—Chicago Tribune.

Degenerate Sons of Wesley.

Two recent utterances have directed in a marked degree attention to John Wesley. The first was the declaration of the London Spectator in an editorial, that "England as a whole is as truly interested in Wesley as in Shakespeare; and it may well be doubted whether in the long course of her history any one person has ever influenced her life in so direct, palpable, and powerful a way as has John Wesley." The other utterance was the recent official declaration of the Wesleyan conference that it was not expedient for that body to direct that persons engaged in the liquor traffic should not be eligible to official positions in the church. If John Wesley were living the appreciative declaration of the Spectator would not surprise him more than that of the body which was designed by him to continue the work to which he devoted his life. The reason assigned by the conference for its action was that it should not impose disabilities upon those who sell liquor which should not apply to those who buy and use liquor; but in taking this position the conference departed from the position maintained by Wesley for many years.

There were two evils which Wesley persistently assailed with all the power of his mind and will—slavery and intemperance. It is true that in his day and to some extent even in his mind temperance did not imply total abstinence, but according to his teaching it practically did so, as it absolutely did so far as selling liquor was concerned.

Early in the Methodist movement—1748—John Wesley adopted certain "general rules" for the government of his societies. These rules have been in nominal operation in the Wesleyan church, as also in other branches of Methodism, for more than a century and a half. These rules state that those who united with Mr. Wesley's societies were expected to "evidence their desire of salvation, first, by doing no harm, by avoiding evil of every kind, especially that which is most generally practiced, such as drunkenness, buying or selling spirituous liquors, or drinking them, unless in cases of extreme necessity." It is stated that in the more select circles, that met for the most intimate spiritual communion, the members were forbidden to "taste spirituous liquors of any kind unless prescribed by a physician." These rules were rigidly enforced by Mr. Wesley, evidence of which is found in his remarkable journals, which are not only a daily history of the Methodist movement but are the best history of the England of that day. According to the record in his journals, between December 30, 1742, and March, 1743, a date just previous to the publication of the general rules, seventeen persons were expelled for drunkenness from the Methodist society at Newcastle, and two from the same society for retailing spirituous liquors.

Scarcely a day passed that Wesley did not in sermons, pamphlets, letters or conversation denounce the use and use of spirituous liquors. In his "Thoughts on Nervous Disorders" he wrote: "One cause of [nervous disorders] is the use of spirituous liquors. This is one of the horrid effects which naturally follow the swallowing of that fashionable poison. That liquid fire lays the foundation for numberless diseases, and of this in particular. It is amazing that the preparing and selling this poison should be permitted (I will not say in any Christian country, but) in any civilized state."

After the death of Wesley the antagonism of his followers to the buying, selling, and use of spirituous liquors declined until in the course of time not only was the general rule not enforced by the Wesleyan church but the use of liquors became the common practice of nearly all the ministers. Spirits were even kept in the cupboard of City Road chapel, John Wesley's famous preaching place, and visiting preachers from abroad were invited to refresh themselves at the close of their sermons with a glass of liquor. Such an invitation was extended to the distinguished American Methodist divine, Bishop Simpson, and the custodian of the chapel could not understand why his invitation should be declined. Not only were ministers accustomed to use liquor but the conference at one time adopted a resolution which practically prohibited the holding of total abstinence meetings in Wesleyan chapels. During recent years there has been a revival of temperance interest in the Wesleyan church, due to the organization of Bands of Hope, and a large number of the ministers are total abstainers. The effort to prohibit the holding of office by liquor dealers, notwithstanding its defeat by an immense majority, indicates, however, an increase in total abstinence sentiment. That such prohibition will ultimately prevail is evident from the temperance attitude of the various branches of Methodism in the United States, not one of which would retain within its fold a minister who was known to use intoxicating liquors as a beverage, or a member who was engaged in the liquor business. The pressure in England will become stronger also, for in all other branches of English Methodism the ministers are, with scarcely an exception, total abstainers and the members are urged to be so.—Tribune.

What Are Essentials.

On this subject men differ. They cannot help doing so, but I desire to raise this question. Is it essential that there be an exactness in our understanding of the Scriptures" that what one believes them to teach, all must believe them to teach, in order to obtain salvation? If that be true, whose conclusions shall we adopt, in order to obtain eternal life? In many years of experience I have seldom found two thoughtful persons, whose beliefs were exactly alike; nor does it seem possible for all to come to the same conclusion as to what is truth in all cases, though they search with the utmost candor.

There are things hard to be understood in the Bible. The apostle Peter found some of them in the writings of Paul. I have found some things there that after many years of study are not clear to me. Occasionally some one will take up those same things and give an explanation of them with all the confidence, seemingly, that it is possible for anyone to possess, and yet, after studying them carefully, I am as much, and sometimes more, if possible, in the dark, than I had been before. This is true of other things beside what the apostle Paul has written.

Some of the prophecies abound in statements that seem to be clear statements, and yet it requires hard study to determine just where they apply, and what their full scope is.

We have been and are a people noted for our study and teaching on prophetic lines for more than half a century, and who is there among us that does not know that many mistakes have been made, and some things taught that were not true? Now who is there among us who dare say those humble, God-fearing men will not be saved because they did not understand all of the matter as they ought, and so were led to hold a measure of untruth? When finite minds become dogmatic, and hold what they believe is the truth, and that in order for men to be saved they must believe as they do, for by belief of the truth only can they be saved, it seems to me they make a mistake, taking to themselves a degree of infallibility that mortals do not possess. There are truths against which no seeming counter statement can be found in the oracles of God that are essential to salvation. I revere the Bible as the Word of God. I reverence every word, but there is much in it that I do not understand. I do understand and believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God, and that he died for the sins of men; for it is clearly so stated, and there is nothing in the book that can by any means be made to show that he is not. It is essential to thus believe. Salvation is offered on that condition, and nothing short of it. Holy living is also essential. The book says: "Without holiness no man shall see the Lord;" and there are no passages in the Bible that seem to teach that filth shall find a place in the kingdom of God.

On these essential truths there is no room for variance in belief. Jesus died for our sins, he was raised for our justification, and as God is holy, we are commanded to be holy. Dogmatism finds no place here. The time will come when we shall see eye to eye; till then we ought to be careful in condemning others for not seeing as we do. If God has given one greater power to grasp truth than he has to another, it is that we may glorify him, and not to cast out his brethren. May he give us wisdom to serve him and not offend one of the little ones for whom Christ died.—D. R. Hargreaves in Crisis.

Zionist Movement.

The feature of the third annual session of the Zionist congress at Basle is Dr. Herzl's announcement that a total of $60,000,000 has been pledged in favor of the project. With the aid of such a sum it ought to be possible to colonize a large proportion of the 7,000,000 Jews of the world in Palestine. As there are now over 800 Zionist societies, 125 of them in the United States, there seems to be every assurance that this projected movement of the Jews toward their ancestral home will reach significant proportions. The removal is especially to be desired for the Jews of Russia and Roumania, who outnumber those of all other countries and who are most oppressed. The Dreyfus case has undoubtedly given an impetus to the cause. All Christendom will take a friendly interest in this modern attempt to fulfill the scriptural prophecy about the gathering together of Israel at Jerusalem.—Tribune.

Editor Restitution:

Brother Hudler was with the brethren here Aug. 13, and preached two discourses. From here he will go to Hazel, Ill., to devote about two weeks to the Master's work in that part of the State where Sister Greenbaum has been for some time, and where we hope the labors may result in much good. He will return to Antioch again in four weeks, at which time other parties anticipate immersion.

Poetry.

In Death, What?

There the wicked cease from troubling, and there the weary are at rest. Job iii. 17. They are as a sleep. Psa. xc. 6.

If the dead lying under the grasses,
Unseen, linger near the bereft,
Having knowledge and sense of what passes
In the hearts and homes they have left,
What tear drops, than sea water saltier,
Must fall as they watch all the strife;
When they see how we fail, how we falter,
How we miss in the dance of life.

If the great who go out with their faces
Bedewed by a weeping world's tears,
Stand near, and can see how their places
Are filled, while the multitude cheers;
If the parent, whose back was bent double,
With delving for riches and gold,
Leads an heir to the wrangle and trouble
About him before he is cold;

If the wife, who left weeping and sorrow
Behind her, bends down from above
And beholds the tears dried on the morrow,
And the eyes newly burning with love;
If the gracious and regal-souled mother,
From the silence and hush of the tomb
Can hear the harsh voice of another,
Slowly blighting the fruit of her womb.
If the old hear their dearly begotten
Rejoicing that buried we are gone;

If the young know how soon they're forgotten
While the mirth and the revel go on;
What sighing of sorrow and anguish
Must sound through the slumbers of space!
What desolate spirits must languish
In that mystic and unfettered place!
Then life were a farce with its burden,
And earth but a terrible jest!
But they cannot. The grave gives its guerdon,
Of silence and beautiful rest.

A Review.

"But man dieth and wasteth away: yea, man giveth up the ghost, and where is he?" Job xiv. 10.

For the last three weeks some of the divines of this country have been telling their congregations where a certain man has gone, who was reported dead and cremated, viz., R. G. Ingersoll. Many of the most popular and best educated speak in praise of his good qualities, but in sorrow for what they deem the baneful influence of his teaching. But there are some who have taken possession of the judgment seat and are not only telling where he is, but what he is doing. The Rev. James Boyd Brady, in a pulpit of the Methodist church, in the city of Worcester, Mass., was recently delivered of a Hybrid of paganism and Bradyism. Extracts from the same were published in the Philadelphia Record of Aug. 3, 1899, we copy from the same.

"A report of a sermon delivered by a Massachusetts clergyman, the Rev. James Boyd Brady, in the pulpit of a Methodist Church at Worcester. As it is by far the most irrational and passionate tirade that I have yet seen from any responsible source, it may be worth while to reproduce it in part, as an example of extreme dogmatism worthy of the ancient days of New England damnation:

'While he was living I told him of the unutterable enormity of his sacrilegious irreverence, and of the red-hot hell to which he was going with his victims.

I portrayed to him the viciousness, the indecency, the immorality and the atrocious rascality of his scoffings at the Almighty God, and his sacred blood-bought cause, before the gullible people he was thereby guiding to eternal damnation for a dollar a head. And his only reply was that he did not know about that.

He did not know there was a God. But by this time he has found out there is a God, great and terrible, with whom he must settle up.

He did not know there was a devil. Well, he wasn't in eternity ten minutes before he learned more about the devil than he could describe in ten hours. Then he did not believe there was a hell, and, poor soul, he wasn't there three minutes before he was hopping around in agony, crying, I didn't think it was like this.'

He did not believe in ghosts and used to lecture against them. He believes in ghosts now with all his might, but it is in the ghosts of lost souls that swarm around him from America, weeping and wailing and gnashing. 'Oh, Ingersoll, it was through your lies and scoffings we came here.'

But poor Ingersoll can but answer, 'I can do nothing. I have started their coming here, but I have no power to stay their course. Hundreds, thousands, millions whom I have deceived are coming. Oh, what a hell it will be for me when they all arrive! Alas! alas! alas!'

It is against my finer feelings to say a word against Robert G. Ingersoll now that he is gone. He is gone to give an account to his judge of what he did.

I, too, am going soon, and shall give an account to the same great Judge of quick and dead. It is therefore with chastened feelings that I speak of that eloquent but erring tongue, of that bright but aberrant brain, of that true yet traitorous heart."

Mr. Brady says, "I portrayed to him the viciousness, the indecency, the immorality and atrocious rascality of his scoffing at the Almighty God." I am inclined to think that the God at whom Mr. Ingersoll scoffed was not the God Almighty, but was Mr. Brady's God. It might be interesting to know how Mr. Brady got his information about Mr. Ingersoll's ten minutes' residence in eternity, and how he learned that the Colonel was "hopping around in agony," in less than three minutes after he got to hell and crying, "I didn't think it was like this." Mr. Brady says Mr. Ingersoll did not believe in ghosts and lectured against them, but "he believes in them now with all his might." The Colonel is made to say, "Hundreds, thousands, millions whom I have deceived are coming. Oh, what a hell it will be for me when they all arrive. Alas! alas! alas!"

Poor Mr. Brady, how he must have suffered being obliged to outrage his "finer feelings" in his unmanly, puerile utterances against the dead agnostic. Again Brady says, "I too am going soon and shall give an account to the same great Judge of quick and dead." It is evident that the doctrine of judgment, rewards and punishment at the change called death, is the doctrine of this Massachusetts clergyman and that from a Bible standpoint it is no nearer truth than the doctrine of Mr. Ingersoll. If Cain was judged and sent to hell 5000 years ago, he will get 5000 years more of hopping around than will Ingersoll. The doctrine of an interminable hell of conscious misery under the management of an interminable devil is not a Bible doctrine. It originated long before Massachusetts burned her witches, and no doubt that the sentiment expressed by Mr. Brady and his coadjutors have made more infidels than Mr. Ingersoll.
